THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME 1. — COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1859. — NUMBER 1.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1859.

Popular Sovereignty.

BY JAMES B. MARSHALL.

The People are the sovereign power,
To them was given the priceless dower
Of every watch and ward;
If to themselves they be not true,
They barter the heart withdraw.
[illegible]

As when the bow of hope appeared,
Like flaming wing of seraph borne,
To guide the "chosen people" through
The wilderness, [illegible]
From the broad West, a purest light
With sheen as steady, full and bright,
As sun in summer sky.
Above the threatening clouds that lower,
It shines with undiminished power,
And patriots hail a happier hour,
"And Douglas is the cry!"
From North to South, with one acclaim,
The rapturous people shout his name,
Eager to fill his meed of fame,
So true in faith to those
Nor will the tide, beneath the glow,
That presses with resistless flow,
[illegible]
Of State the dial.

"Fourth of July."

Speech of Hon. S. A. Douglas.

In the Senate of the United States, February 23d, 1859, in reply to Hon. A. G. Brown, of Mississippi, in opposition to the passage of a Code of Laws by Congress to protect slavery in the territories, and in favor of banishing from the halls of Congress all questions touching domestic slavery in the territories, and remanding them to the people of the territories, to be disposed of as they may see proper, subject to an appeal to the judicial tribunals, to test the validity of the territorial enactments under the Constitution of the United States, together with an appendix, showing the position of distinguished public men on this question in the recent contests of 1854 and 1856.

SPEECH.

[illegible]

... by which you can compel them to do it. He admits there is no compulsory means by which you can coerce the Territorial Legislature to pass such a law; and for that reason he insists that, in case of non-action by the Territorial Legislature, it is the right and duty of southern Senators and Representatives to demand affirmative action by Congress in the enactment of a slave code for the Territories. He says that it is not necessary to put the question to me, whether I would vote for a congressional slave code. He desires to know of all other northern Democrats what they will do; he does not wish any answer from me. I am much obliged to him for taking it for granted, from my past record, that I never would vote for a slave code in the Territories by Congress; and I have yet to learn that there is a man in a free State of this Union, of any party who would.

Mr. MASON. Will the Senator be kind enough to explain what he means by slave code?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Yes sir. The Senator from Mississippi defined it very well in his speech. His position was, that while the Constitution gave him the right of protection in a Territory for his slave property, it did not, of itself, furnish adequate protection. He drew a distinction between the right and the fact, and said that the protection could only be furnished by legislation; that legislation could only come from one of two sources—the Territorial Legislature or the Congress of the United States. He would look to the Territorial Legislature in the first instance. If he got adequate legislation there, he was content; but if the Territorial Legislature failed to act, and give him that adequate legislation, in the form of what is commonly called a slave code, such non-action was equivalent to a denial of his rights; and, losing his rights, it was no consolation to him that he had been deprived of them by the non-action of a Territorial Legislature; and hence he would demand of Congress the passage of laws to protect his slaves, and to punish men for running them off; to furnish such remedies for the violation of his rights as he thought he was entitled to from the Territorial Legislature. He said he would demand this from Congress.

Mr. BROWN. Because the Territorial Legislature was the creature of Congress.

Mr. DOUGLAS. He further said that he would base his demand on Congress to pass this slave code on the ground that the Territorial Legislature was the creature of Congress; and, if it did not do its duty, Congress should pass such laws as were necessary to protect slave property in the Territories.

Mr. GREEN. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a single question?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Certainly.

Mr. GREEN. If a law merely providing protection is to be called a slave code, then, I ask, if larceny, in general terms, were punished by the Territorial law, and the Legislature should except the larceny of slaves, would he say he would submit to that at the option of the Legislature?

Mr. DOUGLAS. It is immaterial to me, whether you call this legislation a slave code, or by any other name. I will call it by any name the Senator chooses. I wish to be understood, however, and to use such language as conveys the idea. I take the language of the Senator from Mississippi, if that is satisfactory. All I have to say, on the point presented by the Senator from Missouri, is this: while our Constitution does not provide remedies for stealing negroes, it does not provide remedies for stealing dry-goods, or horses, or any other species of property. You cannot protect any property in the Territories, without laws furnishing remedies for its violation, and penalties for its abuse. Nobody pretends that you are going to pass laws of Congress making a criminal code for the Territories, with reference to other species of property. The Congress of the United States never yet passed an act creating a criminal code for any organized Territory. It simply organizes the Territory, and leaves its Legislature to make its own criminal code. Congress never passed a law to protect any species of property in the organized Territories; it leaves its protection to the Territorial Legislatures.—The question is, whether we shall make an exception as to slavery? The Supreme Court makes no such distinction. It recognizes slaves as property. When they are taken to a Territory, they are on an equal footing with other property, and dependent upon the same system of legislation, for protection, as other property. While all other property is dependent on Territorial legislation for protection, I hold that slave property must look to the same authority for its protection.

Mr. GREEN. The Senator will permit me to say that I think he does not understand the point I presented, and I therefore desire to present it more explicitly. The Supreme Court having decided that slaves constitute property, if a Territory, authorized by Congress to legislate for itself, should pass a law punishing larceny of all property except slaves, would that make slaves equal to other property in the Territory? or would it not be a violation of the Constitution?

Mr. DOUGLAS. If the Senator cannot understand my answer to that question by what I have said, and the train of my argument, it is useless to discuss it further. I say that I leave all kinds of property, slaves included, to the local law for protection—and that I will not assert the power of Congress to interfere with that local law with reference to slave property, or any other kind of property. If the people think that particular laws on the subject of property are beneficial to their interests, they will enact them. If they do not think such laws are wise, they will refrain from enacting them.—They will protect slaves there, provided they want slavery; and they will want slavery, if the climate be such that the white man cannot cultivate the soil, so as to render negro compulsory labor necessary. Hence, it becomes a question of climate, of production, of self-interest, and not a question of legislation, whether slavery shall, or shall not exist, there.

But the Senator from Mississippi says he has a right to protection. The owner of every other species of property may say he has a right to protection. The man dealing in liquors may think that, inasmuch as his stock of liquors is property, he has a right to protection. The man dealing in an inferior breed of cattle may think he has a right to protection; but the people of a Territory may think it is their interest to improve the breed of stock by discrimination against inferior breeds; and hence they may fix a higher rate of taxation on the one than on the other.

Mr. BROWN. The Senator from Illinois now makes a point which enables me to illustrate what I mean. I hold that the Territorial Legislature of Kansas—that being the Territory immediately involved in this discussion—has no right to enact the Maine liquor law. That is an act of sovereignty.—It has the right to say that liquors carried into the Territory shall be so used as that they shall not corrupt the public morals nor endanger the public safety; but the power of prohibition does not belong to a Territorial Legislature. So I say in reference to slave property. As I said in my opening remarks this morning, while I demand justice, I will do justice. I hold that a Territorial Legislature has the right to regulate the relation between master and slave in such a manner that the master shall not permit the slave to endanger the public safety or corrupt the public morals. That is what I mean by the power to regulate; and not seeing the point at which a court could intervene and arrest this power if it were abused, I said it never would, or rarely ever present a case which we could get before the court and upon which we could demand its judgment. By this I understood the Senator from Illinois to mean unfriendly legislation; that in the exercise of its power to regulate the relation between master and slave, it could act with such severity as effectually to exclude slavery as though it were a constitutional inhibition. That is what I meant.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am willing to test this question by the illustration the Senator presents of a Maine liquor law. I shall not stop to inquire whether the Maine liquor law is constitutional or not; first, because Congress is not the tribunal to decide it; and secondly, because, in the platform to which the Senator from Mississippi and myself both stand pledged as the rule of our political action, it is provided that that question shall be sent to the courts to test the constitutionality of the law, and we shall not come to Congress to repeal the law.—When the Nebraska bill was first pending in the Senate, it contained the old clause that the Territorial laws should be sent here, and if disapproved by Congress, should be void. The discussion proceeded on the basis that we were conferring the whole power of legislation on the Territory, subject only to the Constitution of the United States, with the right in the Territorial Legislature "to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way;" and that if any man was aggrieved by such legislation, he should have a right to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States to test its validity, but should not come to Congress to repeal [illegible] obnoxious law. When that argument was made, a distinguished Senator from Ohio, not now here, (Mr. Chase,) asked us why we kept that clause in the bill requiring the laws of the Territory to be sent here for approval or disapproval? We could not answer the inquiry, and hence we struck out the provision requiring the Territorial laws to be sent here for approval or disapproval, upon the avowed ground at the time that the Territorial Legislature might pass just such laws as they wanted, with the right of appeal by any one aggrieved to the Supreme Court to test their constitutionality, but not to Congress to annul them. I understood [illegible]

... say that this was the distinct understanding among the northern and southern Democrats at that time, and among all the friends of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. It was agreed that while we might differ as to the extent of the power of the Territorial Legislature on these questions, we would make a full grant of legislative authority to the Legislature of the Territory, with the right to pass such laws as they chose, and the right of anybody to appeal to the court to decide upon the validity and constitutionality of such laws, but not to come to Congress for their annulment. Hence, if the Territorial Legislature should pass the Maine Liquor law, and anybody was dissatisfied with the provisions of that act, and thought it violated his constitutional right, he could not come to Congress for its annulment, but could appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States; and if that court decided the law to be constitutional, it must stand, no matter how obnoxious it might be to any portion of the American people. If it was unconstitutional, it became void without any interference by Congress, or any other legislative body. The Kansas-Nebraska bill was thus amended for the avowed purpose, at the time, of striking out the appeal to Congress, and substituting the appeal to the court.

After we had gone that far, a Senator from New Hampshire pointed out in the Nebraska bill the fact that no appeal could be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States unless the amount of property in controversy was $2,000 in value, and hence that a negro could not appeal for his freedom, nor could the owner of a single slave appeal to the Supreme Court to establish his title, if he thought that his rights were violated. In order to obviate that objection, we amended the bill by providing that where the title to property in slaves, or question of personal freedom was the point in issue, the right of appeal to the Supreme Court should exist without reference to the amount in controversy.

Thus the Kansas-Nebraska bill stated [illegible] rightful power of legislation on all [illegible] soever to the Territorial Legislature [illegible] to the Constitution of the United States [illegible] they should not pass any law taxing [illegible] non-residents higher than that of [illegible] any law interfering with the primary [illegible] the soil, nor impose any tax on the [illegible] United States. But there was no [illegible] as to slavery. The intent was to confer on the Territorial Legislature all the power [illegible] subject of slavery, to let them [illegible] free institutions, as the people [illegible] chose; and the understanding was [illegible] abide by whatever laws they might [illegible] they did not violate the Constitution [illegible] States; and the Supreme Court [illegible] tribunal that could decide that [illegible]

Now, sir, I stand on the Kansas [illegible] [illegible]

... organic act of Kansas provides, in its sixth section:

"That the legislative power of the Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act; but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposition of the soil," &c.

The whole legislative power possessed by Congress over a Territory was, by that act, conferred on the Territorial Legislature. There were exceptions on three points; but slavery was not one of the exceptions. I say, then, the intent was to give to the Territorial Legislature all the power that we possessed; all that could be given under the Constitution; and the understanding was, that Congress would not interfere with whatever legislation they might enact.

Now, the Senator from Alabama assumes whether the Southern people, under the Constitution, have not the right to carry their slaves there? I answer, yes—the same right that you have to carry any other property. Then you ask, have they not a right to hold it there when they get it there? I answer, the same right that you have to hold any other property, subject to such local laws as the local Legislature may constitutionally enact. Can you hold any other property without law to protect it? No. Then, can you hold slave property without law to protect it? No, is the answer. Then, will Congress pass laws to protect other property in the Territories? I answer, no. We have organized Territorial Legislatures for that purpose.

We have agreed that this Government should not violate the principles of our Revolution, by making laws for a distant people regulating their domestic concerns, and affecting their rights of property, without giving them a representation. The doctrine that Congress is to regulate the rights of person and property, and the domestic concerns of a Territory, is the doctrine of the Tories of the Revolution. It is the doctrine of George III, and Lord North, his minister. Our fathers then said that they would not consent that the British Parliament [illegible]

... principles of non-intervention by Congress, and of self-government by the people of the Territories. That is the Democratic creed. The northern Democracy have so understood it. No Democratic State in the North ever would have voted for Mr. Buchanan, but for the fact that he was understood to occupy that position. I tell you, gentlemen of the South, in all candor, I do not believe a Democratic candidate can ever carry one Democratic State of the North on the platform that it is the duty of the Federal Government to force the people of a Territory to have slavery when they do not want it. But if the true principles of State rights and popular sovereignty be maintained and carried out in good faith, as set forth in the Nebraska bill, and understood by the people in 1856, a glorious future awaits the Democracy.

If we cannot stand together upon that principle there is no use of any angry excitement; no use of any violent controversy; no necessity for crimination or recrimination. The Senator from Mississippi has stated his position clearly and in a spirit of kindness. I trust that I have met him with equal kindness and frankness. I am sorry to have been under the necessity of occupying the time of the Senate in the discussion of this question at this late period of the session; but I am sure the Senate will do me the justice to say that I could not have been silent after the speech of my friend from Mississippi, without defending the position which was so severely and so ably assailed by him. I trust that I shall not be under the necessity of trespassing longer upon the time of the Senate upon these collateral questions.

NOTE BY MR. DOUGLAS.

The debate was continued at considerable length by several Senators, some of whom emphatically repudiated the idea that it was the intention of the Kansas-Nebraska act to affirm the principle of NON-INTERVENTION BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN THE TERRITORIES, whereby all questions pertaining to African slavery, as well as all other matters of domestic concern, were banished from the halls of Congress and remanded to the people of the Territories respectively, to be disposed of as they should see proper, subject only to the constitution, with the right of appeal by any person feeling aggrieved by the territorial enactment, to the judicial tribunals to determine the [illegible]

[illegible]

The Captain and his Child.

BY JAMES T. FIELDS.

We were crowded in the cabin,
Not a soul would dare to sleep—
It was midnight on the waters,
And a storm was on the deep.

'Tis a fearful thing in Winter
To be shattered by the blast,
And to hear the rattling trumpet
Thunder "cut away the mast!"

So we shuddered there in silence—
For the stoutest held his breath,
While the hungry sea was roaring,
And the breakers talked of death.

As thus we sat in darkness,
Each one busy with his prayers—
"We are lost!" the captain shouted,
As he staggered down the stairs.

But his little daughter whispered,
As she took his icy hand,
"Isn't God upon the water,
Just the same as on the land?"

Then he kissed the little maiden,
And he spoke in better cheer,
And we anchored safe in harbor,
When the morn was shining clear.

The Habeas Corpus Decision.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio, on the application for a writ of habeas corpus, to wrest the body of Simeon Bushnell and others from the custody of the U. S. Marshal, the said Bushnell "having been found 'guilty' by the District Court of the United States, and the rest awaiting trial, is a matter of moment, in consequence of the rebellious, in every shape and form, a portion of the citizens of the State, are prepared to show the Federal courts, and officers, whose the Fugitive Slave Law is the basis of action. We therefore transfer it to our columns as a matter of reference hereafter. [illegible]

... its own jurisdiction, and in reply to the claim that the law was unconstitutional and void and that, therefore, the District Court could not have any jurisdiction, very aptly remarked, that that fact, if true, amounts, after all, to a question of jurisdiction which they, in the first instance, must decide for themselves. Subsequently, the prosecution having terminated in a conviction and sentence of imprisonment, the same court allowed a writ of habeas corpus and discharged Booth for alleged defects in the indictment, which did not bring the case within the act of Congress of Sept. 18, 1850.

We refer to these cases in Wisconsin with no design of expressing our assent or dissent to the decisions under the first and last writs of habeas corpus, but merely to show that a court which had judicially decided the law to be unconstitutional, will hold that in a case like that under consideration, they had no legal right or authority to interfere.

On the whole, we are unanimously of the opinion that the relators, upon their own showing, admitting the law in question to be unconstitutional and void, could not be discharged by us, if they were had here, [illegible] were sent before us for deliverance. It would be an idle and expensive ceremony to issue the writ to bring the parties here, and, for that time, interrupt proceedings in said District Court, where our next duty would be to remand them into the custody of the officer who [illegible] them.

The application for writs of habeas corpus in behalf of the relators, is, for the reasons stated, refused.

This view of the case renders an examination of the other propositions, touched in the argument, as to the constitutionality of the act of Congress [illegible] and the right of the State tribunals to interfere with the final action of the District Courts in that behalf, altogether unnecessary.

Swan, C. J., and Brinkerhoff, Scott and Sutliff, J. J., concurred in the foregoing opinion.

[illegible]

... as to 1,870. We give the [illegible]

[illegible]

The Democracy of Connecticut stand upon the platform with STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS. The Republicans have no great reason to "crow" over such a victory, unless they rejoice to find themselves not totally routed. Who would venture to vaticinate, with STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as the standard bearer in 1860, that Connecticut would not squarely wheel into line?

A STRANGE PHENOMENON—A FREEZING WELL.—In ordinary wells water does not freeze at all, but here seems to be one out of the ordinary run:

The latter part of last November, Mr. Andrew Twombly, of Brandon, Vt., commenced to dig a well near his house, situated about a mile from the centre of the village of Brandon, on a tolerably level plain. Having excavated to the depth of fifteen feet, through sand and gravel, the workmen came to ground frozen solid, through which they continued to excavate the further distance of fifteen or sixteen feet before getting through the frozen ground.

At the depth of forty feet, sufficient water having been obtained, the well was stoned in the usual manner. The character of the ground was the same throughout the whole distance, viz: coarse gravel and sand—the frozen portion interspersed with lumps of clear ice. At the time the well was dug, the surface of the ground was not frozen. Ever since the well was dug, up to the present time, ice forms in the well and incrusts the stone at from fifteen to thirty feet from the surface, and the surface of the water, which is thirty-five feet below the surface of the ground, freezes over every night. On several occasions, when the bucket has been left in the well under the water over night, it has been found necessary to descend into the well, and, with a hatchet, cut the ice in order to extricate it.

— The Postmaster-General has issued a circular restricting mail agents from receiving letters on the cars, a practice now carried to such extent as to prevent their having sufficient time to attend to the legitimate duties of their positions.

... diction de facto over persons [illegible] no other court will interfere with or seek to avert its action, while the case is still pending and undetermined. This rule is sustained and supported by all the analogies of the law. See Smith vs. Ives 9 Wheaton 532; Hagan vs. Lucas 10 Peters 400; Taylor vs. Carryl 20 How 594; United States vs. Morris 2 Am L. R. 351; Ex parte Robinson & McLean 363; Keating vs. Spink 3 Ohio State R. 105. Hurd on Habeas Corpus 196, et seq.

It is right in principle and preventive of unpleasant collision between different tribunals, if another tribunal were thus to interfere with our action and withdraw from our custody a prisoner upon trial before us, and set him at large, we should resist such an attempt to the uttermost. And shall we not extend to other tribunals the same comity and the same confidence that we claim for ourselves?

In the recent cases in the State of Wisconsin, and which have attracted so much attention and remark, this point was expressly decided, and that too by the same Court which determined the fugitive slave law to be unconstitutional. Ex parte Booth, 3 Wis. Rep. 145. The history of this case is as follows:

Booth had been arrested on warrant granted by a United States Commissioner for aiding in the escape of a fugitive slave from service contrary to the law of 1850. One of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin on habeas corpus, discharged Booth from the custody of the Marshal, on the ground, that the law of 1850 as to fugitive slaves, was unconstitutional, among other things, in authorizing Commissioners so to act and issue warrants, and that a warrant issued by such officer was illegal and void, and a majority of the Supreme Court of that State on certiorari, affirmed the judgment. Booth was subsequently indicted in the District Court of the U. S. for the State of Wisconsin, for the same offense and arrested by the Marshal on a warrant issued thereon. Booth thereupon applied to the same Supreme Court then in session, for a writ of habeas corpus to be delivered from the custody of the Marshal; but the writ was unanimously refused, on the ground that it appeared from the application, that he was under arrest upon indictment of a Court having jurisdiction of alleged offenses against the U. S., and that the case was still pending and undetermined. The court decided that they had no legal right to interfere in his behalf, while the prosecution was pending, even though the law of Congress under which he was indicted, was unconstitutional and void, recognizing, in its fullest extent, the principles and practice of judicial courts to which I have adverted. They concede the privilege and right of the District court to determine first and for itself, the question of [illegible]

[illegible]

THE BLENNERHASSETT PAPERS.—

Wm. H. SAFFORD writes to the [illegible] that, when in St. Louis, he obtained from the family of the late [illegible] Blennerhassett, in whose possession they were, placed for publication, the papers of the [illegible] but ill-fated Herman Blennerhassett, so conspicuous for his association with Aaron Burr. The Blennerhassett papers are described:

"They consist chiefly of his private journals, correspondence, essays, historical and political, also in relation to the Burr conspiracy, from Alston, Tyler, Bollman, [illegible], Floyd, and others implicated, also the journal of the expedition, until arrested [illegible] broken up. There are also the letters, manuscripts and [illegible] of poetry of Lady Blennerhassett, which of themselves would form a respectable sized volume.

These papers are voluminous, and afford a satisfactory biography of the Blennerhassett family, and a minute and complete disclosure of the objects of and parties concerned in the Burr expedition."

Some five or six years ago, Mr. Safford published an unpretending but exceedingly interesting and valuable volume entitled the "Life of Blennerhassett." During the last session of the Legislature he presented us a copy which we valued very highly, and if the papers into whose hands it had fallen is done with it, we should be happy to have it returned.

We learned from Mr. Safford that he had been promised these papers, full of interest, and likely to supply a blank in Western events that could not be supplied elsewhere. Familiar with the subject, a ripe scholar, of energy and industry, impartial and just, of clear, discriminating mind, these materials could not have been confided to better hands, and we anticipate a work not only creditable to the author, but eminently worthy of the consideration of the country, and a handsome addition to its history and literature.—Fact.

THE COOLIE SYSTEM.—The [illegible] Kate City, which arrived at New York on the 30th, from Havana, brings news that a French ship had landed four hundred and seventy-five coolies from Macao. She was out one hundred and twenty-two days, and ninety coolies had died on the passage. Of the remainder about eight died every day from the time she entered Havana harbor. Returns prove that from the period of the inauguration of the coolie apprenticeship system, forty-four thousand five hundred and forty-nine Chinamen were shipped for Cuba, of which number thirty-two thousand seven hundred and fifty-five were landed alive, showing a mortality at sea of six thousand and ninety-four—a little over fifteen per cent. The commercial men there put the plan in operation had, however, realized [illegible] hundreds of thousands of dollars by it, and retired from business.

PROBABILITY OF MARRIAGE.—A table inserted in a paper in the London Assurance Magazine exhibits the results of a rather startling character. In the first two quinquennial periods, 21–25 and 25–30, the probability of a widower marrying in a year is nearly three times as great as that of a bachelor. At thirty it is nearly four times as great; from thirty to forty-five it is five times as great, and it increases, until at sixty the chance of a widower marrying in a year is eleven times as great as that of a bachelor. After the age of thirty the probability of a bachelor marrying in a year diminishes in a most rapid ratio. The probability at thirty-five is one-third than half that at thirty, and nearly the same proportion exists between each quinquennial period afterwards.

APPROPRIATIONS BY CONGRESS.—The official statement just prepared for publication shows that Congress, at the last session, appropriated for legislative, executive, civil and miscellaneous purposes nearly $11,000,000; for the Diplomatic and consular service, $1,000,000; for the Indian Department, Revolutionary, invalid and other pensions, upwards of $5,000,000; for Army, fortifications and the Military Academy, $15,000,000; for the naval service, $10,000,000; and for the ocean mail steam service, $2,000,000—making a total of $41,000,000. In addition to the above about $7,000,000 should be added for indefinite appropriations and to carry out the provisions of the pre-existing laws, including the collection of revenue from the customs.

—The Journal, &c., by [illegible] the announcement of the death of [illegible] Alexis de Tocqueville which appeared in the London Times, [illegible] to be extremely low in the last [illegible] history.

The Canon Ball at Boston.

[illegible]

Processed by Diana Patterson

CITY PUBLISHED Col. O.

TITLE People's Press

DATES 1859 AM-18

MATERIAL FROM M.O.

48 Pages Processed this Sheet

☒ OVERSIZED (over 18 wide or 25 high)

Vol# 1 No#1

○ = Material to Microfilm — ⊖ = Material Damaged or Incomplete — ⊕ = Damaged or Incomplete material Replaced

[Calendar grid, JAN–DEC; circled: MAY 12, 19, 26; JUNE 2, 9, 16, 23, 30; JUL 7, 14, 28; AUG 4, 11, 18, 25; SEP 1, 8, 15, 22, 29; OCT 6, 13]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME 1. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1859. NUMBER 3.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1859.

Popular Sovereignty.

BY JAMES P. [illegible]

The People are the sovereign power,
To them was given the priceless dower
Of every [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

[illegible]

Fourth of July.

Speech of Hon. S. A. Douglas

In the Senate of the United States, February 23d, 1859, in reply to Hon. A. G. Brown of Mississippi, in opposition to the passage of a code of laws by Congress to protect slavery in the territories, and in favor of banishing from the halls of Congress all questions touching domestic slavery in the territories, and remanding them to the people of the territories, to be disposed of as they may see proper, subject to an appeal to the judicial tribunals, to test the validity of their legal enactments under the Constitution of the United States, together with an appendix, showing the position of distinguished public men on this question in the great contests of 1856 and 1858.

SPEECH.

The question under consideration being the following amendment offered by Mr. Hale of New Hampshire, to the bill making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government, for the year ending the 30th of June, 1860: [illegible]

Mr. DOUGLAS rose and said: Mr. President—

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, I rise to a question of order. I believe the call of the roll has been commenced, and debate cannot proceed without the unanimous consent of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. Iverson in the chair.) The present occupant of the chair was not in the chair at the time the call of the roll commenced; [illegible]

Mr. BROWN. I can explain it. I was on the floor and had addressed the chair; but the Vice-President did not hear me. I spoke again, and he still did not hear me. If there was a suspense it was out of order. Nobody had a right to answer while I was claiming the attention of the chair. I rose precisely at the instant the Senator from New York was taking his seat.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the first person who had been called had answered yea or nay, debate would have been out of order; but there was no response to the call, and debate is in order.

Mr. DOUGLAS. If no other northern Democrat desires to be heard on the points presented by the Senator from Mississippi, I feel it incumbent on me to say something in vindication of my own position, reluctant as I am to occupy time at this stage of the session in a discussion of this question. I admire the frankness, candor, and directness with which that Senator has approached this question. No man can accuse him, nor will suspect him, of a desire "to cheat or to be cheated;" and I hope that I shall be able to put my opinions on the record in a manner that will acquit me of the slightest suspicion of desiring to cheat or to be cheated. To a certain point, that Senator and myself agree. Then there comes divergence, which grows wider and wider the further we travel. We agree that, under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, slaves are property; and that, consequently, the owner of a slave has the same right to emigrate to a territory, and carry his slave property with him, as the owner of any other species of property has to move there, and carry his property with him.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Will the honorable Senator allow me—

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am replying to the Senator from Mississippi now, and would prefer, therefore, to go on.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I wish to put a question to the honorable Senator from Illinois on that point.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I desire to deal with this point now. The right of transit to and from the territories is the same for one species of property as it is for all others. Thus far the Senator from Mississippi and myself agree—that slave property in the territories stands on an equal footing with every other species of property. Now, the question arises, to what extent is property, slaves included, subject to the local law of the territory? Whatever power the Territorial Legislature has over other species of property, extends, in my judgment, to the same extent, and in the same manner, to the slave property. The Territorial Legislature has the same power to legislate in respect to slaves, that it has in regard to any other property, to the same extent, and no further. If the Senator wishes to know what power it has over slaves in the territories, I answer let him tell me what power it has to legislate over every other species of property, either by encouragement or by taxation, or in any other mode, and he has my answer in regard to slave property.

But the Senator says that there is something peculiar in slave property, requiring further protection than other species of property. If so, it is the misfortune of those who own that species of property. He tells us that, if the Territorial Legislature fails to pass a slave code for the Territories, fails to pass police regulations to protect slave property, the absence of such legislation practically excludes slave property as effectually as a constitutional prohibition would exclude it. I agree to that proposition. He says, furthermore, that it is competent for the Territorial Legislature, by the exercise of the taxing power, and other functions within the limits of the Constitution, to adopt unfriendly legislation which practically drives slavery out of the Territory. I agree to that proposition. That is just what I said, and all I said, and just what I meant by my Freeport speech in Illinois, upon which there has been so much comment throughout the country.

But the Senator says that while non-action by the Territorial Legislature excludes slavery; and while the Territorial Legislature may, within the limits of the Federal Constitution, adopt such a system of unfriendly legislation as in effect to exclude slavery, [illegible] it is wrong for the Legislature to [illegible] that policy; and because the Territorial [illegible] ought not to adopt that line of policy, he will [illegible] content with such legislation, but will appeal to Congress, and demand a congressional slave code [illegible] protecting slavery in the Territories, [illegible] wishes of the people. Well, sir, his conclusion is logical, [illegible] is right. All men [illegible] agree that non-action by the Territorial Legislature is practical exclusion. If the people of a Territory want slavery, they will protect it by a slave code. If they do not want slavery, if they believe it is not necessary, if they are of opinion that their interests do not require it, or will be prejudiced by it, they will not furnish the necessary remedies and police regulations, usually called a slave code, for its protection.

The Senator from Mississippi says they ought to pass such a code; but he admits that it is immaterial to inquire whether they ought or ought not to do it; for if they do not want it, they will not enact it; and if they do not do it, there is no mode by which you can compel them to do it. He admits there is no compulsory means by which you can coerce the Territorial Legislature to pass such a law; and for that reason he insists that, in case of non-action by the Territorial Legislature, it is the right and duty of southern Senators and Representatives to demand affirmative action by Congress in the enactment of a slave code for the Territories. He says that it is not necessary to put the question to me, whether I would vote for a congressional slave code. He desires to know of all other northern Democrats what they will do; he does not wish any answer from me. I am much obliged to him for taking it for granted, from my past record, that I never would vote for a slave code in the Territories by Congress; and I have yet to learn that there is a man in a free State of this Union, of any party who would.

Mr. MASON. Will the Senator be kind enough to explain what he means by slave code?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Yes sir. The Senator from Mississippi defined it very well in his speech. His position was, that while the Constitution gave him the right of protection in a Territory for his slave property, it did not, of itself, furnish adequate protection. He drew a distinction between the right and the fact, and said that the protection could only be furnished by legislation; that legislation could only come from one of two sources—the Territorial Legislature or the Congress of the United States. He would look to the Territorial Legislature in the first instance. If he got adequate legislation there, he was content; but if the Territorial Legislature failed to act, and give him that adequate legislation, in the form of what is commonly called a slave code, such non-action was equivalent to a denial of his rights; and, losing his rights, it was no consolation to him that he had been deprived of them by the non-action of a Territorial Legislature; and hence he would demand of Congress the passage of laws to protect his property, and to punish men for running it off; to furnish such remedies for any violation of his rights as he thought he was entitled to from the Territorial Legislature. He said he would demand this from Congress.

Mr. BROWN. Because the Territorial Legislature was the creature of Congress.

Mr. DOUGLAS. He further said that he would base his demand on Congress to pass this slave code on the ground that the Territorial Legislature was the creature of Congress, and, if it did not do its duty, Congress should pass such laws as were necessary to protect slave property in the Territories.

Mr. GREEN. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a single question?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Certainly.

Mr. GREEN. If a law merely providing protection is to be called a slave code, then, I ask, if larceny, in general terms, were punished by the Territorial law, and the Legislature should except the larceny of slaves, would he say he would submit to that as the option of the Legislature?

Mr. DOUGLAS. It is immaterial to me, whether you call this legislation a slave code, or by any other name. I will call it by any name the Senator chooses. I wish to be understood, however, and to use such language as conveys the idea. I take the language of the Senator from Mississippi, if that is satisfactory. All I have to say, on the point presented to the Senator from Missouri, is this: while our Constitution does not provide remedies for stealing negroes, it does not provide remedies for stealing dry goods, or horses, or any other species of property. You cannot protect any property in the Territories, without laws furnishing remedies for its violation, and penalties for its abuse. Nobody pretends that you are going to pass laws of Congress making a criminal code for the Territories, with reference to other species of property. The Congress of the United States never yet passed an act establishing a criminal code for any organized Territory. It simply organizes the Territory, and leaves its Legislature to make its own criminal code. Congress never passed a law to protect any species of property in the organized Territories; it leaves its protection to the Territorial Legislature. The question is, whether we shall make an exception as to slavery? The Supreme Court makes no such distinction. It recognizes slaves as property. When they are taken to a Territory, they are on an equal footing with other property, and dependent upon the same system of legislation, for protection, as other property. While all other property is dependent on Territorial legislation for protection, I hold that slave property must look to the same authority for its protection.

Mr. GREEN. The Senator will permit me to say that I think he does not understand the point I presented, and I therefore desire to present it more explicitly. The Supreme Court having decided that slaves constitute property, if a Territory, authorized by Congress to legislate for itself, should pass a law punishing larceny of all property except slaves, would that make slaves equal to other property in the Territory? or would it not be a violation of the Constitution?

Mr. DOUGLAS. If the Senator cannot understand my answer to that question he what I have said, and the train of my argument, it is useless to discuss it further. I say that I leave all kinds of property, slaves included, to the local law for protection—and that I will not exert the power of Congress to interfere with that local law with reference to slave property, or any other kind of property. If the people think that particular laws on the subject of property are beneficial to their interests, they will enact them. If they do not think such laws are wise, they will refrain from enacting them.—They will protect slaves there, provided they want slavery; and they will want slavery, if the climate be such that the white man cannot cultivate the soil, so as to render negro compulsory labor necessary. Hence, it becomes a question of climate, of production, of self-interest, and not a question of legislation, whether slavery shall, or shall not exist there.

But the Senator from Mississippi says he has a right to protection. The owner of every other species of property may say he has a right to protection. The man dealing in liquors may think that, inasmuch as his stock of liquors is property, he has a right to protection. The man dealing in an inferior breed of cattle may think he has a right to protection; but the people of a Territory may think it is their interest to improve the breed of stock by discrimination against inferior breeds, and hence they may fix a higher rate of taxation on the one than on the other.

Mr. BROWN. The Senator from Illinois now makes a point which enables me to illustrate what I mean. I hold that the Territorial Legislature of Kansas—that being the Territory immediately involved in this discussion—has no right to enact the Maine liquor law. That is an act of sovereignty.—It has the right to say that liquors carried into the Territory shall be so used as that they shall not corrupt the public morals nor endanger the public safety; but the power of prohibition does not belong to a Territorial Legislature. So I say in reference to slave property. As I said in my opening remarks this morning, while I demand justice, I will do justice. I hold that a Territorial Legislature has the right to regulate the relation between master and slave in such a manner that the master shall not permit the slave to endanger the public safety or corrupt the public morals. That is what I mean by the power to regulate; and not seeing the point at which a court could intervene and arrest this power if it were abused, I said it never would, or rarely ever present a case which we could get before the court and upon which we could demand its judgment. By this I understood the Senator from Illinois to mean unfriendly legislation; that in the exercise of its power to regulate the relation between master and slave, it could act with such severity as effectually to exclude slavery as though it were a constitutional inhibition. That is what I meant.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am willing to test this question by the illustration the Senator presents of a Maine liquor law. I shall not stop to inquire whether the Maine liquor law is constitutional or not; first, because Congress is not the tribunal to decide it; and secondly, because, in the platform to which the Senator from Mississippi and myself both stand pledged as the rule of our political action, it is provided that that question shall be sent to the court to test the constitutionality of the law, and we shall not come to Congress to repeal the law.—When the Nebraska bill was first pending in the Senate, it contained the old clause that the Territorial laws should be sent here, and if disapproved by Congress, should be void. The discussion proceeded on the basis that we were conferring the whole power of legislation on the Territory, subject only to the Constitution of the United States, with the right in the Territorial Legislature "to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way;" and that if any man was aggrieved by such legislation, he should have a right to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States to test its validity, but should not come to Congress to repeal an obnoxious law. When that argument was made, a distinguished Senator from Ohio, not now here, (Mr. Chase,) asked us why we kept that clause in the bill requiring the laws of the Territory to be sent here for approval or disapproval? We could not answer the inquiry, and hence we struck out the provision requiring the Territorial laws to be sent here for approval or disapproval, upon the avowed ground at the time that the Territorial Legislature might pass just such laws as they wanted, with the right of appeal by any one aggrieved to the Supreme Court to test their constitutionality, but not to Congress to annul them. I understood it to say that this was the distinct understanding among the northern and southern Democrats at that time, and among all the friends of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. It was agreed that while we might differ as to the extent of the power of the Territorial Legislature on these questions, we would make a full grant of legislative authority to the Legislature of the Territory, with the right to pass such laws as they chose, and the right of anybody to appeal to the court to decide upon the validity and constitutionality of such laws, but not to come to Congress for their annulment. Hence, if the Territorial Legislature should pass the Maine Liquor law, and any body was dissatisfied with the provisions of that act, and thought it violated his constitutional rights, he could not come to Congress for its annulment, but could appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States; and if that court decided the law to be constitutional, it must stand, no matter how obnoxious it might be to any portion of the American people. If it was unconstitutional, it became void without any interference by Congress, or any other legislative body. The Kansas-Nebraska bill was thus amended for the avowed purpose, at the time, of striking out the appeal to Congress, and substituting the appeal to the court.

After we had gone that far, a Senator from New Hampshire pointed out in the Nebraska bill the fact that no appeal could be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States unless the amount of property in controversy was $2,000 in value, and hence that a negro could not appeal for his freedom, nor could the owner of a single slave appeal to the Supreme Court to establish his title, if he thought that his rights were violated. In order to obviate that objection, we amended the bill by providing that where the title to property in slaves, or the question of personal freedom was the point in issue, the right of appeal to the Supreme Court should exist without reference to the amount in controversy.

Thus the Kansas-Nebraska bill stood, granting all rightful power of legislation on all subjects whatsoever to the Territorial Legislature, subject only to the Constitution of the United States, provided they should not pass any law taxing the property of non-residents higher than that of residents, nor any law interfering with the primary disposition of the soil, nor impose any tax on the property of the United States. But there was no exception made as to slavery. The intent was to confer on the Territorial Legislature all the power we had on the subject of slavery, to let them wield it for or against free institutions, as the people of the Territory chose; and the understanding was, that we would abide by whatever laws they might make, provided they did not violate the Constitution of the United States; and the Supreme Court was the only tribunal that could decide that question.

Now, sir, I stand on the Kansas-Nebraska bill as it was expounded and understood at the time, with this full power in the Territorial Legislature, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court to test the validity of its laws, and no right whatever to appeal to Congress to repeal them in the event of our not liking them. I am ready to answer the inquiry of the Senator from Mississippi, whether, if I believed the Maine liquor law to be unconstitutional and wrong, and if a Territorial Legislature should pass it, I would vote here to annul it? I tell him no! If the people of Kansas want a Maine liquor law, let them have it. If they do not want it, let them refuse to pass it. If they do pass it, and any citizen thinks that law violates the Constitution, let him make a case and appeal to the Supreme Court. If the court sustains his objection, the law is void. If it overrules the objection, the decision must stand until the people, who alone are to be affected by it, who alone have an interest in it, may choose to repeal it. So I say with reference to slavery. Let the Territorial Legislature pass just such laws in regard to slavery as they think they have a right to enact under the Constitution of the United States. If I do not like those laws, I will not vote to repeal them; if you do not like them, you must not vote to repeal them; but anybody aggrieved may appeal to the Supreme Court, and if they are constitutional, they must stand; if they are not constitutional, they are void. That was the doctrine of non-intervention, as it was understood at the time the Kansas-Nebraska bill was passed. That is the way it was explained and argued in the Senate and in the House of Representatives, and [illegible] tinctly understood that Congress was never to intervene for or against slavery, or for or against any other institution in the Territories; but leave the courts to decide all constitutional questions as they might arise, and the President to carry the decrees of the court into effect; and, in case of resistance to his authority in executing the judicial process, that he was to use, if necessary, the whole military force of the country, as provided by existing laws.

I know that some gentlemen do not like the doctrine of non-intervention as well as they once did. It is now becoming fashionable to talk sneeringly of "your doctrine of non-intervention." Sir, that doctrine has been a fundamental article in the Democratic creed for years. It has been repeated over and over again in every national Democratic platform—non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories. The Nebraska bill was predicated on that idea—the Territorial Legislature to have jurisdiction over all rightful subjects of legislation, not excepting slavery, with no appeal to Congress, but a right to appeal to the courts; and the legislation to be void, if the Supreme Court said it was unconstitutional, and valid, no matter how obnoxious, if the court said it was constitutional. Let me call attention to the language of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. Its fourteenth section provides:

> "That the Constitution and all laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect in the said Territory of Nebraska, as elsewhere within the United States, except the eighth section of the act preparatory to the admission of Missouri into the Union, approved March 6, 1820, which being inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories as recognized by the legislation of 1850, commonly called the compromise measures, is hereby declared inoperative and void; it being the true intent and meaning of this act not to legislate slavery into any State or Territory, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States."

Thus, in the Nebraska bill, it is declared that a Congressional enactment on the subject of slavery is inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories. This same article of faith has gone into the various Democratic platforms, and especially into the Cincinnati platform. Every Democrat, therefore, is pledged, by this platform and the organization of the party, against any legislation of Congress in the Territories for or against slavery, no matter how obnoxious the Territorial legislation may be. If it is unconstitutional, you have your remedy; go to the court and test the question. If it is constitutional, you have agreed that the people of a Territory may have it. I hold you to the agreement.

Mr. CLAY. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Certainly with great pleasure.

Mr. CLAY. I ask the Senator whether he believes that a citizen of the Southern States has a right to carry his slaves into the Territories under the Constitution?

Mr. DOUGLAS. When the Senator gets through with his questions, I will answer.

Mr. CLAY. I should like the Senator to answer.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I do not like this thing of requiring categorical answers, when the Senator who puts the question holds the floor. When he gets through, I will give him an answer.

Mr. CLAY. If the Senator does not answer it, I will answer it. I think the citizen has that right. When I ask whence he derives the right, I say from the Constitution. The Supreme Court has so decided. Then, I ask the Senator, if the Constitution gives the right, how can the Territory deny it? and if the Territory pass a law inhibiting the introduction of slaves there, where is his redress? The Senator says, in the Supreme Court. Suppose he takes a slave there; suppose it is stolen from him, and he brings an action for its recovery, and the local court decides against him, and he brings his case to the Supreme Court by appeal, and the Supreme Court decides that the law inhibiting slavery is unconstitutional, and that he has a right to hold the slave; what redress is given to him if Congress will not secure his rights? The result is just this: that if the Senator be right, the Constitution prevails in the States, but not in the Territories; squatter sovereignty is superior to the Constitution.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I will answer the Senator's question. First, I do not hold that squatter sovereignty is superior to the Constitution. I hold that no such thing as sovereign power attaches to a Territory while a Territory. I hold that a Territory possesses whatever power it derives from the Constitution under the organic act, and no more. I hold that all the power a Territorial Legislature possesses is derived from the Constitution and its amendments, under the act of Congress; and because I hold that, I denied last year that the people of a Territory, without the consent of Congress, could assemble at Lecompton and create an organic law for that people. I denied the validity of your Lecompton constitution, for the reason that constitutions can only be made by sovereign power; and because the Territory was not a sovereignty, that was just a constitution, but a petition. But, sir, I will not consume time on that question. The limit of the authority of a Territorial Legislature is the organic act and the Constitution, and to accomplish. The organic act of Kansas provides, in its sixth section:

> "That the legislative power of the Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act; but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposition of the soil," &c.

The whole legislative power possessed by Congress over a Territory was, by that act, conferred on the Territorial Legislature. There were exceptions on three points; but slavery was not one of the exceptions. I say, then, the intent was to give to the Territorial Legislature all the power that we possessed; all that could be given under the Constitution; and the understanding was, that Congress would not interfere with whatever legislation they might enact.

Now, the Senator from Alabama asks whether the Southern people, under the Constitution, have not the right to carry their slaves there? I answer, yes—the same right that you have to carry any other property. Then you ask, have they not a right to hold it there when they get it there? I answer, the same right that you have to hold any other property, subject to such local laws as the local Legislature may constitutionally enact. Can you hold any other property without law to protect it? No. Then, can you hold slave property without law to protect it? No, is the answer. Then, will Congress pass laws to protect other property in the Territories? I answer, no. We have created Territorial Legislatures for that purpose.

We have agreed that this Government should not violate the principles of our Revolution, by making laws for a distant people regulating their domestic concerns, and affecting their rights of property, without giving them a representation. The doctrine that Congress is to regulate the rights of person and property, and the domestic concerns of a Territory, is the doctrine of the Tories of the Revolution. It is the doctrine of George III, and Lord North, his minister. Our fathers then said that they would not consent that the British Parliament should pass laws touching the local and domestic concerns of the colonies, the rights of person and property, the family relations of the people of the colonies, without their consent. The Parliament of Great Britain said they had the power. We said to them "you may have the power, but you have not the moral right; it is violative of the great principles of civil liberty; violative of the rights of an Englishman, not to be affected in his property without his consent is given through his representatives." Because Great Britain insisted on exercising that identical power over the colonies, our fathers flew to arms, asserted the doctrine that every colony, every dependency, every Territory, had a right in its own domestic Legislature to pass just such laws as its people chose touching their local and domestic concerns, recognizing the right of the Imperial Parliament to regulate imperial affairs, as I do the right of Congress to regulate the national and Federal concerns of the people of a Territory.

Sir, I am asserting, on behalf of the people of the Territories, just those rights which our fathers demanded for themselves against the claims of Great Britain. Because these rights were not granted to our fathers, they went through a bloody war of seven years. Am I now to be called upon to enforce that same odious doctrine on the people of a Territory, against their consent? I say, no. Organize a Territorial government for them; give them a Legislature, to be elected by their own people; give them all the powers of legislation on all questions of a local and domestic character, subject only to the Constitution; and if they make good laws, let them enjoy their blessings; and if they make bad laws, let them suffer under them until they repeal them. If the laws are unconstitutional, let those aggrieved appeal to the court—the tribunal created in the Constitution to ascertain that fact. That is the principle which we stood upon in 1856. It was on that principle and that understanding we fought the great political battle and gained the great victory of 1856. How many votes do you think Mr. Buchanan would have obtained in Pennsylvania if he had then said that the Constitution of the United States plants slavery in all the Territories, and makes it the duty of the Federal Government to protect and maintain it at the point of the bayonet and by Federal laws, in opposition to the will of the people? How many votes would he have received in Ohio, or any other free State, on such a platform? Mr. Buchanan did not then understand the doctrine of popular sovereignty and self-government in that way.

Mr. BIGLER. Mr. President—

Mr. DOUGLAS. I will hear the Senator.

Mr. BIGLER. I shall not attempt to answer the honorable Senator's question; but he will pardon me for asking another, which I think quite as significant and quite as appropriate, and it is this: Suppose that in the campaign of 1856, instead of saying as that honorable Senator said, and as those who acted with him said, and as I said everywhere to the people of the States, who were about to emigrate to the Territories, "when you go, there, you carry with you all the rights you enjoy in a sovereign State;" saying as he said and as I said, "it is but the extension of the great principle of self-government to the Territories;" suppose we had said to those proud people, "when there, and in the matter of changing your government from a Territory to a State, you shall have the high privilege of exercising the right to petition Congress for a redress of grievances!" They would have asked that Senator and me, when it was, and where it was, that the American citizen had not a right to petition for a redress of grievances, whether white or black.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I shall not answer that part of the Senator's inquiry as to whether American citizens, white or black, have not the right to petition for a redress of grievances, because I do not recognize any black American citizens. I have no colored brethren of that description. (Laughter and applause in the galleries.) I know of no American citizens in this Republic except the white people, and I trust in God I shall never know any other kind. (Applause in the galleries.)

Mr. BIGLER. I knew that as well as the Senator, and I ought to have said inhabitants.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Iverson in the chair.) If there is any more interruption in the galleries, the Chair shall order the galleries to be cleared.

Mr. MASON. If there is any more disturbance in the galleries, I shall certainly move and insist that the galleries be cleared.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will order the galleries to be cleared at once if there is any further interruption.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I aware that in 1856, during the whole of that campaign, I took the same position I do now, and none other; and I will show that Mr. Buchanan pledged himself to the same doctrine when he accepted the nomination of the Cincinnati Convention. In his letter of acceptance he says, referring to the Kansas-Nebraska act:

> "The recent legislation of Congress, respecting domestic slavery, derived, as it has been, from the original and pure fountain of legitimate political power, the will of the majority, promises ere long to allay the dangerous excitement. This legislation is founded upon principles as ancient as free government itself, and, in accordance with them, has simply declared that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."

This extract from Mr. Buchanan's letter shows that he then understood that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, should decide for themselves whether slavery should or should not exist within their limits. I undertake to say, that wherever I went that year, his cause was advocated on that principle, as laid down in his letter of acceptance. The people of the North, at least, certainly understood him to hold the doctrine of self-government in Territories as well as in States, and as applicable to slave property as well as all other species of property. I undertake to say, that he would not have carried one half the Democratic vote in any free State, if he had not been thus understood; and I hope my friend from Mississippi had no allusion to this letter, when he said that in the next contest he did not desire "to cheat nor to be cheated." I am glad that the Senator from Mississippi means to have a clear, unequivocal, specific statement of our principles, so that there shall be no cheating on either side. I intend to use language which can be repeated in Chicago as well as in New Orleans, in Charleston the same as in Boston. We live under a common Constitution. No political creed is sound or safe which cannot be proclaimed in the same sense wherever the American flag waves over American soil. If the North and the South cannot accept a common ground on the slavery question, the sooner we know it the better. The Democracy of the North hold, at least, that the people of a Territory have the same right to legislate in respect to slavery, as to all other property; and that, consequently, it results in this: if the people want slavery, they will have it; and if they do not want it, it shall not be forced upon them by an act of Congress. The Senator from Mississippi says that doctrine is right, unless we pass an act of Congress compelling the people of a Territory to have slavery whether they want it or not.—The point he wishes to arrive at, is whether we are for or against congressional intervention. If you repudiate the doctrine of non-intervention, and form a slave code by act of Congress, when the people of a Territory refuse it, you must step off the Democratic platform. We will let you depart in peace, as you no longer belong to us: you are no longer of us when you adopt the principle of congressional intervention, in violation of the Democratic creed. I stand here defending the great principles of non-intervention by Congress, and of self-government by the people of the Territories. That is the Democratic creed. The northern Democracy have so understood it. No Democratic State of the North ever would have voted for Mr. Buchanan, but for the fact that he was understood to occupy that position. I tell you, gentlemen of the South, in all candor, I do not believe a Democratic candidate can ever carry any one Democratic State of the North on the platform that it is the duty of the Federal Government to force the people of a Territory to have slavery when they do not want it. But if the true principles of State rights and popular sovereignty be maintained and carried out in good faith, as set forth in the Nebraska bill, and understood by the people in 1856, a glorious future awaits the Democracy.

If we cannot stand together upon that principle there is no use of any angry excitement; no use of any violent controversy; no necessity for crimination or recrimination. The Senator from Mississippi has stated his position clearly and in a spirit of kindness. I trust that I have met him with equal kindness and frankness. I am sorry to have been under the necessity of occupying the time of the Senate in the discussion of this question at this late period of the session: but I am sure the Senate will do me the justice to say that I could not have been silent after the speech of my friend from Mississippi, without defending the position which was so severely and so ably assailed by him. I trust that I shall not be under the necessity of trespassing longer upon the time of the Senate upon these collateral questions.

NOTE BY MR. DOUGLAS.

The debate was continued at considerable length by several Senators, some of whom emphatically repudiated the idea that it was the intention of the Kansas-Nebraska act to affirm the principle of NON-INTERVENTION BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN THE TERRITORIES, whereby all questions pertaining to African slavery, as well as all other matters of domestic concern, were banished from the halls of Congress and remanded to the people of the Territories respectively, to be disposed of as they should see proper, subject only to the constitution, with the right of appeal by any person feeling aggrieved by the territorial legislation, to the judicial tribunals to determine the validity of such enactments under the Constitution of the United States.

They went farther, and insisted that it is the duty of Congress to interpose and enact a code of laws to protect slavery in the Territories whenever the Territorial Legislature may fail or refuse to provide such legislation.

One Senator (Mr. Gwin) declared, that if he had understood the Kansas-Nebraska bill at the time of its passage as I now construe it, he would never have voted for it.

[illegible]

The Late Hon. Geo. M. Bibb.

At a meeting of the Louisville Bar, and officers of the Louisville Chancery court, of which the deceased had been the first Chancellor, Hon. HENRY PIRTLE presented resolutions of respect for the memory of Hon. Geo. M. Bibb in which was incorporated the following biographical sketch:

Hon. George M. Bibb, died at Georgetown D. C., on the 14th inst., of pneumonia, in the 83d year of his age. Mr. Bibb was born in Prince Edward county, Va., on the 30th of October, 1776. He was sent early to Hampden Sydney College and graduated as Bachelor of Arts before he was fifteen years old. He went immediately to the College of Nassau Hall, Princeton, N. J., where he was graduated in the fall of 1792. He was so young that there was some question about the lawfulness of his degree, as he was then just sixteen years of age. He studied law in Virginia, attending the lectures of St. George Tucker in William and Mary College.

He came to Kentucky in the year 1798, and having, of course, from the early [illegible] at the Colleges, high reputation as a [illegible] man of uncommon talent and information, he very soon had a considerable practice.

In 1807 he was appointed District Attorney of the United States, and the same year he was commissioned Judge of the Court of Appeals; and in 1809 he was appointed Chief Justice of Kentucky. In 1811 he was elected Senator in Congress for six years; but this he resigned at the end of three years. In 1816 he was appointed reporter of the decisions of the Court of Appeals. In 1823 he was elected, with Mr. Clay, Commissioner to Va., in reference to what was called the occupying claimants law, which Virginia contended was a violation of the compact with her. In 1826 he was again appointed Chief Justice; and in 1828 he again resigned, and was again elected Senator to Congress. When the Louisville Chancery Court was established in 1835 he was appointed Chancellor, and his presiding here will be long remembered for his learning, the dignity, and the importance he brought to the establishment of the court.

He was an able and learned jurist, and an extremely industrious and painstaking Judge on every bench he had occupied.

In 1844, he resigned the office of Chancellor, and was appointed Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. He went to Washington and did not return again, but still claimed to be of Kentucky.

Judge Bibb was the last but one of his contemporaries who made our State stand so high for its great men and the splendor of its bar, and while we are making solemn mention of him, others come before our view. We are reminded of his compeers of the earlier days here, on the bench and at the bar; of Trimble, and Boyle, and Wallace, and Logan, and Clarke, and Mills, of Rowan, and Pope, and Allen, and Daviess, and Clay, and Talbot, and Haggin, and Martin D. Hardin, and Ben Hardin, and Bledsoe, and Barry; and before them, of Nicholas, and Breckinridge, and Murray; all dead, but their renown is left to the State.

Connecticut Election.

We have at last received the official returns for Governor at the late election, at which 10,506 more votes were polled than in 1858, when BUCKINGHAM, the Republican candidate had a majority of 6,015. This majority now is reduced to 1,670. We give the returns of both years:

	1858.		1859.
	Buckingham.	Pratt.	B.	P.
New Haven County	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hartford	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
New London	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fairfield	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Windham	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Litchfield	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Middlesex	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Tolland	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

Maj. in 1858—6,015. Maj. in 1859—1,670.

The Democracy of Connecticut stand upon the platform with STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS. The Republicans have no great reason to "crow" over such a victory, unless they rejoice to find themselves not totally routed. Who would venture to vaticinate, with STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as the standard bearer in 1860, that Connecticut would not squarely wheel into line?

A STRANGE PHENOMENON—A FREEZING WELL.

—In ordinary wells water does not freeze at all, but here seems to be one out of the ordinary run:

The latter part of last November, Mr. Andrew Twombly, of Brandon, Vt., commenced to dig a well near his house, situated about a mile from the centre of the village of Brandon, on a tolerably level plain. Having excavated to the depth of fifteen feet, through sand and gravel, the workmen came to ground frozen solid, through which they continued to excavate the further distance of fifteen or sixteen feet before getting through the frozen ground.

At the depth of forty feet, sufficient water having been obtained, the well was stoned in the usual manner. The character of the ground was the same throughout the whole distance, viz: coarse gravel and sand—the frozen portion interspersed with lumps of clear ice. At the time the well was dug, the surface of the ground was not frozen. Ever since the well was dug up to the present time, ice forms in the well and encrusts the stone at from fifteen to thirty feet from the surface, and the surface of the water, which is thirty-five feet below the surface of the ground, freezes over every night. On several occasions, when the bucket has been left in the well under the water over night, it has been found necessary to descend into the well, and, with a hatchet, cut the ice in order to extricate it.

The Postmaster-General has issued a circular restricting mail agents from mailing letters on the cars, a practice now carried to such extent as to prevent their having sufficient time to attend to the legitimate duties of their positions.

The Captain and his Child.

BY JAMES T. FIELDS.

We were crowded in the cabin,
Not a soul would dare to sleep—
It was midnight on the waters,
And a storm was on the deep.

'Tis a fearful thing in Winter
To be shattered by the blast,
And to hear the rattling trumpet
Thunder "cut away the mast!"

So we shuddered there in silence—
For the stoutest held his breath,
While the hungry sea was roaring,
And the breakers talked of death.

As thus we sat in darkness,
Each one busy with his prayers—
"We are lost," the captain shouted,
As he staggered down the stairs.

But his little daughter whispered,
As she took his icy hand,
"Isn't God upon the water,
Just the same as on the land?"

Then we kissed the little maiden,
And we spoke in better cheer,
And we anchored safe in harbor,
When the morn was shining clear.

The Habeas Corpus Decision.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio, on the application for a writ of habeas corpus, to wrest the body of Simeon Bushnell and others from the custody of the U. S. Marshal, the said Bushnell having been found "guilty" by the District Court of the United States, and the rest awaiting trial, is a matter of moment, in consequence of the rumor, in every shape and form, a portion of the citizens of the State are prepared to show the Federal courts, and officers, where the Fugitive Slave Law is the cause of action. We therefore transfer it to our columns as a matter of reference hereafter.

It will be seen that the Supreme Court of Ohio does not decide upon the constitutionality of the law itself, but determines that the legal presumption in such cases is that the Court has a knowledge of its own jurisdiction, and will determine correctly; and the comity for the prevention of unpleasant collision between judicial tribunals, requires the establishment of such rule. Whether the law be constitutional or not, as the U. S. District Court is legally competent to determine its own jurisdiction, and "has acquired prior jurisdiction de facto over person or subject matter, no other court will interfere with, or seek to arrest its action while the case is pending or undetermined."

The question of jurisdiction on the separate application of Simeon Bushnell, was considered not "distinguishable, in principle, from that of the other relators."

TUESDAY, April 26, 1859.

In the matter of the applications of Simeon Bushnell, Charles Langston and others, for a writ of Habeas Corpus.

PECK, J. It appears from the petitions filed in these cases, that all of the relators who ask for the allowance of the writ of habeas corpus are now in the custody of the United States Marshal for the Northern District of the State of Ohio; that they are thus in the custody, under and by virtue of a precept or warrant issued by the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio on indictments preferred against them in said District Court, for an alleged violation of the law of the Congress of the United States, respecting fugitives from service, passed Sept. 18, 1850, that the relators are charged in said indictment with the rescue and the aiding and abetting the rescue of a fugitive from service; and that the proceedings against them [illegible] are still pending and undetermined before said District Court.

The separate application of Simeon Bushnell, indeed, shows that he has been tried upon said indictment and found guilty and is now in custody, awaiting the final judgment and sentence of the court—That on being arraigned upon said indictment before said District Court, he, by his counsel, moved the Court to quash the same for various reasons, one of which was, that the law of 1850 upon which it was based, is unconstitutional and void; which motion, the District Court refused to grant. A motion to quash addresses itself to the sound discretion of a Court and is never granted except in very clear cases, but the defendant is left to raise the question in a more formal way, by demurrer or motion in arrest of judgment. The refusal to grant cannot be regarded as a final decision of the question raised by the motion, when the point is one which, if well taken, would be available on demurrer or in arrest of judgment; indeed such motion should never be granted, if the question is, in any degree, doubtful; but should be reserved for hearing on motion to arrest the judgment. No judgment or sentence having been pronounced, and the question of jurisdiction being still as open one before that Court, we do not think the case of Simeon Bushnell, as to the question of jurisdiction, distinguishable, in principle, from that of other relators.

Is it then legally competent for this Court to withdraw the relators from the District Court, in the custody of which they now are, charged with the violation of an act of Congress, while the proceedings against them are still pending and undetermined, and discharge them on the ground that the act of Congress, upon which the indictment is based, is unconstitutional and void?

The District Court now has possession of the case and the parties to it, and has the legal power and capacity to hear and determine, for itself, the question of its own jurisdiction and right to act in the premises. The legal presumption in such cases always is, that a Court thus assuming to act, will determine the question of its own jurisdiction correctly, until it has acted finally upon it.

Hence it is a rule founded upon the comity which does, and for the prevention of unpleasant collision, should always subsist between judicial tribunals, that where a court of general jurisdiction, and legally competent to determine its own jurisdiction, has acquired prior jurisdiction de facto over person or subject matter, no other court will interfere with, or seek to arrest its action, while the case is still pending and undetermined. This rule is sustained and supported by all the analogies of the law. See Smith vs. Iver 9 Wheaton 532; Hagan vs. Lucas 10 Peters 400; Taylor vs. Carryl 20 How. 583; United States vs. Morris 2 Am. L. R. 351; Ex parte Robinson & McLean 363; Keating vs. Spink 3 Ohio State R. 105; Hurd on Habeas Corpus 196, et seq.

It is right in principle and preventive of unpleasant collision between different tribunals, if another tribunal were thus to interfere with our action and withdraw from our custody a prisoner upon trial before us, and set him at large, we should resist such an attempt to the uttermost. And shall we not extend to other tribunals the same comity and the same confidence that we claim for ourselves?

In the recent cases in the State of Wisconsin and which have attracted so much attention and remark, this point was expressly decided, and that too by the same Court which determined the fugitive slave law to be unconstitutional. Ex parte Booth, 3 Wis. Rep. 145.

The history of this case is as follows:

Booth had been arrested on warrants granted by a United States Commissioner for aiding in the escape of a fugitive slave from service contrary to the law of 1850. One of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin upon habeas corpus, discharged Booth from the custody of the Marshal, on the ground, that the law of 1850 as to fugitive slaves, was unconstitutional, among other things, in authorising Commissioners so to act and issue warrants, and that a warrant issued by such officer was illegal and void, and a majority of the Supreme Court of that State on certiorari, affirmed the judgment. Booth was subsequently indicted in the District Court of the U. S. for the State of Wisconsin, for the same offense and arrested by the Marshal on a warrant issued thereon. Booth thereupon applied to the same Supreme Court then in session, for a writ of habeas corpus to be delivered from the custody of the Marshal; but the writ was unanimously refused, on the ground that it appeared from the application, that he was under arrest upon an indictment of a Court having jurisdiction of alleged offenses against the U. S., and that the case was still pending and undetermined. The court decided that they had no legal right to interfere in his behalf, while the prosecution was pending, even though the law of Congress under which he was indicted, was unconstitutional and void; recognizing, in its fullest extent, the principle and practice of judicial courts to which I have averted. They concede the privilege and right of the district court to determine first and for itself, the question of its own jurisdiction, and it is ready to the decision, that the law was unconstitutional and void and that, therefore, the District Court could not have any jurisdiction, they aptly remarks, that that fact, if true, amounts, after all, to a question of jurisdiction, which they, in the first instance, must decide for themselves. Subsequently, the prosecution having terminated by a conviction, and sentence of imprisonment, the same court allowed a writ of habeas corpus and discharged Booth for alleged defects in the indictment, which did not bring the charge upon which he was convicted within the provision of the act of Congress of Sept. 18, 1850.

We refer to these cases, therefore, with no design of expressing our assent to or dissent to the decisions under the law, and the writ of habeas corpus but merely to show that a court which had judicially decided the law to be unconstitutional, still held that, in a case like that under consideration, they had no legal right or authority to interfere.

On the whole, we are unanimously of the opinion that the relators, upon their own showing, admitting the law in question to be unconstitutional and void, could not be discharged by us, if the writ had been issued, and they were now before us for adjudication. It would be an idle and expensive ceremony to award the writ to bring the parties here, and, for that purpose, interrupt proceedings in said District Court, where the said relators would be remanded from the custody of the officer who now holds them.

The application for writs of habeas corpus in behalf of the relators is, for the reasons stated, refused.

This view of the case renders an examination of the other propositions involved in the argument, as to the constitutionality of the act of Congress referred to, and the right of the State tribunals to interfere with the legal action of the Federal Courts in that behalf, altogether unnecessary.

SWAN, C. J., and BRINKERHOFF, Scott and SUTLIFF, J. J., concurred in the foregoing opinion.

THE FRANKLIN TRAGEDY.—A private letter from a gentleman connected with the Franklin expedition, commanded by the Harriet Lane, and dated Montevideo, March 6th, 1859, contains the following paragraphs:

"After getting all our vessels in fighting order we left for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE BURR-BLENNERHASSETT PAPERS.

Hon. WM. H. SAFFORD wrote to the Marietta Republican, when in St. Louis, that he had procured from the family of the late H. S. BLENNERHASSETT, in whose possession they were placed for publication, the papers of the famed but ill-fated HERMAN BLENNERHASSETT, rendered conspicuous for his association with AARON BURR. The BLENNERHASSETT papers are thus described:

"They consist chiefly of his private journals, correspondence, essays, historical information relating to the Burr conspiracy, from Burr, Alston, Tyler, Bollman, Swartwout, Floyd, and others implicated, also the journal of the expedition, until arrested and broken up. I have also the letters, manuscripts and fugitive pieces of poetry of Lady Blennerhassett, which of themselves would form a respectable sized volume.

"These papers are voluminous, and afford a satisfactory biography of the Blennerhassett family, and a minute and complete disclosure of the objects of and parties concerned in the Burr expedition."

Some five or six years ago, Mr. SAFFORD published an unpretending but interesting volume entitled the "Life of Blennerhassett." During the last session of the Legislature he presented us a copy which we valued very highly, and if the person into whose hands it has fallen is done with it, we should be happy to have it returned.

We learned from Mr. SAFFORD that he had been promised these papers, full of interest, and ready to supply a chasm in Western annals that could not be supplied elsewhere. Familiar with the subject, a ripe scholar, of energy and industry, historical and legal, of clear, discriminating mind, these materials could not have been confided to better hands, and we anticipate a work not only creditable to the author, but eminently worthy of the consideration of the country, and a handsome addition to its history and literature.—Fayt.

THE COOLIE SYSTEM.—The steamship Quaker City, which arrived at New York from the [illegible], from Havana, brings news that a French ship had landed one hundred and seventy-five coolies from Macao. She was one hundred and twenty-two days, and eighty unfortunates died on the passage. Of the remainder, about eight died every day from the time the vessel reached the harbor. Several more than from the period of the inauguration of the coolie apprenticeship system, forty-four thousand and nine hundred and forty-nine Chinamen were shipped for Cuba, of which number thirteen thousand and some hundred and fifty five were landed alive, showing a mortality of one of six thousand and ninety-four [illegible]. The Government and [illegible] the plan in operation had, however, realized some hundreds of thousands of dollars by it, and enjoyed [illegible] business.

PROBABILITY OF MARRYING.—A table contained in a paper in the London Assurance Magazine exhibits the results of a rather startling nature. In the first two quinquennial periods, 20-25 and 25-30, the probability of a widower marrying in a year is nearly three times greater as that of a bachelor. At thirty it is nearly four times as great; from thirty to forty five it is five times as great and at forty-five, until at sixty the chance of a widower marrying in a year is eleven times as great as that of a bachelor. After the age of thirty the probability of a bachelor marrying in a year diminishes in a most rapid ratio. The probability at thirty-five is not more than half that at thirty, and nearly the same proportion exists between each quinquennial period afterwards.

APPROPRIATIONS BY CONGRESS.—The official statement just prepared for publication, shows that Congress, at the last session, appropriated for legislative, executive, civil and miscellaneous purposes nearly $11,000,000; for the domestic and consular service, $1,044,000; for the Indian Department, Revolutionary, Invalid and other pensions, upwards of $4,500,000; the Army, fortifications and the Military Academy, $16,349,000; for the naval service, $13,500,000, and for the ocean mail steam service, $3,341,350—making a total of $47,567,000. In addition to the above about $2,000,000 should be added for indefinite appropriations and to carry out the provisions of the pre-existing laws, including the collection of revenue from the customs.

—The reported [illegible] the death of M. Alexis de Tocqueville which appeared in the London Times is [illegible] to be entirely true in the Hall of Honor.

The Cotton Crop in Europe.

As our mutual [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL, Proprietor.
TERMS — $2 IN ADVANCE.
THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1859.

Salutatory.

We present to the public the first number of the "People's Press," and proceed to pronounce our "Inaugural."

This paper will aim to be truly democratic, in the best sense of the term—earnestly insisting upon the observance of the land-marks laid down in the constitution, and interpreted by the fathers of our freedom. In a country and government like this, changes must take place in the minds of men as to what is the most expedient for promoting the prosperity and advancing the happiness of the people; and opinions may become much modified, without sacrifice, but principles are eternal. Hence, our foreign policy may undergo alterations and modifications to be adapted to new treaties, without incurring the charge of a change of principles; but in our own government, in the relations of the States to each other and to the Federal Government we are guided by a written fundamental rule, which must be observed and obeyed, or anarchy, and confusion, with all their attendant evils, must be the consequences.

There is the chart, by which it will steady to be governed, the "People's Press" takes the Constitution of the United States—the mainstay of our freedom and the common tie which unites this great confederacy. It was the production of patriotism and wisdom, and to follow its provisions is the sure road to the high destiny to which this nation was called. Through the partiality of their countrymen, or the influence of political combinations, weak and unsteady minds may be called to the administration of government affairs; but while the inculcations of the constitution are observed, the progress of the nation will be unimpeded, and its vigor and system of government carry it through all adversities.—Fanaticism, leagued with fanaticism, would tear away this very foundation of our freedom—the key to the federal arch; but while there is yet patriotism in the land, and the records of the past are preserved—while a benign Providence watches over a favored people—the Vandal hand will be stayed, and "esto perpetua" remain undefaced upon the great land-marks of the constitution.

The "People's Press" will aim to be what its title indicates—a paper for the people. It will endeavor to guard, with watchful eye the administration of the State and Federal Governments.

In return to the economy of the past, now that our confederacy embraces thirty-two, and will soon embrace thirty-four States, in a [illegible] But this paper will steadfastly insist upon adhering to a wise and prudential economy. It will insist upon non-interference on the part of government with elections, a [illegible] "squatter sovereignty" rights; non-intervention on the part of Congress with the domestic affairs of the Territories; and under the Constitution of the United States, it adopts for its rule of action the Cincinnati Platform of the Democratic party, adopted June 4th, 1856.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, [illegible] upon the principles therein inculcated, should they be observed, the "People's Press" has no fears of the future for this great country.—Should it prove derelict to the high trust assumed of guarding and cherishing these principles, it will expect to lose the confidence of its friends, and fall into the consequent decadence which makes so many newspaper efforts mere ephemera.

[illegible]

In looking over the whole country for a distinguished citizen, alike entitled by his integrity to the People's cause, and the unwavering advocacy of the doctrines laid down in the Cincinnati Platform—who stands identified with the great and undying principle of Popular Sovereignty, in all its breadth and depth—who has been faithful to the whole country, and whose record is national—who can from his heart say he knows "no North, no South, no East, no West," but all alike are his country, as the national standard bearer in the contest of 1860, the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS stands pre-eminent, and to present his claims fairly and honestly to his fellow countrymen, and to defend him from the assaults of those who seek to disparage his eminent qualifications and traduce his frank, honorable, genial character, will be the pleasing and grateful task of the "People's Press." In discharging this duty, an effort will be made to studiously avoid animadversions upon other distinguished citizens, for it is not necessary in presenting his merits, that others should be disparaged, and the great end to be accomplished by the Democratic Party demands forbearance, conciliation and union, that by differences, dissensions and divisions, defeat may not fall upon them. The name and fame of Mr. DOUGLAS are national. His understanding of our great fundamental law is recognized North and South.—His steadfastness in maintaining his principle—the great principle that the people are the sovereign power—won the admiration even of those who inclined to a different interpretation, and should have engraved his name indelibly on the popular heart. To his far-seeing statesmanship, his thorough comprehension of the genius of the Government, his unswerving devotion to the interests of the people of the whole country, the delicate and important trust as Chief Executive, in administering the affairs of government, may be confidently and safely entrusted.

We therefore place his name at the head of our columns, and shall earnestly and untiringly advocate his cause.

It shall be the object of the editor of the People's Press to make it in every respect reliable; and instead of misleading and misdirecting opinion by holding out false hopes, and exaggerating results, he will avoid those extremes which are calculated to produce false impressions and inspire expectations that cannot be realized. He discards the frequent aphorism that "every thing is fair in politics," because he holds to the doctrine that nothing is fair in politics that would be unfair in morals. Political science, as he understands it, involves the care and welfare and happiness of the people. Government was made for them, and while justice and right should always reign supreme, "the greatest good to the greatest number" should be the study of the politician. The genius of our government demands "equal rights to all, exclusive privileges to none;" and any approach to innovation upon this fundamental doctrine will be firmly resisted. It is hoped that unnecessary altercation and personal animadversion may be dispensed with. An effort will be made to address men's reason and judgment, rather than their prejudices and passions; and if in the warmth of discussion, controversy should assume a personal direction, it shall not be first sought by this paper.

He may be deemed unnecessarily prolix in this outline of the character of the "People's Press;" and there are many topics left untouched, upon which it might be advisable to express an opinion; but the editor leaves them to be developed in his columns, believing that works rather than promises will best avail him in producing a favorable impression upon the public.

The Democratic issues are already made up. They rest upon the teachings of the constitution, and the sure basis that the people are the fountain of sovereign power, and that all power not conferred by the constitution is reserved to them.

With these explanations of what will be the course of this paper, the editor asks the indulgence of his friends until he shall have completed such arrangements as will render it more acceptable to them, and entitle it to the general circulation which he invites them to aid him in obtaining.

The People's Press.

In selecting the title for our paper, by which it should be recognized, we sought neither the new nor the striking.

"What's in a name? That which we call a rose,
By any other name would smell as sweet."

The Gazettes, and Journals, and Heralds, and Reporters, and Couriers, and Enquirers, and News, and Posts, and Times, have been appropriated in almost every city or county; and Flags, and Banners, and Standards, and Eagles wave and fly from hundreds of editorial battlements; Democrats are spread broadcast every where; and Republican has become ill-favored and besmirched with the sooty purpose to which it has been subjected.

In a field so well trodden, it was indeed difficult to glean a name. But, then, each paper, whatever may be its title, must gain a distinctive character, by its own peculiarities, its ability, its fairness, its cunning, its gravity, its humor, its piquancy, its reliability or its industry; and hence we adopted an appellation at once Democratic and plain, sufficiently comprehensive, yet unostentatious, brief, yet explicit; common enough from frequent use, and susceptible of being rendered popular, if the columns it overlooks are freighted with palatable pabulum.

We were not reflecting at the moment that the "Press" instituted by Jno. W. Forney at Philadelphia, had already established almost an exclusive claim to the title, which in our humble way we might not hope to divide, had we the ambition to make the effort. Nor did it occur to us, that, nearer home, at Cincinnati, a "Press" was being urged by the piquant, versatile and erratic Henry Reed, which was shedding its leaves as thick as Vallambrosa. Nor were we reminded that in the neighboring town of Springfield, the "Press" was a flourishing institution. We were determined to establish a paper, and the "Press" was the first name that suggested itself. Being one of the people, identified with them in all respects, ambitious of their regard, hopeful of their interests, solicitous for their happiness and prosperity, we therefore style it the "People's Press," whose sole object shall be to study their welfare and guard their rights.

If we succeed to our wish and hope, our "Press," too, will find its way, if not "to everlasting fame," at least to such notoriety as will satisfy our moderate ambition, and sufficiently remunerate us for the labor and expense necessarily attending such an enterprise.

How it is Received.

The Portage Democrat does not like the latest corpus decision of the Supreme Court. It says:

To say that this decision of our Supreme Court is received by the people with a feeling of great disappointment, but feebly expresses the actual facts.

The entire substance of, and only point made in, the decision refusing the writ, are given in the brief dispatch of the Attorney-General, and the newspaper column called the decision, is but needlessly amplified verbiage, an unsuccessful attempt to justify conservative timidity.

The lead-off of the Leader, indicating that a bolder court is required, is thus echoed by its Portage (Republican) cotemporary.

It is a slow process to revolutionize an elective Bench, but the people have the remedy—and yet the peaceful remedy is slow, and the prospects are discouraging. We have had what we have called triumphs for freedom, for justice and the right at the ballot box, but we are continually cheated out of the benefits of victories won.

North and South—A Glance at the Past and Present.

There can be no question as to the issue in the campaign of 1860. We see the singular number, become satisfied that all other issues are merged in the one idea of "slavery and free labor." Despite all the efforts of the past to withdraw this agitating theme from the struggle of politics, like the eternal circle it begins where it ended, and is to be the source of annoyance, of fierce, vindictive effort, of alienating the conflicting interests of the North and South, and giving a shock to, if it does not disintegrate the nation.

What is promised in such a contest? For years we dwelt happily, when this source of conflict was not the prevailing topic; and the rights of property in negroes was unquestioned under the ægis of the constitution. Men differed in political sentiment, nor did difference of opinion alienate one section from another. No geographical lines were drawn then. The representative from Maine stood side by side, and shoulder to shoulder, with the representative from Louisiana. The elements of discord were not sown—the love of our common country was uppermost in all hearts. Diverse as opinions were, and ardent as men were in maintaining them, the fires of patriotism which had been kindled in the time of the Revolution, had not died out. A severance of the Union was regarded as a chimera, and to promulgate any such sentiment was to meet with the denunciation of "traitor!"

Whence the great change that has swept like a simoom over the land, blasting and blighting and withering and destroying all those fine feelings of the American heart, upon which it was thought our country was established, as it were upon a rock, against which the tempest and the wave might rave and dash in vain? Have we grown less patriotic, more selfish, more the slaves of petty personal ambition, that, to mount to office, we would strip our standard of its stars, bring ruin upon our land, fill it with commotion and dissension, raise the hand of brother against brother, and friend against friend? And all for what? To follow an abstraction—to force men to our way of thinking whose habits of thought, whose surrounding circumstances, whose education, whose interests are different from ours. To use the political power, which, under our ever-to-be-venerated constitution we have acquired, to enforce the doctrines we teach, and to which they are averse.

We wish to appeal to the reason of men, and not to their passions. When is this contest to stop, and where is it to end? Turn back a few years, and recall when the efforts of fanaticism and blind zeal, under guise of petitions to Congress, to adopt measures forbidden by the constitution, were first permitted to fan the public ear. The progress of the free States was uninterrupted. They had grown in number from a single State, under the constitution, but were still in a minority. The dread of what might be done, when they should become the majority, awakened apprehension in their sister States which still had the political power; but they interposed no barrier to the introduction of new States. They solaced themselves with the vain hope that yet awhile an equilibrium could be maintained, and rights respected, through the introduction of a Southern with a Northern State. But how fallacious! The territory where their "peculiar institution" could be profitable was circumscribed, while yet the public domain stretched far and wide, out of which free States might be formed. In addition, it was easier and more consistent with their habits and their means, for the northern people to migrate and populate the wilds, than those who were trammeled with slave property. Besides, those who were possessed of slave property were generally provided with the comforts of home, and had little disposition to sunder the ties that bound them to their own neighborhoods, endeared by life long association. It was questionable, too, if the compromise of 1820 would not prevail through the whole expanse of the domain, although not strictly legal so far as regarded the Louisiana purchase; and it would be hazardous to remove thither with slave property; for in the formation of new States, what disposition would be made of such property was easily foreseen, in a latitude similar to that where freedom was provided for by the ordinance of 1787—an ordinance founded on a compact with Virginia, that the territory she ceded should be free.

Then did the busy mind, fruitful in expedients, look abroad for the acquisition of territory. Texas, mainly peopled by our own hardy sons, invited there by the pusillanimous Mexican to form a frontier guard against Indian incursion, fired with the impulses that govern the American heart, revolted from the tyranny of Mexico, asserted and achieved its independence. Applying for admission, she was embraced in the sisterhood of States, and added one more to the Southern constellation. Then came the acquisition of still more of the Mexican territory, with the gold-fields of California and the less inviting province of New Mexico. Then came, too, this fierce, and annoying and dangerous conflict as to the future of this new domain.—Was California to be divided by the Compromise of 36 30, or to come into the Union entire? The Missouri Compromise line was disregarded, notwithstanding it held good over the Louisiana purchase, and the argument was that Mexico eschewed slavery, and territory acquired from Mexico must consequently be free. In vain did the South assert its right to territory south of the prescribed line—in vain point to blood and treasure expended in its acquisition—in vain draw attention to the fact that the doctrine had been ignored in the Compromise of 1820 over the Louisiana purchase. The Missouri Compromise line was virtually annulled. The free States crossed that line in the admission of California. The position was assumed that freedom was the normal condition of all our territorial domain; that free States might be erected any where and every where from it; that slavery could only exist by local law, and therefore could not be introduced into territory already free; and nothing remained but to repeal a useless statute that could be contravened by one section at will, that had already been set aside in the case of California; and adopt some new principle of agreement which should settle this vexed question and withdraw it from the national councils. Hence, in conformity to the Compromise of 1850, the Kansas-Nebraska act was passed, which gives to the people of a territory the right to determine for themselves, whether they will or will not have slavery.

During all this time, the faction that had been at first confined to a few fanatics in the North, and their emissaries and zealots scattered through the West and South, had from an insignificant few, grown into a formidable party. They fastened themselves upon first one party and then the other, gaining converts until like a cankerous ulcer their faction eat into the vitals of the Whig division, corrupting whatever it touched.

"Like a mildewed ear, Blasting its wholesome brother,"

or, like the lean kine of Pharaoh's dream, swallowing up the sleek and fat ones, until all over whom its black standard waved, became as blind and infatuated devotees as ever followed the accursed Moloch.

Hurrying on its march to empire and sway (which it so nearly reached in 1856,) this party of abstractionists found a powerful adjunct in the Know Nothing organization—an organization without political principles, but pursuing an infatuation not less zealous, not less pernicious than its own, and most dangerous to our institutions and the rights of man; it embraced it within its folds, and lo! it was gone! A few straggling guerrillas were left, it is true, but the life and spirit of the organization had departed. Whatever of animation it had was smothered. It was used as a cat's paw, and flattered and cajoled till the purpose was attained, and then scoffed and ridiculed, until it became necessary to flatter and cajole again!

The so-called Republican party is not homogeneous, except that portion who really entertain the opinion that it is sinful in the face of heaven that slavery should be tolerated any where, and what they term philanthropy, rises higher than any obligation to the constitution or law. Those who professed old whig doctrines cannot affiliate with them, except upon the pretended fallacious basis of mere opposition to the Democracy.—Those who held to the dogmas of Know Nothingism, cannot find one bond of Union with them, because they utterly repudiate the whole Know Nothing creed. From all parts of the North and West, they are now calling upon Massachusetts to reject the proposed amendment to her constitution, which has for its object to prolong the term of naturalization two years.* It is considered impolitic, and may lose the German vote, for which they have catered, and which they have cultivated so assiduously. Reduced to their own proper numbers, without "aid and comfort" from those who really have no principles in common with them, they would be powerless to do harm. They appeal to the prejudices and not to the reason of men. They weave a tissue of sophistries, and call them principles. They covet distinction—their pursuit is office.—Their pretended interest in the negro's rights is all sham. Where they most abound the negro will not or cannot live. It is their right to profess what principles they please, but as surely as the sun rises, to carry out those principles is to split our nation in two—to dim the luster of our stars—to curb the proud career, and to destroy the glorious destiny of the United States.

Let it not be supposed that we assume the ground that there are not of them, good men, pure men, benevolent men, who really have some regard for their country, but they entertain the belief that there are obligations of a higher nature, and which make their duty to their country, their obedience to law, their respect for the constitutional rights of others, merely of secondary, if not trifling importance. With these, however, are confederated a class who prey upon their infatuation, and flatter their prejudices merely to retain them as a nucleus around which to weave the odds and ends of faction, that they may be lifted to eminence, and enjoy the culmination of their hopes. In the next breath they disclaim Abolitionism; for says the Cincinnati Gazette, one of their leading papers, as late as the 5th inst., "those who have an idea of 'abolishing slavery,' are exceedingly few in number, and is no wise identified with the Republican party." This declaration which turns up occasionally, is to delude the conservative element of the conglomerate party, but is inconsistent with the disregard for constitutional and legal right, which is shown in the obstacles interposed in the free States to the recovery of fugitives from the service of their masters.

Having glanced at the northern side of this question, the issue of 1860, let us for a moment consider what is the duty of the South. Its safety and its duty go hand in hand. There is danger in demanding too much. It is entitled to the guaranties of the constitution. They have no just claim to more than the Democratic Platform of 1856 freely accords, that the people of a Territory shall have the right to manage their own affairs in their own way, and that Congress shall have no right to intervene.—To insist that Congress shall have power to make laws for a Territory, they rip open the whole subject of controversy, thought to have been settled in 1850, and give voice and animation to controversy, which may prove disastrous. The South really can have no interest in reviving this controversy, and resisting the settlement under the Kansas-Nebraska act in conformity to the compromises of 1850. The right is conceded to take slaves to Territories as property, but when there they must be amenable to local law. When the Territorial government is established, and the Legislature is elected by the people, all property is subject to such protection as that Legislature may provide, under the constitution of the United States. If there be a failure to protect slave property, it is an indication that the people do not affect slavery. Should loss of property ensue from such failure, there remains an appeal to the Courts, but not to Congress. To vest the power in Congress would at once hazard every thing, because, should the progress of events continue as for the last dozen years, all hope from that source would indeed be shortlived. Besides, it is universally admitted, that when the people of a Territory frame a constitution, in prospect of becoming a State, they shall determine for themselves, whether they will have slavery or not, and no law of Congress, nor any other power, can gainsay or resist them. Then on the part of the South, to claim more than has already been conceded, is to assert a mere abstraction, that has no practical reality, and to produce controversy that may prove ruinous to the integrity of the Union.

*Since the foregoing article was in type, Massachusetts has voted upon the proposed amendment, and adopted it, notwithstanding the appeals from the Northwest and advisory letters from her own Senator Wilson. If this step of Massachusetts be a sufficient bait to the proscriptive appetite of Know Nothingism, it must be bitter and unpalatable to the taste of those who happened to be born in a foreign land.

The Traitor Giddings.

We scarcely know how to characterize the letter published by the Cleveland Leader, from the arch-traitor, JOSHUA R. GIDDINGS, who having withdrawn from the Gubernatorial ring, and having been shelved by his Congressional constituents, employs his time in [illegible] ing sedition. We give an extract, which if GIDDINGS were not a maniac, should call down upon his head the execrations of every lover of his country. It is well that the "sands of life" of this mischievous old man are nearly run. What evil his example might produce, in inflaming fanaticism, could scarcely be measured, if he had health and strength and long life before him. Who but the most infatuated can but revolt at the infamous doctrines he teaches? He says:

In disregarding this law, (Fugitive Slave,) the prisoners did right. Their error consisted in sparing the lives of the slave-catchers. Those pirates should have been delivered over to the colored men and consigned to the doom of pirates, which should have been speedily executed. You are aware that this is the doctrine which I proclaimed in Congress. I adhere to it. Had the prisoners executed the slave-catchers promptly, it would have taught the administration a lesson not soon to be forgotten. We should have been no more troubled with that class of miscreants.

Cleveland is now the Boston of 1775, and I trust her sons will meet the responsibilities thrown upon them with becoming firmness.

As to the future, I see no other course for the prisoners than patiently to await events. Their counsel will apply to the Supreme Court of our State for habeas corpus whenever sentence shall be pronounced upon any of their number.

I have great confidence in the Judges composing that Court. But should they prove unequal to the occasion, the case will then be fully made up, and the appeal must then be taken to that highest of earthly tribunals, the source of all political power. The people finding this government to have become "destructive of the lives, the liberties and the happiness of its citizens WILL ALTER OR ABOLISH IT; and organize its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their SAFETY AND HAPPINESS."

This duty, so solemnly enjoined upon us by the founders of our government, in that immortal charter of American liberty to which for almost a century we have been accustomed to look for instruction and direction in regard to our rights, WILL NOT BE NEGLECTED.

SENATOR DOUGLAS.—It is announced by the Philadelphia Press of Thursday, the 28th inst., that Senator Douglas arrived in that city on the previous evening, and took lodgings at the Girard House. According to an announcement which we made some time since, on such authority as warranted it at the time, that our Senator would return to Chicago about the last of April or the first of May—he should be here now. But, as is generally known, he was recalled from New York to Washington by the sickness of one of his sons, where he has been detained until last Wednesday. We are not apprised of what his immediate movements will be.—Chicago Times, May 1st.

—James O'Connor, a saloon keeper at Toledo, was drowned on Sunday night by falling into the river.

Mr. Douglas's Great Speech.

This unanswerable speech, delivered in the U. S. Senate on the 23d of Feb. last, in reply to Hon. A. G. Brown of Miss., in opposition to the passage of a Code of Laws by Congress to protect slavery in the Territories, and in favor of banishing from the halls of Congress all questions touching Domestic Slavery in the Territories, and remanding them to the people of the Territories to be disposed of as they may see proper, subject to an appeal to the Judicial Tribunals to test the validity of the territorial enactments under the Constitution of the United States, together with an appendix showing the position of distinguished public men on the question in the great contests of 1852 and 1856 will be found in our columns to-day. It is so clear, so distinct, that not one point is left unexplained. The objections raised, and questions proposed are brushed away as easily as we brush away the gossamer threads that are thrown across our path.

Mason, and Brown and Green and Clay and Bigler seem merely to have introduced the several propositions that they might be explained by the Senator from Illinois, and not to perplex and embarrass him as they were intended.—He passes through the barriers they were expected to interpose, as though they were going the same way, and were not raised to resist him. He turns their weapons against themselves. He takes their own postulates and shows that they must inevitably lead to the conclusions he draws. The principles he inculcates are irrefragable. They are in conformity to our institutions, to the genius of our people. They protect every right guarantied by the constitution and inflict no wrong.—None but the most infatuated or fanatical could object to his reasoning, which seems to flow in a natural stream, stopped in its progress by no impediment to cause more than a ripple of its placid surface, as it glides onward.

What can be more conclusive than this?—To us it seems to cover the whole ground, and we therefore extract it from the body of the speech, that they may see and judge for themselves, as to the right and expediency of Congressional non-intervention, who may not take the trouble to read the whole speech.

MR. DOUGLAS: I will answer the Senator's question. First, I do not hold that squatter sovereignty is superior to the Constitution. I hold that no such thing as sovereign power attaches to a Territory while a Territory. I hold that a Territory possesses whatever power it derives from the Constitution under the organic act, and no more. I hold that all the power a Territorial Legislature possesses is derived from the Constitution and its amendments, under the act of Congress; and because I hold that, I denied last year that the people of a Territory, without the consent of Congress, could assemble at Lecompton and create an organic law for that people. I denied the validity of your Lecompton constitution, for the reason that constitutions can only be made by sovereign power; and because the Territory was not a sovereignty, that was not a constitution, but a petition. But, sir, I will not occupy time on that question. The limit of the authority of a Territorial Legislature is the organic act and the Constitution and its amendments. The organic act of Kansas provides, in its sixth section:

"That the legislative power of the Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act; but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposition of the soil," &c.

The whole legislative power possessed by Congress over a Territory was, by that act, conferred on the Territorial Legislature. There were exceptions on three points; but slavery was not one of the exceptions. I say, then, the intent was to give to the Territorial Legislature all the power that we possessed; all that could be given under the Constitution; and the understanding was, that Congress would not interfere with whatever legislation they might enact.

Now, the Senator from Alabama asks me whether the Southern people, under the Constitution, have not the right to carry their slaves there? I answer, yes—the same right that you have to carry any other property. Then you ask, have they not a right to hold it there when they get it there? I answer, the same right that you have to hold any other property, subject to such local laws as the local Legislature may constitutionally enact. Can you hold any other property without law to protect it? No. Then, can you hold slave property without law to protect it? No, is the answer. Then, will Congress pass laws to protect other property in the Territories? I answer, no. We have created Territorial Legislatures for that purpose.

What could possibly be more explicit and distinct? What could more lucidly interpret the understanding of the issue in the campaign of 1856? We then proclaimed that the removal of citizens from a State to a Territory did not disqualify them for self government.—There was not a Democratic press that did not assert this doctrine. It fell sweetly upon the popular ear, because it found an echo in the popular heart.

In commending this admirable speech to the careful consideration of the reader, we cannot forego another extract, further illustrative of the principle that legislation and representation should go together, and that the people of the Territories shall manage their affairs in their own way.

We have agreed that this Government should not violate the principles of our Revolution, by making laws for a distant people regulating their domestic concerns, and affecting their rights of property, without giving them a representation. The doctrine that Congress is to regulate the rights of person and property, and the domestic concerns of a Territory, is the doctrine of the Tories of the Revolution. It is the doctrine of George III. and Lord North, his minister. Our fathers then said that they would not consent that the British Parliament should pass laws touching the local and domestic concerns of the colonies, the rights of person and property, the family relations of the people of the colonies, without their consent. The Parliament of Great Britain said they had the power. We said to them "you may have the power but you have not the moral right; it is violative of the great principles of civil liberty; violative of the rights of an Englishman, not to be affected in his property without his consent is given through his representative." Because Great Britain insisted on exercising that identical power over these colonies, our fathers flew to arms, asserted the doctrine that every colony, every dependence, every Territory, had a right in its own domestic Legislature to pass just such laws as its people chose touching their local and domestic concerns, recognizing the right of the Imperial Parliament to regulate imperial affairs, as I do the right of Congress to regulate the national and Federal concerns of the people of a Territory.

Sir, I am asserting, on behalf of the people of the Territories, just those rights which our fathers demanded for themselves against the claims of Great Britain. Because those rights were not granted to our fathers, they went through a bloody war of seven years. Am I now to be called upon to enforce that same odious doctrine on the people of a Territory, against their consent? I say, no. Organize a Territorial government for them; give them a Legislature, to be elected by their own people; give them all the powers of legislation on all questions of a local and domestic character, subject only to the Constitution; and if they make good laws, let them enjoy their blessings; and if they make bad laws, let them suffer under them until they repeal them. If the laws are unconstitutional, let those aggrieved appeal to the court—the tribunal created by the Constitution to ascertain that fact. That is the principle which we stood upon in 1854. It was on that principle and that understanding we fought the great political battle and gained the great victory of 1856. How many votes do you think Mr. Buchanan would have obtained in Pennsylvania if he had then said that the Constitution of the United States plants slavery in all the Territories, and makes it the duty of the Federal Government to keep it there and maintain it at the point of the bayonet and by Federal laws, in opposition to the will of the people? How many votes would he have received in Ohio, or any other free States, on such a platform? Mr. Buchanan did not then understand the doctrines of popular sovereignty and self-government in that way.

We should have preferred to publish the appendix containing the opinions of distinguished Democrats in 1854 and 1856 with the speech, but found that the troubles and embarrassments accompanying a new enterprise fall to us as to others, and it is deferred to future numbers, when those opinions and views will be found to substantiate the Democratic law laid down by Mr. DOUGLAS, in every particular.

WHEAT.—The Indiana newspapers speak in very encouraging terms of the wheat crop. It has not had any serious set back, and never looked better.

Let us have Harmony.

The harmonious union of the Democratic Party should be the aim and object of every true Democrat; not, as has been alleged by flippant and reckless writers, for the sake of "spoils," but to perpetuate these principles which we have "inherited and prized," and which, under nearly half a century of Democratic government, have urged our country in a prosperous and glorious career unparalleled in the history of nations. To produce that harmony, minor differences must be healed—the wayward and erring must be invited back—the constitution of the United States must be our guide, and we must stand upon our platform, hallowed by time, and consecrated to the many triumphs achieved by the people.

It is not meet that a great nation, like ours, should be made the plaything of reckless ambition. Its interests are too diverse—the happiness of too many is involved, their prosperity and their fortunes, that we should disregard the experience of the past, discard the written chart for our guidance, and embark upon an open sea, compassless and rudderless, in the vain pursuit of a moving object, which may forever elude, if it do not betray us to perdition.

The teachings of Democracy are pure and simple. They point to the constitution as our pole-star, fixed and immovable. It unfolds the whole science of our government, and as construed by the sages who wrought it for the grand purpose of building up the greatest of nations, there is safety in it, and without it, "chaos is come again." Then, rallying round our consecrated banner—the banner of the constitution, may we not come together, and be firm and united as we once were? What do we covet, more than the welfare of our country?—Are we not prosperous in its prosperity? Do not our hearts thrill with pleasure and satisfaction, and do we not rejoice in its gladness? Can official station so dazzle us that we are blinded, and incline from the path our fathers trod, and which only we may safely tread?

Through the peril of storm, from the blandishments of many a Circe, in following that glorious standard, we have been prosperously borne. Standing on the platform of "non-intervention and Popular Sovereignty," our country yet remains integer in every part, our flag not only unshorn of a star, but planting others, and luminous ones, upon its broad azure field.

What! have we so soon forgotten the difficulties and dangers we have passed, that we are to upset our platform on which we stood so firmly and fought so valiantly and conquered so gloriously? We were all together then—we were the people. We claimed our birthright. It was no new-fangled notion, that to the people belonged sovereign power. The heresy that it was the "divine right of Kings" expired when we cut loose from George the Third.—Nor does it any more belong to Congress, than it did to that potentate who thought that the British Parliament should pass laws touching the local and domestic concerns of the colonies, the rights of person and property, the family relations of the people of the colonies without their consent. The result is known. The colonies did not think so; nor do the people think that Congress has that power or "moral right" now. In the language of Mr. Buchanan, referring to the Kansas-Nebraska act, in his letter accepting the Cincinnati nomination: "It is founded upon principles as ancient as free government itself, and in accordance with them, has simply declared that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."

THE OHIO BLACK LAW IN FORCE.—The county of Portage probably has the honor of the first prosecution under the "black law" passed last winter by the Legislature prohibiting men "reputed" to have negro blood in their veins from voting.

At the April election in Charlestown, a citizen, reputed to have negro blood, offered his vote, and was challenged by a patriotic Locofoco! A bystander remarked that "in his opinion, the individual in question had a right to vote." The vote was received. Whereupon the Locofocos indignated!

Subsequently one of the "faithful" swore out a warrant against the bystander who expressed the above recreant, dangerous "opinion," for violating said law against reputed negro blood! The said bystander was arrested and taken before Justice Selby, of Paris. Upon the hearing the Justice bound the accused over to Common Pleas Court in three hundred dollars.

At the late term of the Common Pleas Court, the case was brought before the Grand Jury, who refused to present a bill!—Portage County Democrat.

And for this evasion of their duty, which they were sworn to perform—a duty they owed to their country, and should have been above all personal consideration or private sentiment, they are encouraged by this Republican paper. The Magistrate did his duty. He who swore out the warrant discharged his duty, but the Grand Jury utterly failed in theirs. The law is in conformity to the constitution. It establishes a uniform rule throughout the State, and prevents the negroes scattered through "chocolate" from nullifying the votes of the citizens of Ohio. Such people as constituted the Grand Jury of Portage should keep off of Grand Juries—they do not recognize the obligations of an oath. They set up their prejudices above the constitution of the State, the acts of the Legislature, and the Judges who interpret them. If a negro was permitted to vote, and any one in the face of the statute "aided and abetted," he should have been held amenable to the penalty prescribed for such offence.

WON'T TRY IT ON.—Some Republicans met at Wheeling, Va., and passed a resolution that it would be expedient that the next Republican Convention should be held on Southern soil, and proposed Wheeling as the most suitable point. To this the Sandusky Register responds:

"That the Union could withstand the shock is open to question. A National Republican Convention in Old Virginia! This is more than Southern blood can stand. The same invincible spirit of chivalry that breaks up Methodist Conferences would soon wind up such a presumptuous assemblage."

It won't do then. They won't have it so. If it were a National convention, why not hold it in "Old Virginia," as well as upon more northern soil? Are its principles so sectional, so inconsistent with Southern rights and Southern feeling, that it would be hazardous to enunciate them in "Old Virginia?" Wheeling was always opposed to Democracy—cannot the Republicans yield that little in compliment to the "Opposition?" Or must they fire at the tenets of the South from a respectful and safe distance? The people of Wheeling are proverbially hospitable. They would entertain their guests in the blandest and most sumptuous manner. They would furnish a place of meeting, and there need be no apprehension of bowie knives and pistols! But the Wheeling folks may remain satisfied. The Republicans "won't try it on."

FORNEY'S PRESS.—This paper has expressed its determination to support the nominee of the Charleston Convention, provided that the Convention shall adopt the Cincinnati Platform, and shall not attempt to engraft new doctrines upon the Democratic creed. This is the determination as we have heretofore shown, of the Chicago Times and the Springfield Register. Any other platform would be suicidal to the Democratic party, and it is to be hoped that there will be a grand reunion upon it. Even the Baltimore Clipper, identified with the Maryland American party, says that "if a candidate shall be nominated upon the intervention platform of the Southern Democracy, he will not get the electoral votes of a single Northern State, nor one-half of the Southern States. From this may be estimated the force of the sine qua non, set up by FORNEY'S Press."

Popular Sovereignty.

The Constitution, not of the United States, but of the [illegible] Constitution, has discovered that popular sovereignty, with the Douglas dodge of protection by the federal courts, is just the thing for the present emergency of the Democratic party. The editor announces that the intestine disturbances of the party are all healed by the following anodyne:

"The principles emblazoned on its banner are, non-intervention by Congress or by Territorial Legislatures, either to establish or prohibit Slavery within the Territories, and the protection of slave property therein, as long as the Territorial condition shall remain by the Judiciary, under the Constitution of the United States."

It is a sad instance of the ingratitude of Republics that the same article that appropriates the property of Douglas sends him bootless out of the party, and announces that "the traitors to its principles are everywhere leaving its organization, and will soon be clean over to the Black Republican party."—O. S. Journal.

Not being in receipt of the Constitution, we must take second-handed its declaration of principles. What the State Journal terms "the Douglas Dodge" was the basis of the issue in 1856. It has been steadfastly and consistently maintained by Mr. DOUGLAS ever since. It was a principle incorporated in the Kansas-Nebraska act, and was maintained by Mr. BUCHANAN in his acceptance of the Cincinnati nomination. It was incorporated in the Cincinnati Platform. How, then can it be called a "dodge," and made to appear a subterfuge, invented for the occasion?

On the 4th of January, 1854, in his report from the Committee on Territories, Mr. DOUGLAS said that the compromise measures of 1850 "were designed to establish certain great principles which would not only furnish remedies for existing evils, but in all time to come, avoid the perils of a similar agitation, by withdrawing the question of slavery from the halls of Congress and the political arena, and committing it to the arbitrament of those who were immediately interested in, and alone responsible for its consequences."

In Mr. DOUGLAS'S speech, the night of the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act, March 3d, 1854, he repeated:

1st. That the whole question of slavery should be withdrawn from the halls of Congress and the political arena, and committed to the arbitrament of those who are immediately interested in and alone responsible for its existence.

2d. In applying this principle to the Territories and the new States to be formed therefrom, all questions pertaining to slavery were to be referred to the people residing therein.

3d. That the committee proposed to carry these propositions and principles into effect in the precise language of the compromise measures of 1850.

He said:

"Are not these propositions identical with the principles and provisions of the bill on your table? If there is a hair-breadth of discrepancy between the two, I ask any Senator to rise in his place and point it out. Both rest upon the great principle which forms the basis of all our institutions—that the people are to decide the questions for themselves, subject only to the constitution."

HON. HOWELL COBB, now Secretary of the Treasury, on the 19th September, 1856, in a speech at West Chester, Pa., said:

"I stand upon a principle. I hold that the will of the majority of the people of Kansas should decide this question; and I say here to-night, before this people, and before this country, that I shall abide the decision of the people there. I hold to the right of the people to self-government. I am willing for them to decide this question."

HON. ISAAC TOUCEY, now Sec'y of the Navy, said on the 3d March 1854:

"Sir, this principle of non-intervention, is one of the leading principles of the Constitution."

And again:

"The original act recognizes on in the Territorial Legislature, all the power which they can have subject to the Constitution, and subject to the organic law of the Territory. There is no ambiguity. It is as explicit as language can make it. The only doubt which arises is as to the meaning of the Constitution. That we cannot define; that is a question exclusively for the Judicial Tribunals."

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE in his response to the nomination for Vice-President, remarked June 9 1856:

"The whole Democratic organization is pledged to the following proposition: That Congress shall not interpose upon this subject (slavery) in the States, in the Territories, or in the District of Columbia. That the people of each Territory shall determine the question for themselves, and be admitted into the union upon a footing of perfect equality with the original States, without discrimination on account of the allowance or prohibition of slavery."

Senator BIGLER, July, 1, 1856, after endorsing the removal of the question from Congress and confiding it to the people of the Territory, with regard to "what degree of law-making power, it is competent for Congress to confer upon the people and Legislature of a Territory," remarked:

"It is a question of construing the constitution and therefore a judicial question, which I am not called upon to decide."

On the 11th March 1856, in his report of the Senate Committee on Territories, Mr. DOUGLAS said:

"It must be a judicial question over which congress can have no control, and which can be determined only by the courts of justice, under the sanction of the constitution."

This principle is emphatically embodied in the Cincinnati Platform of 1856, and was endorsed by Mr. BUCHANAN in his letter of acceptance, which declared that "the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."

It is useless to multiply extracts. We have shown, we think, conclusively, that it is no dodge, but was declared a cardinal principle of the Democracy, in its canvass of 1856, and has been steadfastly adhered to ever since, by Mr. DOUGLAS and those who co-operate with him.

The People's Press.

Our exchanges are calling attention to this forthcoming Democratic paper, and speak kindly and approvingly of its editor. We annex a specimen or two:

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.—The talented J. Birney Marshall, of the CAPITAL CITY FACT, proposes to start a new Democratic paper at Columbus, with the above title, on or about the first of May. The Press will present the name of Stephen A. Douglas as its first choice for the Presidency in 1860.—Terms, $2 in advance. We hope Bro. Marshall will meet with unbounded success.—Morrow County Herald.

NEW DEMOCRATIC PAPER.—J. Birney Marshall has issued the prospectus for a new weekly Democratic newspaper at Columbus, Ohio, to be called the People's Press. Mr. Marshall has been connected with the CAPITAL CITY FACT for over a year, and is a writer of ability. The paper will advocate the claims of Stephen A. Douglas for the Presidency. It is time the Democracy of Ohio were having a paper at the capital of the State that would pay some little attention to the "proposed" principles of the Democracy, which the Press promises to do. We wish Mr. Marshall pecuniary success, and hope he will have better luck in his new enterprise than we had once upon a time in that same city.—M'Arthur Journal.

A NEW PAPER.—We learn from the Columbus FACT, that J. Birney Marshall, who has been for some time connected with the editorial department of that paper, intends establishing a pure Democratic weekly in that city. Mr. Marshall is an enterprising man and an able writer, and we feel assured will make his paper all that it is "cracked up to be." It is to be entitled The People's Press, and will hoist the name of Stephen A. Douglas for President in 1860. The first number will make its appearance on or about the first of May.—Portsmouth Tribune.

THE PUBLIC PRESS.—J. Birney Marshall, Esq., editor of that spirited sheet the Columbus Fact, is about to start a new Democratic weekly paper with the above title at the State Capital. Mr. Marshall is a man of fine talents, a dashing writer, and possessed of indomitable energy.—The paper will hoist the Douglas flag, and labor for the nomination and election of the champion of popular sovereignty. Success to it.—[Toledo Herald.

A Cannard.

The New York Herald, true to its instincts, is grinding away at the Democracy with its usual references to the past, in which it disparages the prospects of the Democratic party by pointing to

"A split in the Pennsylvania camp, a rebellion in the Louisiana camp, a Presidential division and various local discords in the Virginia camp, and hostile cliques and hot quarrels here, there and everywhere among the rank and file, which seem to defy all the agencies of peace."

From which draws the sage conclusion that "the prospect is gloomy but there is yet hope," from the "cohesive power of public plunder."

BENNETT is evidently impatient and restive of something and vents his ill-temper, or threatens to "cut loose," after this fashion:

"There is still a hope for the factious Democracy in 1860. They have shown, over and over again, that they can be combined at the tap of the drum by the 'cohesive power of the public plunder.' Place the spoils and plunder of the Presidency before them, tell them the day of battle is at hand, that union is their only chance, and they will rush into each other's arms like a band of brothers, and, till the battle is over, will stick to their common cause like cobbler's wax. They make a terrible uproar, meantime, we admit, and keep the country in hot water upon constitutional questions, principles, State rights, and such things; but the great question of the spoils comprehends everything which a good Democrat feels it to be his highest privilege and holiest duty to live for, labor for, fight for, and die for. Upon this word of magic—'the spoils'—depend his successes, his hopes, and his faith in the resurrection.

"On the other hand, the opposition elements of the country do not so clearly comprehend the importance of the spoils, or they do not stand so much in need of the spoils as the democracy; while they have a much stronger belief in the saving virtues of political principles and abstractions. Hence the difficulty of combining the opposition forces, North and South; and thus we find them now as far from any basis of common union as they were in 1856.

"With these general views of the subject, we think there is still a living hope for the democracy in 1860—first, from their reunion upon the good old party platform of the spoils and plunder; secondly, from the divisions of the opposition upon constitutional questions and principles, in which, this way or that way, the bulk of the republicans, Americans and old line whigs sincerely believe."

Now, who would give a fig for the support of such a weathercock, that varies with every wind, or rather obeys the instincts of its whims, and caprices or is influenced by the axes it has to grind? It cannot prove a desirable ally, when "spoils" are the only objects of consideration with itself, and consequently it cannot conceive any other motive principle in anybody else. While it is by no means complimentary to the Democracy, it does not flatter their opponents. It omits to mention, however, the chief cement of the "opposition" in the North—the slavery agitation—and that the adhesiveness from that source produces a contrary effect when applied at the South. What it says of "splits" and "hostile cliques" and "hot quarrels" must be particularly refreshing to our neighbor of the Statesman which spoke so confidently the other day of "harmony."

With a knowing wink of that ubiquitous vision of his, in a succeeding paper, it disposes of the prominent candidates as follows:

"The friends of Mr. Douglas are complacent that he, and he alone, will be found competent to re-unite and save the party in the North without sacrificing the party in the South, and his shibboleth is 'popular sovereignty' in the Territories. The pipelayers of Governor Wise are equally sanguine concerning his superior claims; as the Democratic St. George who slew the dragon of Know Nothingism—as the first, boldest, and most conspicuous Southern Democratic opponent of the Kansas Lecompton Constitution, and as the leading champion of strict construction against the whole foreign and domestic policy of Mr. Buchanan's administration. The friends of Mr. Slidell expect to make his Cuba scheme the winning card. The managers in behalf of Mr. Guthrie count upon that Pennsylvania's [illegible] policy of incidental home protection, they think will succeed. Mr. Breckinridge has the advantage of a flattering and widely diffused personal popularity, while Jefferson Davis, Senator Brown, and Messrs. Hunter, Cobb and Stephens, look to the commanding power of the Southern rights wing of the party."

He peremptorily excommunicates DOUGLAS and WISE as unfit for the South, and raises "Northern impediments against all the rest," coming to the sage conclusion that some "new man" must be sought, and [illegible]. We think that intelligent people are not to be [illegible] that way, or have wool drawn over their eyes by the Herald.

Leasing the Canals.

The Statesman charges that the advertisement published by the Board of Public Works for leasing the canals is not in conformity to the law, and intimates that it was a scheme of [illegible] "very busybody, the Attorney General," to prevent the leasing of the canals, or to throw them into the hands of the Republicans who have a happy facility of procuring such stocks as are required as security! It apprehends that there is a plot to exclude "the real canal men of the State, who ought to be the lessees." It says:

"If the Public Works are let under the provisions of the advertisement, they must go into the hands of parties who are able to make an investment of not less than $255,000 in the stocks of the State of Ohio, or of the United States. The men of experience in the canals and of ample solvency, and who would make the most efficient and popular lessees, cannot, as a matter of course, raise the means to purchase the stock, and therefore, although they might be able to furnish ample security just as good as the stocks, their bids would be disregarded."

The Statesman advises the canal men to bid anyhow, and rather promises it on the contrary provided they bid enough. It says:

"We would advise the practical men of Ohio who are inclined to bid, to make their proposals in strict conformity to the law, and if they be the highest bidders, the law awards them the lease, and the Board may be compelled to assign the contracts to them."

Not having examined the advertisement with the provisions of the law, we cannot say positively that the Board have transcended their prerogative. The kind of security which they may demand is pointed out, or such other security as shall be satisfactory to the Board, thus giving the Board discretion as to what security they will receive. The Board according to the Statesman's showing have exercised the discretion of naming what security they will receive—requiring one-half in U. S. Stocks or Ohio Stocks, and the other in unincumbered real estate.

We presume that the apprehension of the Statesman is considerably augmented, lest "the canal men of Ohio" should not be the successful bidders—its interest in having those experienced gentlemen as contractors remaining unabated.

We shall probably hear from the other side before long, and as faithful "chroniclers of the times" shall feel bound to state in brief what may be said in defence of the action of the Board.

WRIT OF ERROR ALLOWED.—We understand that a writ of error has been granted in the cases of Carr and Sayres, in the Penitentiary from Hamilton county, for the murder of Kate Buchanan, in the second degree; and of [illegible], convicted in the same county, of the murder of [illegible] Baker, in the first degree, and sentenced to be hanged on the 27th inst. The Sheriff of that county has been notified of the granting of the writs. The matter is to be determined without delay, and if sustained, new trials will be granted.

HON. WILLIS ALLEN, a prominent and highly esteemed citizen of Southern Illinois and ex-member of Congress, died in Williamson county, on the 15th inst. At the time of his death he was Judge of that Circuit, to which he was recently elected.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1859.

From the Capital City Fact of Wednesday.

Tom Miller's Pilgrimage.

A correspondent of the Cleveland National Democrat, writing from Mt. Gilead, Morrow county, Monday, the 9th inst., closes his letter with the following paragraph:

"Mr. Thomas Miller, one of the proprietors of the Statesman, has canvassed this county for his paper. I learn that he increased his subscription to a large number among the Democracy of this county. Besides canvassing for his paper, he engaged in beating up for recruits among the Delegates to the State Convention for H. B. Payne, of your city, for Governor, who, although he has declined, will, I learn, accept the nomination if tendered to him. To have this "tender made" was one of the objects of Mr. Miller's mission. It is rumored that an effort is to be made to have the Convention of the 26th inst. postponed until after the Republicans hold theirs. It would, in my opinion, be a confession of weakness. Let the Democracy meet, put in nomination good and true men, and go into the campaign battling for the time-honored principles of the Democracy, and victory will be ours."

This will be read with some surprise by some of Tom Miller's acquaintances here, who had no idea that he was "beating the country all over," and especially "beating up recruits for H. B. Payne." But that gouge is only one of Tom's tricks. He probably found that Payne had some popularity in Morrow county especially as the Democrats are all Douglas men up there, and he cut in with the strongest side. The fellow may have some lingering hankering for Payne, for he and Payne were a year ago as thick as three in a bed, in the cause of Douglas, Popular Sovereignty and anti-Lecompton, and Tom even went so far as to say Buchanan was a d—d old fool and a [illegible]!

The correspondent of the National Democrat evidently does not know Tom Miller, although he does seem to know some other things. Tom is anything and everything to all men, to their faces, but let their backs be turned and he is—Tom Miller. He would be for Payne or anybody else where Payne or anybody else has friends. He is no at pretending to get subscribers for the Statesman, which is sadly in want of them, but the real object is to [illegible] the Convention.

We, too, have heard of some such scheme as putting off the Democratic State Convention until after the Republicans hold theirs; and it is probable that the descendant in a collateral way from the great Warwick, "Col. J. Foster, Sec. Ex. Com.," called together the Central Committee for that purpose. This is very like Tom Miller's tactics. "Boys, let's see what they're goin' to do first." We deny the right of Charley Foster, or Tom Miller, or Gen. W. Manypenny, or the whole Statesman and Post-Office clique, with each of the Central Committee as they can scrape together, to postpone the time of holding the Convention. They might just as well assume any other prerogative of a Convention, and proceed to nominate. County Conventions have been held and delegates appointed to assemble at Columbus on the 26th of May, to nominate State officers; and on that day the Convention should be held. What matters it what the Republicans may do, or whom nominate? This is a separate organization. The Democrat's correspondent well remarks that it would be "a confession of weakness" to postpone. We, too, say, "Let the Democracy meet, put in nomination good and true men, and go into the campaign battling for the time-honored principles," Popular Sovereignty and non-intervention—the Cincinnati Platform, and nothing else. No more tinkering is wanted with the platform—no interpolations. The Convention should give the platform as endorsed by the people, and should select the best men for office, and then it would make no difference, whatever what platform the Republicans might adopt or what men they might nominate. Tom Miller hasn't an idea beyond trick and scheme. Such a thing as principle never entered his noddle. He might expect to out-trick the Republicans if they could be got to expose their hands first; but to beat them in fair and open field he never contemplated.

What will President Buchanan think when he hears that his pet Postmaster (bought and paid for, even after he had denounced the President) has been traveling about electioneering for Payne, for Governor—that Payne who traversed Ohio, and addressed a great meeting at Indianapolis, denouncing the President and his Lecompton policy—that Payne, who, when at Washington, and urgently entreating the President, was told:

"Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein."— that Payne, who was leagued with Stanton and Johnson and all the most violent opponents of the President's policy, and who left no stone unturned to keep it with others? Would he not imagine that Tom might as well be at home, attending to the duties of his office, (which is very much out of repair and needs somebody to look after its affairs) as to be traveling about electioneering for his friend Payne?

We disclaim any hostility to Col. Payne; but he is not the man for the times. He does not possess the entire confidence of the Democratic party, and no man can hope to win who has not. He is regarded by many as a mere political adventurer, without stability, and of doubtful political faith. That would be fatal to the coming canvass, which must be one of great effort. He is untiring and speaks well—is a man of talent, and would conduct a brisk canvass, but he may as well be taken at his word, and be permitted to remain in the ranks, where he may render service. The artifice would be too shallow, to have voluntarily declined a nomination before tendered, merely to bring his name prominently before the people or prevent it from being forgotten; and then be willing "to accept the nomination if tendered to him." We have no idea it will be so tendered, or that he will have an opportunity to accept or decline, although Tom Miller might button-hole every man in Morrow county in his behalf.

——Since the foregoing was written, we have the Statesman, which, as we expected, is in an ill humor about the officiousness of the correspondent of the National Democrat in "letting the cat out of the bag." It is quite huffy, and says:

"We respectfully suggest to the editors and proprietors of the Democrat, to advise their correspondent to confine himself to matter pertinent and proper to be written about, and also to the truth."

Prime Catch! Mountain Democrat. You are treading on somebody's toes. Your friend the Statesman, denies the "soft impeachment," as to Miller's "beating up recruits for H. B. Payne." It says:

"As to the assertion that Mr. Miller's visit to Morrow county was a mission to obtain "recruits" in the shape of Delegates for Mr. Payne or any other person, it is simply a fabrication. We have advised the Democrats of Ohio, through our columns, to take care to send up to our next Democratic State Convention, wise, discreet and sound men as Delegates, and we have confidence that they will do so, and that the Convention will give us a ticket of good and strong men for our candidates."

We are rather inclined to think this is an evasion, that although the apparent object of the "Mission" was to obtain subscribers for his paper, he doubtless availed himself of the opportunity to lay a little for his friend Payne. The advice the Statesman says it gave through its columns, may have been given, and was very good advice. The great Napoleon, on a celebrated occasion, issued a public order that votes might be voluntary, but he sent private information that those who did not vote as he desired, should be shot! The application is very apparent. The Statesman may advise through its columns "the Democrats of Ohio to send to the Convention wise, discreet and sound men," but Tom Miller, in his peregrinations through the State, picking up subscribers here and there, may, for all that, "beat up recruits among the Delegates for H. B. Payne." That's a way he has—bushwhacking is his trade. The correspondent of the National Democrat must be more discreet, and not be too inquisitive, if he should cross Tom Miller's path again. He should know that Tom does not mean what he says, and likes to make his political moves incog.

From the Fact of Friday.

The Democratic Convention not Postponed—The Central Committee Come and Go—The Statesman not yet Dictator.

It appeared singular, no doubt, that no notice was taken in yesterday's Fact of the meeting of the Central Democratic Committee which took place yesterday at the office of the Secretary of State, and which, after the "Sec. of Dem. Ex. Com." had explained the necessity of postponing the State Democratic Convention until after the Republicans should hold theirs, resolved not to take, and afterwards unanimously, that there was no necessity or expediency of such postponement. We prepared an article, to that effect, and commending the fable of the boy who cried "Wolf" to the shepherds, to the mature consideration of the officious Secretary of the Executive Committee, who called the Committee from their homes and business to listen to his idle prattle, determine that the call was unnecessary, and quietly depart homeward again, somehow or another, when we expected to see the article in our column last evening, it was not there, and the manuscript had disappeared! It was one of those contretemps that occasionally turn up in the life of an editor, and cause annoyance, but for which, after they occur there is no remedy.

We were adverse to the contemplated postponement, and had referred to it in an article the day previous, commenting upon an extract from the Mt. Gilead correspondence of the National Democrat. We have since conversed with the author of that correspondence, and find that, notwithstanding the denial of the Statesman, Tom Miller had been doing precisely what was attributed to him—"beating up recruits among the delegates for H. B. Payne." The call therefore was intended to bring the Central Committee together and procure a postponement of the time of holding the Democratic Convention, that Tom Miller's faction might have time to [illegible].

It will not do to say that the Statesman did not advise the call of the Committee, and did not recommend the postponement of the Convention. The call was made by the Secretary of the Executive Committee who assumed the authority of the President and Secretary of the State Central Committee, and is per consequence one of the editors of the Statesman—the "Austrian" editor if you please. It was a "Tom Miller scheme," out and out, but it didn't win. The plan was probably ostensibly for the benefit of Payne, but connected with it was a little trick for Manypenny, the standing candidate who has not declined. It will be remembered two years ago, when several prominent Democrats were before the Convention for the Gubernatorial nomination, Manypenny, whose name had been mentioned, in that connection, despairing of his own chances, threw whatever weight he was supposed to possess in favor of Payne. This time Payne declines early, before there was a prospect for his nomination, and several others, who had very good chances, expressed a disinclination to take the field, leaving a fair opening for the acquiescent Manypenny. But there has not appeared any marked demonstrations of popular feeling in his favor, and it required some exquisite maneuvering, in the Tom Miller way, to bring about the desired result. It was suggested by Senator Schleich, in his letter addressed to the "editor of the Statesman," that his urgency for the restoration of the Canal Contracts had been stimulated, if not inspired by a desire for the Gubernatorial nomination, which those experienced and skillful political managers and contrivers had doubtless promised. To prepare the way for this event—or to "beat up recruits for Payne," with such a dernier resort in contemplation, was the secret of the "mission" of Tom Miller, who was canvassing the State to procure subscribers for the Statesman!

The Central Committee assembled, and agreed with the suggestions of Mr. Stayman of the Delaware Standard, that the Democracy had a record, upon which they could stand, and it was not material to them on what day the Republicans held their Convention or made their nominations. Although the latter should modify or change their platform, the Democracy had theirs established, and it could not be altered to meet any emergency that Republican ingenuity might invent. It was understood by the people, [illegible] by the people, and the Democratic candidates who might be nominated, were expected to stand fairly and squarely upon it. Meetings have been held in a number of counties, have been called in many others, all pointing to the 26th of May as the time of holding the Democratic Convention. It is fixed in the public mind, and cannot be changed to suit the leisure or yet unfinished preparation of this or that would-be candidate. There are enough sound, reliable, eloquent Democrats who would not hesitate to accept the nomination; yet desire that their convenience should be consulted, or that it should be requisite that their adversary should be first brought to the starting point before willing to enter upon the race.

The Statesman, and its policy, have been rebuked. We are glad of it. The Central Committee have acted wisely, and as was to be expected from sensible men. They consulted the good of their party, and disregarded the insinuating devices ingeniously contrived for individual benefit. Let there be good men, sound, sensible, discreet men, sent to the Convention, and the candidates whom they may select, will be worthy to carry the Democratic banner.

Kentucky Democracy on Intervention.—The Lexington Statesman, which journal is the oldest paper in the State, has the following remarks upon the new intervention dogmas which is being contended for by the opposition in Kentucky:

"To look to Congressional interference is to subvert political principles which we may have learned to regard as the fundamental doctrines of the Democratic party, to inaugurate a domestic policy in direct conflict with that theory upon which alone there seems to be a hope for the permanent adjustment of our sectional difficulties, and finally to concede a power which, if exerted to its legitimate extent, would place the extension of slavery within the absolute control of an Abolition Congress. Congressional legislation in protection of slavery in the Territories irresistibly carries with it the power to legislate for its exclusion. The duty or right of Congress to protect cannot be maintained without admitting the power to abolish. If Congress can intervene for one purpose it can for another. The South cannot assert a principle and expect to reap only its advantages. We must abide to full enforcement.

This is the true doctrine, which alone can hold together the Democracy of the North and South. It is broad and national, and in conformity with the Cincinnati Platform and the principles inculcated in 1856. To demand more will lose the South what it then claimed, and what was happily accorded them—the unequivocal and cordial co-operation of the Democracy of the North. To us it appears very clear that the only settlement of this momentous question, that threatens so much disaster to our country, is to keep it where it properly belongs, and out of Congress altogether.

The [illegible] on the [illegible] branch in Pittsburgh and Allegheny are on a strike for higher wages.

An "Austrian" Editor in Columbus.

The Statesman, for a Democratic paper, and claiming or desiring to be esteemed the central organ, had a strange article yesterday, "all on one side," which caused no little remark among many of its readers. It came down upon the New York Times "like a thousand of brick," because that paper, from its extensive information in regard to European topics, its intelligent correspondence, its many sources of intelligence, had assumed the ground and uttered the opinion that war has been precipitated by Austria to enforce her aggressive pretensions to a sovereign control of Sardinia, as well as the rest of Italy; which the King of Sardinia resists, and has besought France and other European powers to aid in preventing.

The Statesman fancies a horrible plot between the Emperor of the French and the King of Sardinia, whom it calls "the supple tool" of the former, for "the expulsion of Austria from her Italian possessions." It talks ex cathedra upon the subject, and displays a wonderful learning and intimate diplomatic intelligence upon the secret springs that urge this French protection of Sardinia, which, when sifted and examined, do not amount to a knowledge of the contents of a box of sardines.

Austria would hold Sardinia as a province, her King as a vassal, and contrary to stipulated treaty, subject a people who desires independence, and to whom independence was guaranteed by the great powers of Europe, to her sovereign authority. Not only foreseeing, but feeling this determination on the part of his grasping ambitious and powerful neighbor, the King of Sardinia, unable to resist alone, after protest against encroaching power, claims protection from those who are interested by honor and by their own safety, in sustaining him. France is his natural ally, because France is most nearly interested, and her own safety involved. The King of Sardinia called his forces into the field because he saw the approaching storm. Louis Napoleon prepared his armaments, like a prudent monarch, because he maintains his power by the force of his armaments and his readiness for operations. Whatever may be the dreams of his ambition, and the ulterior ends he proposes to himself, we believe them to be of far too great magnitude to be embraced in the focus of the microscopic eye of the Ohio Statesman. Nor do we think the "Austrian" editor of that paper appears very advantageously in the views he takes of the incipient steps that have led to this outburst of war. He complains of "the one-sided statements" of others, and charges them with misrepresenting and exaggerating the attitude of Austria, the mere hirelings of that rascal Napoleon, when he fairly lays himself open to a similar charge as the servile adulator of one of the most despotic governments on earth. He could not more adhere Austria, if he had donned the cast-off breeches of Manypenny.

There are no verisimilitudes in the Statesman's Horizon illustrations. They are lugged in for a purpose, but they don't fit. The schemes of diplomacy between Victor Emanuel and Louis Napoleon may all lie exposed to his keen, penetrating eye, but as yet they have escaped the perceptive faculties of those who, from careful watching, and intimate, even familiar acquaintance with the moves on the European chess-board, are supposed to know something of the ulterior designs of Kings and Emperors.

The tone of the English press is set down by this wiseacre, this "press in boots," to a desire to effect a parliamentary election, and put in or keep out a ministerial majority! Men sometimes pretend to know too much, and over-skillful swimmers may venture too far from shore.

"And those may fall who seek to soar too high.
The wings of Icarus could not dare the sky."

We very much question if our "Austrian" editor has not an English appetite.

"To feast upon whole thousands of the French."

Judge Cradlebaugh.—The Herald's Washington correspondent says that Judge Cradlebaugh, United States Judge in Utah, whose injudicious course brought him in conflict with Gov. Cumming, has been removed. The vacancy will not be filled for some time.

Judge Cradlebaugh formerly resided in Circleville, and he is a gentleman in every sense of the word. We do not believe he has acted "injudiciously" when the truth is known.—Portsmouth Tribune.

Judge Cradlebaugh, of Utah, the model jurist, who takes an United States Army of a thousand men with him on the circuit, when he goes to hold court, merely to supply the place of a jail for any prisoners that may be convicted, has been removed by the President.—O. S. Journal.

We place these two articles in juxtaposition, although exhibiting a very different spirit. We have seen the report of the removal of Judge Cradlebaugh contradicted, but presume it has no foundation. In this we are disappointed; for we had supposed if any one would interpret the laws in Mormondom, fairly, justly and in the true spirit of our institutions, it would be Judge Cradlebaugh. The post was one of delicacy, of difficulty and embarrassment, for he had to deal with a people who acknowledged a different religion from ours, (which, after all, is the basis of law and order) and with whom a temporizing policy was admitted in the judicial ermine, and would not eventuate in good. The presence of the army was to prevent the overriding of law by the followers of the Mormon Saints, and to protect the interests of our people, which would be trampled upon by those who deride the powers of our Government, if permitted to pursue their blind infatuation, and measure justice by their own bushel. The population is mixed from the debris of all nations, unskilled in the nature of our institutions, and ignorant of the science of our Government. Judge Cradlebaugh is not the man to demand the presence of an armed force, in the administration of his duties, without a necessity; and the fact that Gen. Johnson was willing to cooperate with him—a gentleman of intelligence education and refinement—is strong evidence that he did not overstep his proper prerogative. That the Judge and the Governor should not coincide as to the line of policy to be pursued by the former, is probable enough, but of that the Judge is answerable for himself, and not to Governor Cumming. Should the Judge have been removed, we shall wait before we form an opinion as to its propriety, until the grounds of his removal shall be stated, and we hear from himself the history of the circumstances. The announcement that the "vacancy will not be filled for some time," would indicate that the exercise of Judicial functions is not needed in Deseret; and the executive alone is sufficient for all present purposes in that unmanageable and refractory territory.

No Douglas Issue in the Canvass.—The Madison Jeffersonian, in canvassing the subject of the State Convention in Wisconsin, says it is "impolitic to consider the merits of the issue between Douglas and the President in our State Convention. It is a subject that does not come legitimately before the Convention, and ought not to be tolerated." Some of the other Democratic journals in the State have proffered the same advice.

We find the foregoing among the political articles of the New York Herald of yesterday. The resolutions of the Clark County Convention, which we published yesterday, indicate that a similar sentiment prevails in Ohio, and will be incorporated in the State Convention to assemble on the 26th inst. Should, however the issue be raised, it will be through the zeal of those who hold or expect office from the President, and cannot result otherwise than disastrously, unless it resolve itself into one of those unmeaning compromises that "carry water on both shoulders."

Active steps are being taken in England in order to have the Great Eastern ready for sea by the latter end of the month of July or the beginning of August.

The Manufacturing Interests of Newark.

Bituminous and Cannel Coal—Coal Oil Works at Newark—Machine Works—McCune's Foundry—Simpson's Foundry—Wilson and Smith's Woolen Factory—Smith's Distillery—Flouring Mills—Breweries—Packing House.

Newark, May 9, 1859.

Editors Capital City Fact:—Thankful for your brief notice of our city, in your editorial, under the head of "Ohio Developing her Mineral Resources," I take pleasure in meeting the request of a friend, by giving a more extended notice of our resources as a state, in mineral wealth, and particularly of the Manufacturing interests of Newark.

Of bituminous coal and its usual associate iron, or ironstone as the English call it, our resources are already well known and developed fully up to the wants of consumption. But as Coal Oil is rapidly becoming an "institution" our facilities for the production of that deservedly popular illuminating agent may be interesting to a large portion of your readers especially as that material in all its forms, of benzole, naptha, burning oil, lubricating oil and paraffine (for candles,) bids fair to be a great staple product of our country and of our extended commerce.

As our American coalfields are the largest in the world, so also our country is most abundant in the material for coal oils. And although as yet we have found nothing equal to the "Boghead" of Scotland, yet the great abundance of cannel coal in our Western States is such, that we have the material for making this article for centuries to come: at least until the inventive genius of man, in the order of Divine progress, shall bring forward something still better and cheaper.

Cannel coal is the only coal adapted to the production of a good oil; and is found skirting the western margin of the great Alleghany, or more properly Ohio coal measures, from Northern Pennsylvania to Alabama. In this State it has been traced from Trumbull through Portage, Summit, Holmes, Coshocton, Muskingum, Licking, Perry, Hocking, Vinton and Jackson counties, with occasional beds in Jefferson, Harrison, Tuscarawas and Guernsey counties. These beds vary in thickness from a few inches to four, six and even eight feet.—They also vary in the quantity of their product from 15 to 60 gallons per ton, as also in the quality of the oil.

Coal that will yield from 40 to 60 gallons per ton with a large proportion of light oil is desirable, because it can be worked very profitably. Yet there is much coal worked that yields less than 30 and even 20 gallons per ton. From my own investigations I have found the richest cannel coal in Licking, Muskingum and Coshocton counties.

Of our own manufactures coal oil is now taking the lead. The first works established here is the Great Western, with a nominal capital of about $500,000, fully one fifth of which is now employed. It commenced making oil in the fall of '57, and has been very successful. The unprecedented demand for this oil has stimulated other parties to invest in this business, and this company is now extending its works by erecting a new establishment at Flint Ridge, where it possesses a very rich and large deposit of coal. The following table will exhibit the extent of the business at this place:

Name of Works.	No. of Retorts.	No. of Gal's Crude Oil per day.
Great Western	[illegible]	[illegible]
Newark	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Holmes, Easton & Co.	[illegible]	Receiving retorts.
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Williams & Co.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Product in Crude Oil per day, Gals.		[illegible]

The Great Western has the principal refinery at present. John Bell is erecting a refinery with a capacity of 1,000 gallons per day; and Palmer, Easton & Co. propose to erect a refinery with a capacity of 3,000 gallons per day. Still other coal works are proposed.

The Newark Machine Works.—Justly the pride of our city from the perfection of its machinery and appointments, as well as for the high character of its products, has been in operation since the spring of 1858. It employs 125 operators, 50 of whom are in the foundry, and pays for labor about $3,500 per month. It has averaged since its commencement about one steam engine per week, and the engines of this shop are scattered over all the Western and Southern States from Georgia to Minnesota, and from Ohio to Pike's Peak. The Portable Saw Mills made here are used extensively, and comprise a large portion of the work of these shops, as also their portable thrashing machines, extensively used in the West. Gear's patent planing, sticking and moulding machine is a tool made here on a large scale, and although they produce two per week, the demand is in advance of the supply. It is a tool which very much facilitates the labor of the joiner and cabinet maker. In the foundry they consume 12 tons pig iron per month.

McCune's Foundry chiefly makes stoves, hollow-ware, mill gearing, &c., consuming about 12 tons of pig iron per month.

Simpson's Foundry.—Makes all the smaller castings. They have also a saw mill which does a good business.

The Woolen Factory of Wilson & Smith employs about 18 operatives, consumes about 30,000 pounds of wool and 16,000 pounds of cotton warp; makes about 20,000 yards of cloth, and makes some 5,000 pounds of stocking yarn per year, besides carding for customers.

The Distillery of Henry Smith is capable of working up 400 bushels of corn per day, and feeds large stocks of cattle, hogs and sheep.

Flouring Mills.—We have five flouring mills of respectable capacity, viz: City Mills (steam); Racoon, Bank, Buckingham's & Horne's, (water).

We have several tanneries, and one, that of W. Shields & Co., on a large scale.

Breweries.—Michael Moreth's is a large establishment, scarcely surpassed in extent and arrangement by any in the State. Nealy's is one of respectable dimensions.

The Packing House of A. Fiery, for beef and meats is arranged for a large business.

Yours, &c., J. D.

Democratic Convention in Clark County.—The following resolutions were passed at Springfield on the 30th ult., when Messrs. John Mahaffey, John W. Keys, Daniel Brown, Major Wm. Hupp and John Q. Mitchell were appointed delegates to the State Convention to assemble on the 26th inst.:

Whereas, It is usual for political assemblages to express an opinion upon political questions of national, State or local interests, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Democracy of Clark county renew the declaration of their acceptance of the Cincinnati platform, adopted by the Democracy of the Union in 1856, and that they regard it as the full and fair exponent of the Democratic faith.

Resolved, That we are in favor of the early acquisition of the Island of Cuba by the United States government, believing that such acquisition would be of vast commercial benefit to our people, as well as of political benefit to the people of Cuba.

Resolved, That we heartily approve of the vigorous measures recently adopted by the northern part of our State to preserve inviolate the Fugitive Slave Law, which being as much a law of the general government as any other, and sanctioned by a strict construction of the Constitution, should meet with no obstacle to its enforcement.

Resolved, That we endorse the action of the late Democratic Legislature in depriving the negroes of the State of Ohio of the privilege of voting at our elections, which privilege they have unconstitutionally enjoyed in some of the abolition counties of the State.

Resolved, That we condemn the course of the County Commissioners in allowing to be paid from the Treasury of the county the private expenses of the Sheriff, Attorneys and others, incurred in an attempt to prevent the execution of a writ issued by a United States officer, thus robbing the treasury of $874,00.

Resolved, That we are in favor of the early extinguishment of the county debt; and that the bad management of county officials which has brought the county under its present weight of indebtedness, meets with our unqualified condemnation.

Resolved, That we are opposed to the using of the public funds by officials for the benefit of private ends; and that the most effectual means of keeping the public moneys from the hands of swindling corporations, we approve of the adoption by the Democratic Legislature of Ohio of the Sub-Treasury Law.

Resolved, That we are in favor of a careful and economical administration of the county government; and that the present depleted condition of the Treasury demands a reform in unmistakable tones.

Resolved, That in the Ohio Press we recognize a sound, national, Democratic journal, and that we heartily and earnestly commend it to our fellow Democrats of this County and District as an able, honest and faithful exponent of the principles of Democracy.

The Emperor Napoleon III, having been born on the 20th April, 1808, has completed his 51st year.

The State Fair for 1859.

On Tuesday last there was a meeting of the State Board of Agriculture at Zanesville, the Board being full except Dr. Townsend, of Fremont, who was detained at home by illness. The business of the session was to re-arrange the premium list, appoint the various committees, locate the grounds, and conclude other preliminary arrangements for the Fair of 1859. In the premium list a marked improvement was made, in further equalizing the list, making it as near perfect as possible, perhaps all that was necessary. The innumerable committees were appointed from the best and most experienced men in the various departments assigned them that we have in the State.—And here, in behalf of the Board, we should state, it is essential in the extreme that they should attend and perform faithfully the duties allotted by the Board. We say it is extremely necessary, so that when the Board shall again meet in Zanesville—which will not occur until the commencement of the Fair—they may not be compelled to re-appoint committees hastily in the midst of other pressing duties, from the conglomerated mass of prejudiced or inexperienced men around them. Such has been the case, unfortunately for all interests, at all the Fairs which have been held in the State, causing unpleasant feelings on the part of the visitors, and censure on the part of those having articles on exhibition, which invariably falls where it should not—upon the shoulders of the Board, instead of upon the prominent and experienced men who neglected the committees upon which they were appointed.—Wishing to obviate this difficulty, and to give general satisfaction in every instance, it is urged that the parties appointed will faithfully attend.

The ground selected is said by those who have examined it to be by far the most beautiful and convenient in Muskingum county, comprising forty-five acres of an almost entirely level grass-plot, situated about one mile and a half north-west of the principal hotels of Zanesville, and hemmed in on the east boundary by a lofty range of hills completely covered with forest. Two good roads lead to the grounds, one from Putnam and the other from West Zanesville. In addition to this it is said that the Cincinnati, Wilmington and Zanesville Railroad Company—which, by the by, connects at Zanesville with the Central Ohio for all points, east, west, north and south—will lay a double track or switch from the main road in the very heart of the city to the grounds selected by the Board, making the time between the two points less than it has taken us to tell it.

The people of Zanesville, to whom much praise is returned by the officers of the Board, have not been, nor are they now idle, having, during the brief session in their city, collected and paid over more than half the stipulated amount ($3,000).

At Washington it is rumored that Brigham Young has made an offer to certain capitalists to sell out the Mormon estate in Utah, and leave the territory. It is anticipated that this will settle the existing difficulties.

Drovers' Convention.—A National Convention of drovers and shippers of stock is to be held at the St. Clair Hotel, Pittsburgh, on Wednesday, June 8th.—Matters of interest will be considered, and it is confidently expected that the convention will be largely attended.

Money matters continue easy in New York. Discounts are easily obtained, and range from 4½@5½ for prime short bills, and 5½@7 per cent. for dates over 90 days. Demand loans are 4@5 per cent. on Stock collateral, and 5@6 per cent. on pledge of Bills receivable.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakespeare to the humblest wight that ever wielded a quill, and need not be repeated now. Anyway, Mr. Edward Gunnington, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity, if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

C. A. Wagner, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be secured by constant attention. The Saloon is in "good condition," No. 30 East State Street.

Luncheon.—There is nothing that is more appetizing than luncheon at about 10 A. M. these long mornings. Schlesinger sets a fine lunch about that hour every day on State street opposite the American. He will have GREEN SEA TURTLE SOUP to-morrow, the "monster" just received from Baltimore.

COLUMBUS RETAIL MARKET.

THURSDAY, MAY 12.

(Corrected Weekly.)

Oats, 35@40c; corn, 80c; wheat, $1 20; barley, 65c; cornmeal, $1; onions, $1@1 25; turnips, 40c; potatoes, $1; walnuts, 60; hickory nuts, $1 25—per bushel.

Beef steak, 9@10c; roasts, 8@10c; veal, 8@9c; mutton, 7@8c; pork, 8@9c; sausage, 10c; sides and shoulders, 9@10c; hams, 12@14c; lard, 12½c; butter, 18@20c; honey, 25@30c; fresh white fish, 6@7c; candles, 16c; coffee 12½@14c; prunes, 12½c; dried apples, 12½c, dried peaches, 10c; rice 10; raisins, 25c; tobacco 35@35c—per pound.

Poultry.—Chickens, 18@20c; ducks, 20c; geese, 40c; turkeys, 50@80c—each.

Flour, $6 75@7; salt $1 75—per barrel.

Golden syrup, 85c; N. O. molasses, 50c—per gallon.

Eggs, 10c—per dozen.

Apple butter, 20@22c; green currants, 8c; gooseberries, 8c—per quart.

Hay, $18—per ton.

Lap shingles, $3 50—per thousand.

Markets.

Cincinnati, May 13.—Flour held firmly and higher but we hear of no sales; superfine is held at $7 30. Receipts 2,494 bbls in the last 24 hours. Whisky continues buoyant and unsettled; sales of 700 bbls at 27½c, and some small lots at 28c. Provisions generally held out of the market: mess pork at $18 and upwards. Weather clear and warm.

New York, May 13.—Flour firm; sales of 20,500 bbls. The market opened at an advance of 10@50c, but closed dull; holders offered freely at the following prices: State, $5 75@6 90; Ohio, $7 60@8; Southern $7 75@8. Wheat advanced 3@5c, closing heavy at $2@2 05 for white, $1 85@1 90 for western white, $1 90 for red and $1 65@1 70 for mixed western. Corn is firm; sales of 18,000 bu at 95c for mixed and 98½@1 00 for yellow. Beef firm; mess pork $18@18 25, prime $14 35@14 50. Lard firm at 11½@12c.—Whisky is held at 31c, and buyers offer 30c.

New York, May 13. — Stocks.—Stocks higher; Sterling exchange 10½ per cent; Mich. Southern 9½; N. Y. Central 70½; Penn. Coal 86½; Reading 46½; Milwaukie & Mississippi 9½; Va. sixes 94½; Mo. sixes 83½; U. S. Fives, 1874, 104½; Galena & Chicago 68; Mich. Central 41; Lacrosse Land Grants 17; Panama R. R. 117; Pacific Mail 84½; Tenn. Sixes 91.

Philadelphia, May 13.—The excitement in breadstuffs still continues, but the advanced rates demanded by holders restrict operations. The receipts are small, the inspections amounting to 7,946 bbls against 7,729 last week; superfine is generally held at $7 75 and extra at $8@8 75; 500 bbls Miami extra sold yesterday afloat at $7 50 and 600 bbls good western extra at $7 87½, and 300 bbls choice brand at $8. Rye flour scarce and firm at $4 75. Corn meal in demand at a further advance of 12½c; sales 5,000 bbls Pennsylvania at $4 12½ and 5,000 bbls Brandywine at $4 50. Wheat advanced 5c; sales 5,000 bush red at $1 80@1 85, and white at $1 95. Rye wanted at $1. Corn scarce and in demand; sales 5,000 bush yellow at 95c and 600 bush at $1. 800 bush Delaware oats sold at 58c in the cars. Barley is advancing. Whisky is going up; sales of Ohio at 31c and Pennsylvania at 29@30c.

Baltimore, May 13.—Flour quiet, Howard St. and Ohio $7 50. Wheat unchanged white $1 80@2. Corn dull and 1c lower, white 90@98c, yellow 93@94c. Provisions firm, bacon sides 9½@10c, mess pork $17 25. Whisky quiet at 30@31c, the latter price for Ohio.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

St. Johns, N. F., May 9.—The steamer Adelaide, from Galway, with dates to the 30th ult., arrived this afternoon. The news is important. There has been no declaration of war, but hostilities were about to commence. The Austrian troops, one hundred and thirty thousand strong, have passed the Ticino.

The advices from Manchester continue unfavorable. All kinds of goods have declined, and business is almost entirely suspended.

London, April 29.—Consols are quoted at 89@89½; the rates of discount to 3½ per cent.

The crossing of the Ticino river by the Austrian troops had not yet been officially confirmed.

No actual conflict had yet taken place.

The French army was pouring into the Piedmontese territory.

The Grand Duchies of Tuscany has joined France and Piedmont against the Austrians.

The report of the French and Russian advance has been denied, but as an offset, the London Times publishes the provisions of the treaties which are said to have been entered into by these two governments, the beneficial effect of which was produced by the denial on funds was injured by this publication and a great panic on the London change was the result.

Consols at one time were quoted as low as 88c. In consequence of these fluctuations and hazardous speculations, about forty failures are announced.

Liverpool Breadstuffs Market, April 29.—Messrs. Richardson, Spence & Co., quote flour buoyant at an advance of 1s, since Tuesday, being an advance of 1s 6d per cental, for the week; western sales at 11@14s.

Wheat is buoyant with an advance. Western red is quoted at 9s 10d@10s 9d. Western white 10s@12s. Corn is buoyant with an advance of 6d; mixed is quoted at 6s 3d@6s 9d. yellow 6s 9d@7s; white 7s 7d@8s.

Provisions.—Pork and beef buoyant, with a large speculative inquiry, and all qualities advanced. Bacon holders demand an advance of 1s@1s 6d. Lard firm at 58s@60s for prime, and 60s@62s for extra. In tallow there is also a large speculative inquiry, and it has advanced to 60s.

The War Chance.—It had been telegraphed from various sources that during the night of the 26th of April, one hundred thousand Austrians, under Guilai, crossed the Ticino in three corps, and took the road towards Navara. Also that they afterwards blew up the bridge of Baffiora over which they had crossed.

This news, as yet, lacked confirmation from official quarters, and some doubts had been thrown on it. It was reported that Austria has accepted the proffered mediation of England, and postponed the declaration of war. France had not yet accepted the mediation, but is said to be considering it.

The Constitutionnel, of Paris, and Daily News, of London, deny the existence of the reported alliance between France and Russia. The News further states that the document which has been signed and which led to the report, is a mere convention.

St. Johns, N. F., May 10.—The London Times professes to give the provisions of the French and Russian treaty, and draws the most threatening consequences, regarding the alliance as a menace to England inasmuch as Russia guarantees the services of her fleet in the Mediterranean and Baltic, in addition to an army of observation on Austrian frontiers.

The King of Sardinia has issued an impressing proclamation to the army, saying that he regarded the ultimatum of Austria as an insult and rejoined to it with disdain.

The French troops were landing at Genoa in large numbers and were enthusiastically received.

Victor Emanuel has gone to join the army at Alexandria.

The Tuscan army called on the Grand Duke to join France and Piedmont, and declare war against Austria. He declined and fled, whereupon the army declared a military dictatorship.

Warlike preparations were going on in England. Great activity prevailed at Woolwich. The Government has chartered the Cunard steamer Etna and other vessels to convey troops and ammunition to the Mediterranean.

Rumors prevail of a proclamation about to be issued calling out 20,000 men for the navy.

War premiums are being generally demanded at Lloyds.

There are active military movements throughout France. Eighty thousand French troops were expected to be in Italy by the day the steamer sailed.

Denmark is said to have concluded a treaty, offensive and defensive, with France.

The Paris Bourse was excited, but not so much so as at London. Rente declined 1f. on the 28th, but recovered ½f. on the 29th, [illegible] per cents. closing at 63f to 70c.

A great panic prevailed in London and consols fluctuated immensely.

London, April 30.—The report that the Austrian troops had crossed the Ticino on the 29th is incorrect. They had received orders so to do, but the order was countermanded, and they remained on the east bank of the river. It is asserted that the advanced parts had crossed and that the main army would do so on the 29th.

The Austrian official journals contain an imperial manifesto explaining the necessity of a war with Sardinia, and authoritatively deny the existence of a secret treaty between Russia and France.

The ship Pomona, from Liverpool, for New York, was wrecked off Wexford on the 27th.—The crew and three of her passengers, names unknown, were saved. She had over 400 souls on board. The loss of life had not been ascertained.

The Parliamentary elections had commenced and were progressing quietly.

An Austrian manifesto has been issued tantamount to a declaration of war.

OFFICIAL—HOSTILITIES COMMENCED.

Paris, Saturday.—The Austrian troops have crossed the Ticino, and commenced hostilities. This intelligence is officially received.

New York, May 12.—Foreign papers by the Persia furnish some facts of interest, though the main features have been anticipated by the arrival of the Adelaide at St. Johns, N. F.

The Austrian correspondence of the official journal of the 29th ult., after detailing the progress of affairs, says: That Austria must draw the sword to maintain European order.

The London Post of the 29th says: That there was still a hope for peace as the last English offer of mediation was under serious consideration by the Emperor of France, and if the Austrians refrained from advancing, a pacific settlement might still be made.

The Russo-Franco Treaties.—The following are the provisions of the treaties between Russia and France, as given in the London Times: By the first treaty Russia binds herself in the event of France being at war with Austria, to assist France with the co-operation of her fleets in the Baltic and Mediterranean and to place an army of 50,000 men on the Austrian frontier. This, the Times says, is directed obviously against England, and its existence is a proof that the enterprises which are thus to be protected are such as it would be impossible for England to allow to pass unchallenged. The Russian army of observation, the Times concludes, is to excite an insurrection among the Hungarians and Sclaves.

The second treaty provides that in case Austria shall invade Sardinia Russia, shall declare war against her within fifteen days of her violation of Piedmontese soil. The Times maintains that England need take no active part so long as the war is confined to Italy; but if France and Russia should attack Austria in Germany, Russia seeking perchance indemnity in East Europe; or if Prussia should be laid under a contribution of territory, the design of the treaties would become no more than the partition of Europe, and the first principles of preservation would compel us to consider whether we can better defend ourselves on the continent or our own homestead. However much we may desire to keep clear of these complications, the existence of a great German power is essential to our own safety.

Proclamation of the King of Sardinia.—The following is a summary of the King of Sardinia's proclamation to the army. The King regards the demand to disarm as an outrage on himself and the nation, and has therefore returned it with disdain and scorn. The King called to mind Italy's cry of anguish, and says, "I will be your Captain. I have proved your valor on the field of battle, by the side of my illustrious father. This time you will have for your comrades gallant French soldiers, your companions on the Tchernaya, whom the Emperor has sent to support and defend our just and civilizing cause. Forward to victory! Let our banners announce that our object like our war-cry is the independence of Italy."

Prince Carignan had been appointed Lieut. General in Piedmont.

During the war the Universities of Piedmont have been closed by a regal decree.

The Sardinians had entered from Palisca to the west bank of the Sesia.

The great mass of the Sardinian army, 70,000 strong, was concentrated around the fortresses of Alexandria and Casale, with a second line at the foot of the Appenines, between Novo and Tortona.

The Turin correspondent of the London Times does not think the Austrians will reach the Capital. The country has been laid under water by means of the canals, for the purposes of irrigation and means had been taken to render the roads temporarily impracticable.

The Sardinian government had appropriated all the horses belonging to private individuals the highest price allowed being £16.

The news of Tuscany joining Piedmont is confirmed. The Grand Duke refused to abdicate and retired to Bologna, after throwing himself upon the protection of the five great powers. The Tuscan army is 12,000 strong.

It was said that King Victor Emanuel had been created Dictator of Tuscany.

England.—The Channel fleet which had gone to the Mediterranean was to be immediately recalled. Four new ships of the line have been placed in commission. It is stated that the French and Russian governments have lately been procuring large supplies of charts and surveys of the English coast and stations in the Mediterranean, and have likewise been engaged in making large purchases of coal, irrespective of price or quality. It is also intimated that an extensive order for charts had been received from the Spanish government, and the inference was that Spain would throw herself into the arms of France. Twenty-seven gun boats of larger size were building on the Thames for the Spanish government. It was suggested that Spain might possibly be acting merely as the agent of others.

Large quantities of ammunition and guns were being shipped to Gibraltar and Malta.

Gen. Williams, of Kars celebrity, is appointed Commander-in-Chief in Canada.

A large operator in the Liverpool Exchange, named Roberts, has been declared a defaulter; his liabilities are stated at £300,000 to £500,000.

The returns of the Bank of England for the week show a decline of £411,000 in specie.

The Persia spoke on the morning of the 1st inst., in the English Channel, the steamer Canada, bound in. On the 2d inst. she spoke the steamers City of Baltimore and Indian.

France.—A ministry of police is to be established after the fashion of the First Empire. The French army of observation on the Rhine will consist of eight divisions of cavalry and as many of infantry.

Eight steam frigates filled with troops left Toulon on the 26th for Genoa.

The French army on the slope of the Alps will consist of sixteen divisions of infantry and four of cavalry. The infantry go by land.—Fourteen of the twenty two battalions of Chasseurs are to form a part of the army of observation on the Alps.

Genoa is to be occupied as the basis of operations, whence they can threaten the Austrians' left flank. There is to be another basis at Jura, which will also be fortified, and made the general depot for the troops that arrive through the Alpine pass.

The French troops experienced some difficulty in crossing Mount Cenis. Four thousand workmen were employed in clearing away the immense masses of snow. It was expected that by the end of the week eighty thousand French troops would be in Italy.

Latest.—The Persia sailed at 10 in the morning, consequently her advices are not so late by several hours as those of the Adelaide.

The panic at the London 'Change was intense. Over fifty stock brokers failed.

The new India loan declined five to six per cent. Discount demand at the bank for money is dull at increased rates. In the discount market 5 and 5½ are the lowest rates for six months' bills. Rates for continental exchange lower. Austrian almost nominal.

The London Herald asserts on the best authority, no secret treaty has been signed between France and Russia. The Russians merely offered to place fifty thousand men as the army of observation on the frontiers of Gallicia. The Times, however, says with respect to this treaty: "We have nothing essential to retract. It is not in the nature of a secret treaty to be known, in detail, within a week after signature, but the main facts are, we fear, beyond doubt."

The Herald says, speaking of English mediation, that further attempts appear useless. The French, it believes, are anxious to re open negotiations by means of Conference between England, Prussia and Russia, to be held during a space of armistice between the actual belligerents.

War enthusiasm is increasing in France. Paris is in a state of high excitement. The French were unprepared for a sudden movement by the Austrians. They were expecting to begin the war at their leisure, sometime about the end of May. The difficulties and delays on Mount Cenis will be considerable. Although French troops are carried rapidly to Genoa, they arrive there without the means of entering on a campaign immediately.

The French government had received intelligence of an outbreak in Algeria, which would probably require a return of the troops lately sent to Italy.

The Times says nearly all the Naval Engineers have their hands full of foreign orders. Up to last night one hundred and forty-two members were elected to the new Parliament, one hundred and twelve without opposition.

New York, May 14.—The steamship Europa has arrived. Her dates are to the 27th ult. and have been anticipated. The steamship Persia has been signalled below her advices are to the 30th ult., the same as furnished by the steamer Adelaide at St. Johns.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

Boston, May 9.—An election was held to-day to decide on the proposition made by the last legislature, providing for an amendment of the constitution to debar the foreign born citizens from the right of voting for two years after the completion of his naturalization. The returns received from eighty towns show the following result:—Yeas 13,837, nays 9,183. In this city the vote stood, yeas 1,516, nays 2,865. The indications from the vote as far as received, are that the amendment has been carried by a large majority.

Washington, May 9.—There is such information received as to warrant the belief that the time of the settlement of our affairs with Costa Rica is not far distant.

The State and War Departments to-day made up their instructions for Utah. Gen. Johnson will hereafter await the orders of the Governor, before calling out the troops to act as a posse comitatus, to assist the civil authorities in the enforcement of the laws.

The Postmaster-General has made a decision on the bids for the California mail service, but he declines to furnish the information for the daily press.

Washington, May 10.—The contract for carrying the mail between New York and San Francisco, New Orleans and San Francisco via Nicaragua, commencing at Key West has been awarded to Daniel H. Johnson, of New York at $102,000 for semi-monthly service, for nine months from the first of October next. The schedule time between New York and San Francisco is not to exceed twenty three days, and between New Orleans and San Francisco twenty days. The Ocean service is to be performed in good and sufficient steamships, and the Isthmus service in good and sufficient steamboats and carriages.

John Heart, formerly editor of the Charleston Mercury, has been appointed superintendent of the Public Printing.

New York, May 9.—The Bank Statement for the week, shows an increase of loans of $313,000; a decrease of specie of $245,000; an increase of circulation of $504,000; a decrease of deposits of [illegible].

St. Louis, May 11.—Jones and Russell have purchased the controlling interest in the Utah mail contract. It is understood they will transport the mail over a portion of the new overland route and materially lessen time.

Cleveland, May 11.—Bushnell was sentenced to-day to sixty days imprisonment in county jail and $600 fine and costs.

The Kentucky officers have been arrested for kidnapping.

Chicago, May 11.—A fire at Kenosha, Wisconsin, last night, destroyed seventy-five buildings. Nearly all the business places on Main street were burned—not a grocery or dry goods store left. The loss is estimated at $200,000 to $300,000. No further particulars yet.

Washington, May 12.—Private dispatches from Mexico received at New Orleans by the Tennessee and telegraphed to this city, represent the prospects of the Liberals for taking the City of Mexico as encouraging.

The efforts of Miramon to raise money in Europe on the church property are considered futile in view of the hostile condition of affairs on that continent.

The capture of the City of Mexico by the Constitutionalists is considered merely as a question of time.

Miramon had decreed that all the [illegible] shall be closed to foreign commerce.

Guadalajara has been taken by the Liberals. The clergy were trying to raise forty millions of dollars for Miramon, but so far were unsuccessful.

Augusta, Ga., May 13.—Dr. Tomlinson, of Milledgeville, died yesterday. He was formerly a member of Congress, and latterly a distinguished medical practitioner. He was well known and greatly respected throughout the State.

Wm. Locky, a citizen of Greene county, Ga., was yesterday murdered by one of his negroes.

Provincetown, May 13.—[illegible] and falling. Weather clear. Mercury [illegible]

Cincinnati, May 13.—A special dispatch to the Gazette, from Marietta states that a fire broke out in Brennan's warehouse yesterday afternoon, destroying twenty buildings in the business portion of the city.

The principal sufferers are Bye and Huntington, loss $5,000, insured for $2,000; Bosworth, Wells & Co., $12,000, insured for $8,000; S. R. Fermer, $5,000, insured $1,500.

The Ætna Insurance Co. of Hartford has about 15,000, the Insurance Hartford Co., $7,000, the City Co. of Hartford $1,800.

A large portion of the goods was saved in a damaged condition. Several persons were injured by the falling buildings.

Baltimore, May 13.—The new Engine House of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore R. R. Company, on Canton Avenue, was totally destroyed by fire early this morning, together with five locomotives. The fire originated from sparks from a freight engine, the fire in which had not been thoroughly extinguished. It broke out about 1 o'clock.

The loss on the building is $8,000, and from $2,000 to $5,000 damage to each locomotive.

The damage on the stationary machines is $4,000.

The engine and house were fully insured. The total loss is about $20,000.

Chicago, May 12.—Drafts on New York amounting to $18,000, made to the order of Emory Cobb, were stolen from the desk of Mr. Cobb this afternoon. The drafts were not endorsed.

Cheap Dry Goods.

(High and Broad Streets.)

NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!

SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS

Embracing a Variety,

Not exceeded in this market.

[illegible]

J. C. CHITTENDEN.

CHOICE SEEDS.

APPLE PIE MELON.—Seeds of this [illegible]

[illegible]

BROTHERLIN, HALM & CO.

[illegible]

inquiry, at a considerable advance for all descriptions, but that it is impossible to give the figures.

Provisions.—The market closed with an advancing tendency. Quotations are nominal, but the speculative feeling continues.

Produce.—Carolina rice closed buoyant and holders demand an advance. Sugar quiet. Saltpetre advanced [illegible] of sale.

London, May 2.—A great many failures are reported on the stock exchange.

From all quarters failures are reported.—Wolf & Co., of Berlin, have suspended, and a considerable failure at Vienna is reported. The impoverishment and ruin on the Paris Bourse this week will be beyond all example. No failures occurred on Monday. Consols closed at 89@89½.

New York, May 14.—[illegible] May 1st.—The increasing uncertainty in political affairs has caused Prussia to put her remaining corps d'armee in readiness to march.

Marseilles, May [illegible].—Advices from Rome to the 30th state that a proclamation had been issued by General Goyon recommending the inhabitants to remain tranquil, [illegible] any manifestations [illegible] reminding the populace that the assembling of crowds in the streets is already forbidden.

Eight thousand Austrians had arrived at Ancona.

Turin, May 1st.—The King left this morning to take command of the army. The Austrians in large numbers have quitted Placenza [illegible] proclaimed is in a state of siege. They appear to have concentrated their forces on the left bank of the Po.

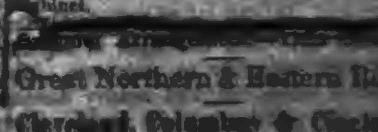
Turin, May 2d.—The King of Sardinia has accepted the military dictatorship of Tuscany to facilitate the co-operation of the Tuscans in the war of Independence and to preserve public order. The Sardinians in [illegible] have placed themselves under the protection of the Russian Consulate.

Trieste, April 30.—The Austrian Lloyds have discontinued their ships to foreign ports.

Berne, May 2.—The President opened the Federal Assembly with a patriotic speech. The Council passed the following decree for the consideration of neutrality which accompanying the recent calling out of the contingents by the government: To authorize further defensive measures; to open a credit and to be occupied in the contracting of loans, and to appoint a commander-in-chief of the federal army.

Paris, April 30.—It is rumored that an insurrection has broken out in Italy.

Paris, May 1.—The Moniteur publishes a circular note dated 29th of April addressed by Count Walewski to the diplomatic agents of foreign powers. It describes the present position of political affairs and expresses great satisfaction at the [illegible] of Prussia and Russia. It states that while the other powers [illegible] confederation may not allow themselves to be misled by reminiscences of [illegible] and from the present and hopes that the sincere men of Germany will perceive that it depends on them to put limits upon the extension and duration of a war which France conscientiously feels she has not provoked.



Parma, May 2.—The Grand Duchess of Parma has left, after instituting a Council of Regency, and the new government has proclaimed its adhesion to Piedmont.

Stuttgart, May 2.—The Wurtemburg chambers have unanimously voted the government projects for calling out the Landwehr for a forced levy of horses, and the opening of a war credit of seven millions of florins. In the [illegible] sympathy was expressed with Austria. Private letters from Paris [illegible] express an anticipation that the new French loan will be offered in 4½ per cent. stock at [illegible] being about 4 per cent lower than the lowest price fixed in the loans of the Russian war. The Paris correspondent of the London Times says that it is rumored that M. Delangle leaves the Cabinet.

[illegible]

Great Northern & Eastern Route.

Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD,

Connecting at Crestline with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago

Railroad

For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.

Connecting at Cleveland with the

Lake Shore Railroad

For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday)

FROM COLUMBUS, [illegible]

[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1859.

Thoughts of Home.

BY [illegible]

When the sun is fast declining
O'er the valleys in the west,
And the peaceful shades of evening
Calm the troubled soul to rest—
When the hill-tops and the mountains
Wear their crown of brilliant hue,
And the moon, in magic splendor,
Doth her silent course pursue;

When the welcome, gentle zephyr,
Cools the heated, feverish brow—
When, with music, soft and plaintive,
Doth the rippling rivulet flow;
When the mind is calm and pensive,
And the breast no anger [illegible]
When [illegible]
The heart [illegible]

When with fond, and fresh emotions
The enraptured soul will roam,
And the mind with true devotion
Turns to home—my boyhood's home—
Then I feel the fond caresses
Of a mother; all her breast
Still my aching heart reposes,
And is lulled to peaceful rest.

None doth know how pure and holy
Is that cherished love for home;
Till, like me, a stranger lonely,
'Tis his fate afar to roam.
None doth know how sad and dreary
'Tis to live, yet hope in vain,
To breathe the fragrance sweet and cheering
Of our native hills again.

[There is a moral lesson in the following touching sketch that addresses itself to the heart. How many overlook the true duties of life in the one absorbing thought of saving, when they are wasting the bright hours, squandering the life-sands that should be carefully garnered, clouding the sunshine of hearts that pale in the perpetual gloom, and prematurely wither and crumble to earth! How much happiness is wasted through indifference that finally grows into neglect! Too late! repentance comes. Too late! the beam of consciousness struggles into the cavern. Too late! when "happiness, and love and life, all gone!"—Ed. P. P.]

Saving Little—Wasting Much.

[From Household Words.]

Annie thought long and hard that day. In what could she retrench? Of course, Percy was right; husbands were always right in the eyes of girlish wives not married a year. He was right and must be obeyed, of course; but how? She would leave off sugar and profess a sudden distaste for pastry; give up all beer and wine—of which she had but little as it was—and put herself on lenten fare generally.

desiring [illegible] servation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservation of the Union—Non-interference by Congress with Slavery in State and Territory, or in the District of Columbia.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, com[illegible] ... was disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in the maintainance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Government of the States within whose dominion it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathise with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

Mr. Douglas' Speech on Popular Sovereignty.—We devote considerable space in our present issue to the publication of the Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, on Popular Sovereignty, delivered in the United States Senate in February last, a short time before the close of the session. This speech was delivered "in opposition to the passage of a code of laws by she did not yield the right of superior care and sympathy to any one. Mrs. Clarke's infirmities and sundry diseases were her social stock in trade. They were her claims to regard and attention, as some people's riches, or a pretty woman's beauties. She was forever urging upon Annie the wholesomeness of early exertion and the infinite evil of giving way. So that Annie "put herself forward too soon," said the old nurse despairingly, and was stirring about the house at a time when other ladies would have been cosily wrapped in white-frilled dressing gowns and lying on bed-room sofas.

Percy noticed nothing. When, a fortnight after the new life had come among them, Annie appeared at the dining-table just the same as ever—only paler and more languid, but infinitely lovelier—his sole remark was—shaking hands with her and kissing her forehead—"It scarcely seems a fortnight, Annie, since you were here; but my mother says it is so." Yet his manner had an indescribable shade of softness quite unusual to him; and Annie forgave the coldness of his spoken welcome.

But Percy was not soft, either in speech or in manner; and, after to-day he gradually relapsed into his old silence and indifference. Annie resumed her household duties, and, in another week all things were exactly the same as before.—The old nurse, even, leaving, called away earlier than was expected, owing to an error in dates elsewhere. And then Annie had her treasure in her sole charge, with no one to whom she could trust him with confidence; therefore, without assistance or relief. She had no nursemaid, and her two servants were not clever about babies. She was surprised to find how that little one creature absorbed her time, and how scant was the leisure left for the busy house duties she had undertaken before its birth. Yet the inexorable law had to be fulfilled, however unable she was to fulfil it.

When those terrible house-books had been put back into her hands again, and the mean sum once more doled out, she had received a strict injunction to be doubly careful with this heavy expense before her, and to remember that she saved for her child while she saved for her husband. This completed the circle of Annie's obligations. Passionate love was now added to her former principle of steady duty, and she had not a wish to evade the observance of her task.

Still, she could not spare so much time as formerly, and she was not yet strong enough for active household work. The consequence was that week by week she fell gradually behind, until she was in debt several pounds, all to be saved out of an allowance that did not compass the inevitable expense! It was hopeless to think of it. What could she do? If she curtailed her husband of any of his comforts, she feared he would say that she no longer regarded him, and thought only of her baby. Besides, ought she to fail making her duty to her husband the first thing in her life? Exacting Mrs. Clarke it was impossible to cut down. By virtue of that fallacy—the privilege of age—she must be pampered, and petted, and preserved, whoever failed or wanted, and a worn-out useless life be nursed up to croon away a few idle years by the chimney corner, though the young and the needed should perish in its stead. Mrs. Clarke was impassible. What could she give up further in herself? She had not, as it was, one of the ordinary physical helps to a young mother, and if she reduced her regimen to within straiter limits than at present, she must be content with plain bread and water. What should she do? While in her own room, kneeling by her baby's pretty cot, and longing for him to wake, she suddenly remembered that she had a handsome old fashioned pearl necklace, of her dear mother's. She never wore it; it was of no use to her. She would sell it; and thus be saved from further anxiety and unhappiness. It might be a pain, but it was only a pain of sentiment at the worst; while to vex her husband, and perhaps lose his confidence would be a crime. That very day she paid up her back bills and started fair again, with a balance in hand.

But this must not happen again. She must work, as she did before, for she was strong now, and must bear her part with the rest. And she did work as before, improvising all sorts of portable cradles for her darling, so that he should be watched over the while she was busy, as zealously as if she had nothing else to do than care for him and guard him. She worked till her limbs ached, and her head was dull and her heart depressed. She worked till she was faint and giddy, and overwrought. But no one saw it. She looked always neat and glossy at dinner; and Percy did not scrutinize her narrowly enough to see how pale she was, nor how thin; nor how her lips quivered when she spoke, and her eyebrows lifted themselves up, as if to lift a heavy weight from her eyes. He saw her just as she used to be, with her placid smile, and her low sweet voice; with her dainty costume, always marvelously clean and choice, though simple. He saw nothing beyond all this; and, as the house went on exactly as it did before, he was never weary of congratulating himself in secret that he had taken his mother's advice, and had put Annie on the nettle, to rightly understand and practice economical housekeeping.

Mr. Clarke had a slight attack of indigestion; and what a miserable house that slight attack created! Percy was impatient and fault-finding; the old lady capricious and dissatisfied; and poor Annie's powers were taxed till she was often faint and weeping from weariness and fatigue. But she had her old immunity from observation; though now and then the servants would steal up with tea and coffee, or sometimes with a cup of arrowroot, saved from the old lady's surplus, no more needful to Mrs. Clarke, the younger and weaker. The neck of Mrs. Clarke's illness from overfeeding was broken in a fortnight, though things had not quite come back to their old groove even then.

This illness was expensive. Percy did not insist on the house paying for the doctor; but the thousand little luxuries and the inevitable waste of a sick-room made sad havoc of Annie's calculations. Once or twice, when Annie was very hard pressed, she impoverished her husband's diet. He always spoke of it, gravely and displeased; and once he said that he did not approve of her negligence; which was becoming marked, very marked, and excessively unpleasant. If she neglected him, her husband, how would he feel sure that she received due attention when he was away? He was afraid that Annie's motherhood, instead of opening her heart had narrowed it. Annie broke her heart, in her silent, quiet little way, over these reproaches, and she inwardly resolved not to offend again, whatever other means she must use.

But those horrible bills! She could not keep them under; not though she cried for vexation and wounded pride to think what a bad manager she was, and how unfit to have the guidance of Percy's household expenditure. Then her baby wanted some new frocks; and Annie, true to the instincts of a young mother, had set her heart on having them robed and worked; and had been quietly trying to save up for them little by little, ever since she sold the pearl brooch, the companion to the necklace. But to no purpose. So Annie sold another little trinket, and another, and another; paid her bills, and bought her baby six pretty white worked frocks, and a white cashmere pelisse; and went to bed that night proud and blessed as a queen; free from debt.

But Mrs. Clarke complained to her son that yesterday her cutlet was tough, and she was sure Ann bought inferior meat for her, that she might save for such senseless extravagance as she had just been committing; for did he not see how she had bedizened up that miserable little baby, who would look much better too, in nice clean prints, instead of with all those useless fallacies about him? In her day, indeed, such folly was never thought of, and for her part, she thought what had been good enough for her children might be good enough for Ann's. And she wished Percy would mention it.

Percy was hard, but not small. Providing things went the way of his ordering, he did not care to criticise the stages. He soothed his mother. Spoke to Annie about the offending veal. But said nothing ill-natured of the frocks. He had not the heart to do it, with the boy laughing and crowing in his mother's arms, and kicking out his little feet in all the freedom of a first day of short coats.

By degrees every little article of private property that Annie possessed was swallowed up by extra housekeeping expenses. When she had nothing left that she could appropriate, she had nothing for it but to dismiss her two servants. She hired a strong, good-natured maid of all work, clumsy, strong and ignorant; one of the tribe who are prone to fall up stairs with tea-trays; and who, if they were not watched, would fry the butter. Thus all the directing fall to the young mistress, and half the work, for the girl was too uncouth to do anything well or anything of herself. Day by day she slowly faded and drooped; day by day, patiently and steadily continuing her work; her cheeks paler, her eyes dimmer and larger; the lustre of her warm brown hair dulled, and its color faded; the slender waist shrinking, as the round young throat grew thin and spare. But there was no one with eyes so keen, or love so quick to mark the change; no one to cheer her by a kindly word; no one to help her with sympathy and aid; no one to step forward and save her. Unpitied and unnoticed, she dedicated her precious existence to those who did not love her, nor care to watch or guard her. Too heavy a burden had been laid upon her, and her faithful hands bore it bravely to the last; and with all a woman's trust and fortitude, she neither thought it hard or cried out to be relieved. If she had but spoken! If Percy had but cared to win her confidence!

At last, one day, she fainted. She had been for some hours ironing, when, very quietly, she gave a deep sigh, and fell fainting to the ground. The red-haired maid ran screaming, and Percy hurried down stairs. He found her to all appearances dead on the kitchen floor, and, taking her in his arms, bore her tenderly and gently to her room. For he loved her as much as he could have loved any wife, and terror frightened him into nature and demonstration. A doctor was sent for; Mrs. Clarke snappishly repudiating all idea of danger, or the necessity of making a fuss because of such a common thing as a fainting fit; but, when the doctor came, he looked grave, ordering his patient to be kept in bed, and to be most zealously tended; ordering her, in fact, the attendance of a person dangerously ill, and for whom the only chance lay in loving watchfulness and care. But he found her so extraordinarily reduced and with such distinct evidence of organic mischief, that he himself had but little hope of the result. He inquired minutely into her life; and the whole mystery was revealed. She was dying, literally from fatigue and exhaustion; he told her husband frankly, but severely.

Percy never left her bedside. Night and day he nursed her, as she would have nursed her sick child. Not all his tears could give back the life which his blindness and hardness had helped to destroy. Neither could it now call out the love in that young heart, which had lain like a sleeping child that would have smiled back love for love to the one who had awakened it. All too late! too late!—Happiness, love, and life, all gone, and the hand that might have stayed them now stretched out imploringly in vain.

When Percy left that death-room, he looked a shrunken, gray, withered old man; as if years, not hours, had passed over him since his young wife died.—From that day no one ever saw him smile, and no one ever saw him lift his eyes frankly to theirs. He kept them fixed on the ground, or turned away like a man who had committed a crime; and so dragged on a life which had no need to ask of another the mystery and iniquity of torture. Even his mother cried a little when the baby died a month after its mother.

Death at a Ball.

The poor fellow who was burnt in the Passage de l'Opera, at one of the Paris masked balls, a mention of which was made some time since, was a commission merchant's clerk in the Rue Lafayette; and his master reckoned him the best book-keeper in the city of Paris; he was an honest soul, and a married man. He told his wife he would be kept at the office all that Saturday night, for a heavy order was to be shipped early the next morning.—He went to the French comedy as a claqueur, and, at midnight, the comedy being over, off he went gaily as a truant, to the costumer's, in the Passage de l'Opera, close to the theatre, and attired himself in rich costume; nothing less would suit him than the attire of a marquis of Louis XIV's court, stiff with gold, lined with satin, and all velvet, silk velvet, an' please, sir!

Then he filled his pipe, and began to puff away for very pleasure, at finding him, the mill back at home, the machine that added up the great red columns of figures, and entered and posted and balanced the great green-backed in-folios of "the firm," tricked out in such fine clothes—when, all of a sudden, his happiness was interrupted by flames; his pipe had set his flaxen wig on fire! he tried to get it off; it was in vain. His efforts but spread the flames from wig to coat. He fainted away in fright. A crowd—marquises, shepherdesses, queens, and folks in plain clothes, assembled around him; a woman forced her way through them, screaming; "My husband, my dear husband!" and exerted herself most connubially to extinguish the flames, and as soon as she saw her husband reviving, she ran off as fast as she could go to the nearest apothecary shop for unguent, and cold cream, and lint.

When the man had completely revived, the police cheered him by telling him his wife would be back presently. The intelligence, however, so far from cheering the man, came near causing him to go off into another swoon—but he managed to mutter: "My wife?" "Why, yes, your wife—the tall brunette, who was with you." "Mon Dieu!" my wife is a blonde, and no higher than that." "Really? then look in your pockets, and see if you miss anything." "O! Mon Dieu! Mon Dieu! Where is my purse?—where is my watch?" The poor fellow fainted away again. The police swore, and sent off men in every direction for the "wife," and carried the unhappy book-keeper to the neighboring hospital. He lingered in intense agony until the next morning, when he died. The first news his wife had of her husband's truancy, was news of his death. "But," says a feuilletonist in a French paper—"don't think that this sudden and horrible death interrupted or even clouded for a single second the wild revelries of the opera ball! No, no! It was the joke of the night! Le roti, le brulé, (the roasts, the burnt,) were two little words that excited inextinguishable roars of laughter all the evening long—that is, until another incident occurred to divert the current of merriment to a new object."

Carlyle's Style.—Come now, O my Thomas! thou doubtful doubter of doubts, thou flounderer on the flat, miry and bilgy shore of tideless Toryism. I have somewhat to show thee. Look! what seekest with those staring eyes of thine; those eyes so big and bullet-like, globed in such spheretic speculation! It shall be told thee what thou seest; a car, four-wheeled and many-sided and springless. No two of the wheels are of the same size—in order prescript and irrevocable. It goeth forth backwardly, hind-quarterly, and stern-foremostly, and joined in many directions at once, and therefore hath no locomotion. Time and half a time it is half topsy-turvy, and otherwise the ensconced traveler therein ensconced, knoweth not whether he is sitting on his head, kneeling on his heels, or standing on his elbows. Loud-rumbleth and rough-tumbleth this mystic and portentous car; and yet it stayeth where it listeth, and where that is no man knoweth, not even its inventor. And what sort of a car is that? Ho! ho! Peter and Paul! Why, man, dost thou ignore this car? Dost thou not recognise this car? Why, man, it is thyself—it is Car-lyle! But is it "himself," or is it his lingual "Goblin d—d!"

A Husband Pretends to be Dead and sends Home His Corpse.

Some time since a person named Bruns living in the city of Cape Girardeau, Mo., left his wife and family, on a tour of music teaching. He had previously requested that his wife would go with him to Cincinnati, and she told him she would if her babes, twins, got better; if they did not, she thought it her duty to stay at home and take care of them. Mr. Bruns is a dancing master and fiddler, and is considered second to none in this Southwestern country, and being saving and temperate had accumulated a fine little property. His widow, if such she may be called, lives in a fine brick house which he built on the borders of the city and on the gravel road leading to Jackson. It is an elegant residence. Finally upon his getting ready to start she proceeded to pack her trunks, but, at last, setting upon the floor and arranging her things she felt impressed that she ought not to go, and she went and told her husband that she had better stay at home. He seemed hurt by her answer, and said she would be sorry for it; still he told her that when he came back he would give her the money the journey would cost and she might buy herself some fine clothes. He then went out into the back yard and told the black woman that Sis Virginia wouldn't go with him and she'd be sorry for it. "But do you take good care of your mistress."

After this he went off, and in a few weeks a letter came to Mrs. Bruns informing her that her husband had died of cholera in Louisville, and that his remains would soon arrive at the Cape, being sent home by the Odd Fellows. In a few days the coffin, a metallic one, came attended by a gentlemanly person, and notwithstanding all her entreaties the burial took place without her having permission to see her beloved husband, since the conductor said the body was so decomposed she would not recognize it, and besides it was dangerous to expose it. Bruns owed $700 in Jackson; this money he sent by the man who bore his body—but a charge of $100 was made for the metalic coffin and for expenses, which Mrs. Bruns paid. So he was buried and this ought to have been the last of it.

About a year afterwards a dancing master arrived in Jackson ten miles from the Cape, and opened his school, and on one occasion remarked of a scholar that she had been taught by Bruns, for no one else could have taught her such an elegant step. "Bruns," said a bystander, "so you knew him then?" "Knew him!" said the dancing master, "I know him now, I saw him not six weeks ago in Nashville." This of course led to inquiry, and at last to test the matter, a lady collected a number of photographs and laid them where the dancing master would naturally examine them, but without saying a word. As was expected, he began to open the cases and coming at last to Bruns's, exclaimed, "why here's my old friend Bruns, only he don't wear a moustache now—a very good likeness indeed." Upon this Mrs. Bruns had the grave opened, when the following developements took place:—There were two wooden coffins but no metallic coffin, for which she had paid, the body of the man was shorter than Bruns, it had red hair, Bruns had black, and the shirt and stockings she had never seen before. What is one to make of all this? Is Bruns alive, and has he been defrauding his wife, or permitting others to do it? Or has he been murdered? His wife is entirely convinced that he is alive, and she did agree to accompany the dancing master and his wife in search of her husband, but fearing some trick finally refused—and waits for him to come home of his own accord.

There are a great many men in this world working hard to get themselves nice homes, many working harder to get nice wives, but it is something new that when one has these, and while everything is harmonious, he should go off and leave them, and to insure his possessions to the living send back his dead body so that they may enjoy the fruits of his labors in peace. My opinion is that Mr. Bruns had better come back and look a little to those twins and cheer up his twice-mourning wife.

Neighbors and Friends should Meet Often.—The reason why is very well given in Emerson's lecture on 'Clubs and their Uses,' where he analyses, with his usual alchemy of thought, the philosophy of these aids to sociality. The Transcript thus reports a part of his lecture: "The lecturer remarked that as the flame of life burns too fast in pure oxygen, so thought, the pure, native air of the mind, would soon burn up the heart of man, unless tempered with the nitrogen of other men's society or conversation. That in society, the best, safest and most exhilarating pleasures are to be found; that it was the first blessing vouchsafed to mankind, and that all deep thinking men require ingenious conversation; or if not conversation, intercourse, with others of some kind they must have. He enlarged upon the fact that many men prefer only to converse where they are masters, not with their equals, but with boys and girls, where they can inform others with ease to themselves. They listen very badly, or don't listen at all, and very soon hasten away. Mr. Emerson quaintly asked, what kind of a pump is that which can only deliver and not draw? He thought conversation a game in which one is to be played upon, as well as to be played upon others, and that he is the best man who can answer a question so as to admit of no other answer. Magnetism, a short cut of coming at the thoughts of others, had failures. He descanted upon the variety of character and talent a club should have, and that some men who abounded in valuable thoughts, like the gold in the quartz, were brought out by the means of clubs, while others were like bats, ever rushing against any bright thought, and trying to extinguish it. That the society of gipsies was to many men more attractive than that of bishops. That boys liked that of the wharf, and girls often left the parlor for that below stairs. Clubs were formed to meet these wants and secure these advantages, and had been in existence from the earliest era of history.

Death of Lady Morgan.

Lady Morgan died in London on the 14th ult. She was the daughter of an actor named Owenson, and was born in Dublin about 1789. She became known as an authoress by a collection of poems called the "Lay of the Irish Harp," and by the "Wild Irish Girl," and one or two other Romances. She married Sir Chas. Morgan, a physician, in 1816, after which she spent several years on the continent. During this time she published "Florence McCarthy," "O'Donnel," and the "Missionary," and other romances, beside "France" and "Italy," very clever books on those countries. That on Italy gained the praise of Byron. She returned to Ireland in 1823, and visited France again in 1820, and Belgium in 1843. She afterwards produced "France in 1829," "Woman and Her Master," the "Book without a Name," to which her husband contributed, and some very entertaining notes to a new edition of the "Wild Irish Girl." In 1843 she had a controversy with Cardinal Wiseman concerning the chair of St. Peter at Rome, in which she was thought to have entirely defeated the Cardinal. Her last production was her "Autobiography," published in London a few months ago.

Labor.

Toil swings the axe, and forests bow,
The seeds break out in radiant bloom;
Rich harvests smile behind the plow,
And cities cluster round the loom;
Where tottering domes and tapering spires
Adorn the vale and crown the hill,
Stout Labor lights its beacon fires,
And plumes with smoke the forge and mill.

The monarch oak, the woodman's pride,
Whose trunk is seamed with lightning scars,
Toil launches on the restless tide,
And there unrolls the flag of stars;
The engine, with its lungs of flame,
And ribs of brass and joints of steel,
From Labor's plastic fingers came,
With sobbing valve and whirling wheel.

'Tis Labor works the magic press,
And turns the crank in hives of toil,
And beckons angels down to bless
Industrious hands on sea and soil;
Here sunbrowned Toil with shining spade
Links lake to lake with silver ties,
Strung thick with pearls of trade,
And trembles towering to the skies.

Truffles.—The Paris correspondent of the New York Times says:

But there is an industry still more singular in France—that of the artificial production of truffles—the last caprice of the gourmand. The scarcity and the high price of this singular aberration of nature, for it is an excrescence and not a normal production, hold out a great inducement to experimenters in their artificial production. Every one has, perhaps, seen on the buds of the young branches of the oak a spherical excrescence which is called a nut-gall. Its formation is due to the sting of an insect. The truffle has a similar origin. An insect, the tripula, penetrates the soil, ordinarily calcareous, in which grows a certain species of oak, attains the capillary branches of the root, pricks them, deposits its eggs in the wound, and the drop of milky fluid which exudes from the wounded filement is the origin, the element, or, if you please, the embryo of the truffle. This embryo develops itself at the expense of the azotic and carbonic matters which surround it, as certain parasites grow to the detriment of the animal or vegetable organism around them.

The design of nature in pushing instinctively the insect to prick the roots of the oak, is to prepare a nest for its young, and at the same time protection and nourishment. For when the larvæ of the tripula come out of the eggs, they attract the truffle which had been formed during their incubation, a period of seven or eight months, and devour the precious tubercle, transforming themselves into chrysalides, and again into new generations of tripulas, eternally condemned to re-commence the same work. The truffles gathered in time, is subtracted from the devouring process of the insects, and becomes thus the rarest and costliest of condiments for the palate of the sensualist.

The cultivation of truffles has been attempted over and over again within the last few years in France, but with indifferent success. There is always wanting either the right condition of soil, or the insects to prick the roots after the tree has been made to grow. The experiments, however, are going on, and the prayers of the epicurean world are with the experimenters.

A few months ago the police detected in the quarry-caves of the hill of the Montmartre a band of men manufacturing spurious truffles. Let Connecticut no longer be reproached with wooden hams and oak leaf cigars!

Pruning Peach Trees.—The Cultivator favors summer pruning. It says:

"Pruning should be done in May or June, but not in the winter, as is the opinion of some fruit-growers. We will give some reasons for spring and summer pruning: If you cut off a limb of any size in the winter, the bark dies around the stump from which the limb was cut, and does not for a long time, if ever, cover the stump; whereas, on the contrary, if cut off in May or June, when the sap is in full flow, it will go on to grow, and, if not too large, cover the stump the first year. The tree should be trimmed well out of the middle, so as to give the tree and fruit air; limbs that incline to grow straight out should be cropped or shortened, so as to give the tree an upward tendency. Trees should be trimmed up so that a team of horses can work under them without barking the limbs; single-trees should be muffled, so as to prevent barking the trees."

Better Prospects for Farmers.—We would not encourage any false hopes, or say a word to lead farmers or others to relax the strick economy which has been impelled, or compelled by the depressed financial condition of the country, for the past year. Still, we think, so far as we can observe and study the "signs of the times," from an advantageous point of observation, there is much to encourage the hope that a more prosperous state of affairs lies but a little way ahead of us.—The use we would now make of this is, to encourage farmers to a more extended and thorough cultivation of various crops, the present spring. The season bids fair to be a favorable one. Prices of produce are, in the main, higher than they have been for time past, and will probably increase still further. Let every one make an effort to plant or sow an acre or two more than they had intended, and to till those crops already planned for, with more care. The extra produce thus secured may be a make-weight to turn the scale in favor of future prosperity.—American Agriculturist.

The Oats Crop.—The successful culture of oats depends in a great measure upon its early sowing. If the weather permits, the crop should be always in the ground by the first of April, or, at the farthest, the first week in April. An important consideration is bright, heavy seed, which should be obtained, when convenient, from a distance, and not too far South from a locality. Oats, like most other grains and indeed vegetables, should be changed often. After the second or third year, at most, if cultivated, nearly everything in the vegetable kingdom will deteriorate, unmistakeably showing the necessity of frequent interchange with the productions of other localities or latitudes. —Sioux City Eagle, April 23d.

Test the Seed Corn Before Planting.—Oft-repeated suggestions for saving and keeping seed corn have been given in this journal. But whether these have been followed or not, it is well to make a preliminary test of corn, and of all other seeds which sometimes fail to vegetate. This is easily done. Select from the mass enough to be a fair sample, and plant in a warm situation, or in a box of earth, kept suitably warm and moist. An examination of the specimens, even before coming up, will show whether they are in sprouting condition. Better far to do this, than to make a similar experiment on a five or ten acre field, and only learn of a bad result when too late to be remedied.—American Agriculturist.

Grass Under Trees.—By sowing nitrate of soda in small quantities in showery weather, under trees, a most beautiful verdure will be obtained. I have used it under beech trees in my ground, and the grass always looks green. Having succeeded so well on a small scale, I have now sown nitrate of soda among the long grass in the plantations, which cattle would never eat. I now find that the herbage is preferred to the other parts of the field.—Ohio Valley Farmer.

Decidedly Cool.—Twice, about the 1st of February last, Geffard, the Haytien potentate, having discovered the existence of secret Black Clubs, which were forming conspiracies against him, armed himself and went unattended to the houses where the meetings were held. Knocking at the door, as soon as it was opened, he pushed past the servant, went up stairs, and entered the room where the conspirators were assembled. In one of them he saw a member of his own staff. He saluted him, and then turning to the company he said quietly:

"Gentlemen, you see I am cognizant of your meetings. Go on. When you are ready to act you will find me prepared to meet you. I will not disturb you.—Adieu."

And he bowed and retired. The member of his staff was sick for several days afterwards. This coolness was as effective as bloodshed; it broke up the club.

On the other occasion, a few nights after this occurrence, he entered a similar club at the house of a well known black woman of position in Port-au-Prince.

There were seven persons present. This sudden appearance startled them, his quiet smile and sarcastic politeness astounded them.

"Ah! good evening, my friends!" he said, "seven! It is a magical number! I will not disturb your operations. I was passing and thought I would step in and see you. I salute you all. Adieu."

Water-Drinking.—Professor Silliman closed a recent Smithsonian lecture by giving the the following sensible advice to young men:

"If, therefore, you wish for a clear mind, strong muscles, and quiet nerves, and long life, and power prolonged into old age, permit me to say, although I am not giving a temperance lecture, avoid all drinks but water, and mild infusions of that fluid; shun tobacco, and opium, and everything else that disturbs the normal state of the system; rely upon nutritious food and mild diluent drinks of which water is the basis, and you will need nothing beyond these things except rest and due moral regulations of all your powers, to give you long, happy and useful lives and a serene evening at the close."

Church Etiquette.—There is good sense in a suggestion made by an American who thus writes from London:

"In the churches, whoever comes first, whether gentleman or lady, takes the further seat in the slip, and those that follow fill up the remaining seats; and thus prevent the awkward disturbance which occurs in our churches here in the process of filing out and in by men, in order to isolate women at the further end of the pew. It is said the habit so universal among us originated with the early settlers who sat near the doors of the pews, so that in case of an attack by the Indians, they might be ready for action. In many instances, this marching out and in like a parcel of soldiers, is a perfect nuisance and the custom might be well changed."

☞ Kind words are to the heart what odor is to the senses—a blessing and a balm. They turn away wrath not alone, but sadness, and melancholy, and suffering disappear at their gentle sound, and the world is all the brighter. How changed would all things seem if no angered words were spoken! How every face would bear the imprint of Heaven, and every heart leap to love and trust! The blessed millennium promised by Scripture can easily be realized if we turn all the care from the world and implant within each breast the seed of good-will and kindness. And if in so great a degree, kind words leaven and sweeten life, in a lesser, but no less sure degree, they leaven the heart of each individual being, and render the soul a living millennium. How then should we cultivate kindness, and how constantly should kind words lay upon our lips!

☞ "I know," says Channing, "but one elevation of a human being, and that is the elevation of the soul. Without this, it matters nothing where a man stands or what he possesses; and with it he towers—he is one of God's nobility, no matter what place he holds in the social scale.—There are not different kinds of dignity for different orders of men, but one and the same to all. The only elevation of the human being consists of the exercise, the growth and energy of the higher principles and power of the soul. A bird may be shot up to the skies by a foreign power, but it rises in the true sense of the word when it spreads its own wings, and soars by its own living power. So a man may be thrust upwards in a conspicuous place by outward accidents, but he rises only so far as he exerts himself, and expands his best faculties, as he ascends up by a free effort, to a noble region of thought and action.

☞ Some curious experiments have been made at the veterinary school at Alfort, (just outside Paris,) by order of the Minister of War, to ascertain the endurance of horses, as in a besieged town, for example. It appears a horse will live on water alone five-and-twenty days; seventeen days without eating or drinking; only five days if fed but unwatered; ten days if fed and insufficiently watered.—A horse kept without water for three days drank 104 pounds of water in three minutes. It was found, too, that a horse taken immediately after "feed," and kept in the active exercise of the "squadron school," completely digested its "feed" in three hours in the same time in the "conscript's school" its food was two-thirds digested; and if kept perfectly quiet in the stable, its digestion was scarcely commenced in three hours.

A Strange Conceit.—The insane often entertain the most ludicrous idea of their own condition. There is a man in an asylum in one of the neighboring States who became insane in consequence of a failure in business. He explains the reason of his incarceration as follows: "I am here because of a mere mistake in business. I was engaged during the winter in making musquitoes' wings, which I expected to sell in the summer. I had ten thousand of them on hand when the season opened, but unfortunately I had forgotten to make them in pairs. They were all left-hand wings, and consequently I lost the sale of them and was compelled to suspend payment!" He relates this story with gravity and earnestness which testifies to the sincerity of his own belief in the explanation.—Boston Journal.

☞ Long-winded persons can gather a hint from the following: "Here, John," said the gentleman to his servant on horseback in the rear, "come forward, and just take hold of my horse whilst I dismount; and, after I am dismounted, John, you dismount, too. Then, John, ungirth the saddle of your horse, and put it down; then you will please ungirth the saddle of my horse, and put it down. Then, John, take up the saddle of your horse, and put and girth it on my horse. Afterwards, John, take up the saddle of my horse, and put and girth it on your horse. Then, John, I will seat myself in your saddle, and we will resume our journey."

"Bless me, master," said the man, "why couldn't you have simply said, let's change saddles?"

Last Fight for the Championship of England.

Bell's Life, of Ap. 10, the great sporting Leviathan of England, after the usual preliminary sketch of the history of the Championship, and the details of the previous history and exploits of the combatants, thus describes the actual contest:

Shortly after eleven o'clock, Tom Sayers modestly dropped his castor over the ropes, and then as modestly crept under them himself. He was attended by Jerry Noon and Harry Brunton, and was received with enthusiastic cheers. He had wisely donned his milling boots and drawers, and had therefore only to remove his outer shell. After an interval of five minutes, he was followed by Benjamin, who made his entree in an equally unpretending way. He also was well received. He was waited on by the Bold Bendigo and Jack Macdonald. At this time there were several offers to bet £20 to £5 on Sayers; but there were no takers. Dispatch being the order of the day, no time was lost by the men in preparing for action. Benjamin, like Sayers, had taken the precaution to make ready beforehand, so that a very few minutes sufficed to strip, and tie the colors in their appropriate places. Sayers sported a pink and white striped brocaded silk of the richest description, while Benjamin adhered to the old-fashioned blue and white spot.—By twenty-three minutes past eleven o'clock, under a burning sun, the men delivered at the scratch, and stood ready for hostilities, amidst the most profound silence. Benjamin appeared in perfect health and condition; he had a smile of confidence on his face, and he stood well up in a fearless manner, presenting a wide contrast to his debut on the former occasion. He stood well over Sayers, whose height is only five feet eight and a half inches, and struck us as decidedly the more powerful man. Although Tom was evidently too fleshy, there was a dash and calm self-possession about him, which denoted the more accustomed boxer. He moved about in a business-like way, and evidently had no fears for the result.

Round 1. Benjamin stood well on the defensive, and there was much in his position to remind us of his mentor, Nat Langham. He fixed his eye on Tom, and sparred for a short time, to see what could be done. His whole bearing, indeed, was such as to call forth a general remark that he was a different man. Tom dodged in and out in his usual style, evidently trying for his favorite double, but Benjamin was ready. At length Tom dashed in and delivered his left on the cheek, but was beautifully countered on the smelling-bottle, and Benjamin had the honor of gaining first blood from that organ, a success which was hailed with much cheering from the Taffies. Sayers seemed pricked at this, and making his favorite dodge, he popped the left on the body, and then on the left cheek, knocking Benjamin off his pins, thus gaining the second event and equalizing matters.

2. Benjamin, nothing daunted, came steadily to the scratch, and, after a feint, let go his left, which was well stopped. He got away from the return, and, after sparring, got home the left on the chest, and they got to close quarters, when the in-fighting was of a heavy description.—Each got pepper on the nozzle and whistler, and Sayers also planted heavily on the side of Bill's head. In the close at the ropes, Benjamin was forced down.

3. Both came up a good deal flushed, and each seemed blowing. Benjamin looked serious, and was rather cautious.—Sayers, anxious to be at work, dashed in and got home a very straight one on the proboscis, but Benjamin, with great quickness, countered him on the left cheek, just under the eye. This led to desperate exchanges, in which there appeared to be no best. At length Sayers caught his man round the neck, and, holding him tight, pegged away with a will on his dial, and finally threw him heavily, his head coming with some force against the stake.

4. Benjamin, desperate, at once rushed to work, and after some tremendous exchanges, each getting it on the left eye, Benjamin fell.

5. Sayers tried to lead off, but Benjy walked away in obedience to his seconds. Sayers followed until they got close together, and a magnificent rally followed, in which Sayers drew the claret from Bill's right brow, and also paid a heavy visit to the conk. Bill got on Tom's left cheek, but his blows had not the precision and weight visible on the part of Sayers.

6. Benjamin was evidently shaken by the punishment he had received, which, even at this early hour, was very severe. He sparred, and was evidently in no hurry. Sayers, seeing this, went to him, but was exceedingly wild in his deliveries.—At last, he got home on his breadbasket, but without effect, and Benjamin missed his return. Tom now feinted, and just reached Bill's smeller, but it was a mere flyblow. He tried a body blow, and was well countered on the cheek and mouth. A close and in-fighting followed, in which both were very wild, but in which Tom again turned on the main from Benjamin's nose. After a struggle both fell through the ropes.

7. Benjamin looked savage. He lost no time in dashing at his man, and a tremendous round followed. Sayers left go the left at the nose, but Benjy countered him straight and well with the same hand, opening up a fresh bottle. Several tremendous counters with the left followed, Benjamin astonishing every one by his calmness, and by the precision with which he timed his hits. Each got pepper on the nose and eye, and Sayers nopped a bad one on the middle of the forehead. Sayers missed his left, and Bill returned well on the cheek. They broke away, and, after surveying one another, again went to it, and more heavy exchanges took place, in which Tom turned on the main from Bill's snorter. Bill persevered, and again they disputed the ground, inch by inch. Both were blowing, and the confidence of Bill's friends was looking up. It was plain both men meant to do all they knew in this bout, and that each felt that it was to be the turning point, one way or the other. Tom now got heavily on the left peeper, which began to close, while Bill caught him on the mouth. The fighting was tremendous, and the way Benjamin stood to his man was beyond all praise. Sayers now and then was extremely wild, and had Benjamin possessed more knowledge of the art, the result might have been serious, for Tom was evidently tiring fast, but still the greater force of his hitting was evidently telling a tale. As hit succeeded hit, Bill's dial grew more slantendicular, but he was undaunted, and evidently had made up his mind to do or die. At length they got to close quarters, when some heavy fibbing took place, and, both fell, Benjamin under.

8. Bill's left eye was all but closed—the lump at the side telling of Tom's powers of delivery. Sayers was much flushed, and puffing like a grampus; he lost no time, however, in going to work, evidently hoping to frighten his man.—Bill was ready, and, after some sharp exchanges in his favor, he retreated. Tom followed, and, as Benjamin attempted to plant his left, Tom cross-countered him heavily with his right on the jaw, and knocked him off his pins. He was almost out of time, and it required all the exertions of his seconds to get him round.

9. Benjamin shook himself and came up resolutely, but evidently much shaken. He sparred a little, and on Tom going in he timed him neatly on the middle of the dial, but without much force. Again did Sayers try it with a like result, and Benjamin then dashed in, but was short.—Sayers returned with great quickness on the bad eye, and poor Benjamin was again floored.

10. Benjamin struggled up gamely, although requested to give in; he held up his hands and tried to counter with his man, but Tom, with great neatness, got well home on the good eye, avoiding the return, and Benjamin once more dropped. His seconds threw up the sponge, but the poor fellow broke from them, with an intimation that he was not licked, and wanted to prove he was no cur, and commenced.

Round 11 and last. Benjamin tried to lead off, but it was evidently a mere flash in the pan; he missed and stumbled forward, when Tom gave him a slight tap on the nose which sent him for the time, to grass. He was conveyed to his corner, and his seconds then declared he should fight no longer. Sayers went to him to shake hands, but Benjamin, who was all but blind, wished to commence another round. This, of course, could not be listened to, and the poor fellow was forced from the ring against his will, Sayers being proclaimed the winner in twenty-two minutes, amidst the enthusiastic cheers of his friends. Benjamin was much over-hammed, and his punishment was as heavy as one generally sees in double the time. He took it, however, unflinchingly, never complaining from first to last; and on this occasion, although defeated, his most determined enemy (if he has one) cannot say he was dishonored. Sayers was also much exhausted, but this arose not so much from his punishment, although in this respect he did not come off scatheless, as from his want of condition telling upon him in a battle which was disputed for some rounds with unwonted quickness and desperation.

A Showman Sold!

Showmen as a general rule are tolerably sharp, and it is no easy matter to overreach them; but when they are fooled, it is a matter of great amusement to those present. I was a witness to one of the best "sells" of the kind I have ever heard of. Last summer, there was an exhibition in a tent, on one of the public lots—a sort of menagerie on a small scale. Before the entrance to the tent, the proprietor was boasting of the innumerable wonders to be seen for a shilling, to a considerable crowd. While in the midst of a speech overflowing with big words, he was somewhat summarily interrupted by the following exclamation from a man near him who had a boy with him:

"I'll bet you a 'five' that you can't let me see that lion!"

"Done," said the showman, eagerly.—"Put up your money."

The man placed a five dollar bill in the hand of a bystander, and the showman, counting out the change, did the same.

"Now walk this way," said the showman; "and I'll convince you!"

The man and the little boy followed him into the tent, the whole crowd following.

"There," said the showman triumphantly. "Look in that corner, at that beautiful Numidian lion!"

"Where?" asked the man, looking in every direction but the right one.

"Why, there," was the astonished reply.

"I don't see any," responded the other.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the showman, who began to "smell a very large mice."

"I'm blind!" was the grinning reply.

That showman was very industriously engaged in turning out the crowd, for the next few minutes, while the blind man pocketed the stakes and went his way.

☞ Most truly did Theodore Sedgwick say that it is the man of robust and enduring constitution, of elastic nerve, of comprehensive decision, who does the work of life. It is Scott with his manly form. It is Brougham with his superhuman powers of physical endurance. It is Franklin at the age of 70, camping out on his way to arouse the Canadas, as our hardiest boys of 20 now camp out on the Adirondack or on the Miramichi. It is Napoleon, sleeping four hours and on horseback twenty. It is Washington with his splendid frame and physical strength.

☞ "My old nurse, Mrs. Patrick O'Toole," said Cousin Jerry, "was a woman of logical mind. I was very sick once, and the doctor left me an atrociously bitter drug, which I rather declined taking. But Mrs. O'Toole carried the day. 'It's the doctor's orders,' cried that good lady, 'and if you don't go by the doctor's orders, it ain't no use for you to be sick at all.' I swallowed my own scruples and the doctor's also.

New Hospitalities.—At the close of the Paraguay negotiations, on the night of the 27th of February, the municipal authorities of Conception gave a ball to President Urquiza and Commissioner Bowlin, who opened the dance with the President's lady. Upon retiring to his quarters, each American guest found a bottle of brandy at his bedside.

☞ General Morris' declination of the consulship to Havre has elicited from the Bellows Falls Argus the following:

[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,
TO BE PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT COLUMBUS, OHIO.
By J. Sirney Marshall,
At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests [illegible] will be acceptable, I have determined (on or about the [illegible] of May next) to commence in the city of Columbus, Ohio, The People's Press, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every house.

The People's Press will inculcate Democratic [illegible] and its columns shall be characterized by [illegible] honesty; its statements [illegible] variety. [illegible] happiness of the people.

While it will [illegible] the [illegible] of the Democratic Party, [illegible] will present the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as the first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and use every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to procure his nomination and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on a remunerative patronage, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year........................ [illegible]
A discount of [illegible] per cent on clubs of [illegible] per cent on clubs of twenty; [illegible] per cent on clubs of [illegible] and [illegible] per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards sent to a single address.
J. SIRNEY MARSHALL.
Columbus, March [illegible], 1859.
N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation, which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, by giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME 1. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1859. NUMBER 2.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States:

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion—the American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and, by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

MR. DOUGLAS' SPEECH ON POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY.—We devote considerable space in our present issue to the publication of the Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, on Popular Sovereignty, delivered in the United States Senate in February last, a short time before the close of the session. This speech was delivered "in opposition to the passage of a code of laws by Congress to protect slavery in the territories, and in banishing from the halls of Congress all questions touching domestic slavery in the territories, and remanding them to the people of the territories, to be disposed of as they may see proper, subject to an appeal to the judicial tribunals, to test the validity of the territorial enactments under the constitution of the United States." It may properly be regarded as the great text-book, or creed, of northern Democrats universally, and of those of the south—and we could scarcely occupy our space with matter which would be more valuable or acceptable to our readers. There is included in the pamphlet edition of this speech an appendix showing the position of distinguished public men on this question in the great contests of 1854 and 1856, which we intend to publish at an early date—as soon, certainly, as the legislature is over, and perhaps earlier.—Hartford Post.

THE CONSTITUTION AS AN OFFICIAL ORGAN.—Mr. JOHN FORSYTH, late Minister to Mexico, responds to an article which appeared in the Washington Constitution, as if it were from the President. He says:

"Whatever doubts may have existed as to the title of the late Washington Union to speak as the organ of Mr. Buchanan's Administration, there is none whatever as to the status of its alias, the Washington Constitution. I know positively, myself, that the plan to set this paper on its legs under the name of Mr. Bowman, was arranged at the White House by the President and his Cabinet. I know much, too, of the details of that arrangement, and by what nice adjustment of Government patronage the organ was to be sustained, and other parties, who had a lien on that patronage, were to be reconciled. I do not mention this for the purpose of going into the question of the Presidential propriety of this arrangement, but only to show that I have a right to assume that what the Constitution says about me is said by the authority of its principals, the President and his Cabinet."

Sir Moses Montefiore and his American colleague have arrived in Rome, and will soon apply for an audience of the Pope. A letter from Rome observes that it is not to be supposed that any change will be made in the line of conduct adopted toward the young Mortara.

Appendix to the Speech of Hon. S. A. Douglas,

In the Senate of the United States, February 23d, 1859, in reply to Hon. A. G. Brown, of Mississippi, in opposition to the passage of a Code of Laws by Congress to protect slavery in the territories, and in favor of banishing from the halls of Congress all questions touching domestic slavery in the territories, and remanding them to the people of the territories, to be disposed of as they may see proper, subject to an appeal to the judicial tribunals to test the validity of the territorial enactments under the Constitution of the United States, together with an appendix, showing the position of distinguished public men on this question in the great contests of 1854 and 1856.

NOTE BY MR. DOUGLAS.

The debate was continued at considerable length by various Senators, many of whom emphatically repudiated the idea that it was the intention of the Kansas-Nebraska act to affirm the doctrine of NON-INTERVENTION BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN THE TERRITORIES, whereby all questions pertaining to African slavery, as well as all other matters of domestic concern, were banished from the halls of Congress and remanded to the people of the Territories respectively, to be disposed of as they should see proper, subject only to the Constitution, with the right of appeal by any person feeling aggrieved by the territorial legislation, to the judicial tribunals to determine the validity of such enactments under the Constitution of the United States. [illegible]

APPENDIX.

Extract from the report of the Committee on Territories, accompanying the Nebraska bill, when first reported to the Senate by Mr. Douglas, Chairman, January 4, 1854:

"In the judgment of your committee, those measures (Compromise measures of 1850) were intended to have a far more comprehensive and enduring effect than the mere adjustment of the difficulties arising out of the recent acquisition of Mexican territory. They were designed to establish certain great principles, which would not only furnish adequate remedies for existing evils, but in all time to come, avoid the perils of a similar agitation, by withdrawing the question of slavery from the halls of Congress and the political arena, and committing it to the arbitrament of those who were immediately interested in and alone responsible for its consequences."

Extract from the speech of Mr. Douglas, closing the debate in the Senate, on the night of the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska act, March 3, 1854:

"Mr. President, as there has been so much misrepresentation upon this point, I must be permitted to repeat, that the doctrine of the report of the committee, as has been conclusively proved by these extracts, is—

"First, That the whole question of slavery should be withdrawn from the halls of Congress and the political arena, and committed to the arbitrament of those who are immediately interested in and alone responsible for its existence.

"Second, In applying this principle to the Territories and the new States to be formed therefrom, all questions pertaining to slavery were to be referred to the people residing therein.

"Third, That the committee proposed to carry these propositions and principles into effect in the precise language of the Compromise measures of 1850.

"Are not these propositions identical with the [illegible] of the bill on your table? If there is a hair's breadth of discrepancy between the two, I ask any Senator to rise in his place and point it out? Both rest upon the greater principle which forms the basis of all our institutions—that the people are to decide the question for themselves, subject only to the Constitution."—(See Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess. 33d Cong., vol. 29, p. 337.)

Extract from the remarks of Hon. W. A. Richardson, of Illinois, (who, as Chairman of the Committee on Territories in the House of Representatives, reported the Kansas-Nebraska bill to that body,) January 12, 1856:

"The Constitution does not, in my opinion, carry the institutions of any of the States into any of the Territories; but it affords the same protection there to the institution of one State as of another. The citizen of Virginia is as much entitled in the common Territory to the protection of his property under the Constitution as the citizen of Illinois; but both are dependent upon the legislation of the territorial government for laws to protect their property of whatever kind it may be. Thus it will be seen that though there may be upon this point a difference theoretically—involving questions for judicial decision—yet there is none, practically, among the friends of non-intervention in Congress. In the practical result is to place the decision of the questions in the hands of those who are most deeply interested in its solution, namely, the people of the Territory, who have made it their home, and whose interests are the most deeply involved in the character of the institutions under which they are to live. If this great principle of non-intervention and self-government is wrong, then indeed the American Revolution was fought in vain, and it is time we cease to venerate the memory of the patriotic dead who purchased with their fortunes and blood the free institutions of the several separate, independent and coequal States, forming the Union under which we have so prosperously and happily grown to be so great."—(See Congressional Globe, 1st Sess. 34th Cong., part 1, pages 236, 237.)

Extract from the speech of General Lewis Cass, of Michigan, (now Secretary of State of the United States,) in the Senate of the United States, May 20, 1854:

"It is up hill work, Mr. President, in this country, for any man, however splendid his talents or commanding his position, to contend against this doctrine. It landed with our fathers upon the beach of Jamestown and the Rock of Plymouth, and has been treasured in their hearts through all their trials and difficulties to this, the great day of its glorious consummation. It has accompanied the pioneer through the passes of the Rocky Mountains, and has planted itself, with the beloved flag of our country, upon the very shores that look out upon China and Japan. 'Oh! squatter sovereignty, where were you then?' emphatically asks its great opponent, alluding to territorial history. I was then—may then be answered to this invocation. I was then in the Declaration of Independence, and I am now, as ever, in the hearts of the American people, and our [illegible] is established in the tables of their law. The relations between the Territories and the General Government are not well defined by the Constitution.

"There are those, and I am among them, who find no authority in that instrument for Congressional action in this matter, and can justify it only from the necessity of the case. Others contend that the jurisdiction is unlimited; while some, though willing to accept a limitation, can with difficulty define it. But whatever theoretical opinions may prevail upon this subject, Congress has never practically asserted a single important one—the slavery provision—the internal concerns of the Territories have been managed by their local governments. The action of the General Government has been mostly confined to organize laws, laying down the principles of administration with political privileges, formerly more restricted, but latterly much enlarged.

"Now, here is room for an honest difference of opinion as to the extent of Congressional legislation. All agree that the initiatory measure of organization should be taken by Congress, though uncertainty cannot be expected in its details. For myself, I concede the largest exemption compatible with the relations of the parties supreme and subordinate. But when you come to the appointment of officers to the powers of legislation, and to all the other questions involved in political society, you touch subjects necessarily giving rise to diversity of opinion. While all has not been granted, comparatively little has been withheld. Freedom—the rights of persons and property—are quite as well secured in the Territories as in the States, and acts of oppression as rare, and, when happening, just as sure to be redressed and punished. The supervisory power exercises its authority with moderation; and these distant communities find their situation free from practical injurious restraint.

"This state of things in its general principles was the very condition of the American Colonies, when our fathers claimed non-intervention from British interference, which was extending itself into all the concerns of life. They did not lose themselves in the mazes of metaphysics. They did not deny the [illegible] practical boundary to a principle, though they could not find a stone wall against which to break their heads. They did not claim independence at the commencement of the controversy.— They did not want it. They conceded to England the just right to establish governments, and to exercise a general supervisory authority over them; but they denied to her the authority to interfere in their internal domestic concerns, claiming the right to manage them for themselves; and as they could not get that right peaceably, they sought it by arms, and obtained it by such suffering and trials as no people ever before encountered and survived. They did not protest against the appointment of the Governors and some other officers by the Crown, nor against the exercise of a general superintending authority by the Parliament. And now, when a [illegible] since the commencement of this contest of weakness and right against power and injustice, is fast hastening to its completion, we are gravely told by many citizens of New York, and by the acknowledged exponents of their views here, that this claim of political exemption was all a transparent sham, and, in effect, that the patriarchs of the Revolution were ignoramuses, for as they did not demand sovereignty, complete release from British control, they demanded nothing worth having. And therefore, when a local political community is connected in bonds of subordination with a more general one, and is allowed as great a measure of political freedom, as is compatible with this relation, if it do not aspire to and obtain complete independence, despotism is better than free local legislation. And I return my thanks to the honorable Senator from Louisiana, (Mr. BENJAMIN,) for the eloquent illustration of the true principles which we have just heard from him. I listened to him as did the Senate, with the deepest interest. I have rarely witnessed in my Congressional experience an effort marked with higher powers of oratory."—(See Appendix Congressional Globe, 1st Session, 33d Congress, vol. 29, p. 72?.)

Extract from a speech of Hon. Isaac Toucey, of Connecticut, (now Secretary of the Navy,) delivered in the Senate of the United States, March 3, 1854:

"It was the principle of non-intervention which Congress adopted; and that principle was carried out the first thirty years of the Government, and until the generation upon the stage, when the Constitution was adopted, the men who, by their votes, adopted it had passed away. I know, sir, that in these facts of the legislative history of the country, I am not mistaken; and if the honorable Senator from Ohio applied his proposition as to the early policy of the country to a period anterior to the formation of the Constitution, which it seems he did, I should have no occasion to say anything upon the subject, because it has nothing to do with the policy of this Government under the Constitution. I confine myself to the policy of the Government since the adoption of the Constitution; for by that Constitution a new policy was instituted, and the Constitution never could have been adopted, it never would have been considered by half the States of this Union, if any principle of intervention had been carried into it. I repeat, sir, that if the principle of intervention with this institution had been carried into the Constitution it never would have been adopted, and this Government never would have been established.

"Sir, this principle of non-intervention is one of the leading principles of the Constitution. It is a legitimate inference from the general arrangement of powers between the States and the federal Government."—(See Appendix Congressional Globe, vol. 29, p. 326.)

Again, in the Senate, July 2, 1856, Mr. Toucey said:

"Mr. President, as much has been said on this subject, I desire to say a word in explanation of my vote. The original act is as explicit as it is possible to be. The words 'subject to the Constitution' make no difference. The original act recognizes on to the Territorial Legislature, all the power which they can have subject to the Constitution and subject to the organic law of the Territory. There is no ambiguity. It is as explicit as language can make it. The only doubt which arises is as to the meaning of the Constitution. That we cannot define; that is a question exclusively for the Judicial Tribunals."—(See Appendix Congressional Globe, vol. 33, p. 787.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. Howell Cobb, of Georgia, (now Secretary of the Treasury,) delivered before the people of West Chester, Pennsylvania, September 19th 1856, in advocacy of James Buchanan's election to the Presidency:

"I stand upon a principle. I hold that the will of the majority of the people of Kansas should decide this question; and I say here to-night before this people and before this country, that I, for one shall abide the decision of the people there. I hold to the right of the people to self-government. I am willing for them to decide this question. If I be a member of Congress when this question shall come before that body, if a majority of the people there decide in favor of slavery being a part of their institutions, I shall vote for their admission with their pro-slavery constitution; if, on the other hand a majority of the people there decide that they do not want slavery and present a free-State Constitution, I will vote for their admission into the Union as a free State in obedience to the voice and will of the people. (Applause.) I stand by my principles; I intend to carry them out; I care not how they operate. Principles are dearer to me than the results of any election, any contest in Kansas. I would not plant slavery upon the soil of any portion of God's earth against the will of the people. The Government of the United States should not force the institution of slavery upon the people either of the 'Territories' or of the States against the will of the people, though my voice would bring about that result. I stand upon the principle,—the people of any State decide it for themselves, you for yourselves, the people of Kansas for themselves.—(Applause.) That is the Constitution, and I stand by the Constitution."

(A gentleman here interrupted Mr. Cobb, with his consent, to inquire whether he meant that the people of the Territory, before forming their constitution, should have the power to exclude slavery, or that they should have the power to pass upon it when they form their constitution. He also desired the speaker to explain not only his view on the subject, but also the view which is advocated by those who stand with him in the Southern States, and support Mr. Buchanan.)

Mr. COBB, resuming, said: "Fellow-citizens, there never has been, in all the history of this slavery matter, a more purely theoretical issue, than the one involved in the question propounded to me by my friend, and I will show it to you. I will state to you the positions of the advocates to this doctrine of non-intervention, on which there are different opinions held; but I will show you that it is the purest abstraction, in a practical point of view, that ever was proposed for political discussion.— There are those who hold that the Constitution carries all the institutions of this country into all the territories of the Union; that slavery, being one of the institutions recognized by the Constitution, goes with the Constitution into the territories of the United States; and that when the territorial government is organized, the people have no right to prohibit slavery there, until they come to form a State constitution. That is what my friend calls 'Southern doctrine.' There is another class who hold that the people of the territories, in their territorial state, and whilst acting as a territorial legislature, have a right to decide upon the question whether slavery shall exist there during their territorial state; and that has been dubbed 'squatter sovereignty.' Now, you perceive that there is but one point of difference between the advocates of the two doctrines. Each holds that the people have the right to decide the question in the territory; one holds that it can be done through the territorial legislature, and whilst it has a territorial existence, the other holds that it can be done only when they come to form a State constitution. But those who hold that the territorial legislature cannot pass a law prohibiting slavery, admit that unless the territorial legislature pass laws for its protection, slavery will not go there. Therefore, practically a majority of the people represented in the territorial legislature decides the question. Whether they decide it by prohibiting it, according to the one doctrine, or by refusing to pass laws to protect it, as contended for by the other party, is immaterial. The majority of the people by the action of the territorial legislature will decide the question; and all must abide the decision when made. (Great applause.)

"My friend, you observe that—no matter what the issue which is presented—I stand upon a principle. There I planted myself in the commencement of this argument—the right of the people to self-government. I intend to maintain it, to stand by it, to carry it out, to enforce it. If it operate to the exclusion of the people of my section of the country from these territories, be it so; it is the Constitution of the country, and they have no right to complain. If it operate in their behalf and for their protection, I call upon you to say, is it not right that they should have the benefit of it?"

Extracts from a speech of the Hon. John C. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, (now Vice-President of the United States,) in the House of Representatives, March 23, 1854:

"But if non-intervention by Congress be the principle that underlies the compromise of 1850, then the prohibition of 1820, being inconsistent with that principle, should be removed, and perfect non-intervention thus be established by law.

"Among the many misrepresentations sent to the country by some of the enemies of this bill, perhaps none is more flagrant, than the charge that it proposes to legislate slavery into Nebraska and Kansas. Sir, if the bill contained such a feature it would not receive my vote. The right to establish involves the correlative right to prohibit, and denying both, I would vote for neither. I go further, and express the opinion that a clause legislating slavery into these Territories could not command one Southern vote in this House. It is due to both sections of the country and to the people, to expose this groundless charge. What, then, is the present condition of Nebraska and Kansas? Why, sir, there is no government, no slavery, and very little population there: (for your Federal laws exclude your citizens;) but a law remains on the statute book forever, prohibiting slavery in these Territories.— It is proposed simply to take off this prohibition, but not to make an enactment in affirmance of slavery there. Now, in the absence of any law establishing slavery in that region, previous to the prohibiting act; it is too clear for dispute, that the repeal of the prohibition has not the affirmative effect of fixing slavery in that country. The effect of the repeal, therefore, is neither to establish nor to exclude, but to leave the future condition of the Territories dependent wholly upon the action of the inhabitants, subject only to such limitations as the Federal Constitution may impose. But to guard fully against honest misconstruction, and even against malicious perversion, the language of the bill is perfectly explicit on this point." * * * *

"It will be observed, that the right of the people to regulate in their own way, all their domestic institutions, is left wholly untouched, except that whatever is done must be done in accordance with the Constitution—the supreme law for us all. And the rights of property under the Constitution, as well as legislative action, is properly left to the decision of the Federal judiciary. This avoids a contested issue which it is hardly in the competence of Congress to decide, and refers it to the proper tribunal." * * * *

"Then, sir, neither the purpose nor the effect of the bill is to legislate slavery into Nebraska and Kansas: but its effect is to sweep away this vestige of Congressional dictation on this subject, to allow the free citizens of this Union to enter the common territory with the Constitution and the bill alone in their hands, and to remit the decision of their rights under both, to the courts of the country.— Who can go before his constituents refusing to stand on the platform of the Constitution? Who can make a case to them of refusing to abide the decision of the courts of the Union?" * * * *

"Sir, I care nothing about refined distinctions or the subtleties of verbal criticism. I repeat the broad and plain proposition, that if Congress may intervene on this subject, it may intervene on any other, and having thus surrendered the principle, and broken away from constitutional limitations, you are driven into the very lap of arbitrary power. By this doctrine, you may erect a despotism under the American system. The whole theory is a libel on our institutions. It carries us back to the abhorrent principles of British colonial authority, against which we made the issue of Independence. I have never acquiesced in this odious claim, and will not believe that it can abide the test of public scrutiny."—(See speech of Hon. John C. Breckinridge, H. of Reps., March 23, 1854, 1st Sess. 33d Cong. Appendix Cong. Globe, vol. 29, page 441.)

Mr. Breckinridge in a speech at Lexington, Kentucky, in response to the congratulations of his neighbors on his having obtained the nomination for Vice-President, on Monday June 9, 1856, made the following remarks defining his position on the question of popular sovereignty and non-intervention:

"Upon the distracting question of domestic slavery, their position is clear. The whole power of the Democratic organization is pledged to the following propositions: That Congress shall not interpose upon this subject in the States, in the Territories, or in the District of Columbia; that the people of each territory shall determine the question for themselves, and be admitted into the Union upon a footing or perfect equality with the original States, without discrimination on account of the allowance or prohibition of slavery."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

THE NEW YORK TIMES ON GIDDINGS.—We published a day or two since an extract from a most flagitious and wicked letter by JOSHUA R. GIDDINGS, on the Oberlin Rescue Case, which exceeded anything that we have seen outside the ravings of the fanatics with whom the Republican party endeavor to disclaim all fellowship. As MR. GIDDINGS is prominent in their esteem as a candidate for the Gubernatorial chair of Ohio, they cannot disclaim fellowship with him, and his doctrines asserted in his voluntary letter, may be considered as the goal to which their pernicious tendencies are destined. The New York Times thinks GIDDINGS is growing ferocious. It says in its issue of the 9th:

The Hon. Joshua R. Giddings reverses the ordinary rule and grows more vehement and bloodthirsty with advancing years. He has written a letter on the Oberlin rescue, which surpasses in truculence anything we have recently seen even from the most ultra of the Radical Abolitionists. He thinks the persons who rescued the fugitive should have hung the slave-catcher who came in pursuit of him. This is the only point in which they failed in their duty. "Those pirates," says Mr. Giddings, "should have been delivered over to the colored men and consigned to the doom of pirates, which should have been speedily executed." "Had the prisoners executed the slave-catchers promptly, it would have taught the Administration a lesson not soon to be forgotten." Mr. Giddings does not forget the partisan even in his philanthropy.

Mr. Giddings' letter furnishes startling proof of the absurdities into which a man, naturally sensible, may be led, by riding one hobby and nursing one idea, all his life. He has come to regard the rescue of a fugitive slave as the chief end of man—and considers all objects of human ambition by the side of that as mean and paltry. He evidently supposes that the whole country shares his mania on this subject, and talks complacently and confidently about the people rising in their might and overthrowing a Government, provided the State Courts of Ohio prove "unequal to the occasion." Mr. Giddings is an old man, but he will probably live long enough to become still wiser.

RATHER SICKLY.—The campaigns in progress in Kentucky and Virginia seem to be rather sickly. JOHN LETCHER, the Democratic candidate for Governor in Virginia, is seriously ill LINN BOYD, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky, is ill. JOSHUA F. BELL, Opposition candidate for Governor of Kentucky, is sick. ROBERT L. MONTAGUE, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Virginia, is so ill as to be unable to pursue the canvass. It is not to be inferred that they are indisposed to pursue the canvass for their respective offices; or have been made sick by "hope deferred" or the difficulties before them. It is a singular coincidence, however, and they have all some knotty questions to handle, which were perhaps for their prospects, as well left in mystery and unexplained.

The Chicago Times of last week, in speaking of the Charleston Convention, says: "The Democracy of Illinois intend not only to support the nominee of that Convention, but intend to have considerable to say and do in the selection of the candidates, and particularly in the construction of the platform."

The State Register at Springfield takes the same stand, and says the "anxious ones may put the Register down for the Charleston nominees, upon a Democratic platform, in accordance with the time-honored creed of the party, as enunciated time and again at Baltimore, and lastly at Cincinnati. This covers the entire range of the fundamental principles of the party."

Much complaint is made against the Chicago Post-Office, which Mr. Postmaster Cook, who is now in Washington, has not satisfactorily explained. One of his clerks has been removed by Postmaster-General Holt's order, for the offense of opening letters.

Forces of the Armies and Navies of France, Sardinia, Austria, &c.

ARMIES OF FRANCE.

The following are the statistics of the French army on a peace footing for the present year (1859,) taken from the most recent authorities:

The staff consists of a force of	4,000 men
The Military Schools, Invalides and National Guard	[illegible]
The Imperial Guard and troops of the line	[illegible]
Cavalry	[illegible]
Engineer Corps	[illegible]
Artillery	[illegible]
Baggage and Ammunition	16,707 "
Grand total of the army on peace footing	[illegible]

The disposition of these troops has been recently changed in view of the coming war, and the strength of the army is at Lyons, Grenoble Besancon, and the vicinity of these posts whence they were ready to march for the expected Italian campaign. By last accounts some were in motion for the theater of war, and some had reached Sardinia.

In 1848, in the time of Louis Phillippe, the army consisted of 340,000 men and 81,699 horses.

On a war footing the French army would probably number three quarters of a million.

FRENCH NAVY.

Consists of 461 vessels, carrying 12,50 guns, and a steam force of 60,000 horse power. In a short time the whole of the sailing ships will be altered into screw steamers. Of the personnel there are 2 admirals, 11 vice-admirals, (active) and 13 (reserve) rear admirals, 20 active, 18 reserve; captains of ships, 110; captains, of frigates, 230; lieutenants, 650; ensigns 550, with numerous other officers, manned with the sailors, a total of 30,039. The total marine troops are 10,867 men, making a grand total of 56,616 men.

The great naval depot is Toulon.

SARDINIAN ARMY.

The Staff	[illegible]
Infantry	[illegible]
Cavalry	[illegible]
Artillery	[illegible]
Engineer Corps	[illegible]
Total officers and troops	[illegible]

The troops are officered by 3,159 superior and inferior officers. Besides the foregoing there are 7,99 horses. These statistics indicate the strength of the Sardinian army last year, on a peace footing. The army now numbers about 70,000 men.

SARDINIAN NAVY.

The Navy consists of twenty-nine vessels and 1436 guns. The Sardinian navy has increased considerably since these statistics were announced to the Sardinian Legislature in 1858. The Admiral of the Fleet is stationed at Genoa the principal seaport of Sardinia, which is also well fortified. The naval arsenal is at Spezia.

ARMY OF AUSTRIA.

The army of Austria, on a peace footing consists of 348,052 men; on a war footing, to 674,079. The total strength of the army on a war footing may be put down at 750,000. The Commander-in-Chief is in the hands of the Emperor, and in his absence, in those of Archduke William, his cousin, who is 32 years of age.

Lately two hundred thousand men were in Lombardy, on the left bank of the Ticino, the boundary of Sardinia, and might cross it at any moment. Besides, eighty thousand more were despatched from Austria proper to the scene of conflict.

NAVY OF AUSTRIA.

There is but little known of the Naval force of Austria, it being of recent construction. On this subject the Moniteur de la Flotte says:

"The Imperial navy of Austria has made great progress during these last few years. On the 1st of January, 1848, the number of its vessels was as follows:—3 frigates, one of which was always stationed at Venice, and carried the Admiral's flag; 4 sloops, 5 brigs, 7 schooners, 35 pinnaces, 11 gunboats, 1 steam despatch boat, 1 transport steamer and 4 special vessels.

Now, at a distance of eleven years, the Austrian navy comprises 1 line-of-battle ship—the Kaiser—completed, and another—the Austria—on the stocks at Pola.

3 screw frigates—Adria, Donau and Radetzki—and 5 sailing frigates—Bellona, Juno, Novara, Venus and Schwartzenberg.

7 steam sloops—Comte, Dandolo, Archiduc Frederic, Imperatrice Elizabeth, Santa Lucia, Volta, and 6 sailing sloops—Adriatica, Carolina, Diana, Leipzig, Minerva, Titania.

8 steam despatch boats—Achilles, Alnoch, Curtatone, Custozza, Prince Eugene, Henri, Taurus, Vulcan.

7 brigs, 11 schooners, 50 gunboats, among which 40 propelled by steam and 3 steam transports.

The Russian navy consists of 85 sailing ships and 73 steamers, in all 159 vessels; the Prussians of 55 vessels, carrying 265 guns, manned by 9,300 men.

ARMIES OF THE DUCHIES.

The armies of the Duchies, which are now occupied by Austrian troops, are as follows:

PARMA.—3,609 men on peace footing, and 5,672 in war.

MODENA.—5,300 men, and 14,656 of militia in war.

TUSCANY.—17,205 of all arms.

ARMY OF THE STATES OF THE CHURCH.

The army of the Sovereign Pontiff, in 1858, numbered 15,255 men, with 1,230 horses. He has no navy.

ARMY OF NAPLES.

The army of Naples, or the kingdom of the Two Sicilies consist of 143,586 men and 16,344 horses. In the beginning of 1858 the fleet of Naples consisted of 121 ships, carrying 748 guns.

DOUGLAS THROWN OVERBOARD.—The State Central Committee of the Democratic party in Illinois have issued a manifesto, which is submitted to the Democracy of the Union, as a review and vindication of the past action and present position of the National Democracy of that State. In this bulletin Senator Douglas is formally and decisively expelled from the Democratic party.

This is put forth by the New York Herald of yesterday among its "political intelligence," and is calculated to mislead. The reading out was done by I. Cook, Postmaster of Chicago, who represents the "Danite" or Administration wing of the party in Illinois, amounting to 5,000, who used every effort to defeat Mr. DOUGLAS in his gallant race for the U. S. Senate, and have pursued him with a vindictiveness that exceeded anything on the part of the Republican opposition. The address is a labored attempt to meet the case of Mr. DOUGLAS, and to show that Democracy is the meanest serfdom that ever fettered the American mind, instead of those spontaneous, high thoughts, pure, patriotic intentions that spring from a free, independent untrammeled people. Mr. DOUGLAS is not overboard, but the P. M., at Chicago, may find himself in that predicament.

GREAT SUFFERING OF PIKE'S EMIGRANTS.—The St. Louis Republican, May 10th, has additional correspondence by the Utah mail, dated Cottonwood Springs, 28th, giving a disheartening account of the Pike's Peak emigration. Large numbers of disappointed gold-seekers were coming back, wholly destitute of money and provisions. They were in squads of dozens and scores besetting the mail stations, and begging for food and shelter from the severe storms of the plains.

The station keepers were extending what aid they could but had not enough for other crowds coming on behind.

No acts of violence had been committed, but it was feared that the desperation of want would lead them to attack and plunder outgoing trains.

A route agent writes to the mail contractors that many of them must certainly starve, and asks the contractors to send out provisions for their relief. The trading posts along the route are without stocks of food, and the little there is the mail company owns.

In the Marion (Ind.) Circuit Court lately an important case was decided. Mr. J. Wallace while holding the office of Mayor was elected Sheriff of the county. His opponent petitioned to set aside the election on the grounds that Wallace was not eligible he holding a judicial office at the time of his election. The Court decided that the office of Mayor is not a judicial office.

BANK ROBBED.—The Bank of J. Dickey & Son, at Farmington, Iowa, was broken open on Sunday evening last, and robbed of currency, drafts, notes, &c., to the amount of about $5,000. Tools taken from a blacksmith's shop were employed to force an entrance, and the safe was blown open with gunpowder. The villains made clean work, taking everything of value in the bank, together with some unfilled and useless paper.—Keokuk Gate City, 3d.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Mr. Joseph Gicest, for many years the leading omnibus proprietor of Philadelphia, died on Monday, at his country residence, at Carpenter's Landing, N. J. The deceased was a Frenchman, and the son of a grenadier in one of the regiments under Napoleon, and as such had the privilege of entering the army at the age of twelve years as a drummer. He served in the army several years, and after leaving it, apprenticed himself in the printing trade, at which he worked after he came to this country, about twenty-five years ago.

On Tuesday, in New York, Elizabeth Raney obtained a verdict against the city for the loss of her husband, by being thrown from his cart in consequence of a hole in the street. The court charged the jury that the city was bound to keep the streets in good order and repair, and that if they found that such a hole as alleged had been allowed to remain, and that by reason of it the husband of plaintiff was killed, they should find for her.

A young man who registered his name as Simonds, at the Lafarge House, New York, on Monday night, was found dead in his room on Tuesday afternoon, under circumstances which led to the conclusion that the case was one of suicide. In the room of deceased was found a bottle of laudanum and a tumbler, which had evidently contained some poisonous substance.

A letter from Monrovia says that the Echo's negroes have been distributed along the coast by the Colonization Society, and placed under teachers for intellectual and moral training. The effects of their close confinement at sea, and the salt provisions which they were obliged to eat, the letter says, have begun to manifest themselves in curious and offensive ulcers.

Letters received at Washington from sources entitled to credit, mention that rumors were prevalent in various portions of Italy that the Pope might be compelled to take refuge in the United States. Our Ministers at Rome and Naples speak of it as highly probable, owing to the unsettled and precarious condition of things.

At the recent breaking up of the Methodist Conference in Texas, the Masonic sign of distress was more effective than civil laws or regard for religious things. It is said that when Bishop Janes was confronted by the mob, he gave the sign above referred to, the rabble withdrew, and the Conference was permitted to close in decency and in order.

On Monday five lots of real estate on Summer street, Boston, and vicinity, with valuable buildings thereon, belonging to Emery B. Fay, were sold at auction, bringing a total of nearly $389,000. The most valuable lot, that embracing the Mercantile building, brought $9 50 per foot.

On the 7th, near West Point, Ky., an affray took place, between A. G. Torrence and T. V. Davis, in which the latter was stabbed to the heart. It is said that T. J. Davis, brother of the deceased, shot Torrence through a window of his residence to which he had fled.

It is reported that Deputy Sheriff Wise, of Ypsilanti, Mich., recently shot off the thumb of a man, who, contrary to orders to "stand and deliver himself up," was giving leg bail. The man had serious objections to being arrested and wouldn't stop for one thumb.

The military strength of Austria is time of peace is represented by 400,000 men, and in time of war by 750,000 men. The Austrian navy, which is of recent creation, is composed of 135 vessels, armed with 852 guns, and manned by 6,707 seamen.

The ship Rebecca left New Orleans on the 27th ult., direct for Liberia, having on board forty-two slaves belonging to the McDonough estate. They go provided with money, clothes, household implements and agricultural implements of every description.

The Lard Oil Factory of J. H. Stewart & Co., at Chicago, was destroyed by fire on Saturday night. The books, papers, and everything in the counting-room were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $10,000, upon which there was an insurance for $6,000.

A dispatch from Boonville, Mo., on the 7th, says the Bankers and Savings Institutions of St. Louis are running on the Branch Banks. They drew out of the Branch at Brunswick, $30,000; the Branch at Glasgow, $50,000, and the Bank at Lexington, $40,000.

Mr. Buchanan has poor success as a newspaper publisher. Since the new arrangement, the daily Constitution has decreased in circulation from two thousand to less than one thousand.

The Governor of New York has respited David Curry, of Batavia, until the 16th of July. Curry was convicted of the murder of one Fanchots, who was suspected of criminal intercourse with Curry's wife.

At Providence, R. I., on Monday, the American-Republicans nominated John C. Knight for Mayor; the Straight Republicans, Samuel James; and the Democrats, John N. Francis.

Senator Douglas proposes, it is stated, to take another trip to New Orleans. The Chicago Democrat says that his autobiography is almost out of the press. It is said to be the best thing which he has written.

In New York, on Saturday, sentence was passed on six murderers. Only one, a Chinaman, called Quimbo Appo, was sentenced to be hung on the 2d July. The others were punished by various terms of imprisonment.

Warden English, who some time since had a difficulty with and killed Mr. Brown at Elizabethtown, Ky., committed suicide at Jeffersonville, Ind., on Saturday.

John McCrea, at Louisville, on Saturday last, slipped and fell as he was jumping from a heavily laden dray, which passed over and killed him.

At a ball at Pittsburgh on Friday night a row occurred, in which a young man named Hanna stabbed two other young. Wm. F. Coble and Samuel Crow, the former fatally.

W. A. Winbourne, late Sheriff of Guilford county, N. C., has been convicted of aiding the escape of Chipman, a murderer, but has not yet been sentenced.

The body of Thomas Hoyland, a printer, was found in the Monongahela river at Pittsburgh on Sunday, also the body of John Fullton, a lad, who had been missing since April 21st.

At Savannah, Ga., on Friday, the jury in the case of Selvis and Marez, charged with fitting out the bark Angelita, for the slave trade, rendered a verdict of not guilty.

In the United States Court at Savannah, the men Selvis and Marez, on trial for fitting out the bark Angelita for the slave trade, were acquitted.

The Superior Court of New York has decided, contrary to previous notions on the subject, that contracts falling due on Sunday need not be paid till Monday.

The new City Councils of Philadelphia were organized on Monday. All the officers were filled by members elected by the People's party.

Mahard, who has been on trial at Buffalo for incest with his own daughter, a child of twelve years, has been convicted and sentenced to the State Prison for ten years.

A little girl only nine years of age was sent to the House of Refuge at New York on Saturday for passing a $3 counterfeit bill.

A son of Mr. Steinchart was drowned at Louisville on Sunday, by falling from a raft on which he was playing.

A car laden with hemp was burnt on the Frankfort and Louisville Railroad on Saturday. Loss $600.

In twenty years the religious societies that meet annually at New York have collected $26,151,479.

A German named George Yeager, a gardener, was drowned at Louisville, Ky., on Saturday.

A dispatch from Norfolk, of the 9th, says: "Miss Bunkley, the authoress of 'The Escaped Nun,' has publicly recanted."

W. B. Bishop, of Connecticut, has received the appointment of Commissioner of Patents.

A law abolishing the office of crier in the courts has gone into effect in Massachusetts.

The principal stores in Philadelphia are closed at 5 o'clock P. M.

The King of Siam has a son named in honor of General George Washington.

The rebuilding of the Quincy Schoolhouse, in Boston, has been commenced.

There was a violent hail storm at Louisville on Sunday.

A fatal accident occurred to the Rev. Horace Stringfellow, of Hanover county, Va., near Petersburg, on Saturday. He attempted to cross the Central Railroad track with a carriage, when a train struck it, instantly killing one of the horses, fatally injuring himself, dangerously wounding his wife, and slightly bruising his daughter.

The Chinese correspondent of the Journal of Commerce states that the rebels have taken the great city of Hankow, eight hundred miles up the Yang-tse-Kiang, which Lord Elgin recently visited, and which the Abbe Huc estimated to contain a population of three millions.

The English papers record the death of the Right Rev. Dr. Bethell, Lord Bishop of Bangor, the oldest prelate on the Episcopal bench. The vacant see is worth £4,500 per annum, with a patronage of eighty-one livings, the aggregate annual value of which is £23,-309 with other gifts.

Samuel Beverly, of Ross county in this State, was robbed at Pittsburgh on Tuesday night of his pocket book, containing a small sum in money, his watch, boots and cravat. Beverly was sleeping with a man named Handlin, who made off with the property during the night. Handlin was arrested.

David C. Harvey, receiver of the Nicaragua Accessory Transit Company, has brought suit against Commodore Vanderbilt in a case which involves $1,000,000, and is a sequel to the old difficulties of the Accessory Transit Company. The complaint, which is very voluminous, covers over one hundred folios.

A dispatch from Peterhead, England announces the arrival at that port of a whaling ship from Greenland which reports the total loss of five ships, [two of them steamers] while employed in the fisheries in the Arctic seas.— They were English vessels. It was supposed that they were crushed in the ice.

The Chicago Journal of Thursday says, that the price of wheat in that market fell seven and eight cents on Wednesday evening but more than recovered the decline next morning, a couple of sales having been made at 10 cents advance, the delivery of one of which is contingent on the first actual battle in Europe.

A few days since an old and respected citizen of Fulton County, Ga., named Spellers, was run over by the cars and killed. The cars passed over his head, between the mouth and nose, completely severing the upper part of the head from the body, which fell over the rail and remained in his hat.

An Illinois correspondent mentions that a wagon and drowned horses were found in Wolf Creek, near Springfield. A further examination led to the discovery of the dead bodies of Charles Shaw and Robt. Hainleger, two citizens of Sangamon County.

The store of Mr. Dunnegan, at Edwardsville, Ill., with its stock of goods, valued at $7,000 of $7,500, was destroyed by fire on the night of Monday, the 9th inst. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.— There is an insurance of $5,000.

The Greensburg, Ind., Republican says that a child of Irish parents, in that place, died apparently a few nights ago, and a coffin was ordered, but by some accident was delayed a few hours, during which time the child recovered, and is now entirely well.

The late C. F. Hovey, of Boston, by his will, bestowed something like $30,000 on the Anti-slavery, Non-resistance and Women's Rights cause, to be expended through the agency of Wm. L. Garrison, Wendell Phillips, and others, in lectures and publications.

The Massachusetts Two Years Amendment was carried by a large majority in a small vote. The five western counties and the cities of Springfield and Worcester gave majorities against, but the east and all the cities save these passed were strongly for the amendment.

A heavy hail storm prevailed at Nebraska City on the 25th ult., breaking windows and doing other extensive damage. The morning after congealed masses of ice, composed of frozen hail stones, were found to the size of six inches in diameter, and even larger.

Henry Wells, of Aurora, N. Y., well-known as a leading proprietor of the American Express Company, was thrown from a carriage at Aurora, on Saturday last, and very seriously injured. His hip was broken, and it was feared he had sustained internal injuries.

During a thunder storm at Louisville on Sunday, the lightning struck the residence of Pres. Means, knocking down one gable end of the building. A negro and five or six mules were knocked down, and one of the mules being killed.

The Quebec papers give some lengthy accounts of riots at the election of delegates to represent the congregation of the Cathedral in the synod soon to be convened. The Rev. Mr. Hamilton and others were roughly handled.

It is stated that several hundred barrels of unsound flour have been purchased in New York within a few days, at a price not exceeding $3 50 per barrel, which are to be used in distilling for the manufacture of whisky.

The ship Pomona, reported as lost on the Irish coast, belonged to Messrs. Howland and Frothingham, of New York. She was of 1,300 tons, three years old, and with her cargo, valued at $370,000.

Francis J. Q. Umsted, a lawyer, aged 35 years, shot himself with a pistol in his bed at the Clarendon Hotel, New York, on Tuesday morning. The deceased had just risen and had called his wife to prepare for breakfast.

The Detroit Advertiser asserts that within a week ninety-four fugitive slaves have crossed the river into Canada at that point. The same paper values the "stock" at ninety-four thousand dollars.

The City Clerk of Boston now receives an annual salary of $2,500. On Monday, the Board of Aldermen raised the salary to $3,600, but he declined the additional remuneration.

The owners of a town site called Helena, in Nebraska Territory, have donated one thousand lots to the German Emigration Society of St. Louis, on condition that the latter send two hundred families to locate there.

A dispatch from Leavenworth of the 12th inst says, during a violent hail storm this morning, the large unfinished frame building erected on the site of the Shotwell House, was completely demolished.

D. W. McLeary has been re-elected Mayor of Cumberland by ninety-three majority, and five out of six Americans have been elected to the Council.

An Irishman named James Burt, in New York, on Sunday last, went to visit a friend, got drunk, fell down stairs and fractured his skull. He died the following day.

The presses of the Petersburgh (Va.) Express are run with water power.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The steamers Weser and Hermes arrived this evening from Bremen, with Liverpool dates to the 3d instant. The reported wreck of the clipper ship Pomona proved to be true. She was wrecked off Wexford, Ireland, and 396 lives were lost. She had on board 396 passengers, and 52 of the crew, of whom 17 of the former and 3 of the latter were saved. The ship sunk in nine fathoms of water.

In regard to the war there can be but little doubt that war has commenced. In all probability, there was a sharp action at the Bridge of Buffalora on the 28th ult. It is reported that the Austrians after a considerable loss, took it at the point of the bayonet. It is also reported that Mortara had been taken, and that the Sardinians had retreated before the Austrians near the Lake Maggiore.

The telegraph lines to Switzerland have been cut by the Austrians.

VIENNA, May 1.—The Austrians have occupied Intra, Pallanza and Arona, the Sardinians retreating at their approach.

TURIN, April 28.—The steamer which arrived at Genoa on the 17th, brought a proclamation to the Tuscan army inviting it to await the signal of war, and advance in a compact body of 12,000 men to reinforce Piedmont. A similar proclamation has been addressed to the troops in the Romagna.

TURIN, April 29.—Generals Canrobert and Neil have arrived and gone to join the King. The Austrians are concentrating in great masses at Piacenza, where a proclamation has been issued by the Austrian Commissioner extraordinary.

Fifteen thousand of the French Imperial Guards land to-night at Genoa, making the force now there 40,000 men. The force at Novara is also increasing fast.

TURIN, April 28.—The official Bulletin announces the passage of the Ticino by the Austrians. Yesterday the King, accompanied by Generals Canrobert and Niel, visited the line of the river Dora. The corps Forney, which entered Piedmont by Gravellona, consists of twenty battalions and eight batteries of cannon.

TURIN, May 1.—The King has gone to assume the command. The Austrians are at Novara in force, and also at Pavia. The French Infantry and Artillery continue to arrive. No decisive movement has yet been made.

BERNE, April 30.—The Austrians seized several Sardinian vessels on Lake Maggiore, and commenced hostilities last evening.

VIENNA, April 30.—Count Buol has forwarded circular notes to the foreign Governments stating the diplomatic and political reasons for the declaration of war by the Emperor. The Wiener Zeitung publishes the Decree ordering the income tax of the third class to be retained by the pay of the officer immediately upon the interest of the public loan being paid, and ordering a loan of twenty million pounds sterling, but as at present it is impossible to contract it, the national bank will advance two-thirds of the nominal value of the loan in new notes. A third decree releases the national bank from the necessity of meeting its notes with specie, and a fourth ordering the duties and excise dues to be paid in silver or coupons of the national loan.

ENGLAND.—A royal proclamation has been issued, offering a bounty of ten pounds to seamen, with the intention of recruiting 10,000 additional men. The greatest activity prevails in the dock yards preparing for war.

The Emperor Napoleon was expected to join the French army on the 3d inst.

Instructions from the British admiralty were received at Woolwich, ordering all possible dispatch in the completion of the war first-class steam-frigates now on the stocks.

A telegram was received at Sheerness to send the Royal George to Devonport, the Colossus to Portsmouth, and the Argus, [illegible] and Trafalgar, are to be got ready for sea immediately. The Osborne steamer Yacht has been ordered to be got ready for immediate service. Its destination is reported to be the Mediterranean, to be placed at the disposal of the Prince of Wales. The Prussian government has resolved to put its army in readiness to march.

BREADSTUFFS.—Richardson & Spence quote the market buoyant, with a large speculative inquiry, at a considerable advance for all descriptions, but that it is impossible to give the figures.

PROVISIONS.—The market closed with an advancing tendency. Quotations are nominal but the speculative feeling continues.

PRODUCE.—[illegible] advanced for other articles for want of sale.

LONDON, May 1.—A great many failures are reported on the Stock exchange.

[illegible]

NEW YORK, May 18.—[illegible]

[illegible]

Eight thousand Austrians had arrived at Ancona.

TURIN, May 1st.—The King has left the capital to take command of the army. [illegible]

TUSCANY, April 30.—[illegible]

TUSCANY, April 30.—The Austrian Lloyds have discontinued their ships to foreign ports.

BERNE, May 1.—The Swiss [illegible] Federal Council [illegible] recent calling out of the [illegible] government. [illegible] measures: to open a credit, [illegible] commander-in-chief of the federal army.

PARIS, April 30.—It is rumored that [illegible] has broken out in Italy.

PARIS, May 1.—The Moniteur [illegible] circular note dated 19th of April [illegible] Count Walewski to the French representatives in foreign powers. [illegible]

PARIS, May 1.—The Grand Duke of Tuscany has left, after [illegible] and the new government has expressed [illegible] accession to Piedmont.

STUTTGART, May 1.—The Wurtemberg chambers have unanimously voted the government's projects for calling out the Landwehr and a forced levy of horses, and the opening of a war credit of seven millions of florins. [illegible] Private letters from Paris received in London express an apprehension that the new French loan will be offered in 4 1/2 per cent. stock at [illegible], being about 1 per cent. lower than the lowest price fixed in the issue of the Russian war. The Paris correspondent of the London Times says that it is rumored that M. Delangle quits the Cabinet.

The declaration of war against Austria was expected to appear in the Paris Moniteur of the 3d of May.

The Austrian Ambassador has not yet left Paris. The Vienna correspondent of the London Times says, that the Porte is preparing for war, and that Omar Pasha is on his way from Bagdad to Constantinople.

Sardinia has made proposals at Madrid to induce the Spanish government to join her in the cause of Italy, but Spain intends to be strictly neutral.

The following is the official letter of Prince Gortschakoff to the British Government:

"I do not deny that there may exist a treaty arrangement between France and Russia, but I can assure you in the most positive manner that such arrangement contains nothing that in the most distant manner could be interpreted as constituting a hostile alliance against Europe. If Lord Malmesbury should be questioned on the subject, he may answer with confidence. In the above sense I give you my personal guarantee that the declaration will not be belied by the future."

WARSAW, May 1.—The Czar Alexander in a telegram to the widow of the late Grand Duke, gives a denial to the reports that Prussia and Austria are threatened by Russia.

VIENNA, April 30.—The French Ambassador is to leave to-day.

GREAT BRITAIN.—The English elections for members of Parliament have resulted probably in favor of the Tories or Derby government. Saturday was said to be the decisive day. The elections on that day gave a net victory gain of ten.

The London Times city article of Monday evening announces an additional failure.

The approach of the Consol settlement of the 5th inst. was regarded with the greatest anxiety.

In London market wheat has advanced 2s.

ONE DAY LATER FROM EUROPE.

FATHER POINT, May 18.—The steamer North Briton has passed here with Liverpool dates to the 4th inst.

The steamers City of Baltimore and [illegible] had arrived out on the 4th.

Napoleon's manifesto appeared on the 3d inst.

The bank of France has raised the rate of discount from 3 to 4 per cent.

LIVERPOOL, May 3.—Sales of cotton for the past three days 70,000 bales; the advance has been 1/2d, the market closing dull. Breadstuffs closed dull and quiet, though all descriptions had considerably advanced. Provisions closed with an advancing tendency.

LONDON, May 3.—Consols closed at 89 1/2 a 90 1/4.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.
TERMS - - $2 IN ADVANCE.
THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

Stephen A. Douglas.

We sometimes hear from the Republican camp the mysterious whisper of "the treachery of Douglas." Treachery, to whom? Whom has he betrayed? The Republicans? When was he of their way of thinking? When did he forsake the great principles which he has upheld for years, and expounded with a force and eloquence that constituted him the leader, the champion, the [illegible] of the Democratic party? When he thought an innovation was sought to be made upon the principles for which he had struggled so earnestly, and fought so valiantly, in the admission of the territory of Kansas under the Lecompton Constitution, singly he stood, urging the line of Democrats to pause ere they rushed upon self-destruction. The voice of his country was paramount to all the extremities of friendship. He turned a deaf ear to the persuasive arguments of flattery and promise, and maintained with a nerve untrembling and a faith unshrinking, the sentiment enshrined in the Kansas-Nebraska act, and incorporated in the Cincinnati platform, that the people of the territories had the right to determine their domestic institutions and manage their affairs in their own way subject alone to the Constitution of the United States.

In Congress and out of Congress, he has stood by that great principle. He triumphed in a campaign unrivalled in the political annals of the country. Single handed and alone, he not only beat back the assailants marshaled by his legitimate adversaries, the Republicans, but he prostrated beneath his feet the miserable minions of a revengeful power which sought his overthrow and defeat. The American people looked on with admiration at his wonderful prowess and unexampled energies. They can never forget the terrific contest in Illinois, or cease to feel sympathy in his glorious triumph.

A visiting himself of the more delicious climate of the South, he turned from his usual route to Washington, and visited the cities that adorned the banks of the Mississippi, and at St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg and New Orleans, where he was received with the most cordial congratulations, and returned his acknowledgments, [illegible] the same sentiments that had borne his standard triumphantly in his own State. His opponents sought to disparage him by declaring that he made the same speech everywhere! He could not, would not alter his opinions to suit the latitude, and to his glory and honor be it spoken, they were received with the popular approbation wherever uttered. They were in accordance with the great popular heart which thrilled and echoed to the vibrations of his voice.

Returning to Congress, he was assailed, personally and violently by those to whose political [illegible] his superiority was a terror and [illegible]. He bore himself like a man. Disdaining to resort to the meaner argument of [illegible], he planted himself upon his record and defied his enemies to do their worst, believing that time and returning sense would do him justice and magnify his foes. Where stands he now? Where he always stood, on the side of the people, and the eyes that glared on him malignantly but a few months since, are beaming with more tenderness in their inviting smile.

Whom has he betrayed? To whom has he been [illegible]? Did the Republicans think because they followed him in his resistance to the effort to force the Lecompton Constitution upon Kansas, that he would join them in a general onslaught upon the Democratic party? He never defeated the Democratic party any more than he [illegible] his own devotion to popular sovereignty [illegible] intervention by Congress with the rights of the people in the territories. He opposed a majority of the Democrats in Congress upon a measure, to resist which his whole past career was pledged—a majority who were more pliable under the manipulations of Executive influence than himself; but not the Democratic party. He did not contend for the expedient, but the right. He gave vitality to the tenets of the Cincinnati Platform, and he stood where pledged to carry it out. Had he done less he would not have deserved that triumph in Illinois, on which no diplomatic or political achievement of the last decade has been half so brilliant, or will remain impressed so long upon the memory of the people.

He resisted the Lecompton urged by the President. So did the Republicans. Did that make Mr. Douglas one of them? True, they applauded his course to the echo, and not a few exalted the dawn of a new era, of the breaking up of the old parties, of the formation of a new party, with Mr. Douglas at their head. Some thought the North-west had never been treated with proper respect or had received her fair share of political recognition (and the Ohio Statesman thought so too, whatever it may think now) and it was time she should assert her rights, and Mr. Douglas was the man for the times.—But when Lecompton was killed, and its specimen was shown in the English Conference measure, as a living thing, where was Mr. Douglas? Did he swear that his arm should wither before he would resort to such a miserable subterfuge, and then meanly record his vote in its behalf? No. He stood by the principles for which he had contended. With whatever [illegible] he found himself opposed to those with whom he had been proud to co-operate, when he could do so honestly, honorably and consistently, yet he maintained his principles.

"[illegible]"

Did the Republicans stand by him when he returned to Illinois? Did they call off their colors, and cease the clamor of their drums? No.—They warred upon him to the knife and the knife to the hilt. They found an ally in his personal foes who sought to avenge his contumely in opposing their [illegible] measures, who denounced him and sought to read him out of the Democratic party. He fought the double-headed adversary, and he conquered. The plaudits of an admiring nation and a renown to the American people were his guerdon.

Then where is his treachery? He is no traitor, but now is, as he has always been, a true, faithful, unswerving, consistent Democrat. He was vilified, maligned by an unscrupulous press. Untiring efforts were made to misconstrue his every act, to misrepresent his position, to place him falsely before the Democratic party and the nation, but he stood unmoved. He would not quarrel—he despised the puny efforts of malignant revilers—he pursued the even tenor of his way, giving support to such measures as he believed for the interest of his country, and remaining to the last, in argument the most irresistible and overwhelming, the true principles of the Cincinnati Platform as illustrated in the issues of 1856.

Then, who calls STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS traitor? Is it a Republican? When did he give his allegiance to the Republican party, or when did that party evince fealty to him? Is it a Democrat? When did he cease to be a Democrat? When did he forsake the great principles of popular sovereignty and non-intervention by Congress in the territories? When did he by act or word seek to destroy that vital principle, which is the basis of our freedom and our nationality, that government must depend upon the consent of the governed and political power is an inspiration from the people? He has been true to his country. He has borne with patience, if not with meekness, the indignity of being displaced from the chairmanship of the Committee on Territories which he had so long filled with consummate statesmanship, contenting himself to let ruffianism and ignoble passion waste themselves in fruitless efforts to injure, and he stands now towering in his manhood strength, his gallant plume waving like some banner around which the Democrats will rally for the victory in 1860.

The Kansas-Nebraska Bill.

As a difference of opinion with regard to the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, seems to exist in some quarters, we reproduce a portion of the remarks of Mr. DOUGLAS, which represents the matter so lucidly that it will be almost impossible to misunderstand it, after reading the extract. It is all-important that the subject should be thoroughly understood at this time, and it would be absurd in us to attempt to retouch that which has been finished by the hand of a master:

"That was the distinct understanding among the northern and southern Democrats at that time, and among all the friends of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. It was agreed that while we might differ as to the extent of the power of the Territorial Legislature on these questions, we would make a full grant of legislative authority to the Legislature of the Territory, with the right to pass such laws as they chose, and the right of anybody to appeal to the courts to decide upon the validity and constitutionality of such laws, but not to come to Congress for their annulment. Hence, if the Territorial Legislature should pass the Maine Liquor law, and anybody was dissatisfied with the provisions of that act, and thought it violated his constitutional right, he could not come to Congress for its annulment, but could appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States; and if that court decided the law to be constitutional, it must stand, no matter how obnoxious it might be to any portion of the American people. If it was unconstitutional, it became void without any interference by Congress or any other legislative body. The Kansas-Nebraska bill was thus amended for the avowed purpose, at the time, of striking out the appeal to Congress, and substituting the appeal to the court.

"After we had gone that far, a Senator from New Hampshire pointed out in the Nebraska bill the fact that no appeal could be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States unless the amount of property in controversy was $2,000 in value, and hence that a negro could not appeal for his freedom, nor could the owner of a single slave appeal to the Supreme Court to establish his title, if he thought that his rights were violated. In order to obviate that objection, we amended the bill by providing that where the title to property in slaves, or any question of personal freedom was the point in issue, the right of appeal to the Supreme Court should exist without reference to the amount in controversy.

"Thus the Kansas-Nebraska bill stood, granting all rightful power of legislation on all subjects whatsoever to the Territorial Legislature, subject only to the Constitution of the United States, provided they should not pass any law taxing the property of non-residents higher than that of residents, nor any law interfering with the primary disposition of the soil, nor impose any tax on the property of the United States. But there was no exception made as to slavery. The intent was to confer on the Territorial Legislature all the power we had on the subject of slavery, to let them wield it for or against free institutions, as the people of the Territory chose; and the understanding was, that we would abide by whatever laws they might make, provided they did not violate the Constitution of the United States; and the Supreme Court was the only tribunal that could decide that question.

"Now, sir, I stand on the Kansas-Nebraska bill as it was expounded and understood at the time, with this full power in the Territorial Legislature, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court to test the validity of its laws, and no right whatever to appeal to Congress to repeal them in the event of our not liking them. I am ready to answer the inquiry of the Senator from Mississippi, whether, if I believed the Maine liquor law to be unconstitutional and wrong, and if a Territorial Legislature should pass it, I would vote here to annul it? I tell him no. If the people of Kansas want a Maine liquor law, let them have it. If they do not want it, let them refuse to pass it. If they do pass it, and any citizen thinks that law violates the Constitution, let him make a case and appeal to the Supreme Court. If the court sustains his objection, the law is void. If it overrules the objection, the decision must stand until the people, who alone are to be affected by it, who alone have an interest in it, may choose to repeal it. So I say with reference to slavery. Let the Territorial Legislature pass just such laws in regard to slavery as they think they have a right to enact under the Constitution of the United States. If I do not like those laws, I will not vote to repeal them; if you do not like them, you must not vote to repeal them; but anybody aggrieved may appeal to the Supreme Court, and if they are constitutional, they must stand; if they are not constitutional, they are void. That was the doctrine of non-intervention, as it was understood at the time the Kansas-Nebraska bill was passed. That is the way it was explained and argued in the Senate and in the House of Representatives and before the country. It was distinctly understood that Congress was never to intervene for or against slavery, or for or against any other institution in the Territories; but leave the courts to decide all constitutional questions as they might arise, and the President to carry the decrees of the courts into effect; and, in case of resistance to his authority in executing the judicial process, that he was to use, if necessary, the whole military force of the country, as provided by existing laws.

"I know that some gentlemen do not like the doctrine of non-intervention as well as they once did. It is now becoming fashionable to talk sneeringly of 'your doctrine of non-intervention.' Sir, that doctrine has been a fundamental article in the Democratic creed for years. It has been repeated over and over again in every national Democratic platform—non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories. The Nebraska bill was predicated on that idea—the Territorial Legislature to have jurisdiction over all rightful subjects of legislation, not excepting slavery, with no appeal to Congress, but a right to appeal to the courts; and the legislation to be void, if the Supreme Court said it was unconstitutional, and valid, no matter how obnoxious, if the court said it was constitutional. Let me call attention to the language of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. Its fourteenth section provides:

"'That the Constitution and all laws of the United States, which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect in the said Territory of Nebraska as elsewhere within the United States, except the eighth section of the act preparatory to the admission of Missouri into the Union,' approved March 6, 1820, which being inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories, as recognized by the legislation of 1850, commonly called the compromise measures, is hereby declared inoperative and void; it being the true intent and meaning of this act not to legislate slavery into any State or Territory, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States.'

"Thus, in the Nebraska bill, it is declared that a Congressional enactment on the subject of slavery is inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories. This same article of faith has gone into the various Democratic platforms, and especially into the Cincinnati platform. Every Democrat, therefore, is pledged, by this platform and the organization of the party, against any legislation of Congress in the Territories for or against slavery, no matter how obnoxious the Territorial legislation may be. If it is unconstitutional, you have your remedy; go to the court and test the question. If it is constitutional, you have agreed that the people of a Territory may have it. I hold you to the agreement."

HYDROPHOBIA.—A writer in the Providence, (R. I.) Journal furnishes the following prescription for hydrophobia:—"Eat the green shoots of asparagus raw: sleep and perspiration will be induced, and the disease can thus be cured in any stage of canine madness." A man in Athens, Greece, was cured by this remedy after the paroxysms had commenced.

For this dreadful malady many "remedies" have been proposed, the most approved being an unlimited quantity of whisky; but we have seen none so simple and innocent as the above. Properly boiled and with the addition of drawn butter and a little salt, the tender shoots of asparagus are most delicate and to say delicious as an esculent. The case adduced of its efficacy in a green and raw state is a long way off, and whoever may have been bitten by a rabid animal would have more consolation of its efficacy could be established nearer home. However there is no harm in trying so simple a prescription.

FAST HORSES BURNED TO DEATH.—The stables of WILLIAM SHAW, at the Union Course, Long Island, N. Y., were destroyed by fire on Saturday afternoon. There were several first class trotting horses in the stables, all of which were rescued, with the exception of Lady Shaw, George Washington and Kate Miller, which were consumed in the flames. George Washington was a horse of great speed, having trotted two miles to a wagon in less than five minutes; his time was supposed to be 2:23 or 2:24. He was owned by Mr. F. J. NODINE, who had refused $4,000 for him. The three horses were valued at over $8,000.

CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS AND CINCINNATI RAILROAD.—The receipts of this road for the month of April, 1857, were as follow:

Freight	[illegible]
Passengers, [illegible]	[illegible]
Rents	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
April, 1858	[illegible]
Decrease	[illegible]

No More Negro Voting.

The Legislature of Ohio, at its recent session, passed a law to do away with every shade of negro voting whatsoever. Heretofore, negroes of mixed blood were allowed to vote, and in many places, especially in the Black-Republican Western Reserve, negroes as black as Egyptian midnight were permitted to vote with as much freedom as white men, and a little more, especially if the white men were so unfortunate as to be born in Germany, England or Ireland!

Thanks to our Democratic Legislature, this whole system of iniquitous voting has been pulled up by the roots; and hereafter no person of African descent, in whole or in part, dare without subjecting himself to imprisonment in the county jail for not more than three and not less than one month. And any person who shall procure, aid, assist, counsel or advise another, knowing him to be of African descent, to vote at any election, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, and be imprisoned in the county jail from one to six months.

If the Legislature had not passed another law but this, they would have richly earned for themselves the appellation of "good and faithful servant." This is a glorious triumph of right over wrong—of the Constitution over fanaticism.—[Mt. Vernon Banner.

The foregoing extract from the Mt. Vernon Banner, is a fair specimen of the boasted sympathy for freedom, which the Democracy have arrogated to themselves during the past four years. The next step will probably be the establishment of property qualification for the white electors preliminary to a total abolition of the elective franchise.—[Mansfield Herald.

The approbation expressed by the Banner of the act of the Legislature, is very natural, for the law was really needed. The Election law, under the constitution, was construed to suit neighborhood whims and political sentimentalities. A stupid decision of the Supreme court that any negro having more white blood than African, was entitled to vote, was very freely inculcated where abolition sentiments prevailed. It was an unequal law and did not operate alike throughout the State. Nor do we expect the provisions of the present statute to be very stringently applied in certain localities, as it has been already announced that a Grand Jury in Portage county has had the honor of ignoring it.

The commentary of the Mansfield Herald, if intended to convey the sentiments of that paper, expresses what some of its colleagues attempt most vociferously to deny as any part of theirs. When they were told that the tendency of their doctrines was to negro equality, they derided the idea, but the Herald is not so dainty. It as much as declares this law, which withholds the right of suffrage from the negro, to be adverse to freedom and the first step to "a property qualification of the white electors." With whose prerogative does it conflict? Upon whose right does it encroach? Because it declares a principle incorporated in the Constitution, the Herald argues that the next step will be to enact what the constitution forbids. Non sequitur.

Are the sentiments of the Mansfield Herald those of the Republican party? Is that issue to be urged in the coming canvass? Will the Republicans appeal to the people of Ohio, to endorse the sentiment of negro equality, and charge that a Democratic Legislature invaded their rights by denying them the privilege of voting? That is the extent of the argument, if such it can be called; and if it be not, let us hear no more outcry against a wise provision of the law, which Republicans as well as Democrats should respect, and which was contemplated by the framers of our State Constitution. If it be part of the Republican creed that negroes should vote, say so. If they desire only to extend the privilege to mulattoes, let it not rest in doubt. The Democrats have taken their stand. They have unequivocally declared that they shall not vote, and it remains with their opponents to make war upon the statute, and say that it must be repealed. Will they place themselves "upon the cast and stand the hazard of the die?"

Slave Code in the Territories.

The proper understanding of this troublesome question at this time in the Democratic party, may best be obtained from the passage between Mr. DOUGLAS and Mr. GREEN, during the great speech of the former in the Senate of the United States on the 23d of February last.

MR. MASON. Will the Senator be kind enough to explain what he means by slave code?

MR. DOUGLAS. Yes sir. The Senator from Mississippi defined it very well in his speech. His position was, that while the Constitution gave him the right of protection in a Territory for his slave property, it did not, of itself, furnish adequate protection. He drew a distinction between the right and the fact, and said that the protection could only be furnished by legislation; that legislation could only come from one of two sources—the Territorial Legislature or the Congress of the United States. He would look to the Territorial Legislature in the first instance. If he got adequate legislation there, he was content; but if the Territorial Legislature failed to act, and give him that adequate legislation, in the form of what is commonly called a slave code, such non-action was equivalent to a denial of his rights; and, losing his rights, it was no consolation to him that he had been deprived of them by the non-action of a Territorial Legislature; and hence he would demand of Congress the passage of laws to protect his slaves, and to punish men for running them off; to furnish such remedies for the violation of his rights as he thought he was entitled to from the Territorial Legislature. He said he would demand this from Congress.

MR. BROWN. Because the Territorial Legislature was the creature of Congress.

MR. DOUGLAS. He further said that he would base his demand on Congress to pass this slave code on the ground that the Territorial Legislature was the creature of Congress; and, if it did not do its duty, Congress should pass such laws as were necessary to protect slave property in the Territories.

MR. GREEN. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a single question?

MR. DOUGLAS. Certainly.

MR. GREEN. If a law merely providing protection is to be called a slave code, then, I ask, if larceny, in general terms, were punished by the Territorial law, and the Legislature should except the larceny of slaves, would he say he would submit to that at the option of the Legislature?

MR. DOUGLAS. It is immaterial to me, whether you call this legislation a slave code, or by any other name. I will call it by any name the Senator chooses. I wish to be understood, however, and to use such language as conveys the idea. I take the language of the Senator from Mississippi, if that is satisfactory. All I have to say, on the point presented by the Senator from Missouri, is this: while our Constitution does not provide remedies for stealing negroes, it does not provide remedies for stealing dry goods, or horses, or any other species of property. You cannot protect any property in the Territories, without laws furnishing remedies for its violation, and penalties for its abuse. Nobody pretends that you are going to pass laws in Congress making a criminal code for the Territories, with reference to other species of property. The Congress of the United States never yet passed an act creating a criminal code for any organized Territory. It simply organizes the Territory, and leaves its Legislature to make its own criminal code. Congress never passed a law to protect any species of property in the organized Territories; it leaves its protection to the Territorial Legislature.—The question is, whether we shall make an exception as to slavery? The Supreme Court makes no such distinction. It recognizes slavery as property. When they are taken to a Territory, they are on an equal footing with other property, and dependent upon the same system of legislation, for protection, as other property. While all other property is dependent on Territorial legislation for protection, I hold that slave property must look to the same authority for its protection.

NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN PRESIDENTS.—"When Mr. BUCHANAN'S term ends, eleven years will have elapsed since the office of President has been held by a Southern man." This is the expression of most of the Southern Democratic journals. It may not be amiss to add to the above, that since the foundation of the government Southern men have occupied the Presidential chair forty-nine years; and North ermen, at the close of Mr. BUCHANAN'S term, but twenty-four years.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR HOLMSTEAD.—Prof. DENNISTON HOLMSTEAD, LL. D., expired at his residence in New Haven, Conn., on Wednesday, the 11th, aged 69 years. He graduated at Yale College in 1813, was elected Professor of chemistry in North Carolina in 1815, and served 10 years.—When there he made a geological survey of that State—the first state survey made in this country—and in 1825 he was elected Professor of mathematics and natural philosophy in Yale College, which place he filled at the time of his death.

Democratic State Convention.

A delegate Convention is to be held in this city on the 26th inst., for the purpose of nominating candidates for Governor, Auditor, Secretary and Treasurer of State, Supreme Court Judge, Member of Board of Public Works, and Commissioner of Public Schools.

Our exchanges with the Democratic press of Ohio is yet comparatively limited, and we have not received the proceedings of the various county conventions that have been held, and therefore have not the names of the delegates who have been already appointed.

We have already noticed the resolutions adopted and delegates appointed in Clark county. Also the proceedings of the meeting in Pickaway county. We learn that in Washington county, all is right. A friend writes to the "People P ess:"

"We have appointed delegates to the May Convention, and you may be sure old Washington sends none but bold, out and out Douglas men. We are for JEWETT for Governor, if he does not decline. I wish to see the doctrines of the Cincinnati Platform endorsed by that convention, and men with a small quantity of 'Democratic blood in their veins,' placed upon the ticket."

In Highland, on the 14th inst., that veteran and distinguished Democrat, Gen. J. J. McDowell addressed a meeting of the Democracy and stated the object to be the selection of delegates to attend the State Convention, to be held in Columbus on the 26th inst.; whereupon the following were chosen: Wm. Miller, J. I. Hughes, Abel Harts, J. H. Blackburn, Thomas Boyd, Robert Walley, G. W. Tucker, R. D. Lilley, Wyatt Hunelley, John Larrie, W. W. Malcom, Benj. Pearce, Daniel Miller, Z. Manker, Wm. Long, J. C. Stine, Dr. Dixon, Allen Hulson, J. W. Sprnger, T. Faris, N. W. Cummins, Christopher Muthews, H. Surber, B. Schwartz, A. Hurst, M. Boatman, W. Conard, and David Lowman.

In Franklin county a primary election of delegates was held on Saturday last, with the following result, as far as ascertained, several townships not having reported.

FIRST WARD—Henry Wilson, U. W. Butt, M. Conlan, W. McFarland and J. B. Marshall.

SECOND WARD—John J. Elds, Patrick Dun, Thos. Arnold and John B. Thompson.

THIRD WARD—Elias Gaver, Thomas Sparrow, Wm. Domigan and D. H. Mooney.

FOURTH WARD—S. Doyle, O. P. Hines, Fred. Fieser, John H. Reel, F. Parnol, John Lutz.

FIFTH WARD—J. Sibernagle J. J. Funston, W. Seliger, C. Born, Ed. Davis, F. Bader, F. Beck, D. Kates, P. Hall, John Bader.

Franklin Township—John Keller, John Riter William Hunter, John Gore. The meeting instructed its delegates to vote for delegates to the State Convention favorable to the nomination of A. P. Edgerton for Governor, and Wm, D. Morgan for Treasurer of State.

Montgomery Township—Edward Livingston, Michael Kingeal, John H. Earhart, P. P. Rice, A. C. King.

PERRY TOWNSHIP—Newton Blyh and John Bickett.

The national Democrat of Monday calls upon the Democracy of Cuyahoga county, to take steps for the appointment of Delegates.

Before we issue another paper, the Convention will have assembled, and the result of its proceedings may be expected in our next.

The following gentlemen have declined a nomination for Governor: Henry B. Payne Geo. W. McCook, Allen G. Thurman, J. J. Faran.

The following have not declined: A. P Edgerton, H. J. Jewett, Gen. J. J. McDowell.

We hope to see a large, enthusiastic and harmonious convention of Democrats, and that they will give such an endorsement of the Cincinnati Platform as will be felt throughout the Union.

Any thing to Beat a Democrat.

The "Lancaster Gazette" has changed hands, to its very great improvement in every respect. It is now conducted by Messrs. E. M. CLARKE and J. M. SUTPHEN. It opposes the Democratic party, and will "oppose the extension of Slavery," but strange to say "will not advocate its abolition" being "in favor of States, Rights and willing to accord our brethren of the south, the right to control their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States." Quite as strange, for an opponent of the Democratic party, determined to "lay bear its errors and expose its entire destitution of principle," the GAZETTE disclaims being in favor of negro equality and "will not advocate" it, "deeming that doctrine a fallacy, opposed to the best interests of society, and because they deem the negro morally, socially and intellectually incapacitated to discharge the duties and obligations of independent sovereignty." Well, all we have to say is that on the nigger, the "Gazette" is a pretty good Democrat, because what it says about extension is a mere abstraction any how —a hobby on which to ride when one is tired of plain common sense. The fact is, however, the "Gazette" is in favor of opposition to the Democracy and holds to the old Whig doctrine, "any thing to beat a Democrat"—a fair enough doctrine for those who like it, but should they accomplish their object who would reap the benefit? Opposition to the Democracy does not constitute principles. There would be no distribution or division of the "spoils." It would be advancing those who do believe in negro equality—who do advocate its abolition; and think it their duty to interfere with the rights of the South, and do interfere every day. The Republicans would have stomach for all the loaves and fishes, and the so-called opposition, who ar swilling to do any thing and be any thing to beat the "Democracy," would find themselves the worst-fooled men that ever trifled with the right of suffrage. The REPUBLICAN Legislature of 1856, which was elected as AMERICAN—what became of it? In a single session the American plank was pulled from under them, and dropped them all into the Republican trap, except DAN MCFARLAND, now of Kansas, who boasted that he was "the only original package left."

THE REVOLUTION IN TUSCANY.—The war panic in Europe has disposed of—or rather deposed—one of the European tyrants—the Grand Duke of Tuscany. His army and the people turned against him the moment that they found it safe to express their feelings. This incident more forcibly illustrates the hatred of Austrian domination in Italy than any commentary that could be written. Speaking of the revolt in Tuscany, the London Times says:

"Tuscany has declared in favor of Italian Independence, or, in other words, has cast its lot with France and Piedmont. Of all the Italian States the Grand Duchy has been the most misgoverned since 1815; but even there, the rulers, in the hour of trial, find a long score of arrears which they must now discharge. Even so short a while back as 1848, the present Grand Duke might have conciliated to himself the good-will and respect of his people—for his, in truth, had never been a grinding tyranny. The farmers and peasantry of that rich valley of the Arno had lived happily and peacefully enough under his rule, and they remembered it to him in the hour of his need. When he absconded—for there is no other term in which to describe the manner of his precipitate flight—after the events of 1848, he was recalled by the affections of his people, and tranquilly replaced on his petty throne. The return he made was to fill the Archduchy with Austrian troops, and to convert it into a mere satrapy of Austria. He had sworn to a Constitution—he repealed it. He violated every promise, express or implied, which he had made in the midst of the turmoil of that eventful year. The reactionary policy of the little Tuscan court was tolerated with singular discretion and forbearance by the people. The desire to free themselves from the despotism of Austria was there, but they engaged in no idle plots, and gave no excuse to their foreign taskmasters for the infliction of useless misery and pain. They had made up their minds to abide their time, and the time has arrived at last.

A correspondent writing from Leavenworth, Kansas, abbreviates the name of that town thus: "11 worth."

"The True State of the Case."

The Statesman, as we foretold last week, denies that it advised the postponement of the Democratic State Convention, and says that the State Journal in hinting such a thing "perned a naked lie." We are not at all astonished at the effrontery of the Statesman. We said it would do precisely what it has done. It was well fixed on that score. Its chief editor, (although his name has been taken down from the head of the paper,) is par excellence "Sec. Dem. Ex. Com." and called the Central Committee together, assuming to act for the President and Secretary. Yet the Statesman denies that it advised the postponement.

The same editor of the Statesman addressed the Central Committee when assembled, advising the postponement of the State Convention, giving his reasons. And yet the Statesman says its a lie that it advised a postponement! The tactics of the Statesman are visible. While TOM MILLER "beats up recruits among the delegates," and the writing editor of the Statesman calls a meeting of the Committee and urges it to postpone, the paper is mum, in order that it may come out on the winning side. "Oute Millerism that and very clever in MAKESHIFT. The editor who wrote it's a lie that the Statesman advised the postponement, was the same individual who called together the committee and urged the postponement. What reliability there is in the Statesman, except re-lie-ability it is not necessary to expatiate upon. We have presented "the true state of the case," and were not the slightest surprised, because we knew something of the secret arrangement, and were prepared for just what followed.

We take the foregoing from the CITY FACT, which charged that the "Statesman" would deny having favored a postponement of the State Convention. The call for the meeting of the Central Committee having appeared for some time in the "Statesman," signed by the acting and associate editor of that paper, as Secretary of the Executive Committee, probably taking upon himself to make the call unauthorized by the President and Secretary of the Central Committee, would rather implicate the "Statesman" in the movement for a postponement, especially as there was no earthly business besides for which the Committee was called. The call first appeared in the "Statesman," was made by its editor, and there the responsibility unquestionably rests.

The thing is over now, and cannot be remedied; but it should teach presumption a lesson, and should also be remembered hereafter in entrusting so delicate a power where it may be abused through wilfulness or ignorance. It may have been imagined that the fate of the whole Democratic party was under the special guardianship of the acting editor of the "Statesman," who was likewise the Secretary of the Executive Committee; and so thought the Convention should be postponed! The President of the Executive Committee, who was in the city was not consulted; or if spoken to at all, did not approve the call and was opposed to the proposed postponement. It is needless for the "Statesman" to try to wriggle out of the predicament; because, what the call was for was confined to that paper, which refrained from broaching the subject, lest objections should be raised and the purpose on which it was set might be defeated. It is understood by those who are familiar with the mode by which the Columbus Postmaster, one of the proprietors of the "Statesman," manages his political schemes, that this is his way; and we regard it as highly important and beneficial to the party, if this was one of his inventions, that it was frustrated. It was shallow and preposterous, and undignified; and would have been discreditable to the party if it had succeeded.—The attempt belongs to the "Statesman," and no where else; and hard names will not relieve it of unnecessarily calling together the Central Committee, when a single word would have saved the gentlemen composing that Committee both useless trouble and expense.

The Italian Question.

The Statesman seems determined to break the necks of LOUIS NAPOLEON and VICTOR EMMANUEL. It still harps on the "Italian question," and with the instinct of such natures, takes the side of the despot against liberty. Of course it makes out the present head of the French nation a great scoundrel, and sets down his as "the worst and most reckless government among civilized nations." We do not set ourselves up to defend the course of LOUIS NAPOLEON, either as abstractly right, or against the puissant assault of the Statesman, which seems to have better understood the politic and ambitious French Emperor, than did the British statesmen who crowded honors upon him, and seemed delighted with the cordial friendship between the two nations. The strong picture of the devastation of France by the monarch who is "sucking her life-blood," must charm the readers of the Statesman; and they must feel the most intense joy over the prospect that "the French people will hurl him from power."

Who takes "a one-sided view" of the Italian question? Who jumps at the conclusion that the European struggle has been systematically planned by LOUIS NAPOLEON, who has determined to shove out Austria that he may step in himself? Why, he who prefers the despotism of Austria to the friendship and alliance of France.

We have shown in a former article that the system pursued by Austria, if successful, enslaves Italy, crushes altogether its independence, disturbs the balance of power of Europe, and endangers France. We make no prophecies. It is absurd to speculate upon intentions, or attempt to explain the diplomacy which is not yet revealed. Good may be accomplished by the resistance to, and repulse of, the schemes of Austria, which for long has contemplated the reduction of the King of Sardinia to a vassalage which his independent and honorable spirit resists. Our sympathies are always upon the side of those struggling for independence. We did not refuse the aid and co-operation of France when our country was in arms against the tyranny of Great Britain, although some such arguments as are now used might have been urged against such an alliance.

The next arrival will be looked for with solicitude. If war be in progress, nations will have taken their positions, and the reader, who is just as well posted as we are, or the Statesman can be at this time, will be able to judge how far LOUIS NAPOLEON would be permitted to assume the position coveted by Austria, if such be his contemplation.

—The foregoing was intended for Saturday's paper, but was accidentally omitted. Since then, there have been two arrivals, which bring intelligence that war is progressing, the successes being on the Austrian side. The particulars will be found in the telegraph columns. They leave no doubt of war. We shall next hear that England has taken sides with France in aid of Sardinia, to resist the further advance of the Austrian forces.

THE EXTRADITION TREATY—THE TYLER CASE.—The Governor-General of Canada, through the British Minister at Washington, has made a demand upon this government for the surrender of Deputy Marshal TYLER, who shot the captain of the American brig Concord, of Cleveland, while laying in Sarnia, in Canada. TYLER a short time since was tried in Michigan, and convicted of manslaughter.

They now demand his surrender under the Ashburton extradition treaty. There are questions of law involved in the case which require it to be laid before the Attorney-General, who has the case now under consideration.

DEATH OF BISHOP DOANE.—Right Rev. G. W DOANE, Bishop of New Jersey, died at his residence, in Burlington, Wednesday night or early Thursday morning, aged 60. He was elected in 1832.

"Sons of Liberty."

The people of the Western Reserve are in a fair way to distinguish themselves in their headlong and infatuated zeal for a folly, to use so innocent and harmless a name for a crime, instigated if not invented by Joshua R. Giddings. With the madness of devotees and enthusiasts, they seem to disregard their obligations to their country, to their fellow citizens, to law, in the vain pursuit of a shadow. They trample on rights guarantied and acknowledged, for what they call human rights. They fairly worship the negro with the abjectness paid by the ancient Egyptians to the filthiest reptiles of the Nile. And yet these same people are sensible in other respects; feel and act like other men; have kindred sympathies, likes and antipathies, are melted to tears at tales of wo, or excited to laughter by that which is ridiculous; are proud or humble like other people; liberal or avaricious, drive close bargains or are free in their generosity, and by no means exacting in trade. They sometimes, however, have scruples against taking life by law, as in the instance of Hiram Cole who poisoned his wife, but they hadn't the heart to hang him. The highest crime known in their calendar, is that of capturing a runaway negro, and restoring him to his master. This with the followers of Joshua is a capital offence and deserves hanging.

The other day in Jefferson, Ashtabula county, where the "venerable patriarch" resides, they "set the ball in motion" upon a platform which throws in the shade all other platforms and adopted a constitution, presented by their high priest, enrolling themselves as "Sons of Liberty," and pledged themselves to do monstrous things to put down that contrivance of Beelzebub, the Fugitive Slave Law.

As a specimen of the "law and order" that must predominate in such an organization of madmen and fanatics, we present their platform to which there was not a dissenting voice—not one:

"Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with our friends, now in prison in Cleveland, for their devotion to liberty, and assure them that when the Judiciary of our State shall refuse relief, and the necessity for action by the people will become obvious, we pledge ourselves that no prison shall hold them.

"That a system of slavery, which not only fetters the body, but shuts out the truth and knowledge from the human understanding, constitutes a crime at which humanity shudders.

"That those who will aid in committing such crime deserve and should meet the fate of the worst of criminals.

"That the enactment known as the Fugitive Slave Law, was conceived in the enemies of the Union, and violates the spirit as well as the express language of the Federal Constitution. In its terms, it is wantonly insulting to a free people. It violates the rights of these States, and is intolerably tyrannical and oppressive in its character. No person possessing the spirit of freedom will respect or obey it.

"That the recent order from Washington directing the Marshal to resist the service of the habeas corpus in favor of the prisoners, and thereby suspend the Constitution of our State and that of the United States, is but a fitting indication of the character of that law, and of the means by which it must be inforced.

"That if the people of the Western Reserve submit to such insolence, they deserve the name of slaves.

"That in view of the circumstances in which we are surrounded, we call upon the people of our several townships to hold meetings and take measures for an efficient organization of those who are willing to act, in this hour of Freedom's peril—by reviving the ancient order of the 'Sons of Liberty,' or adopting such other measures as shall best prepare us to meet the impending emergencies."

The question naturally arises: Are these men sincere? Or are they mere hypocrites and and pretenders, who like the Mormon Elders avail themselves of predominating credulity and infatuation to root out the virtues and plant vices in the hearts of their fellow citizens? It were well to know how far these defiants of law, these self-constituted "regulators" and executioners under the "higher law," are countenanced by the Republican party, (of whom, at least, they are one wing,) and whether their voice will be potential in the coming Second of June Convention. It is said that they intend to demand a habeas corpus from the Supreme Court for the liberation of the Cleveland convicts, Bushnell and Langston; and unless Judge SWAN shall submit to their demands, they will insist upon running SPALDING, and in case they cannot get him, to defeat SWAN any how.

The conviction and sentence of Bushnell and Langston, instead of allaying the excitement of these deluded enthusiasts, seems to have driven them to still greater absurdities, and their threats of violence, echoing the sentiments of Giddings, passes, if they excite no apprehension, on the public ear.

The "Sons of Liberty" as organized on the Reserve, is nothing more or less than a mob, associated and banded for mob purposes, and should they have occasion to put in practice their crude and wild notions of what constitutes their mission, their madness will find that it has "brought their pigs to a poor market."

We sincerely regret these outbursts of ungovernable passion. Joshua will never be wiser, or better. It is indeed lamentable that he has any influence; but who need express surprise at any thing, after Jo. Smith and Brigham Young prospered to the extent they did, under the banner of Humbug and Fanaticism?

Don't Die in Cuba.

To die is not very agreeable, be it any where, or at any time, although some one has sung

"Oh it's sweet to die in Spring-time."

In Cuba, where eternal summer reigns, and the garner is filled with two crops the year, being like Grimes's hen:

"For every day she laid two eggs,
And Sunday she laid three."

it is peculiarly distressing to "shuffle off this mortal coil." Now, a burial at sea is mournful enough, and the ceremony exceedingly imposing; but a few solemn words, while the sun looks down brightly and the calm ocean turns up its placid face, as smooth as a mirror, or dimpled with golden smiles, a sullen plunge, and all is over. The memory of the scene fades dimly away. There are no after-claps. But, there in that land of flowers, where we so much wish to call death is more than ordinarily a serious thing to contemplate, whether rich or poor. To Dives, who cannot take his gold with him, it may be a matter of less consequence, but the poor devil might just as well die at Mauritius, where at times they "kick the bucket" in such numbers, they are merely cast outside the city walls to feast the hogs.

"That bright little isle our own,"

If it cost something to LIVE on the island, it is not less expensive to DIE. Yet the invalid bends thither, as the Moslem hies to Mecca, as a DERNIER RESORT for his salvation. There is salubrity in its mountain air, and its breezes from the sea, and the monotony of its climate if one have the means of paying for such luxuries; but to die there is not to be thought of. One who has had experience (not that he ever tried it himself) writes to the St Louis Republican, that he would not think of such a thing. He says:

"If you die on the Island it will cost your friend $600 before your remains can be taken away. If you die poor, and those expenses are not paid, you are taken in the public dead cart and pitched into a ditch among the remains of paupers and those who have been executed.—The $600 is made up as follows: Coffin $175, embalming $290, church tax, $72, hotel for bedding, about $40."

Thus, be sure you have a friend, and that he has $600 to spare, before you propose to see "Columbia's fairest isle" with the prospect of laying your bones there.

Death of Baron Humboldt.

The last telegraph despatch announces the death of this distinguished and learned traveler, at an extreme old age; who up to his decease occupied the highest place in the veneration and affection of the civilized world. He has long been very infirm, and his demise is not unexpected.

☞ At Petersburgh, Va., last week, a party of factory girls administered an unmerciful thrashing to a libertine.

OHIO POLITICS.

(Correspondence of the People's Press.)

A friend writes us from the eastern part of the State, on the 13th inst.:

"I am truly glad to hear that the 'PRESS' is soon to make its advent. It is a thing greatly needed in Ohio—a Democratic paper, unbought by federal patronage, that dare be honest with its readers, and true to the sacred pledges of the party. GRAY alone 'has fought the good fight and kept the faith.' I hope—and KNOW you will make the PRESS a bold, honest paper, such as will fill the great void now in the Democratic literature of Ohio. The people feel it, and with one voice are calling for some one, to come forward and vindicate 'the truth as it is in Douglas,' and protest against the ignorance which federal power is attempting to interpolate into our time-honored creed. Success attend you."

Non-intervention by Congress and Popular Sovereignty.

We desire to call attention to the extracts contained in the Appendix to Mr Douglas's speech, which we publish to-day, on our first page. If the speech of Mr. DOUGLAS were not, in itself, irrefragable, we would only need point to the array of views coinciding with Mr. Douglas, which are so explicit that there is no possible opportunity to assert any antagonistic or modified opinion without [illegible] and recanting.

We have no apprehension that there will be an attempt to modify this vast DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLE in the platform, but we hope the State Convention to assemble on the 26th, one week from to-day, will give such an unequivocal expression as not to be misunderstood, and to assure the Democracy of the Union, that the Democracy of Ohio are ALL RIGHT.

Annual Sessions.

We commented on this subject in the FACT when exceptions were taken by the Ohio State Journal to the proposed amendment as having emanated from a Democratic Legislature.

It was introduced by Mr. SLADE, the Republican Senator from Cuyahoga, and urged and advocated by him with all his vigor and pertinacity. The very arguments to which the State Journal objected, were used by him—that annual elections were not called for by the people, but only annual sessions—that the duties of legislation were ill understood when members were first elected, and it required at least the experience of one session to acquaint them with the routine of business.

The Democratic Senate proposition was precisely what the Gazette intimates would be acceptable—to have annual elections and annual sessions. It was proposed, also, that only one-half of the Senate should go out annually; but it was objected to in the House, which did not like the distinction between Representatives and Senators.

We are inclined to agree with the Republican press that it is a very useless proposition, and we should be entirely willing to see it receive the cold shoulder. Whether there be a Democratic or Republican majority in the Legislature, the great and varied interests of Ohio demand annual sessions, and they will have them, as the precedent has been fairly set by both parties.

(From the [illegible] Fact.)

Valedictory.

Not exactly being able to ride two horses at the same time, and being exceedingly solicitous that my own nag should be trotted out to the best advantage, I find it necessary to retire from my editorial connection with the DAILY FACT, to which paper I have given a stronger political bias than perhaps was consistent with its general character, or agreeable to many of its numerous readers. I have endeavored always to be frank and truthful, however, and am sure I have neither misrepresented nor misled, and therefore have nothing to recall with mortification or humility at this parting-time. I have the satisfaction, too, of retiring from the FACT, leaving it in a healthier condition than when I joined it. The withdrawal is voluntary on my part, that I may devote my undivided time to the People's Press, in which my interests and my sympathies are largely involved. I leave the FACT in the hands of its veteran editor, who watched over its younger years, and nurtured it to maturity; and whose genial character, imparted to its columns, cannot make its paper otherwise than popular. Nor are our associations altogether interrupted; for my own paper, the People's Press, is printed in this office, and our daily intercourse is uninterrupted. To the readers of the FACT, I beg leave to bid a respectful farewell, hoping still to keep on good terms with them through another channel, and that they will continue to liberally patronize the FACT, in whose prosperity I feel almost as much interest as if it were my own.

J. B. MARSHALL.

CHAS. W. BLAIR, Esq.—This gentleman graced our sanctum with his presence on Tuesday last, and is looking hale, &c. We learn that Mr. Blair has received a call to the "Far distant West," to take charge, Editorially, of a new Daily paper, to be started soon in the city of Leavenworth, Kansas Territory. Wherever he goes, he will take with him the good wishes of a host of true friends of Wilmington and vicinity—friends who appreciate his talents his excellent heart, and the many good qualities which he possesses in an eminent degree. We wish you long life, Charlie, and abundant success in all of life.—Wilmington O. Watchman.

We have not seen Mr. BLAIR, since the foregoing paragraph met our eye, and, therefore, are not able to corroborate it; but we do know from intimate relations, that there is no good word said or expressed of him, that we do not to the fullest endorse. He is a gentleman of talents, of higher honor, of most pleasing address, a fine parliamentarian, of the most endearing and amiable qualities, and he has our earnest wishes for his success and happiness, whether he remain in Ohio, or "obey the call" to the Far West.

OHIO PROSPECTS.—Our exchanges from all quarters are quite sanguine that we shall have a rich and bountiful harvest. The war in Europe will, no doubt, cause an increased demand for our breadstuffs, and our farmers should be wise and be prepared to benefit by this demand.

Fruits will be plenty; some of the early varieties of apples and peaches have been damaged by frost, but yet a sufficiency is left for an average, and the fruit will be all the better by the trees not being over burdened. The crop of late apples and quinces will be abundant.

FLOUR, WHEAT AND CORN.—The market for wheat within the past few days has tallied until it may be reckoned a thing that was. Not a bushel can be obtained, and some of the mills stopped to-day. Large shipments are expected daily from distant localities, but until they arrive flour will continue upwards in tendency, from $7 25@7 50, those being the figures at which the commodity sold this morning.

The prices of corn, meal, oats, &c., remain unchanged, although for the former a stiff market is found.

The following paragraph appears in a number of the London Monthly Magazine published in 1817:

"A Tyrolian has lately invented at Vienna a machine for needlework, by which it is said every kind of sewing may be executed with the utmost precision. The Emperor of Austria has granted a patent to the inventor. Should these mechanical perfections make much farther advancement, everything in the world will shortly be executed machines."

☞ The Chairman and Secretary of the Democratic National Executive Committee are now in Washington, and have concluded to call a meeting for the 7th of December, when the committee will fix the time for the Charleston Convention, which, it is said, will be in May, 1860.

☞ Recent information states that the present movement of the Democracy in New York looks to a concentration on DOUGLAS, and an abandonment of BUCHANAN.

Affairs in Utah.

We made some remarks last week upon the removal of Judge CRADLEBAUGH, and expressing the opinion of the policy of recalling a judicial officer in whose character and attainments, whose integrity and firmness, and [illegible] and justice, our people [illegible] confidence, in [illegible] his might be held by the [illegible]. We apprehend, also, be wrong [illegible] the propriety and judiciousness of his proceedings, that Gov. CUMMING, a gallant soldier, a refined, intelligent and estimable gentleman, had [illegible] cooperated with him. We now find in the Baltimore Exchange, one of the most devoted, just and intelligent papers in the Union, a very elegantly written article with care, illustrated by a more thorough history of the condition of affairs in Utah, than we gave, and we take pleasure in transferring the article to our columns, expressing at the same time our astonishment that the removal of Judge CRADLEBAUGH has not been revoked, although we regret to say his conduct has not been approved, which may lead to his resignation.

The Exchange says:

"Toleration is a good thing; but that respect for fair dealing; that prudent regard for the opinions, frailties, prejudices, and passions of others, which the principle of toleration implies, may become, when it is carried beyond the limits of a just liberality, scarcely less an evil than intolerance itself. It is possible in other words, to be tolerant overmuch. Men may do as great a wrong to the moral sense, and to social order, by remaining silent when it becomes them to speak out, or by palliating offences which they should pointedly condemn, as if they had cast aside the restraints of Christianity altogether. There are disorders of the body politic, which are aggravated by the application of emollients, and which can only be eradicated by actual cautery.—The disturbances in Kansas might easily have been suppressed if, at the first outbreak, the Federal authorities had done their duty promptly, vigorously, and, by so doing, emboldened the well-meaning portion; but the resorted to temporising expedients contented both parties to set the laws at defiance. A similar result has attended the attempted pacification of Utah. However much men may be inclined to extenuate the conduct of the people of Kansas, it would certainly be difficult to justify the acts of the Mormons. Here are fifty thousand religious fanatics—if we may dignify with the name of religion so foul a creed—in open rebellion against the United States, and animated by a common hatred of those whom they stigmatized as Gentiles. Apart from their treasonable practices, they were known to have been guilty of innumerable crimes, even to the shedding of human blood, and this, too, not merely with the countenance, but with the express sanction of Brigham Young—himself an officer of the Federal Government—and of their Chief Priests and Elders. Every traveler across the Great Desert brought with him tidings of the defiant spirit of the people—of the inhumanity and leagues of their leaders, and of mysterious murders perpetrated in deep canons and along the emigrant trail—murders which the Mormons ascribed to outlying bands of Indians, but which are now very generally believed to have been instigated by the Mormons themselves, even in those cases where they did not personally participate in the commission of the crime. At length it was decided to suppress the rebellion, and, by punishing the guilty, to vindicate the laws they had outraged. But why need we enter upon details? The march of troops across the plains—the cutting off of the supply trains—the winter camp in the mountains, all these and many other incidents connected with the military expedition which was organized against Utah, are too well known to our readers to need repetition. The spring came, and when the gallant little army under Colonel Johnston was in a condition to resume offensive operations, the sword was ordered to be sheathed, and Governor Cumming, pressing forward into Salt Lake City, offered to these traitors and murderers a free pardon for all past offences, coupled with the single condition that in future, they should yield obedience to the Federal authorities. Of course they promised to do so. What will not such men promise when they are pressed to the wall, and are anxious to escape the consequences of their crimes? So Colonel Cumming quietly superseded Brigham Young as Governor, and thus it was that we were told Utah was pacified. But what has this 'pacification' amounted to? 'Only this and nothing more'—Cumming is Governor, vice Young superseded. The much boasted Mormon obedience extends no further. The Federal Judiciary they will not have, and by legislative enactments they have completely prevented Judges Cradlebaugh and Sinclair from exercising their functions.—In the terrible 'Mountain meadow massacre,' which took place about two years ago, more than two hundred men, women, and children were ruthlessly murdered; but when Judge Cradlebaugh attempted recently at Provo to bring the case before the Grand Jury, he was compelled to call upon General Johnston for a detachment of troops to protect the witnesses, and to guard the prisoners, and was finally obliged to discharge the Jury and break up his Court. With these facts, however, most of our readers are already familiar. They are also doubtless aware that the prompt response of General Johnston to the requisition made upon him by Judge Cradlebaugh elicited a protest from Governor Cumming, and gave rise to a serious dispute between the military and civil authorities in Utah. It was naturally enough to be expected that the Mormons should evince great indignation against Judge Cradlebaugh, and should have petitioned Governor Cumming to cause the troops which were stationed at Provo and in its vicinity to be withdrawn. We can readily understand their anxiety to leave Judge Cradlebaugh without military support, and the witnesses for the prosecution without protection. They had a sufficient reason for soliciting the interposition of the Governor in their behalf, from the fact that a number of prominent Mormons were implicated, both in the murder of Mr. Parrish, and in the Mountain meadow massacre, and it therefore became necessary to suppress the evidence of their complicity. Upon the course pursued by Governor Cumming we shall not offer, at this time, any comments. He claims to have acted under his instructions; but that the action of Judges Cradlebaugh and Sinclair should have drawn upon them the censure of the Administration and should have led—as is currently reported—to their recall, is well calculated to excite surprise, for it is either a virtual acknowledgment that the laws cannot be enforced in Utah, or that judicial officers who attempt to do their duty fearlessly, are not worthy of being sustained by the Government whose authority they sought to vindicate.

☞ The New York Tribune of Tuesday has a [illegible] lecture to the Republicans, and lays down the law for them. It says:

"As to our valiant Republican brethren, who keep reiterating that they will never support any but a distinctive, original Republican, and that the Platform of 1856 must be reaffirmed verbatim in 1860, we simply say, it is not wise to deal in rash promises, rash threats, nor rash prophecies. You will doubtless do what is best in 1860, whatever you may think or say now; and it is not wise to utter hot words which may return to plague you hereafter. If an original Republican shall be our candidate in 1860, you will want our conservatives to forget that you ever threatened to oppose one of their sort if nominated; while, if our nominee should not be a Republican of '56, you will want to forget those threats yourselves.

We say, then, to the exclusive on either hand, keep cool. Victory is clearly within reach of the Opposition—a victory over which both Republicans and Conservatives will have ample reason to rejoice. Let it not be fooled away by a childish strife about names. When Speech tends to irritate and distract, unspeakable is the wisdom of Silence.

What do our neighbors of the State Journal think of it? Will they be lulled into sweet obliviousness by the carmina of Horace?

ELECTION IN NOVA SCOTIA.—HALIFAX, Tuesday, May 10.—The Province is now going through the ordeal of a contested election, the main feature of which is the old issue between the Catholics and Protestants. The present Government, which is nominally conservative, solicits the Catholic influence by the cry of no proscription of Romanism. Joseph Howe and his associates of the Liberal party, have taken the Protestant cause under their care, and are energetic in opposition. This is precisely the opposite of the recent election in Prince Edward Island, where the Conservative party claimed the Protestant and the Liberal party the Catholic interest. The contest will be very close, both parties claiming the victory. The election was to take place on Thursday, the 12th inst.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.—A dispatch from Vicksburg of the 13th says:

"After four days' exciting debate, the Convention has adopted a resolution that the laws prohibiting the slave trade ought to be abolished."

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.
TERMS - - $2 IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

Stephen A. Douglas.

We sometimes hear from the Republican camp the mysterious whisper of "the treachery of Douglas." Treachery to whom? Whom has he betrayed? The Republicans? When was he of their way of thinking? When did he forsake the great principles which he has upheld for years, and expounded with a force and eloquence that constituted him the leader, the champion; the embodiment of the Democratic party? When he thought an innovation was sought to be made upon the principle for which he had struggled so earnestly, and fought so valiantly, in the admission of the territory of Kansas under the Lecompton Constitution, singly he stood, urging the line of Democrats to pause ere they rushed upon self-destruction. The voice of his country was paramount to all the entreaties of friendship. He turned a deaf ear to the persuasive arguments of flattery and promise, and maintained with a nerve unwavering and a faith undeviating, the sentiment contained in the Kansas-Nebraska act, and incorporated in the Cincinnati platform, that the people of the territories had the right to determine their domestic institutions and manage their affairs in their own way subject alone to the Constitution of the United States.

In Congress and out of Congress, he has stood by that great principle. He triumphed in a campaign unrivalled in the political annals of the country. Single handed and alone, he not only beat back the assailants marshaled by his legitimate adversaries, the Republicans, but he prostrated beneath his feet the miserable minions of a revengeful power which sought his overthrow and defeat. The American people looked on with admiration at his wonderful prowess and unexampled energies. They can never forget the terrific contest in Illinois, or cease to feel sympathy in his glorious triumph.

Availing himself of the more delicious climate of the South, he turned from his usual route to Washington, and visited the cities that adorned the banks of the Mississippi, and at St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg and New Orleans, where he was received with the most cordial congratulations, and returned his acknowledgments, reiterating the same sentiments that had borne his standard triumphantly in his own State. His opponents sought to disparage him by declaring that he made the same speech everywhere! He could not, would not alter his opinions to suit the latitude, and to his glory and honor be it spoken, they were received with the popular emotion, wherever uttered. They were in accordance with the great popular heart which thrilled and echoed to the vibrations of his voice.

Returning to Congress, he was assailed, personally and vindictively by those to whose political aspirations his superiority was a terror and a barrier. He bore himself like a man. Disdaining to appeal to the meaner argument of arms, he planted himself upon his record and defied his enemies to do their worst, believing that time and returning sense would do him justice and mollify his foes. Where stands he now? Where he always stood, on the side of the people, and the eyes that glared on him malignantly but a few months since, are beaming with more tenderness in their inviting smile.

Whom has he betrayed? To whom has he been treacherous? Did the Republicans think because they followed him in his resistance to the effort to force the Lecompton Constitution upon Kansas, that he would join them in a general onslaught upon the Democratic party? He never forsook the Democratic party any more than he forsook his own devotion to popular sovereignty and non-intervention by Congress with the rights of the people in the territories. He opposed a majority of the Democrats in Congress upon a measure, to resist which his whole past record was pledged—a majority who were more pliable under the manipulations of Executive influence than himself; but not the Democratic party. He did not contend for the expedient, but the right. He gave vitality to the letter of the Cincinnati Platform, and he stood there pledged to carry it out. Had he done less he would not have deserved that triumph in Illinois, to which, no diplomatic or political achievement of the last decade has been half so brilliant, or will remain impressed so long upon the memory of the people.

He resisted the Lecompton urged by the President. So did the Republicans. Did that make Mr. Douglas one of them? True, they applauded his course to the echo, and not a few hailed the dawn of a new era, of the breaking up of the old parties, of the formation of a new party, with Mr. Douglas at their head. Some thought the North-west had never been treated with proper respect or had received her fair share of political recognition (and the Ohio Statesman thought so too, whatever it may think now,) and it was time she should assert her rights, and Mr. Douglas was the man for the times.—But when Lecompton was killed, and its specimen was shown in the English Conference measure, in a living thing, where was Mr. Douglas? Did he swear that his arm should wither before he would resort to such a miserable subterfuge, and then basely record his vote as on behalf? No. He stood by the principles for which he had contended. With whatever reluctance he found himself opposed to those with whom he had been proud to co-operate, when he could do so honestly, honorably and consistently, yet he maintained his principles, "like courted by power, unmoved by gain."

Did the Republicans stand by him when he returned to Illinois? Did they call off their colors, and cease the clamor of their drums? No.—They warred upon him to the knife and the knife to the hilt. They found an ally in his personal foes who sought to avenge his contempt for resisting their favorite measure, who denounced him and sought to read him out of the Democratic party. He fought the double-headed adversary, and he conquered. The plaudits of an admiring nation and a return to the American Senate were his guerdon.

Then where is his treachery? He is no traitor, but now is, as he has always been, a true, faithful, unswerving, consistent Democrat. He was vilified, maligned by an unscrupulous press, [illegible] efforts were made to misconstrue his every act, to misrepresent his position, to place him falsely before the Democratic party and the nation, but he stood unmoved. He would not quarrel—he despised the puny efforts of malignant sensibilities—he pursued the even tenor of his way, giving support to such measures as he believed for the interest of his country; and [illegible] to the last, in argument the most irresistible and overwhelming, the true principles of the Cincinnati Platform as illustrated in the issues of 1856.

Then, who calls Stephen A. Douglas traitor? Is it a Republican? When did he give his allegiance to the Republican party, or when did that party come fealty to him? Is it a Democrat? When did he cease to be a Democrat? When did he forsake the great principles of popular sovereignty and non-intervention by Congress in the territories? When did he by act or word seek to destroy that vital principle, which is the basis of our freedom and our nationality, that government must depend upon the consent of the governed and political power is an inspiration from the people? He has been true to his country. He has borne with patience, if not with meekness, the indignity of being displaced from the chairmanship of the Committee on Territories which he had so long filled with consummate statesmanship, contenting himself to let ruffianism and ignoble passion waste themselves in fruitless efforts to injure; and he stands now towering in his unshorn strength, his gallant plume waving like some banner around which the Democrats will rally for the victory in 1860.

The Kansas-Nebraska Bill.

As a difference of opinion with regard to the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, seems to exist in some quarters, we reproduce a portion of the remarks of Mr. Douglas, which presents the matter so lucidly that it will be almost impossible to misunderstand it after reading the extract. It is all-important that the subject should be thoroughly understood at this time, and it would be absurd in us to attempt to retouch that which has been finished by the hand of a master.

"This was the distinct understanding among the northern and southern Democrats at that time, and among all the friends of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. It was agreed that while we might differ as to the extent of the power of the Territorial Legislature on these questions, we would make a full grant of legislative authority to the Legislature of the Territory, with the right to pass such laws as they chose, and the right of anybody to appeal to the courts to decide upon the validity and constitutionality of such laws, but not to come to Congress for their annulment. Hence, if the Territorial Legislature should pass the Maine Liquor law, and any body was dissatisfied with the provisions of that act, and thought it violated his constitutional rights, he could not come to Congress for its annulment, but could appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States; and if that court decided the law to be constitutional, it must stand, no matter how obnoxious it might be to any portion of the American people. If it was unconstitutional, it became void without any interference by Congress, or any other legislative body. The Kansas-Nebraska bill was thus amended for the avowed purpose, at the time, of striking out the appeal to Congress, and substituting the appeal to the court.

After we had gone that far, a Senator from New Hampshire pointed out in the Nebraska bill the fact that no appeal could be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States unless the amount of property in controversy was $2,000 in value, and hence that a negro could not appeal for his freedom, nor could the owner of a single slave appeal to the Supreme Court to establish his title, if he thought that his rights were violated. In order to obviate that objection, we amended the bill by providing that where the title to property in slaves, or any question of personal freedom was the point in issue, the right of appeal to the Supreme Court should exist without reference to the amount in controversy.

Thus the Kansas-Nebraska bill stood, granting all rightful power of legislation on all subjects whatsoever to the Territorial Legislature, subject only to the Constitution of the United States, provided that should not pass any law taxing the property of non-residents higher than that of residents, nor any law interfering with the primary disposition of the soil, nor impose any tax on the property of the United States. But there was no exception made as to slavery. The intent was to confer on the Territorial Legislature all the power we had on the subject of slavery, to let them wield it for or against these institutions, as the people of the Territory chose; and the understanding was, that we would abide by whatever laws they might make, provided they did not violate the Constitution of the United States; and the Supreme Court was the only tribunal that could decide that question.

Now, sir, I stand on the Kansas-Nebraska bill as it was expounded and understood at the time, with this full power in the Territorial Legislature, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court to test the validity of its laws, and no right whatever to appeal to Congress to repeal them in the event of our not liking them. I am ready to answer the inquiry of the Senator from Mississippi, whether if I believed the Maine liquor law to be unconstitutional and wrong, and if a Territorial Legislature should pass it, I would vote here to annul it? I tell him no. If the people of Kansas want a Maine liquor law, let them have it. If they do not want it, let them refuse to pass it. If they do pass it, and any citizen thinks that law violates the Constitution, let him make a case and appeal to the Supreme Court. If the court sustains his objection, the law is void. If it overrules the objection, the decision must stand until the people, who alone are to be affected by it, who alone have an interest in it, may choose to repeal it. So I say with reference to slavery. Let the Territorial Legislature pass just such laws in regard to slavery as they think they have a right to enact under the Constitution of the United States. If I do not like those laws, I will not vote to repeal them; if you do not like them, you must not vote to repeal them; but anybody aggrieved may appeal to the Supreme Court, and if they are constitutional, they must stand; if they are not constitutional, they are void. That was the doctrine of non-intervention, as it was understood at the time the Kansas-Nebraska bill was passed. That is the way it was explained and argued in the Senate and in the House of Representatives and before the country. It was distinctly understood that Congress was never to intervene for or against slavery, or for or against any other institution in the Territories; but leave the courts to decide all constitutional questions as they might arise, and the President to carry the decrees of the court into effect; and, in case of resistance to his authority in executing the judicial process, that he was to use, if necessary, the whole military force of the country, as provided by existing laws.

I know that some gentlemen do not like the doctrine of non-intervention as well as they once did. It is now becoming fashionable to talk sneeringly of "your doctrine of non-intervention." Sir, that doctrine has been a fundamental article in the Democratic creed for years. It has been repeated over and over again in every national Democratic platform—non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories. The Nebraska bill was predicated on that idea—the Territorial Legislature to have jurisdiction over all rightful subjects of legislation, not excepting slavery, with no appeal to Congress, but a right to appeal to the courts; and the legislation to be void, if the Supreme Court said it was unconstitutional, and valid, no matter how obnoxious, if the court said it was constitutional. Let me call attention to the language of the Kansas-Nebraska bill. Its fourteenth section provides:

"That the Constitution and all laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect in the said Territory of Nebraska as elsewhere within the United States, except the eighth section of the act preparatory to the admission of Missouri into the Union, approved March 6, 1820, which being inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories, as recognized by the legislation of 1850, commonly called the compromise measures, is hereby declared inoperative and void; it being the true intent and meaning of this act not to legislate slavery into any State or Territory, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States."

Thus, in the Nebraska bill, it is declared that a Congressional enactment on the subject of slavery is inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories. This same article of faith has gone into the various Democratic platforms, and especially into the Cincinnati platform. Every Democrat, therefore, is pledged, by this platform and the organization of the party, against any legislation of Congress in the Territories for or against slavery, no matter how obnoxious the Territorial legislation may be. If it is unconstitutional, you have your remedy; go to the court and test the question. If it is constitutional, you have agreed that the people of a Territory may have it. I hold you to the agreement."

HYDROPHOBIA.—A writer in the Providence, (R. I.) Journal furnishes the following prescription for hydrophobia:—"Eat the green shoots of asparagus raw: sleep and perspiration will be induced; and the disease can thus be cured in any stage of canine madness." A man in Athens, Greece, was cured by this remedy after the paroxysms had commenced.

For this dreadful malady many "remedies" have been proposed, the most approved being an unlimited quantity of whisky; but we have seen none so simple and innocent as the above. Properly boiled and with the addition of drawn butter and a little salt, the tender shoots of asparagus are most delicate not to say delicious as an esculent. The case adduced of its efficacy in a green and raw state is a long way off, and whoever may have been bitten by a rabid animal would have more consolation if its efficacy could be established nearer home. However there is no harm in trying so simple a prescription.

FAST HORSES BURNED TO DEATH.—The stables of WILLIAM SHAW, at the Union Course, Long Island, N. Y., were destroyed by fire on Saturday afternoon. There were several first class trotting horses in the stables, all of which were rescued, with the exception of Lady Sheen, George Washington and Kate Miller, which were consumed in the flames. George Washington was a horse of great speed, having trotted two miles to a wagon in less than five minutes; his time was supposed to be 2:23 or 2:24. He was owned by Mr. E. J. Norris, who had refused $4,000 for him. The three horses were valued at over $8,000.

CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS AND CINCINNATI RAILROAD.—The receipts of this road for the month of April, 1857, were as follow:

Freight	[illegible]
Passengers, Express and Mail	[illegible]
Rents	[illegible]
	[illegible]
April, 1858	[illegible]
Decrease	[illegible]

No More Negro Voting.

The Legislature of Ohio, at its recent session, passed a law to do away with every shade of negro voting whatsoever. Heretofore, negroes of mixed blood were allowed to vote, and in many places, especially in the Black Republican Western Reserve, negroes as black as Egyptian midnight were permitted to vote with as much freedom as white men, and a little more, especially if the white men were so unfortunate as to be born in Germany, England or Ireland!

Thanks to our Democratic Legislature, this whole system of iniquitous voting has been pulled up by the roots; and hereafter no person of African descent, in whole or in part, dare without subjecting himself to imprisonment in the county jail for not more than three and not less than one month. And any person who shall procure, aid, assist, counsel or advise another, knowing him to be of African descent, to vote at any election, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, and be imprisoned in the county jail from one to six months.

If the Legislature had not passed another law but this, they would have richly earned for themselves the appellation of "good and faithful servant." This is a glorious triumph of right over wrong—of the Constitution over fanaticism.—[Mt. Vernon Banner.

The foregoing extract from the Mt. Vernon Banner, is a fair specimen of the boasted sympathy for freedom, which the Democracy have arrogated to themselves during the past four years. The next step will probably be the establishment of property qualification for the white electors preliminary to a total abolition of the elective franchise.—[Mansfield Herald.

The approbation expressed by the Banner of the act of the Legislature, is very natural, for the law was really needed. The Election law, under the constitution, was construed to suit neighborhood whims and political sentimentalities. A stupid decision of the Supreme court that any negro having more white blood than African, was entitled to vote, was very freely inculcated where abolition sentiments prevailed. It was an unequal law and did not operate alike throughout the State. Nor do we expect the provisions of the present statute to be very stringently applied in certain localities, as it has been already announced that a Grand Jury in Portage county has had the honor of ignoring it.

The commentary of the Mansfield Herald, if intended to convey the sentiments of that paper, expresses what some of its colleagues attempt most vociferously to deny as any part of theirs. When they were told that the tendency of their doctrines was to negro equality, they derided the idea, but the Herald is not so dainty. It as much as declares this law, which withholds the right of suffrage from the negro, to be adverse to freedom and the first step to "a property qualification of the white electors." With whose prerogative does it conflict? Upon whose right does it encroach? Because it declares a principle incorporated in the Constitution, the Herald argues that the next step will be to enact what the constitution forbids. Non sequitur.

Are the sentiments of the Mansfield Herald those of the Republican party? Is that issue to be urged in the coming canvass? Will the Republicans appeal to the people of Ohio, to endorse the sentiment of negro equality, and charge that a Democratic Legislature invaded their rights by denying them the privilege of voting? That is the extent of the argument, if such it can be called; and if it be not, let us hear no more outcry against a wise provision of the law, which Republicans as well as Democrats should respect, and which was contemplated by the framers of our State Constitution. If it be part of the Republican creed that negroes should vote, say so. If they desire only to extend the privilege to mulattoes, let it not rest in doubt. The Democrats have taken their stand. They have unequivocally declared that they shall not vote, and it remains with their opponents to make war upon the statute, and say that it must be repealed. Will they place themselves upon the cast and stand the hazard of the die?

Slave Code in the Territories.

The proper understanding of this troublesome question at this time in the Democratic party, may best be obtained from the passage between MR. DOUGLAS and MR. GREEN, during the great speech of the former in the Senate of the United States on the 23d of February last.

MR. MASON. Will the Senator be kind enough to explain what he means by slave code?

MR. DOUGLAS. Yes sir. The Senator from Mississippi defined it very well in his speech. His position was, that while the Constitution gave him the right of protection in a Territory for his slave property, it did not, of itself, furnish adequate protection. He drew a distinction between the right and the fact, and said that the protection could only be furnished by legislation; that legislation could only come from one of two sources—the Territorial Legislature or the Congress of the United States. He would look to the Territorial Legislature in the first instance. If he got adequate legislation there, he was content; but if the Territorial Legislature failed to act, and give him that adequate legislation, in the form of what is commonly called a slave code, such non-action was equivalent to a denial of his rights; and, losing his rights, it was no consolation to him that he had been deprived of them by the non-action of a Territorial Legislature; and hence he would demand of Congress the passage of laws to protect his slaves, and to punish men for running them off; to furnish such remedies for the violation of his rights as he thought he was entitled to from the Territorial Legislature. He said he would demand this from Congress.

MR. BROWN. Because the Territorial Legislature was the creature of Congress.

MR. DOUGLAS. He further said that he would base his demand on Congress to pass this slave code on the ground that the Territorial Legislature was the creature of Congress: and, if it did not do its duty, Congress should pass such laws as were necessary to protect slave property in the Territories.

MR. GREEN. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a single question?

MR. DOUGLAS. Certainly.

MR. GREEN. If a law merely providing protection is to be called a slave code, then, I ask, if larceny, in general terms, were punished by the Territorial law, and the Legislature should except the larceny of slaves, would he say he would submit to that at the option of the Legislature?

MR. DOUGLAS. It is immaterial to me, whether you call this legislation a slave code, or by any other name. I will call it by any name the Senator chooses. I wish to be understood, however, and to use such language as conveys the idea. I take the language of the Senator from Mississippi, if that is satisfactory. All I have to say, on the point presented by the Senator from Missouri, is this: while our Constitution does not provide remedies for stealing negroes, it does not provide remedies for stealing dry goods, or horses, or any other species of property. You cannot protect any property in the Territories without laws furnishing remedies for its violation, and penalties for its abuse. Nobody pretends that you are going to pass laws of Congress making a criminal code for the Territories, with reference to other species of property. The Congress of the United States never yet passed an act creating a criminal code for any organized Territory. It simply organizes the Territory, and leaves its Legislature to make its own criminal code. Congress never passed a law to protect any species of property in the organized Territories; it leaves its protection to the Territorial Legislature.—The question is, whether we shall make an exception as to slavery? The Supreme Court makes no such distinction. It recognizes slavery as property. When they are taken to a Territory, they are on an equal footing with other property, and dependent upon the same system of legislation, for protection, as other property. While all other property is dependent on Territorial legislation for protection, I hold that slave property must look to the same authority for its protection.

NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN PRESIDENTS.—"When Mr. BUCHANAN'S term ends, eleven years will have elapsed since the office of President has been held by a Southern man." This is the expression of most of the Southern Democratic journals. It may not be amiss to add to the above, that since the foundation of the government Southern men have occupied the Presidential chair forty-nine years, and Northern men, at the close of Mr. BUCHANAN'S term, but twenty-four years.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR HOLMSTED.—Prof. DENISON HOLMSTEAD, LL. D., expired at his residence in New Haven, Conn., on Wednesday, the 11th, aged 68 years. He graduated at Yale College in 1813, was elected Professor of chemistry in North Carolina in 1815, and served 10 years.—When there he made a geological survey of that State—the first state survey made in this country—and in 1825 he was elected Professor of mathematics and natural philosophy in Yale College, which place he filled at the time of his death.

Democratic State Convention.

A delegate Convention is to be held in this city on the 26th inst., for the purpose of nominating candidates for Governor, Auditor, Secretary and Treasurer of State, Supreme Court Judge, Member of Board of Public Works, and Commissioner of Public Schools.

Our exchanges with the Democratic press of Ohio is yet comparatively limited, and we have not received the proceedings of the various county conventions that have been held, and therefore have not the names of the delegates who have been already appointed.

We have already noticed the resolutions adopted and delegates appointed in Clark county. Also the proceedings of the meeting in Pickaway county. We learn that in Washington county, all is right. A friend writes to the "People's Press:"

"We have appointed delegates to the May Convention, and you may be sure old Washington sends none but bold, out and out Douglas men. We are for JEWETT for Governor, if he does not decline. I wish to see the doctrines of the Cincinnati Platform endorsed by that convention, and men with a small quantity of "Democratic blood in their veins," placed upon the ticket."

In Highland, on the 14th inst., that veteran and distinguished Democrat, Gen. J. J. McDowell addressed a meeting of the Democracy and stated the object to be the selection of delegates to attend the State Convention, to be held in Columbus on the 26th inst.; whereupon the following were chosen: Wm. Miller, J. J. Hughes, Abel Hurtt, J. H. Blackburn, Thomas Boyd, Robert Walley, G. W. Tucker, B. D. Lilley, Wyatt Hunelley, John Larrie, W. W. Malcom, Benj. Pearce, Daniel Miller, Z. Masker, Wm. Long, J. C. Stine, Dr. Bixon, Allen Hulson, J. W. Sprague, T. Faris, N. W. Cummins, Christopher Matthews, H. Surber, B. Schwartz, A. Hurst, M. Hoatman, W. Connard, and David Lowman.

In Franklin county a primary election of delegates was held on Saturday last, with the following result, as far as ascertained, several townships not having reported.

FIRST WARD—Henry Wilson, C. W. Butt, M. Conlan, W. McFarland and J. B. Marshall.

SECOND WARD—John J. Eilis, Patrick Dun, Thos. Arnold and John B. Thompson.

THIRD WARD—Elias Gaver, Thomas Sparrow, Wm. Domigan and D. H. Mooney.

FOURTH WARD—S. Doyle, O. P. Hines, Fred. Fieser, John H. Roel, F. Farnol, John Lutz.

FIFTH WARD—J. Siberzagle J. J. Funston, W. Seliger, C. Born, Ed. Davis, F. Bader, F. Beck, D. Kates, P. Heil, John Bader.

Franklin Township—John Keller, John Riter William Hunter, John Gore. The meeting instructed its delegates to vote for delegates to the State Convention favorable to the nomination of A. P. Edgerton for Governor, and Wm. D. Morgan for Treasurer of State.

Montgomery Township—Edward Livingston, Michael Kingsel, John H. Earhart, P. P. Rice, A. C. King.

PERRY TOWNSHIP—Newton Slyh and John Bickett.

The national Democrat of Monday calls upon the Democracy of Cuyahoga county, to take steps for the appointment of Delegates.

Before we issue another paper, the Convention will have assembled, and the result of its proceedings may be expected in our next.

The following gentlemen have declined a nomination for Governor: Henry B. Payne Geo. W. McCook, Allen G. Thurman, J. J. Faran.

The following have not declined: A. P. Edgerton, H. J. Jewett, Gen. J. J. McDowell.

We hope to see a large, enthusiastic and harmonious convention of Democrats, and that they will give such an endorsement of the Cincinnati Platform as will be felt throughout the Union.

Any thing to Beat a Democrat.

The "Lancaster Gazette" has changed hands, to its very great improvement in every respect. It is now conducted by Messrs. E. M. CLARKE and J. M. SUTPHEN. It opposes the Democratic party, and will "oppose the extension of Slavery," but strange to say "will not advocate its abolition" being "in favor of States, Rights and willing to accord our brethren of the south, the right to control their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States." Quite as strange, for an opponent of the Democratic party, determined to "lay bear its errors and expose its entire destitution of principle," the GAZETTE disclaims being in favor of negro equality and "will not advocate" it, "deeming that doctrine a fallacy, opposed to the best interests of society, and because they deem the negro morally, socially and intellectually incapacitated to discharge the duties and obligations of independent sovereignty." Well, all we have to say is that on the nigger, the "Gazette" is a pretty good Democrat, because what it says about extension is a mere abstraction any how—a hobby on which to ride when one is tired of plain common sense. The fact is, however, the "Gazette" is in favor of opposition to the Democracy and holds to the old Whig doctrine, "any thing to beat a Democrat"—a fair enough doctrine for those who like it, but should they accomplish their object who would reap the benefit? Opposition to the Democracy does not constitute principles. There would be no distribution or division of the "spoils." It would be advancing those who do believe in negro equality—who do advocate its abolition; and think it their duty to interfere with the rights of the South, and do interfere every day. The Republicans would have stomach for all the loaves and fishes, and the so-called opposition, who are willing to do any thing and be any thing to beat the "Democracy," would find themselves the worst-fooled men that ever trifled with the right of suffrage. The REPUBLICAN Legislature of 1856, which was elected as AMERICAN—what became of it? In a single session the American plank was pulled from under them, and dropped them all into the Republican trap, except DAN MCFARLAND, now of Kansas, who boasted that he was "the only original package left."

THE REVOLUTION IN TUSCANY.—The war panic in Europe has disposed of—or rather deposed—one of the European tyrants—the Grand Duke of Tuscany. His army and the people turned against him the moment that they found it safe to express their feelings. This incident more forcibly illustrates the hatred of Austrian domination in Italy than any commentary that could be written. Speaking of the revolt in Tuscany, the London Times says:

"Tuscany has declared in favor of Italian Independence, or, in other words, has cast its lot with France and Piedmont. Of all the Italian States the Grand Duchy has been the most misgoverned since 1815; but even there, the rulers, in the hour of trial, find a long score of arrears which they must now discharge. Even so short a while back as 1848, the present Grand Duke might have conciliated to himself the good-will and respect of his people—for his, in truth, had never been a grinding tyranny. The farmers and peasantry of that rich valley of the Arno had lived happily and peacefully enough under his rule, and they remembered it to him in the hour of his need. When he absconded—for there is no other term in which to describe the manner of his precipitate flight—after the events of 1848, he was recalled by the affections of his people, and tranquilly replaced on his petty throne. The return he made was to fill the Archduchy with Austrian troops, and to convert it into a mere satrapy of Austria. He had sworn to a Constitution—he repealed it. He violated every promise, express or implied, which he had made in the midst of the turmoil of that eventful year. The reactionary policy of the little Tuscan court was tolerated with singular discretion and forbearance by the people. The desire to free themselves from the despotism of Austria was there, but they engaged in no idle plots, and gave no excuse to their foreign taskmasters for the infliction of useless misery and pain. They had made up their minds to abide their time, and the time has arrived at last."

A correspondent writing from Leavenworth, Kansas, abbreviates the name of that town thus: "11 worth."

"The True State of the Case."

The Statesman, as we foretold last week, denies that it advised the postponement of the Democratic State Convention, and says that the State Journal in hinting such a thing "perused a naked lie." We are not at all astonished at the effrontery of the Statesman. We said it would do precisely what it has done. It was well fixed on that score. Its chief editor, (although his name has been taken down from the head of the paper,) is par excellence "Sec. Dem. Ex. Com." and called the Central Committee together, assuming to act for the President and Secretary. Yet the Statesman denies that it advised the postponement.

The same editor of the Statesman addressed the Central Committee when assembled, advising the postponement of the State Convention, giving his reasons. And yet the Statesman says its a lie that it advised a postponement! The tactics of the Statesman are visible. While TOM MILLER "beats up recruits among the delegates," and the writing editor of the Statesman calls a meeting of the Committee and urges it to postpone, the paper is mum, in order that it may come out on the winning side. "Cute Millerism that and very clever in MANKEYPENNY. The editor who wrote it's a lie that the Statesman advised the postponement, was the same individual who called together the committee and urged the postponement. What reliability there is in the Statesman, except re-lie-ability it is not necessary to expatiate upon. We have presented "the true state of the case," and were not the slightest surprised, because we knew something of the secret arrangement, and were prepared for just what followed.

We take the foregoing from the CITY FACT, which charged that the "Statesman" would deny having favored a postponement of the State Convention. The call for the meeting of the Central Committee having appeared for some time in the "Statesman," signed by the acting and associate editor of that paper, as Secretary of the Executive Committee, probably taking upon himself to make the call unauthorized by the President and Secretary of the Central Committee, would rather implicate the "Statesman" in the movement for a postponement, especially as there was no earthly business besides for which the Committee was called. The call first appeared in the "Statesman," was made by its editor, and there the responsibility unquestionably rests.

The thing is over now, and cannot be remedied; but it should teach presumption a lesson, and should also be remembered hereafter in entrusting so delicate a power where it may be abused through willfulness or ignorance. It may have been imagined that the fate of the whole Democratic party was under the special guardianship of the acting editor of the "Statesman," who was likewise the Secretary of the Executive Committee; and as thought the Convention should be postponed! The President of the Executive Committee, who was in the city was not consulted; or if spoken to at all, did not approve the call and was opposed to the proposed postponement. It is needless for the "Statesman" to try to wriggle out of the predicament; because, what the call was for was confined to that paper, which refrained from broaching the subject, lest objections should be raised and the purpose on which it was set might be defeated. It is understood by those who are familiar with the mode by which the Columbus Postmaster, one of the proprietors of the "Statesman," manages his political schemes, that this is his way; and we regard it as highly important and beneficial to the party, if this was one of his inventions, that it was frustrated. It was shallow and preposterous, and undignified; and would have been discreditable to the party if it had succeeded.—The attempt belongs to the "Statesman," and no where else; and hard names will not relieve it of unnecessarily calling together the Central Committee, when a single word would have saved the gentlemen composing that Committee both useless trouble and expense.

The Italian Question.

The Statesman seems determined to break the necks of LOUIS NAPOLEON and VICTOR EMMANUEL. It still harps on the "Italian question," and with the instinct of such natures, takes the side of the despot against liberty. Of course it makes out the present head of the French nation a great scoundrel, and sets down his as "the worst and most reckless government among civilized nations." We do not set ourselves up to defend the course of LOUIS NAPOLEON, either as abstractly right, or against the puissant assault of the Statesman, which seems to have better understood the politic and ambitious French Emperor, than did the British statesmen who crowded honors upon him, and seemed delighted with the cordial friendship between the two nations. The strong picture of the devastation of France by the monarch who is "sucking her life-blood," must charm the readers of the Statesman; and they must feel the most intense joy over the prospect that "the French people will hurl him from power."

Who takes "a one-sided view" of the Italian question? Who jumps at the conclusion that the European struggle has been systematically planned by LOUIS NAPOLEON, who has determined to shove out Austria that he may step in himself? Why, he who prefers the despotism of Austria to the friendship and alliance of France.

We have shown in a former article that the system pursued by Austria, if successful, enslaves Italy, crushes altogether its independence, disturbs the balance of power of Europe, and endangers France. We make no prophecies. It is absurd to speculate upon intentions, or attempt to explain the diplomacy which is not yet revealed. Good may be accomplished by the resistance to, and repulse of, the schemes of Austria, which for long has contemplated the reduction of the King of Sardinia to a vassalage which his independent and honorable spirit resists. Our sympathies are always upon the side of those struggling for independence. We did not refuse the aid and co-operation of France when our country was in arms against the tyranny of Great Britain, although some such arguments as are now used might have been urged against such an alliance.

The next arrival will be looked for with solicitude. If war be in progress, nations will have taken their positions, and the reader, who is just as well posted as we are, or the Statesman can be at this time, will be able to judge how far LOUIS NAPOLEON would be permitted to assume the position coveted by Austria, if such be his contemplation.

——The foregoing was intended for Saturday's paper, but was accidentally omitted. Since then, there have been two arrivals, which bring intelligence that war is progressing, the successes being on the Austrian side. The particulars will be found in the telegraph columns. They leave no doubt of war. We shall next hear that England has taken sides with France in aid of Sardinia, to resist the further advance of the Austrian forces.

THE EXTRADITION TREATY—THE TYLER CASE.—The Governor-General of Canada, through the British Minister at Washington, has made a demand upon this government for the surrender of Deputy Marshal TYLER, who shot the captain of the American brig Concord, of Cleveland, while laying in Sarnia, in Canada. TYLER a short time since, was tried in Michigan, and convicted of manslaughter.

They now demand his surrender under the Ashburton extradition treaty. There are questions of law involved in the case which require it to be laid before the Attorney-General, who has the case now under consideration.

DEATH OF BISHOP DOANE.—Right Rev. G. W. DOANE, Bishop of New Jersey, died at his residence, in Burlington, Wednesday night or early Thursday morning, aged 60. He was elected in 1832.

"Sons of Liberty."

The people of the Western Reserve seem to be in a fair way to distinguish themselves in their headlong and infatuated zeal for a folly, to use no [illegible] and [illegible] a name for a crime, instigated if not invented by Joshua R. Giddings. With the madness of devotees and enthusiasts they seem to disregard their obligations to their country, to their fellow citizens, to law, in the vain pursuit of a shadow. They trample on rights guarantied and acknowledged, for what they call human rights. They fairly worship the negro with the abjectness paid by the ancient Egyptians to the filthiest reptiles of the Nile. And yet these same people are sensible in other respects; feel and act like other men; have kindred sympathies, likes and antipathies, are melted to tears at tales of wo, or excited to laughter by that which is ridiculous; are proud or humble like other people; liberal or avaricious, drive close bargains or are free in their generosity, and by no means exacting in trade. They sometimes, however, have scruples against taking life by law, as in the instance of Hiram Cole who poisoned his wife, but they hadn't the heart to hang him. The highest crime known in their calendar, is that of capturing a runaway negro, and restoring him to his master. This with the followers of Joshua is a capital offense and deserves hanging.

The other day in Jefferson, Ashtabula county, where the "venerable patriarch" resides, they "set the ball in motion" upon a platform which throws in the shade all other platforms, and adopted a constitution, presented by their high priest, enrolling themselves as "Sons of Liberty," and pledged themselves to do monstrous things to put down that contrivance of Beelzebub, the Fugitive Slave Law.

As a specimen of the "law and order" that must predominate in such an organization of madmen and fanatics, we present their platform to which there was not a dissentient voice—not one:

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with our friends, now in prison in Cleveland, for their devotion to liberty, and assure them that when the Judiciary of our State shall refuse relief, and the necessity for action by the people will become obvious, we pledge ourselves that no prison shall hold them.

That a system of slavery, which not only fetters the body, but shuts out the truth and knowledge from the human understanding, constitutes a crime at which humanity shudders.

That those who will aid in committing such crime deserve and should meet the fate of the worst of criminals.

That the enactment known as the Fugitive Slave Law, was conceived by the enemies of the Union, and violates the spirit as well as the express language of the Federal Constitution. In its terms, it is wantonly insulting to a free people. It violates the rights of these States, and is intolerably tyrannical and oppressive in its character. No person possessing the spirit of freedom will respect or obey it.

That the recent order from Washington directing the Marshal to resist the service of the habeas corpus in favor of the prisoners, and thereby suspend the Constitution of our State and that of the United States, is but a fitting indication of the character of that law, and of the means by which it must be inforced.

That if the people of the Western Reserve submit to such insolence, they deserve the name of slaves.

That in view of the circumstances by which we are surrounded, we call upon the people of our several townships to hold meetings and take measures for an efficient organization of those who are willing to act, in this hour of Freedom's peril—by reviving the ancient order of the "Sons of Liberty," or adopting such other measures as shall best prepare us to meet the impending emergencies.

The question naturally arises: Are these men sincere? Or are they mere hypocrites and pretenders, who like the Mormon Elders avail themselves of predominating credulity and infatuation to root out the virtues and plant vices in the hearts of their fellow citizens? It were well to know how far these defiants of law, these self-constituted "regulators" and executioners under the "higher law," are countenanced by the Republican party, (of whom, at least, they are one wing,) and whether their voice will be potential in the coming Second of June Convention. It is said that they intend to demand a habeas corpus from the Supreme Court for the liberation of the Cleveland convicts, Bushnell and Langston; and unless Judge SWAN shall submit to their demands, they will insist upon running SPALDING, and in case they cannot get him, to defeat SWAN any how.

The conviction and sentence of Bushnell and Langston, instead of allaying the excitement of these deluded enthusiasts, seems to have driven them to still greater absurdities, and their threats of violence, echoing the sentiments of Giddings, pastor, if they excite no apprehension on the public ear.

The "Sons of Liberty" as organized on the Reserve, is nothing more or less than a mob, associated and banded for [illegible] purposes, and should they have occasion to put in practice their creeds and wild notions of what constitutes their mission, their madness will find that it has "brought their pigs to a poor market."

We sincerely regret these outbursts of ungovernable passion. Joshua will never be wiser, or better. It is indeed lamentable that he has any influence; but who need express surprise at any thing, after Jo. Smith and Brigham Young passed to the extent they did, under the banner of Humbug and Fanaticism?

Don't Die in Cuba.

To die is not very agreeable, be it any where, or at any time, although some one has sung

"Oh 'tis sweet to die in Spring-time."

In Cuba, where eternal summer reigns, and the garner is filled with two crops the year, being like Grimes's hen:

"For every day she laid two eggs,
And Sunday she laid three."

it is peculiarly distressing to "shuffle off this mortal coil." Now, a burial at sea is mournful enough, and the ceremony exceedingly imposing; but a few solemn words, while the sun looks down brightly and the calm ocean turns up its placid face, as smooth as a mirror, or dimpled with golden smiles, a sullen plunge, and all is over. The memory of the scene fades dimly away. There are no after-claps. But, there in that land of flowers, where we so much wish to call death is more than ordinarily a serious thing to contemplate, whether rich or poor. To Dives, who cannot take his gold with him, it may be a matter of less consequence, but the poor devil might just as well die at Mauritius, where at times they "kick the bucket" in such numbers, they are merely cast outside the city walls to feast the dogs.

"That bright little isle our own,"

If it cost something to LIVE on the island, it is not less expensive to DIE. Yet the invalid bends thither, as the Moslem hies to Mecca, as a DERNIER RESORT for his salvation. There is salubrity in its mountain air, and its breezes from the sea, and the monotony of its climate: if one have the means of paying for such luxuries; but to die there is not to be thought of. One who has had experience (not that he ever tried it himself) writes to the St Louis Republican, that he would not think of such a thing. He says:

"If you die on the island it will cost your friend $600 before your remains can be taken away. If you die poor, and those expenses are not paid, you are taken in the public dead cart and pitched into a ditch among the remains of paupers and those who have been executed.—The $600 is made up as follows: Coffin $175, embalming $290, church tax, $72, hotel for bedding, about $40."

Then, be sure you have a friend, and that he has $600 to spare, before you propose to see "Columbia's fairest isle" with the prospect of laying your bones there.

Death of Baron Humboldt.

The last telegraph despatch announced the death of this distinguished and learned traveler, at an extreme old age; who up to his decease occupied the highest place in the veneration and affection of the civilized world. He has long been very infirm, and his demise is not unexpected.

☞ At Petersburgh, Va., last week, a party of factory girls administered an unmerciful thrashing to a libertine.

OHIO POLITICS.

[Correspondence of the People's Press.]

A friend writes us from the eastern part of the State, on the 12th inst.:

"I am very glad to hear that the "Press" is soon to make its advent. It is a thing greatly needed in Ohio—a Democratic paper, unbought by Federal patronage, that has independence with the masses, and true to the sacred pledges of the party. GRAY bless [illegible] "has fought the good fight and kept the faith." I hope—and KNOW you will make the PRESS a bold, honest paper, such as will fill the great void now in the Democratic literature of Ohio. The people feel it, and with one voice are calling for some one to come forward and vindicate 'the truth as it is in Douglas,' and protest against the [illegible] which Federal power is attempting to interpolate into our time-honored creed. Success attend you."

Non-Intervention by Congress and Popular Sovereignty.

We desire to call attention to the extracts contained in the Appendix to Mr Douglas's speech, which we publish to-day, on our first page. If the speech of Mr. Douglas were not, in itself, irrefragable, we would only need point to the array of views coinciding with Mr. Douglas, which are so explicit that there is no possible opportunity to assert any antagonistic or modified opinion without inconsistency, and recanting.

We have no apprehension that there will be an attempt to modify this main Democratic [illegible] in the platform, but we hope the State Convention to assemble on the 26th, one week from to-day, will give such an unequivocal expression as not to be misunderstood, and to assure the Democracy of the Union, that the Democracy of Ohio are ALL RIGHT.

Annual Sessions.

We commented on this subject in the FACT when exceptions were taken by the Ohio State Journal to the proposed amendment as having emanated from a Democratic Legislature.

It was introduced by Mr. STARR, the Republican Senator from Cuyahoga, and urged and advocated by him with all his vigor and pertinacity. The very arguments to which the State Journal objected, were used by him—that annual elections were not called for by the people, but only annual sessions—that the duties of legislators were ill understood when members were first elected, and it required at least the experience of one session to acquaint them with the routine of business.

The Democratic Senate proposition was precisely what the Gazette intimates would be acceptable—to have annual elections and annual sessions. It was proposed, also, that only one-half of the Senate should go out annually; but it was objected to in the House, which did not like the distinction between Representatives and Senators.

We are inclined to agree with the Republican press that it is a very useless proposition, and we should be entirely willing to see it receive the cold shoulder. Whether there be a Democratic or Republican majority in the Legislature, the great and varied interests of Ohio demand annual sessions, and they will have them, as the precedent has been fairly set by both parties.

[From the Cleveland City Fact.]

Valedictory.

Not exactly being able to ride two horses at the same time, and being exceedingly solicitous that my own nag should be trotted out to the best advantage, I find it necessary to retire from my editorial connection with the DAILY FACT, to which paper I have given a stronger political bias than perhaps was consistent with its general character, or agreeable to many of its numerous readers. I have endeavored always to be frank and truthful, however; and am sure I have neither misrepresented nor misled; and therefore have nothing to recall with mortification or humility at this parting time. I have the satisfaction, too, of retiring from the FACT, leaving it in a healthier condition than when I joined it. The withdrawal is voluntary on my part, that I may devote my undivided time to the People's Press, in which my interests and my sympathies are largely involved. I leave the FACT in the hands of its veteran editor, who watched over its younger years, and nurtured it to maturity; and whose genial character, imparted to his columns, cannot make his paper otherwise than popular. Nor are our associations altogether interrupted, for my own paper, the People's Press, is printed in his office; and our daily intercourse is uninterrupted. To the readers of the FACT, I beg leave to bid a respectful farewell, hoping still to keep on good terms with them through another channel, and that they will continue to liberally patronize the FACT, in whose prosperity I feel almost as much interest as if it were my own.

J. B. MARSHALL.

CHAS. W. BLAIR, Esq.—This gentleman graced our sanctum with his presence on Tuesday last, and is looking healthy &c. We learn that Mr. Blair has received a call to the "Far distant West," to take charge, Editorially, of a new Daily paper, to be started soon in the city of Leavenworth, Kansas Territory. Wherever he goes, he will take with him the good wishes of a host of true friends of Wilmington and vicinity—friends who appreciate his talents his excellent heart, and the many good qualities which he possesses in an eminent degree. We wish you long life, Charlie, and abundant success in all of life.—Wilmington O. Watchman.

We have not seen Mr. Blair, since the foregoing paragraph met our eye, and, therefore, are not able to corroborate it; but we do know from intimate relations, that there is no good word said or expressed of him, that we do not to the fullest endorse. He is a gentleman of talents, of higher [illegible], of most pleasing address, a fine parliamentarian, of the most endearing and amiable qualities, and he has our earnest wishes for his success and happiness, whether he remain in Ohio, or [illegible] to the Far West.

CROP PROSPECTS.—Our exchanges from all quarters are quite sanguine that we shall have a rich and bountiful harvest. The war in Europe will, no doubt, cause an increased demand for our breadstuffs, and our farmers should be active and be prepared to benefit by this demand.

Fruits will be plenty; some of the early varieties of apples and peaches have been damaged by frost, but yet a sufficiency is left for an average, and the fruit will be all the better by the trees not being over burdened. The crop of late apples and quinces will be abundant.

FLOUR, WHEAT AND CORN.—The market for wheat within the past few days has failed until it may be reckoned a thing that was. Not a bushel can be obtained, and some of the mills stopped to-day. Large shipments are expected daily from distant localities, but until they arrive flour wi l continue upwards in tendency, from $7 25@7 50, those being the figures at which the commodity sold this morning.

The prices of corn, meal, oats, &c. remain unchanged, although for the former a stiff market is found.

The following paragraph appears in a number of the London Monthly Magazine published in 1817:

"A Tyrolian has lately invented at Vienna a machine for needlework, by which it is said every kind of sewing may be executed with the utmost precision. The Emperor of Austria has granted a patent to the inventor. Should these mechanical perfections make much farther advancement, everything in the world will shortly be executed machines."

☞ The Chairman and Secretary of the Democratic National Executive Committee are now in Washington, and have concluded to call a meeting for the 7th of December, when the committee will fix the time for the Charleston Convention, which, it is said, will be in May, 1860.

☞ Recent information states that the present movement of the Democracy in New York looks to a concentration on DOUGLAS, and an abandonment of BUCHANAN.

Affairs in Utah.

We made some remarks last week upon the rumored removal of Judge CRADLEBAUGH, and expressing disapprobation of the policy of recalling a judicial officer in whose character and attainments, whose integrity and firmness, and fairness and justice, our people ought [illegible] confidence, in whatever [illegible] he might be held by the Mormons. We expressed, also, [illegible] his proceedings. [illegible] a gallant soldier, a refined, intelligent and estimable gentleman, had [illegible] him.—We [illegible] one of the most [illegible] and intelligent papers in the Union, [illegible] history of the [illegible] to Utah, [illegible] and we take pleasure in transferring the article to our columns, expressing at the same time our [illegible] that the [illegible] of Judge CRADLEBAUGH has not been revoked, although [illegible] to say his conduct has not been approved, which may lead to his resignation.

The [illegible] says:

"Toleration is a good thing; but that support [illegible] fair dealing, that prudent regard for the opinions, frailties, prejudices, and passions of others, which the principle of toleration implies, may become, when it is carried beyond the limits of a just humanity, scarcely less an evil than intolerance itself. It is possible, in other words, to be tolerant overmuch. [illegible] a wrong to the moral sense, and [illegible] by remaining silent when it becomes [illegible] to speak out, or by yielding offences which they should pointedly condemn, as if they had [illegible]. They are [illegible] of the body politic, which are aggravated by the application of [illegible], but which can only be eradicated by actual cautery.—The disturbances in Kansas might easily have been suppressed if, at the first outbreak, the Federal authorities had done their duty promptly, vigorously, and, by so doing, emboldened the malcontents [illegible] but the resorted to temporizing expedients [illegible] of both parties to set the laws at defiance. A similar result has attended the attempted pacification of Utah. However much men may be inclined to extenuate the conduct of the people of Kansas, it would certainly be difficult to justify the acts of the Mormons. Here are fifty thousand religious fanatics—we may dignify with the name of religion so foul a creed—in open rebellion against the United States, and animated by a common hatred of those whom they stigmatized as Gentiles. Apart from their treasonable practices, they were known to have been guilty of innumerable crimes, even to the shedding of human blood; and this, too, not merely with the countenance, but with the express sanction of Brigham Young—himself an officer of the Federal Government—and of their Chief Priests and Elders. Every traveler across the Great Desert brought with him tidings of the defiant spirit of the people—of the inflammatory harangues of their leaders, and of mysterious murders perpetrated in deep canons and along the emigrant trail—murders which the Mormons ascribed to outlying bands of Indians, but which are now very generally believed to have been instigated by the Mormons themselves, even in those cases where they did not personally participate in the commission of the crime. At length it was decided to suppress the rebellion, and, by punishing the guilty, to vindicate the laws they had outraged. But why need we enter upon details? The march of troops across the plains—the cutting off of the supply trains—the winter camp in the mountains, all these and many other incidents connected with the military expedition which was organized against Utah, are too well known to our readers to need repetition. The spring came, and, when the gallant little army under Colonel Johnston was in a condition to resume offensive operations, the sword was ordered to be sheathed, and Governor Cumming, pressing forward into Salt Lake City, offered to those traitors and murderers a free pardon for all past offences, coupled with the single condition that, in future, they should yield obedience to the Federal authorities. Of course they promised to do so. What will not such men promise when they are pressed to the wall, and are anxious to escape the consequences of their crimes? So Colonel Cumming quietly [illegible] Brigham Young as Governor, and then it was that we were told Utah was pacified. But what has this "pacification" amounted to? "Only this and nothing more"—Cumming is Governor, vice Young superseded. The much boasted Mormon obedience extends no further. The Federal Judiciary they will not have, and by legislative enactments they have completely prevented Judges Cradlebaugh and Sinclair from exercising their functions.—In the terrible "Mountain meadow massacre," which took place about two years ago, more than two hundred men, women, and children were ruthlessly murdered; but when Judge Cradlebaugh attempted recently at Provo to bring the case before the Grand Jury, he was compelled to call upon General Johnston for a detachment of troops to protect the witnesses, and to guard the prisoners, and was finally obliged to discharge the Jury and break up his Court. With these facts, however, most of our readers are already familiar. They are also doubtless aware that the prompt response of General Johnston to the requisition made upon him by Judge Cradlebaugh elicited a protest from Governor Cumming, and gave rise to a serious dispute between the military and civil authorities in Utah. It was naturally enough to be expected that the Mormons should evince great indignation against Judge Cradlebaugh, and should have petitioned Governor Cumming to cause the troops which were stationed at Provo and in its vicinity to be withdrawn. We can readily understand their anxiety to leave Judge Cradlebaugh without military support, and the witnesses for the prosecution without protection. They had a sufficient reason for soliciting the interposition of the Governor in their behalf, from the fact that a number of prominent Mormons were implicated, both in the murder of Mr. Parrish, and in the Mountain meadow massacre, and it therefore became necessary to suppress the evidence of their complicity. Upon the course pursued by Governor Cumming we shall not offer, at this time, any comments. He claims to have acted under his instructions; but that the action of Judges Cradlebaugh and Sinclair should have drawn upon them the censure of the Administration and should have led—as is currently reported—to their recall, is well calculated to excite surprise, for it is either a virtual acknowledgment that the laws cannot be enforced in Utah, or that judicial officers who attempt to do their duty fearlessly, are not worthy of being sustained by the Government whose authority they sought to vindicate.

☞ The New York Tribune of Tuesday has a [illegible] lecture to the Republicans, and lays down the law for them. It says:

"As to our valiant Republican brethren, who keep reiterating that they will never support any but a distinctive, original Republican, and that the Platform of 1856 must be reaffirmed verbatim in 1860, we simply say, it is not wise to deal in rash promises, rash threats, nor rash prophecies. You will doubtless do what is best in 1860, whatever you may think or say now; and it is not wise to utter hot words which may return to plague you hereafter.—If an original Republican shall be our candidate in 1860, you will want our conservatives to forget that you ever threatened to oppose one of their sort if nominated; while, if our nominee should not be a Republican of '56, you will want to forget those threats yourselves.

We say, then, to the exclusives on either hand, keep cool. Victory is clearly within reach of the Opposition—a victory over which both Republicans and Conservatives will have ample reason to rejoice. Let it not be fooled away by a childish strife about names. When Speech tends to irritate and distract, unspeakable is the wisdom of Silence."

What do our neighbors of the State Journal think of it? Will they be lulled into utter obliviousness by the caresses of [illegible]?

ELECTIONS IN NOVA SCOTIA.—HALIFAX, Tuesday, May 10.—The Province is now going through the ordeal of a contested election, the main feature of which is the old issue between the Catholics and Protestants. The present Government, which is nominally conservative, solicits the Catholic influence by the cry of no proscription of Romanism. Joseph Howe and his associates of the Liberal party, have taken the Protestant cause under their care, and are uniting in opposition. This is precisely the opposite of the recent election in Prince Edward Island, where the Conservative party claimed the Protestant and the Liberal party the Catholic interest. The contest will be very close, both parties claiming the victory. The election was to take place on Thursday, the 12th inst.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.—A dispatch from Vicksburg of the 13th says:

"After four days' exciting debate, the Convention has adopted a resolution that the laws prohibiting the slave trade ought to be abolished."

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1859.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

St. Johns, N. F., May 18.—The steamship Arago has arrived, with Liverpool and London advices of the 4th inst.

The latest accounts from Italy are that though no actual collision had yet occurred between the Austrian and Sardinian armies, intelligence of a conflict was expected at any moment.

The Emperor Napoleon had sent a formal declaration of war against Austria to the Corps Legislatif, and also announced his intention to head the army. His departure was expected on th 4th. His manifesto states that Austria has virtually declared war against France, and nothing remains for France but to take up the sword in defence of Italy. He disclaims all idea of conquest, and being about to place himself at the head of the army, leaves the Empress and his son under the protection of the French people.

The French troops are pouring into Piedmont.

The Austrian troops are concentrating along the Sesia, and occupied Vercelli, Trieste and the surrounding country, which had been placed in a state of siege.

General Gulay, the Austrian commander, had imposed heavy contributions upon the towns occupied by him.

The Dutch Government had applied to the Chambers for a credit of £800,000.

The ship Champion of the Seas had arrived from Melbourne, with over £90,000 in gold.

The French Minister at Vienna, and the Austrian Minister at Paris, had both taken their departures for their respective governments.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Liverpool Breadstuffs Market, May 4.—The Breadstuffs market opened buoyant, but closed quiet.

Messrs. Richardson & Spence say there was a large speculation in the market on Monday, but this subsided on Tuesday, and the market closed steady. Flour advanced 6@9d; sales at 12s 3d@13s 9d. Wheat also advanced 6d@9d; western red is quoted at 9s 6d@11s 9d; do white at 10s 6d@12s 3d. Corn advanced 6d; mixed 7s 4d@7s 6d; yellow 7s 6d@7s 7d; white 8s 4d@8s 9d.

Liverpool Provision Market.—The circulars report an advance in provisions; pork buoyant and prices 5@10s higher in consequence of the large speculative inquiry. Bacon quiet, holders demanding an advance. Lard firm, at [illegible] prime and 61@62s for extra. Tallow [illegible] at 58s 6d@59s.

London Money Market.—The panic in the London Stock Exchange has subsided. Consols are quoted at 90¼@90½. For American securities there is little inquiry, the prices are weak. Illinois Central stocks is, however, better, being quoted at 43@41 per cent. discount.

New York, May 17.—The steamship Arago, from Southampton on the evening of the 4th inst., arrived at this port at noon to-day. She furnishes a few hours later intelligence than has been received by the steamer Nova Scotian.

LATEST NEWS.

Vienna, May 3d.—The Austrian Army has advanced without serious combat to Cambra, Cassolo and Tomallo.

Paris, May 4.—Military volunteers for two years have been accepted.

A war credit for ninety millions of francs is to be opened. A loan of five hundred millions of francs is to be contracted by national subscription.

St. Petersburg, May 2.—The official journal of the government has been authorized to declare most positively that there exists no treaty of alliance offensive and defensive between Russia and any other power whatever.

The statement that Trieste and surrounding country had been declared in a State of Siege by the Austrian troops is confirmed.

Venice and Verona have also been declared in a State of siege. General Gialay has imposed on the town of Novara a demand for a heavy contribution of provision and forage.

London Money Market, May 4.—Consols closed to-day at 90½@90¾ for money and account.

The Times' city article says, the improvement in the funds is consequent upon the assurances of Mr. D'Israeli of his entire confidence that no secret treaty existed between Russia. The improvement was less than one half per cent and the market at the close was still heavy. Consols at first were quoted at 90½ and after ranging between 90@91 they left off 90½@90¾.

The demand for discount at the bank as unusually heavy, and a further advance in the rate was considered probable.

THE AUSTRIANS IN PIEDMONT.

It appears that the bridge of Buffalora was destroyed by the Piedmontese on returning from resisting an encounter with the Austrian troops.

On entering Piedmont General Gialay, who commanded the Austrian forces, issued a proclamation, in which he said the Piedmontese should be treated with the greatest consideration by Austria, appearing there solely to combat the turbulent party which attacks the rights of Austria, as well as other Italian States, a party feeble in numbers strong only by audacity, and which prevents the voice of the true Piedmontese, people from being heard.

The Emperor of Austria had addressed an order of the day to Gialay's troops, which concludes thus: "Soldiers of the Second army, it is for you to carry to victory the unstained flags of Austria. March to combat with the blessing of God and the confidence of the Emperor."

The English papers received by the Arago furnish the following additional particulars concerning the wreck of the packet ship Pomona, which was recently wrecked off Ballycarrigar.

The cabin passengers of the Pomona consisted of Mrs. Paxton, a retired officer's widow, and her three children. Of the 393 steerage passengers 38 were English and the remainder Irish.

The English passengers who were on board were Charles Pandington, John Nidster, John Chapman, Wm. Randall, Geo. Pattford, Geo. Palethorp, Thos. Chamby, James Fends and wife, John Miller, Mary Miller, John Priestley, Geo. Armitage and wife, Fredk. Sugden, Wm. Akroyd, John Edmondson, David Doubleday, Elizabeth Doubleday, Wm. Doubleday, Jas. Doubleday, Mary Ann Doubleday, Charles Doubleday, John Sidden, Mary Whitley, Wm. Whitley, Ann Whitley, Mary Whitley, Jane Whitley, Elizabeth Whitley, Sarah Ann Whitley, Henry Smith, Betsy Giles, Emma Shaw, Harvey Shaw.

The Scotch passengers were John McCollum and wife, Robert Lisle, Thos. Wilson, Wm. Taylor, Margaret Scott, John Graham, James Keane and Adam McCaffry.

None of the foregoing were saved.

The following Irish persons had engaged passage but did not sail in the Pomona: Alfred Palmer, Pat Cleary, Theresa O'Neil, Michael Scott, Catharine Lacney, Catharine Wilson, George Hayl, Catherine Fitzgerald, Thomas Laswell, Margaret Casey, Catherine Norman, Bridget Devine and Robert Mullens.

Among the passengers by the Arago are Wm. Gwinn, Jr., bearer of dispatches from London, and Rev. Dr. Farrell, bearer of dispatches from Rome.

The Arago passed on the morning of the 20th in lat. 50° 24', long 34° 40', a steamer supposed to be the Arabia outward bound. On the 15th in lat. 40°, 35', long 66° 40', she passed the Propeller Glasgow, hence. At the same time she saw a bark rigged Propeller.

When off Cape Race the Arago passed several ice bergs.

Quebec, May 18.—The Nova Scotian arrived at a quarter of 8 o'clock this evening.

The following telegram from Paris appears in the London papers of the 4th:

Paris, May 3.—The following is the communication of the Government to the Legislature: Austria, by ordering her army into the territory of Sardinia, our ally, has declared war against us. She thus violates our treaties and menaces our frontiers. All the great powers have protested against this act of aggression. Piedmont having accepted the conditions on conditions, asks what can be the reason of this sudden invasion? It is because Austria has driven matters to such an extremity that her dominion must extend to the Alps, or Italy must be free to the shores of the Adriatic, for every corner of Italy which remains independent endangers the power of Austria.

Hitherto moderation has been the rule of my conduct, but now energy becomes my first duty. France must now go to arms and resolutely tell for Europe. I wish not for conquest, for I am determined fully to maintain my national policy. I observe treaties on condition that they are not violated against me. I respect territories and the rights of neutral powers, but I boldly avow my sympathies with a people whose history is mingled with my own, and who now groan under foreign aggression.

France has shown her hatred of anarchy. Her will was to give me power sufficiently to reduce into subjection abettors of disorder and incorrigible members of the old faction who were incessantly concluding compacts with our enemies; but she has not, for that purpose, abandoned her civilizing character. Her natural allies have always been those who desire the amelioration of the human race, and when she draws the sword, it is not to govern, but to free.

The object, then, of this war is to restore Italy to herself, not to impose upon her a change of masters; and we shall have upon our frontiers a friendly people, who will owe to us their independence. We do not enter Italy to foment disorder or to disturb the power of our holy father, who we replace upon his throne, but to remove from him this foreign pressure which burdens the whole peninsular, and to help to establish order there, based upon lawful, satisfied interests.

In fine, then, we enter this classic ground, rendered illustrious by so many victories, to seek the footsteps of our fathers. God grant we may be worthy of them. I am about to place myself at the head of the army. I leave to France the Empress and my son. Seconded by the experience and enlightenment of the last Emperor's surviving brother, she will understand how to show herself worthy the grandeur of her mission. I confide them to the valor of the army which remains in France, to keep watch upon our frontiers, and guard our homes. I confide them to the patriotism of the national guard. I confide them, in a word, to the entire people, who will encircle them with that affection and devotedness of which I daily receive such proofs. Courage, then, and union! Our country is about to show the world that she has not degenerated. Providence will bless our efforts, for that cause is holy in the eyes of God, which rests in justice, humanity, love of country and independence.

Cape Race, May 16.—The steamer Vigo, from Queenstown, on the 6th, for New York, passed near this point last night. Her advices are two days later than furnished by the Nova Scotian and Arago.

Switzerland.—The Swiss Federal Assembly had approved the declaration of neutrality, and the measures for defence, taken by the Federal council, and appointed General Refavier, Commander-in-Chief of the army.

New York, May 17.—The Swiss Federal Assembly has approved the declaration of Neutrality and the measures for defense taken by the federal council and appointed General Refavier Commander in chief of the army.

Prussia.—The bank of Prussia has advanced the rate of discount to 5 per cent.

India.—Advices from India have been received. Maun Singh has surrendered to the British forces. Tantia Toupee has been captured after a desperate struggle, in which 5,000 of the rebels were killed.

New York.—At this point the report ceased, the Nova Scotia line must either be down or has closed on the Associated Press, to deprive them of the intelligence. The report thus far contains nothing concerning the war or any commercial intelligence.

New York, May 17.—The London Times says that the invaders of Italy have not advanced over thirty-five miles from the frontier, and it seems that though Austria staked heavily for the opportunity she won, she has now thrown it away.

The Paris Moniteur of the 5th contains the following:

Allessandria, May 4.—The Austrians, who had crossed the Po in small number at Campdis, and pushed the van guard as far as Salla, have now crossed the river. The Austrian divisions reported on the right bank of the river are still threatening the passage of the Po at Tresinatto, but the river is much swelled by the rain, and offers an obstacle to the crossing. The rain continues, and all the lower grounds are covered on the route.

Parma, May 5.—The reigning Duchess entered the city yesterday. Part of the troops were out to meet her, and another part was drawn up along the roads.

Great Britain.—The Duke of Malakoff has had an audience with the Queen, and presented his letters recalling him to France. The members returned to the new House of Commons up to the evening of the 5th, was 552. The London Times estimates the ministerial gain at 17, and the Herald at 24. The death of Duke Lawes is announced. Lord Godolphen succeeds to the title.

Advices from Vienna state the failure of an extensive banking firm, with liabilities amounting to £2,000,000.

A telegram from St. Petersburgh announces that exchange on London has fallen to 33½ per cent.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Liverpool Breadstuffs Market, May 5.—Wheat and flour is held at an advance. In corn buyers were in attendance, but afraid to operate unless at a decline of 35@48 per cental. The same feeling prevailed in regard to other articles.

London Markets, May 6.—The supplies of Breadstuffs were very small for all descriptions. Wheat very quiet and in some cases 1s less was taken.

St. Johns, N. F., May 18.—The steamship Canada, from Liverpool, bound to Halifax and Boston, passed Cape Race last evening where her advices were obtained by the agent in charge of the News Yacht of the Associated Press. Her news is only one day later than received by the steamer Vigo and already published.

There has been a farther decline in cotton since the sailing of the Nova Scotian and Arago. Breadstuffs have slightly declined but provisions have advanced considerably.

The dispatches received by the Canada furnish the following item of intelligence: The steamship Indian arrived out on the 5th and the Lebanon on the 4th inst. Latest accounts from seat of war state that no serious collision had occurred, though the Austrians had been repulsed in an attempt to cross the river Po, at Trasenalto, a dispatch from Berlin announces the death of Baron Humboldt.

London, Saturday, May 7th.—Consols are quoted at 90¾@90⅞. The news from the seat of war is not important.

Liverpool, May 6th.—Sales of Cotton for the week had been 29,000 bales, at a decline during the week of ⅛d @ ¼d. Breadstuffs close quiet, at a decline for all descriptions. Provisions buoyant and all qualities have advanced.

London Money Market, May 7th.—Consols quoted at 90⅞ @ 90⅞.

New York, May 14.—The steamer Star of the West, from Aspinwall on the 4th and Havana on the 9th, arrived here this morning, bringing nearly a million and a half in specie. Her California advices have been anticipated by the Tehuantepec steamer. She reports having passed on the 7th inst., in lat 21° 9' lon. 84 48, U. S. steamer Relief standing north. Left at Aspinwall the frigate Roanoke.

The principal consignees of the treasure list are Wells & Fargo $380,000; American Exchange Bank $197,000; Strauss & Bros. $114,000; W. P. Coleman $97,000; Freeman & Co. $88,000; Duncan, Sherman & Co. $85,000.

The rumor was current at Capulo, but as no date is given, the advices are probably not as late as have been already received via Vera Cruz that the Liberals had taken all of the city of Mexico except the Palace.

The Overland mail of March 28th, arrived at San Jose April 19th. The advices from the Isthmus are unimportant.

The Panama Star says the Cass-Herran treaty which was sent from Washington to Bogota for ratification, has been lost in the Magdalena river by the capsizing of a boat in which it was placed.

Colored Royalty.—A letter from Hayti says that the Emperor Soulouque had not purchased the house in which he resided. He had made sad havoc on the premises. Their Imperial Highnesses, Soulouque's two daughters, were found one day engaged in the highly laudable task of purifying apparel in a tub of soap and water placed on a barrel, in the best drawing room of the elegant mansion where he resided, to the horror of Mr. Ramos, the proprietor.—Furthermore, the expensive carpeting and wall paper had all been soiled; rare and costly fruit and ornamental trees—so grateful in a tropical climate—had been cut down for fuel wood, and the entire premises reeked with filth. His Majesty received notice to quit, and was served with an action of damages, whereupon, emulating the polite canine animal, which, seeing preparations being made to kick him down stairs, he walked down himself. His Majesty paid a good round sum in liquidation of damages, and evacuated with all the honors of war.

From Japan.—We have news from Japan dated at Nagasaki on the 16th of February.

Tycoon, the new civil emperor, was crowned on the 4th of last month at Jedo. He is only fifteen years old.

A Japanese war steamer was to accompany the embassy to Washington on board the Mississippi as far as Panama.

A fire in Jedo had destroyed 50,000 buildings.

Very important despatches from the English government had reached Nagasaki, and at once sent on to Jedo. Contents not known.

Railroad Speed.—The following is said to be a correct calculation of the speed, in a given time, on the railroads of different countries:—England—main speed 33; express, 40; maximum, 62. Germany—main speed, 30; express, 38; maximum, 78. United States—main speed, 40; express, 60; maximum, 100. France—main speed, 40; express, 72; maximum, 86. It should be borne in mind that in the United States there are lines of the length of 3,800 miles, the stations on which are at great distances from each other.

—Capt. De Ben is about to organize a fencing school at Springfield.

The Fashions.—Paris, April 21st.—Our stylish modistes are busily occupied in preparing gay costumes for the outbreak of dissipation which generally celebrates Easter week. Since the Mi-Careme there has been a lull in the busy world of pleasure seekers, even the official receptions and entertainments have ceased. The costumes adopted for the spring festivals are always of a light material; crape and tulle are less worn than during the winter. Tarlatane, taffetas de chine, barege and other summer tissues are more in vogue. Madame Fauvet, 4 Rue de Menars, our oracle for the modes, has fashioned, for young ladies, many becoming and not expensive toilettes of white, pink, blue and yellow gauzes, profusely covered with bouillons and ribbons. These pretty costumes are what we style a "toilette chiffon" without any value excepting that given to them by the taste of the artificers—becoming nothings; coquettish novelties, and only attractive from their freshness and stylish air, and which gives to a ballroom the appearance of a parterre of flowers of brilliant hues. Madame Fauvet, from whom generally emanates the latest modes, has prepared for spring walking dresses, taffetas silks with the skirts plain until below the knee, where they are decorated with two rows of bouillons, or with one, two or three flounces, so narrow that they form ruffles. Many of us may remember to have seen the robes of our grandmothers finished with these trimmings; it is the fashion of fifty years back revived. We notice a decided tendency to return to the modes of the 18th century; the new pelisses belong both in form and trimming to that epoch. The charming creations of the court milliner, Madame Alphousine, 12 Rue de Helder, are all decked with bows and trimmings on the top of the bonnet, giving it a jaunty air, exceedingly becoming to a pretty face, and with the soft baby crown recall the chapeau which was worn by the ladies just before the great French revolution. The front of the bonnet is of chip, or straw or crin, the crown either of crape, covered with black tulle, or lace, or silk; the trimming is placed on the top, where the front and the crown join, and it falls gracefully on either side.

All dresses, mantles pelisses, bonnets, and scarfs, are profusely trimmed with the Cambria lace from the manufactory of Ferguson & fils, Rue des Jeuneurs, No. 40. This lace daily grows in favor with les grandes dames and rivals the tissues of Chantilly and Beyeux, for lightness and suppleness of texture, and for the taste and variety of the patterns, whilst it far surpasses these laces in durability, being much stronger and also very much less in price. The demand has so much increased for the Cambrai lace that all the principal depots of Chantilly and Brussels laces in Paris have been forced to keep a large assortment of this new description of black silk lace. In no department of commerce are the ingenuity, taste, and variety of the French so apparent as in their jewelry. The fashion of all ornaments vary with each season, and each season brings novel settings, new devices, and dazzling parures. The neck laces—an ornament which has been much worn this past winter—bracelets, Sevignes, agraffe wreaths and boquets for the coiffure, &c., now displayed at the establishment of Baudin, No. 7 Rue de la Paix, are splendid specimens of richness combined with lightness. The last extravagance of the Faubourg St. Germain is the novelty of a large and very valuable diamond star worn on the white satin shoe which is placed in the centre of a white satin bow. All sorts of embroidered slippers, boots and shoes are in vogue, reminding us of the details which a writer of the 16th century gives of the coquettes of this epoch: "They have worked shoes, pulsnets, pantoffles, and slippers, some of black velvet, some of white, some of green and some of yellow, some of Spanish leather, and some of English, stitched with silk and embroidered with gold and silver all over the foot, with other gewgaws innumerable."

A small number of Trappist monks emigrated not many years since to Staouli in Algeria, where they formed an establishment, and commenced making distilled waters and essences for the toilette from the various aromatic and sanatory herbs with which that country abounds. This handful of indefatigable pioneers of agriculture have become a flourishing colony offering protection and labor to many hundreds of poor colonists, who seek in Algeria the means of subsistence by cultivating the rich and abundant yielding soil of Africa. The exportation of plants, from which to extract sweet odors, is not an Algerian monopoly—the environs of Nice and the borders of the Mediterranean supply Fagner, 93 Rue de Richelieu, and our other celebrated perfumers with the violets, the germanias, &c., from which they extract the delightful essences which render the Parisian perfumers so justly distinguished. The Acetine of Fagner is an extract of aromatic herbs, very refreshing as a cosmetic and agreeable as an odor.—Correspondence of the Journal of Commerce.

The Fire at Oshkosh, Wisconsin.—The Milwaukee News, of Thursday, has the following explanation of the recent great fire at Oshkosh, Wis., by which $500,000 in property was destroyed:

"It will be remembered that last February we published an account of the burning of two houses of prostitution, in Oshkosh, by the indignant citizens, and the conveying of the inmates, twelve girls and a man, to jail. The houses were burnt to the ground, and the clothing, trunks and jewelry belonging to the inmates were also destroyed. As before stated by us, the girls were liberated after trial. The next move was a convention of this class of 'artists,' which convention was attended by prostitutes and their pimps from the neighboring cities and villages. At this convention, it is said, a solemn oath was made to burn the city from end to end, before the summer was over, in revenge for the burning of the two houses aforementioned.

"The city is now in ashes, evidently fired by an incendiary, but who the incendiary is we cannot yet tell. There is not a store or business house left. One hotel remains out of five. Four printing offices, all the place had, are in ruins, and the total loss cannot fall short of $500,000. For some weeks the city, learning the threat, kept a vigilant night watch, but as the spring advanced, and the wooden buildings became dry as powder, the watch was discharged on account of the expense. The buildings were close together, and built of wood. This made insurance so high, ranging from 4½ to 8 per cent., that but few were insured, and the loss mostly local."

Fire at Marietta.—An extra of the Marietta Intelligencer, published Thursday evening, gives further particulars of the disastrous fire at that place. The fire originated by some children lighting a fire while playing in a barn. The Intelligencer gives the following list of the sufferers:

Bank of Marietta, building.

Bosworth, Wells & Co., heavy loss of goods, insured, building owned by James Holden, insured.

Nye & Hunting, goods mostly saved.—Building owned by A. T. Nye & Brother, insured.

C. & S. Shipman & Co., dry goods merchants, goods saved, building insured.

S. Slocum & Co., boot and shoe dealers, goods partly saved, building owned by I. R. Waters, insured.

J. J. Brennan, grocer, goods mostly saved, building owned by James Booth, insured.

Hugh Brennan, liquor dealer, building and goods, no insurance.

——— Bonshaw, billiard saloon, loss light, building owned by E. Taylor, no insurance.

James M. Booth, house slightly injured, insured.

John Richards, loss heavy in building, no insurance.

Hugh Hill, two or three buildings, one occupied by J. C. Coulter, saddler, whose stock was all saved.

J. & D. Miller, bakers, loss comparatively light in goods.

J. Ebinger, saddler, building and goods, loss very light, building insured.

Several other persons, shopkeepers, tailors, liquor dealers, &c., between Second street and the alley on Green, were burned out. What their loss is we cannot now say.

The only serious accident that occurred was to Marcellus Morse, who was injured by the falling of the roof of a ten pin alley, which he was assisting in pulling down.

New York, May 16.—The Italians have called a meeting for to-morrow evening, to express sympathy with the struggle now going on in Italy. The call says Italy has enunciated her war cry; that cry has come to us, and we, palpitating with joy, have exclaimed "Alta Riscossa, to Italy, Italians." The hour so long expected is come. All around the flag tricolore. Let us fly to assist the cause of our country.

"I and J.—There are no two letters in the manuscript alphabet in the English language which occasion so much trouble or cause so much misconstruction, as the two letters I and J, as many inadvertantly write them. The rule for writing them properly, and which should be universally understood and adopted, is to extend the J. below the line, while the I should be written even with the line. If those who write I for J knew how it sometimes puzzled printers, they would remember the above suggestion."

OHIO STATE NEWS.

— The Florences are playing at Wood's Theater, Cincinnati.

— Strawberries have made their appearance at Cincinnati, but none but the "nobs" can buy them.

— Three mulatto female slaves were liberated at Cincinnati, yesterday, by A. J. Morris, of South Carolina.

— Judge McLean is represented as too unwell to attend court, but it is expected he will be convalescent in a few days.

— Sam'l Hattersley, of Portsmouth, was relieved at Cincinnati, yesterday, of $36, while he was napping.

— Josiah Priest, gun and locksmith at Cleveland, has been arrested for making and passing counterfeit coin.

Solomon Beermyer and George McLean have been committed without bail, for the murder of Mr. Simonson in Anderson township, Hamilton county.

— A man named James Powers was found dead in his bed at Cincinnati, on Saturday afternoon. The coroner's verdict was "Intemperance."

— A woman named Krouts, hanged herself at Cincinnati, on Sunday. It is thought her life might have been saved, but the watchman who discovered her ran for the Coroner and left her hanging. When she was taken down her pulse yet fluttered.

— The trial of Edward De Stiger, of Athens a route-agent on the railroad, indicted for stealing a valuable package from the mail, resulted in his acquittal by the United States court.

— A man named Wm. Simonton, a woodchopper of Anderson township, Hamilton county, is reported to have been murdered on Monday night, having been stabbed to the heart, and had his brains knocked out.

— On Saturday John Lambaugh, of Garrettsville, Portage county, was lodged in jail for criminal carelessness in the use of fire arms. He shot at a dog, which he missed and the charge passed through the hat of a child who was playing near by.

— At Ravenna, on Monday, Mr. R. S. Brown, while adjusting some work on a planing machine, had his left hand caught by the machine and seriously injured. The knuckle upon the thumb was shaven off, the first finger was severely cut in two places, and the second finger cut into three times, being nearly severed twice.

— At Cleveland, on Monday, at the special election for Councilman to serve the unexpired term of Hon. Geo. B. Senter, resigned, Lorenzo J. Rider, Democrat, was elected by 131 majority. The vote was, Rider 352, J. L. Brown, Republican, 221. In the same ward, at the election on the first Monday in April last, the Democratic nominee for Mayor was beaten 232, being, in one month, a Democratic gain of 363.

— The Toledo Herald, received last evening says: Nothing, we believe, has yet been heard from the two men, last seen off Monroe in a small boat, and whom we mentioned a week since. The steam tug Lyon, made a cruise in search of them, but without success. The names of the missing men were Little and Chamberlain. The overcoat of the former has been found, floating on the Lake, at the mouth of Otter creek, near Monroe.

— At Cincinnati, George Mortimer, a man about 30 years old, was found in a dying condition, on Monday, and taken into the station-house where he almost immediately expired. He was formerly a shoemaker and in comfortable circumstances, but whisky ruined him. He has been a constant lodger at the station-house for some four months, and until Monday they did not know his name. The Coroner's Jury found that he came to his death from exposure and intemperance.

— At Cleveland, on Saturday, while some boys were fishing for coal, they brought up the body of a man named Hiram Osborn, of Lowell, Kent county, Michigan. He was partly bald-headed, had rather defective teeth and no first joint on the fifth finger of the left hand. An envelope found in his pocket has the name of Hiram Osborn, Lowell, Kent county, Michigan. Besides this, a "silver watch," a pair of spectacles, about a hundred dollars of Ohio and Western money, the greatest part of which was hidden in a linen belt worn around the body.

— Burns, the murderer, at Cincinnati, has been granted another trial.

— Peter Sall, a German, hanged himself at Cincinnati yesterday.

— The Jackson Brewery was destroyed by fire at Cincinnati yesterday morning. Loss about $10,000, with $4,000 insurance.

— An anti-Slavery meeting of the men of the Reserve is called to take place at Cleveland on the 24th inst. The City Council of Cincinnati have passed an ordinance, authorizing the issue of City Bonds to the amount of $100,000, for School purposes.

— The Lancaster Eagle of Thursday says: In the afternoon of Sunday last, while Dr. Bigelow was cupping his wife, he accidentally got hold of the cup filled with alcohol instead of the empty one, lit it and attempted to place it on the back of her neck, when the fluid flew all over her neck, face and shoulders, burning her very badly. Her suffering for a time was very great—almost insufferable, though she is now comparatively easy with a fair prospect of a speedy recovery. The Doctor's hands were severely burned in extinguishing the fire.

— The house of Mr. Lucian Frank, at Sullivan, Ashland county, was destroyed by fire on the morning of the 9th inst.

— The Kentucky officers arrested at Cleveland on a charge of kidnapping are now in Elyria jail awaiting trial. Court commences on Tuesday next.

— A pair of horses attached to a wagon at Mt. Vernon, on Tuesday, ran off, and were only stopped in their career by falling into an old well fifteen feet deep. They were rescued without injury.

—On Saturday last, a boy that carries the mail from Lafayette, Madison county, to Mechanicsburgh, was kicked in the breast by his horse, about six miles below Mechanicsburgh, and so badly injured that he died the next day.

— We learn from the Dayton Empire that the crop prospects in the Miami valley is excellent. Barley is heading out, wheat is two feet high, stands thick, especially where drilled in, and the head joints have already started out. Oats never looked better at this season of the year.

— In the Licking county Court of Common Pleas last week, Miss Goss obtained a verdict of $1,500 against a young man named Smock, for a breach of promise of marriage. The parties, whose parents are said to be wealthy, had been courting for several years, when Smock suddenly discontinued his attentions and married another.

— The Woollen Manufactory at Newark, Licking county, took fire on Friday, of last week, but the flames, through the exertion of the firemen and citizens, were fortunately subdued before much injury was done. The machinery was but slightly damaged, and the entire loss will probably not exceed $1,500.

— Counterfeit bills on the Branch Bank of Summit county are in circulation in Ashland county.

— A movement is on foot in Gallia county to remove the county seat to a place called Rodney, said to be nearer the centre of the county.

— The break in the canal at Cleveland has been repaired, and boats arrive and depart as usual.

— At the Southgate House, Cincinnati, on Thursday evening, M'lle Wells had a valuable gold watch, three rings, &c., stolen from her room. The thief was caught and part of the property recovered.

— The Cincinnati Commercial says that the wood dealers of that city sometimes make nine loads of a quarter of a cord each, out of one cord. Quite a snap, with only a little care and trouble in handling.

— A lad named Clemens, in Clinton county, only about fourteen years old, hanged himself during the temporary absence of his father and mother, on a visit to a neighbor, on Sunday of last week. No motive is given for the act.

— The Dayton Republican papers are anxious to have Jonathan Harshman on the Republican ticket. He was on the last American ticket, but is now proposed for Auditor on the Republican ticket. The Dayton Journal thinks he would decline a nomination for Auditor, but might accept that for Treasurer of State.

— The Toledo Herald of the 13th inst says: Wheat in this section looks as well as ever known here, and there is every reason to expect an abundant yield.—Spring crops of grain are doing well, and the warm weather of the past three or four weeks is having a wonderful effect on them. The fruit prospect still holds good; there having been no frost since trees were in bloom.

— A tax payer in one of the Wards in Cincinnati, the Gazette says, objected to an assessment of a side-hill property, alleging that it was not "Real Estate" within the meaning of the law. He claims that it is a "moveable," inasmuch as during the recent rains nearly half an acre of it slid into the river. Besides, a mortgage not being able to "hold" it, he thinks it should be exempt from taxation altogether.

— The Ohio State Sabbath School Convention assembled at Cincinnati on the 11th inst. The attendance was large. The Convention was permanently organized by the appointment of James M. Hoyt, of Cleveland, President; Chas. H. Wolff, Cincinnati; Anson Smythe, Columbus; Peter Odlin, Dayton; W. W. Scarborough, Cincinnati; and W. F. Converse, Sandusky, Vice Presidents; and Thos. Moodie, of Columbus, Secretary.

— Mr. Henry C. Ware, engineer at the Furnace of J. M. Crawford & Co., Lowell, Mahoning county, met with sudden death from suffocation on Friday, last week.—He entered one of the pipes of the gas receiver to make some repairs, and neglected to have the engine kept in motion to keep up a fresh supply of air. He was soon overpowered by the gas, and before he could be extricated life was extinct.

— The residence of Mr. R. McLelland, near Haverhill, Scotio county, was destroyed by fire on Thursday night last. The property which was owned by Mr. Means, of Lawrence county, was a frame built some fifty years ago.

— Lewis, son of Gregory Schenck, residing near Franklin, Warren county, met with a shocking death on Monday last. The facts as furnished us are as follows: The boy was driving a yoke of oxen attached to a roller and was engaged in rolling the ground, when it is supposed that he fell from his seat, and the roller passed upon his body, and his cries stopped the team as the roller lay across his chest, when found by his father a short time after, who was in another part of the field, and was attracted to the spot, to learn the cause of the team being stopped, and no person near, when he found his son a corpse beneath the roller.

— Two Irish women were drowned near Mt. Vernon last week, in attempting to ford a stream.

— A boy was killed near Oberlin on Monday by a pleasure excursion car on the Black River bridge.

— The shipping at Toledo displayed their flags at half mast on Thursday last in respect to the memory of Capt. Pheatt.

— They have an amateur dramatic society in Conneaut, which is doing great things. Its scenery, properties, &c., are "new and elegant," and the Thespians are "very talented." The Cleveland Plain Dealer says the Society played a tragedy (we forget the name) the other night in one scene of which Ronaldo thrusts his head out of the second story window of a prison and cries to Madeline, who is trying to get him out, "Fly, Sweeet! Leave me to my fate!" This was Ronaldo's first appearance on any stage and he was considerably confused. When he came to the above scene he lost his balance and fell wildly to the floor. Raising himself partially up and gazing mournfully upon the audience, he said, in a sad voice, "By ——, I don't want to act any more!"

— Mr. G. L. Rathey was drowned near Chillicothe while fishing a few days ago. He was about 27 years of age.

— A drunken bully named Evans Fagan, of Osceola, Crawford county, was shot by R. Hunt, a sheep buyer from Columbia county, New York, on the 7th inst. He assailed Mr. H. who was riding along peaceably, and in the affray Mr. H. killed him. Mr. Hunt had $2,500 with him, and supposed Fagan intended to rob him. He surrendered himself, was examined, and acquitted.

— A lake-going man known as Sandy Lewis, resident of the West Side, Cleveland, was drowned off the schooner Sargent, of which he was mate, in the St. Clair a few days since. He was swept overboard by the boom. The vessel was under rapid headway and the boat in being lowered or soon after was swamped and Lewis, though he struggled well, and rose twice, was drowned before any one could get to him. He leaves a wife and four children.

— The Detroit Tribune of the 10th says: "A man named Thomas Taylor was examined at the Police Court on Saturday, charged with picking the pocket of Mrs. David Pease, of Norwalk, Ohio, just as she was stepping into a car at the Central depot to go to Wayne. Taylor was seized by the lady on the spot, but the portemonnaie was not to be found on him, and, of course, there could be no complete identification. He was therefore discharged.

— Columbus Johnson, residing at Mt. Vernon from the influence of bad whisky, is in the habit of abusing his wife last week was brought before Mayor Cooper. While undergoing an examination, Johnson drew a large dirk knife with which he threatened to kill himself and everybody who attempted to restrain his freedom, including the Mayor. That officer was obliged to defend himself with a poker. Johnson then drew his knife several times across his own throat, inflicting incisions from which the blood flowed freely. The wounds which were supposed not to be mortal were dressed, and the unfortunate man sent to jail.

— In April, 1855, John Emmett, a young man, son of William Emmett, Esq., of Springfield, Summit county, got up in the night and left his father's house, taking with him very little clothing. He had previously been in low spirits, and it was conjectured that he might have drowned himself in the lake. The lake was searched, guns fired over it, and every means resorted to, to find the body. On Wednesday night of last week he returned. He asked for lodging, but, standing at the door, his own mother did not recognize him. His father, however, knew his voice, and bid him "come in." It appears that he left home in an insane or bewildered state of mind, and went to Elmira, N. Y., where he found employment, and there remained. He had been industrious and prudent, came home well clothed, and with a pretty sum of money which he had saved from his wages. But some eccentric impulse prevented his remaining at home. On Thursday morning he came to Akron and took an early train for the West to invest his earnings in land.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

New York, May 13.—The rumored arrangements between Mr. Vanderbilt and the Pacific Mail Co. have taken a more decided shape and is generally credited. It is said that Mr. V. sells the Northern Light, Vanderbilt, North Star, Ariel, Daniel Webster, Ocean Queen, Uncle Sam and Cortes for $3,600,000, to which the Pacific Mail Co. contributes $600,000. A new company is to be formed for working the Atlantic end of the route with a capital of $3,000,000. Of this amount Mr. V. takes $500,000 stock and $500,000 bonds. The service is to be performed weekly between this city and San Francisco.

A large fire occurred at Theresa village last night, consuming a flouring mill, two saw mills, a sash factory, a foundry, three machine shops, three dwelling houses and two barns. Loss $50,000.

The ship Wm. Tapscott arrived at this port yesterday with 728 Mormon emigrant passengers.

The Quarantine Commissioners have purchased the old steamship Falcon, and are fitting her up as a floating hospital for yellow fever patients and other infectious diseases. She will be got in readiness with all possible dispatch, and anchored in the lower bay.

A select party of the hard shell Democrats met at the Astor House yesterday P. M. to devise some plan to reunite the Democracy of the State.

A communication was addressed to the State Central Committee, couched in becoming terms, proposing a basis of union, by which the edict of proscription issued by the last State Convention be recalled, the offices divided next fall, and the Charleston Convention apportioned between Softs and Hards, according to their relative strength in the State.

At the 23d anniversary meeting yesterday of the American and Foreign Baptist Bible Society, the treasurer reported the receipts of the year nearly $31,000, and the expenditures $35,800.

Washington, May 14.—The War Department has designated the following stations as schools for the artillery practice: Forts Ridgely, Randall and Leavenworth; in the Departments of the west, Forts Clark in Texas, and Van Couver in Oregon. The following officers have been appointed Inspectors:—Brevet Col. Munroe Department of the West; Brevet Lieut. Col. Nauman, California and Oregon; Brevet Col. Harney, Bureau Department of the coast and Texas. Lieuts. Alexy and Pagram have been detached from the command of the steamers Fulton and Water Witch. Lieut C. F. Thomas has been ordered to the steamer Michigan. The following engineers have been ordered to the San Jacinto: Chief, John Faren; first assistant, Spooner; second assistants, Kellogg and Houston; third assistants, Roop, Kavenaugh and Hull.

Commissioner Greenwood entered upon his duties in the Indian Bureau yesterday.

St. Louis, May 14.—The Santa Fe mail with dates to the 25th has reached Independence.

Three Overland mails on the Central route are missing.

The advices from Pike's Peak are discouraging, but there is no falling off in immigration.

Halifax, May 14.—The Provincial election on Thursday resulted in the liberals, the Protestant cause obtaining a majority of 9, in the Parliament representation. Five of the present executive councillors were defeated.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

☞ Lord Grosvenor is at present in Kentucky. On Thursday he left Louisville on a visit to the Mammoth Cave.

☞ Mr. Rarey is now in St. Petersburg, but his first experiment upon an indomitable horse belonging to M. Arapoff was unsuccessful.

☞ United States mail steamers will be prevented hereafter from landing persons in Cuba, obnoxious to the Government.

☞ The Rhode Islanders throughout the Union propose to have a general gathering at Newport, on the 23d of August, to greet each other and their native State.

☞ Sir Charles Napier says that thirteen thousand sailors have deserted the British naval service within three years, with more than $130,000 due them.

☞ Gabriel Ravel had a large benefit at New Orleans on Monday night, May 2d. In a speech before the curtain he says that he expects soon to quit the stage.

☞ The ship Compromise from Liverpool to New York, with 258 passengers, put in at Halifax on the 11th. She had five deaths on board from small pox.

☞ The Grand Jury at Augusta, Ga., on the 11th, found a verdict against Swan & Co. for vending illegal lottery tickets. The case will be carried to the Supreme Court.

☞ On the 26th and 27th of April, over one hundred wagons left Omaha City, Nebraska, en route for Pike's Peak, and two hundred and thirty-one camps were left behind, to proceed at a later day.

☞ Two gentlemen, Messrs. Craig and Williams, of Red Mills, Ky., were robbed at the National Hotel, Louisville, on Tuesday night. The former lost $300 in cash and the latter a valuable watch.

☞ A wharf rat weighing thirteen pounds was killed in Portland, Me., on Monday.

☞ Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton was seriously ill at last accounts from England.

☞ The Post Office at Evanston, near Chicago, was entered by a thief and robbed of $153 on Sunday night last.

☞ The fortunate husband of the daughter of Mr. Corcoran, the Washington banker, receives with his wife, if rumor be true, a bridal present of $1,000,000.

☞ The Shakers at New Lebanon, Columbia county, N. Y., are about erecting a stone barn one hundred and fifty feet long, the cost of which will be $80,000.

☞ The snow is still several feet deep on the White Mountains of New Hampshire, and snow-shoes are still in request for traveling purposes.

☞ In the official canvass of the recent Wisconsin election 30,253 votes were thrown out on account of various informalities. They do not effect the result.

☞ Mr. Ford, proprietor of the Prince Albert Tavern near Sandwich, C. W., has brought an action of crim con against a Frenchman named Langlois, who it appears was over attentive to the plaintiff's wife, and from other circumstances leave no doubt as to the guilt of the parties. Ford claims damage in the sum of $4,000. Langlois is a farmer in comfortable circumstances, residing between Windsor and Sandwich. Mrs. Ford is much younger than her husband, and not only declares her preference for Langlois, but avows her determination to have him in spite of her husband's prosecution.

☞ The wife of the Hon. Pierre Soule died on the 5th inst., at his residence in New Orleans.

☞ Nearly 4,000 immigrants arrived at New York on Friday. They came in eight ships from Liverpool, Bremen and Havre.

☞ The sailors belonging to the Prussian frigate now at Norfolk, Va., have nearly all deserted.

☞ Mr. E. A. Russell, the Democratic candidate for Mayor, of Middletown, Conn., was elected on Saturday.

☞ William Chambers, the famous Scotch publisher, has given $150,000 to establish at Peebles, his native place, a public museum, gallery of art and library.

☞ The richest woman in New York is Mrs. Tucker, widow of the late Hon. Gideon Tucker, and grandmother of the present Secretary of State.

☞ The report that Teresa Bagioli (Mrs. Sickles) is going on the stage is contradicted, and the whole rumor is declared to be without any foundation whatever.

☞ John Harrington, Esq., hardware merchant, and a prominent citizen of Toronto, was killed on Saturday by falling from his horse.

☞ The Liverpool Times of 19th April says that during the month of April about ten thousand persons had left that port for the United States, chiefly bound for New York.

☞ A writ of error and stay of execution has been granted by the Superior Court of New York, in the case of James Stephens under sentence of death for poisoning his wife.

☞ Prince Albert, it is rumored, has written an autograph letter to Napoleon, declaring that Austria, by her ill-advised rashness, had forfeited the sympathies of England.

☞ It is not gratifying to our national pride to know the fact that of the forty-five steamships now actually in service between the ports of Europe and North America, only five belong to American owners.

☞ At Genoa, the English are now so unpopular that the air of "God Save the Queen," which occurs in a ballet now performing at the Carlo Felice theatre, was hissed on two consecutive nights.

☞ Mr. Montague, of Virginia, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, who took the place of Hon. John Letcher who was compelled to retire on account of ill health, fell sick last week, and Mr. Goggin is now left to pursue the canvass alone.

☞ Judge McKune, at Sacramento, has granted to J. R. Hardenbergh, Postmaster in that city, a divorce a mensa et thoro from his wife Miss C. Hardenbergh, for the reason that she had refused to leave her home in New Brunswick, N. J., to join her husband in California.

☞ Texas and Louisiana papers bring gloomy accounts of the condition of the crops in portions of those States, most of the cotton and corn having been seriously injured by severe frosts. In some favored localities, however, the prospects were very encouraging.

☞ At a banquet given recently at Vienna, Count Buol gave a toast that "God might preserve the army." Baron Bruck, the finance minister, replied that he fervently hoped this prayer would be answered, as the Austrian exchequer could not do it much longer.

☞ There has recently been an unusual mortality in the family of Mr. Joshua H. Selby, at Bladensburg, Md. On the 15th ult. his son, aged ten years, died, on the 19th his daughter, aged thirteen years, and on the same day his wife, all of scarlet fever; and on the following day Mr. Selby himself died of consumption.

☞ An affray occurred in Baltimore in a house of disrepute, on Saturday night, between the members of rowdy clubs. A young man named Augustus Fort was shot in the hip and also in the arm; three others were slightly wounded, but none of them are considered in a dangerous condition.

☞ James Kennovan, who had undertaken, at San Francisco, to walk or run four hundred miles in one hundred hours, accomplished the arduous feat in ninety eight hours and twenty minutes, thus winning by one hour and forty minutes. He weighed one hundred and twenty-one and a half at the conclusion of his wager, having lost four pounds and a half.

☞ The total military force now on the island of Cuba is over 40,000 men, and this in a population of less than 100,000. It has been computed that to every four white men on the island, there is one soldier. Nearly 20,000 soldiers are quartered in and about Havana. To maintain discipline among such a body the utmost rigor is necessary, and military executions are very frequent.

☞ Mrs. William B. Astor, of New York city, supports a female orphan asylum, at Red Hook, Duchess Co., N. Y.

☞ The rust has made its appearance in the wheat fields of Southern Georgia far earlier than last year. It is said to be very bad.

☞ A high price, gilt edged darkey, with plated harness, and "store clothes" to match, captivated a fair but frail Desdemona at Detroit, the other day, and they eloped to Canada.

☞ Mr. Williamson has sold the New York Weekly for $50,000 to Frank Street and Francis Smith, the former long connected with him as clerk, and the latter well known as a story writer for the Dispatch and Weekly.

☞ There is a silver mine in Western, Mass., that was worked over 100 years ago, when the pure ore was taken from it, and manufactured into buttons, to adorn the garments of revolutionary heroes.

☞ The Courier de Marseilles mentions, as a proof of Austria being greatly in want of funds, that the Emperor Francis Joseph has caused the Crown jewels to be deposited with the heirs of the well-known banker Baron Sina, as a guarantee for a loan of 32 millions of florins.

☞ Commissioner Reed has accepted the invitation of the citizens of Philadelphia, to take place after his return from Washington.

☞ Private accounts from Utah say that Brigham Young maintains the strictest guard upon his privacy. He is afraid to allow his dormitory to be approached by an ordinary passage, and therefore resorts to out-of-the-way expedients to secure himself from attack.

☞ A letter from Gainesville, Ala., dated the 10th inst., reports a dreadful storm in that vicinity, causing the death of Mr. J. Wm. Berrien, a brother of the deceased U. S. Senator, and agent of the house of Beckett, Belcher & Co., of New York.

☞ We have advices from Venezuela to the 20th ult. The revolution continued, but there was little doubt that the Government would ultimately triumph. Puerto Cabello had been threatened by the Revolutionists, but they had retreated. Gen. Paez had been named Chief of Operations in the West, but not having recovered from the hurt received in New York, he was not able to take the field in person.

☞ A murder was committed at Dayton, near Richland Center, Wis., on the 3d inst., on the person of Ernest Herlitz, who lived in a cabin by himself. He was attracted to the window by a noise outside, and on stooping forward to look out was shot in the face with two balls. They entered the cheek, tore away the upper and lower jaw-bone, and entered the chest near the collar. One ball passed out at the shoulder blade, the other lodged against the ribs and was found upon the diaphragm. He lived in great agony until the next evening. No clue has been found to the assassin.

I. O. O. F.—The sessions of the Grand Lodge of Independent Order of Odd Fellows in session at Sandusky on Wednesday, elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

George F. Marshal, Cleveland, M. W. Grand Master.

George M. Young, Dayton, R. W. Deputy Grand Master.

Joseph W. Newburg, Canal Dover, R. W. Grand Warden.

Alexander E. Glenn, Columbus, R. W. Grand Secretary.

Wm. F. Slater, Columbus, R. W. G. Treasurer.

Wm. C. Earl, Toledo, R. W. Grand Representative to the Grand Lodge of the United States for two years.

George D. Winchell, Cincinnati, R. W. Grand Representative to the G. L. of the U. S. for one year.

Charters were granted for eleven new Lodges.

An amendment to the Constitution was adopted, providing for annual reports of Lodges instead of semi-annual, as heretofore.

The next session of the Grand Lodge will be held at Piqua, Miami county.

☞ The late advices from Europe give evidence of increasing activity in emigration to this country. There were over five thousand emigrants collected at Liverpool alone ready to embark. There can be no doubt that a European war would so derange all departments of manufacturing industry as to necessitate a vast exodus of the working population, whose steps would naturally be directed towards this country.

CITY NOTICES.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakespeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music Store of Messrs. Selmer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. [illegible] and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

G. A. Wagner, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be secured by constant attention. The Saloon is in "good condition." No. 21 East State Street.

may 19

Luncheon.—There is nothing that is more appetizing than luncheon at about 10 A. M., these long [illegible]. Schlesinger sets a fine lunch about that hour every day on State street opposite the American. He will have GREEN SEA TURTLE SOUP to-morrow, the "monster" just received from Baltimore.

The Capitol Restaurant is centrally located, and its Proprietor John O'Hara is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

Cheap Dry Goods.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. Ostrander on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city, and the prices such as will suit the times.

"Grand Picnics."—John Lake, Director of the Dance, has put out a programme of a series of Picnics for the month. He will erect a portable stage for dancing, which will be conveyed from place to place. The Picnics will commence next week at Goodale Park, May 26 and 27; Four Mile House 28; Shaderville 31; Darbyville, June 1st; Circleville 2d; Canton 3d and Lancaster 4th. There will be agreeable reunions for which the expenses will be defrayed by subscriptions.

☞ J. R. Lammie, of the American Saloon had a beautiful silver cup presented him at Cincinnati the other day; but we don't know what; for whether for beauty, or the want of it; for keeping the best of drinks or being the best of drinkers; we don't know. But he's got the cup, which may be seen at the American Saloon.

☞ Fred. Rife is very anxious to see his friends and have a talk about European affairs. He may be found in the saloon of the United States Hotel, where for the present he resides himself with—the news.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is when the [illegible].

☞ Frank Leslie's Family Magazine is for sale by Kenedy, State street. It is beautifully illustrated by superior wood cuts; and contains large amount of the most interesting reading matter.

☞ Rosier & Dietrichs continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "John" says that he don't care if putty is three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

☞ Selmer & Webster are the agents of [illegible] Pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world [illegible].

☞ E. F. Jennings, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious on a cool cellar, in warm weather.

☞ Cheapest [illegible] the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the Spring style for summer wear should look in.

☞ Frank Heritage, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ Kenedy has the latest periodicals.

Napoleon, Henry Co., O., July 7, 1858.—Dr. C. W. Roback—Dear Sir:—For the benefit of suffering humanity, permit us to announce, through the columns of your Circular, the surprising properties of your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills, which is a sure cure for Indigestion and Liver Complaint. We have several persons in town, who have been suffering with Liver Complaint and Indigestion, and notwithstanding that we have as good physicians as can be found in Northern Ohio, yet the disease baffled their skill. Consequently we were in a state of despondency, until we commenced using your Pills, through and by the advice of our friend, Mr. Bassman. We used the medicine according to directions, and are now full of life and hilarity, and our gratitude is equal to our improvement in health and spirits. When we take into consideration what we have been, and what we are at present, we feel like charging ourselves of the sin of ingratitude, if we did not try to announce to the public the great benefits of your Medicine. Therefore, we recommend to the public at large, the expediency of having recourse to your Medicine, and consequently, as in duty bound, discharge what we feel to be our duty, in advising persons who are suffering as we have suffered, to make use of the only true and sure cure for the disease already mentioned.

Mrs. Gwin.
Mrs. Beninger.
Miss Heaton.
C. C. Sturman.

See advertisement.

Cincinnati, May 18.—A fire occurred at four o'clock this morning. Kemble & Ward's planing machine, on Race street, was totally destroyed. Loss $7,000, insured $3,000. Schooley & Co.'s refrigerator manufactory, loss $10,000, insured for $6,000. Wm. Maher, chair manufactory, loss $2,000; no insurance. About twelve buildings were burned in all. Several others damaged; 18 or 20 families were burned out. Total loss about $40,000; insurance, $26,000.

St. Louis, May 18.—The steamers Monongahela and Edinburg, lying at the Illinois shore, opposite this city, were burned to the water's edge this morning. Loss, $58,000; insurance for $30,000 in Pittsburgh offices.

Lebanon, Ky., May 18.—Thomas R. Hart has been nominated for Congress from Seventh District by the Democracy. Mr. Hart, in accepting, maintained the right of the South to take her property to territories under the Dred Scott decision, but declared against the interference of Congress either to establish, prohibit or protect slavery.

COLUMBUS RETAIL MARKET.

Wednesday, May 19.

(Corrected Weekly.)

Oats, 50c; corn, 75c; wheat, $1 30; barley, 65c; cornmeal, $1; potatoes, $1.

Flour, $7 @7 25; salt $1 70—per barrel.

Bacon, hams, 10@12½c, shoulders, 9@10c; lard, 14c; honey, 20c; fresh fish, 7@9c; candles, 15c; coffee 13@14c; dried apples 12½c; dried peaches 19c; beef steak, 10@12½c; roasts, 10c; pork 7@8c; mutton, 7@8c; butter, 14@20c—per pound.

Poultry.—Chickens, 15@20c; turkeys, 50@75c—each.

Golden syrup, 85c; N. O. molasses, 60c—per gallon.

Eggs, 10c—per dozen.

Hay, $12—per ton.

Lap shingles, $3 50—per thousand.

Markets.

Cincinnati, May 18—Noon.—Flour [illegible], no demand. Whisky unchanged. Provisions less buoyant; no sales so far. Weather clear and warm. River fell seven inches yesterday.

New York, May 18.—Flour heavy at a decline of 10@20c; 6,000 bbls sold. State $6 [illegible]@7; Ohio $7 75@8 10; Southern $8 [illegible]. Wheat declining nominally [illegible]. Corn quiet, white 94@96 [illegible]. Mess pork heavy at $18 [illegible], prime $13 [illegible] $15 75. Lard quiet at $12½. Whisky dull at 30½. The sale to-day showed prices unchanged, lots were mostly withdrawn.

New York, May 18.—Stocks [illegible]. Chicago & Rock Island 67; Cumberland Coal Co. 17; Illinois Central 57; Illinois Central bonds 84½; New York Central 77¾; Michigan Southern 10; Reading 46¾; Virginia Sixes 95½; Missouri Sixes 84¼; Galena & Chicago 64; Erie 7¾; Cleveland & Toledo 22¾; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 79; Panama Railroad 11[illegible].

Philadelphia, May 18.—The [illegible] in Breadstuffs for the past few days has abated, and prices are rather weak, sales 7,000 bbls flour at $8 for superfine, $8 12½@8 75 for extra, $8 50@8 75 for extra family including some of the lower or low grade at [illegible], some stamp sold at $8 37½ [illegible]. Rye flour [illegible] unchanged. The demand for wheat has fallen off, sales 7,000 bu red, at [illegible], some inferior at $1 [illegible] and 1,500 bu white at $2@2 10. Rye declined to [illegible] sales 2,000 bu Pennsylvania at $1 [illegible]. Corn drooping, buyers to-day refuse to pay 96c. Oats dull and 3,000 bu Pennsylvania sold at 58@[illegible], 5,000 [illegible] Delaware at 55c. [illegible] sales of Rio coffee at 11@11½ and 1,800 bags St. Domingo at 10½. 1,200 [illegible] Cuba sugar sold at 5½@6½ on time. Whisky is scarce and in demand at 32c for Ohio.

GIBSON HOUSE,
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut street near Fifth.
CINCINNATI OHIO.

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the [illegible] poison of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of the organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the Chill. But in this effort it fails. Then the Fever follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great emunctory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of Fever and Ague. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.

We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote,

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflicting disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "Ague Cure" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habituated to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "Ague Cure" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
Price One Dollar per Bottle.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.

For Costiveness;
For the Cure of Dyspepsia;
For Jaundice;
For the Cure of Indigestion;
For Headache;
For the Cure of Dysentery;
For a Foul Stomach;
For the Cure of Erysipelas;
For the Piles;
For the Cure of Scrofula;
For all Scrofulous Complaints;
For the Cure of Rheumatism;
For Diseases of the Skin;
For the Cure of Liver Complaint;
For Dropsy;
For the Cure of Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum;
For Worms;
For the Cure of Gout;
For a Dinner Pill;
For the Cure of Neuralgia;
For Purifying the Blood.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per Box; Five Boxes for $1.00.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The Agents below named furnish gratis our American Almanac in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand Ayer's, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

All our Remedies are for sale by

Roberts & Samuel, [illegible] and by all druggists, and dealers [illegible].

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1859.

Pride of Heart.

BY A. [illegible]

Ye lordly knights and gentlemen of wealth,
Ye queenly dames and jewelled ladies fair,
Ye poor in soul, though proud in worldly pelf,
Have ye no tribute high with God to share?

Ye [illegible] heroes of the battle-field,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

Ye sons learned of mental lore [illegible],
Oh, quick, discard—discard your pride of heart;
For much is life where [illegible],
And to [illegible] tongue.

Say, are your souls so darkened by the flesh,
So base, that no exalted heavenly thought
Can lift your carnal minds beyond the world,
Where all with toil, and dross, and [illegible]?

Oh! what will it avail ye, when the hour
Of dissolution draws ye [illegible], nigh
Your Maker's [illegible]
Give up—give up your pride of heart—or die!

A ROMANTIC STORY. IN TWO CHAPTERS.

When it was announced that Hon. Edward Everett had been engaged for a year to write for Bonner's Ledger, a number of bagatelles appeared, in various quarters, anticipatory of the manner in which he would perform the task he had undertaken. Some were serious, while others abounded in humor and partook largely of the grotesque. Of the latter, we do not remember to have seen a happier effort than the following from the facile pen of "O. L. C." which first appeared in the Marietta Republican. It is a capital burlesque on sensation stories which the morbid appetite of Bonner's half million of readers so hungrily craves, and are turned off each week with the precision and seeming facility of machine work.

It will be necessary to say that our friend "O. L. C." did not exactly anticipate the distinctive style and tone of the "Mount Vernon Papers," or that he imagined he was doing so, when he sketched the bold out-line of "the Bloody Moon;" but he affords an example worthy to be imitated by Romancers, in cutting his story short, without the too-frequent mysteries that furnish material for protracted detail.

(Supposed to be Everett's First Story for the Ledger.)

THE BLOODY MOON.

BY O. L. C.

It was night.—The moon arose in blood. Dark clouds spread themselves over the face of creation like a mammoth bed-quilt, as if to shut out from Heaven the fearful scenes of earth. Thunder muttered like mad in the distance, and the angry lightning felt its way through the awful darkness as well as it conveniently could under the circumstances. The bears had taken to their respective trees—the wolves to their dens—bats, blinded by the lurid glare closed their eyes in despondency, even the owl gave it up, and followed suite with his eyes upon the horror of the scene, while the American Eagle, that glorious bird of the Constitution, and the stardangled spanner, perched upon the summit of the Washington monument, (now 25 feet high) trembled at the danger of the republic and shrieked defiance to the British lion, the bloody moon, and the other animals. The rattlesnakes of South America were in their holes that night. The Bengal tiger, the Hyena, and the zoological tribes of that character in general, considered it imprudent to venture out. The sea serpent and the Atlantic cable slept at the bottom of the sea—and so did the mermaids. The weather was too inclement for ghosts and gnomons to leave home in fashionable wardrobe, without umbrellas and over shoes; and the establishment of old Muttonhead, dealer in Bowie-knives, revolvers, infernal machines, bludgeons, and other fire arms, was closed—and consequently none could be had there that night. It was an awful night—the bloody moon did not look a bit like a green cheese, but like red armed war or death on a pale horse, ready to strike down all this sinful creation, including the aforesaid bears, wolves, bats, the 4th of July and the star spangled bird of our country.

And where was Augustus Fitz deBoefhead all this time? Was he afraid of the wolves, bears, tigers, bats, the British lion, owls, or the inclemencies of the weather? Did he hesitate? He had promised to call and see his betrothed, Minnie Amanda Muttonhead, daughter of old Muttonhead, that very night. Did he go? Yes, he went in spite of every thing and the animals.

Our hero was born of poor but respectable parents, and had not neglected storing his mind with a taste for the fine arts—consequently, he called at the barber shop, had his hair greased, put on, his fine shirt and tight boots. Thus elegantly attired he strode forth and sought her father's mansion.

CHAPTER II.

Change we now, fair reader, the scene. Picture we can the rush of waters over Niagara, or a ray of love-light from the eyes we most love. Define we can exactly, the extatic bliss of a kiss, or the joy of the saved in Heaven; measure we can immensity, the distance to the end of eternity—the extent of our own vanity, or the circulation of the Ledger—the present height of the monument, and all that, but to picture the splendor of the parlors of old Muttonhead, and the beauties of his daughter, our heroine, is absolutely out of the question. Our pen stands appalled before it and refuses to be comforted.—Ten thousand chandeliers dangled from the ceiling, all lighted with the purest oil or burning fluid, we don't know which.—The walls were all mirrors, and so was the floor; Gods, Goddesses and Godivas, the choicest work of the stone cutter were gorgeously scattered around the room in elegant DISHABILLE. The chairs were all gold, so was the stove, and in fact everything in the room except Minnie—and she was an angel.

There she sat in beautiful ABANDON, by the fire, pretending to read the Ledger, which she held in her diamond hand, but she could not read even Cobb's brilliant story. ('The Haunted Meal-bag') which lay before her. Her thoughts were of Augustus. But little thought she of the bloody moon, or the bears, bats and owls that made night hideous without. Little thought she of the daggers, revolvers and bludgeons in her father's store. Little thought she of the rattle-heads and copper snakes, Bengal tigers and ghosts aforesaid. Little knew she of the danger her lover would have to encounter to see her that night. What if she had known it and fainted away in that golden chair! But she did not, and we are obliged to the gods and goddesses for not telling her. Augustus lived nearly two squares off, and what if the British lion or the bats were to get after him! But, did he fear them? No! He was fearless, and braved them all.

'Dear Augustus,' exclaimed she with her vocal organs, 'dear Augustus, why don't you come!' He did not answer.—Oh! could you but know the anguish'—Here the door bell rang and in a moment Augustus rushed in and embraced one of the godivas, which he at first mistook for Minnie—but explanations were made, and he threw his arms——

At this interesting juncture of affairs the doors were thrown open, and in rushed old Muttonhead with a Justice of the Peace, and after blessing the happy couple, he told the Justice to marry them as quick as he conveniently could. They were married in spite of the Bloody Moon, the Bengal tiger, and the extraordinary inclemencies of the weather—and the next day they moved to apartments still more gorgeous, farther up the avenue, where they still live in full possession of their reasoning faculties, and in their pristine beauty, surrounded by a very interesting family of children, and grand children—all Boefheads—all of whom read the Ledger—bless the Bloody Moon—venerate the American eagle, and bid defiance to the British lion and all the other animals, that once attempted to intimidate their illustrious progenitor—Augustus Fitz de-Boefhead—and prevent him from going to see their grandmother. FINIS.

Dec. 17th 1858.

A Touching Incident.

The following extract, taken from an account written by the Rev. James Miller, and quoted by the author of "Old Redstone," will give the reader some idea of the pecuniary embarrassments of early ministers, and of the general state of the Western country, and also of the remarkable interposition of Divine Providence for the relief of those ministers.

"Our story," says Mr. Miller, "will carry the reader back to the period when all north of the Ohio river was an unbroken wilderness—the mysterious red man's home. On the other side, a bold, hardy band from beyond the mountains had built their log cabins, and were trying to subdue the wilderness. To them every hour was full of peril. The Indians would often cross the river, steal their children and horses, kill and scalp any victim that came in their way. They worked in the fields with weapons by their side, and on Sabbath met in the grove or a rude log church to hear the word of God, with their rifles in their hands.

"To preach to these settlers, Mr. Joseph Smith, a Presbyterian minister, had left his parental home east of the mountains. He, it is said, was the second minister who crossed the Monongahela. He settled in Washington county, Pennsylvania, and became the pastor of Cross Creek and Upper Buffalo congregations, dividing his time between them. He found them a willing and united people, but still unable to pay him a salary which would support his family. He, in common with all early ministers, must cultivate a farm. He purchased one on credit, promising to pay for it with the salary pledged to him by his people. Years passed away. The pastor was unpaid. Little or no money was in circulation. Wheat was abundant, but there was no market. It could not be sold for more than twelve and a half cents per bushel in cash.—Even their salt, which had to be brought across the mountains on pack horses, was worth eight dollars per bushel; and twenty-eight bushels of wheat had often to be given for one bushel of salt. The time came when the payment must be made, and Mr. Smith was told he must pay or leave his farm.

Three years' salary was now due from his people. For the want of this, his land, his improvements upon it, and his hopes of remaining among a beloved people, must be abandoned. The people were called together, and the case laid before them, and they were greatly moved; plan after plan was proposed and abandoned; the congregation was unable to pay a tithe of their debts, and no money could be borrowed. In despair, they adjourned to meet again the following week. In the meantime, it was ascertained that a Mr. Moore, who owned the only mill in the county, would grind for them on reasonable terms. At the next meeting it was resolved to carry their wheat to Mr. Moore's mill; some gave fifty bushels, some more. This was carried from fifteen to twenty miles on horses to the mill. In a month word came that the flour was ready to go to market. Again the people were called together. After an earnest prayer, the question was asked, "who will run it to New Orleans?" This was a startling question. This work was perilous in the extreme; months must pass before the adventurer could hope to return, even though his journey should be fortunate; nearly all the way was a wilderness, and gloomy tales were told of the Indians.

"More than one boat's crew had gone on that journey, and had come back no more. Who, then, could endure the toil and brave the danger?" None volunteered, the young shrank back, and the middle-aged had their excuse. At length, a hoary-headed man, an elder in the church, sixty-four years of age rose, and, to the astonishment of the assembly, said: 'Here I am; send me.' The deepest feeling at once pervaded the whole assembly. To see their venerated old elder thus devote himself for their good, melted them all to tears. They gathered around Father Smiley to learn that his resolution was indeed taken; that, rather than lose their pastor, he would brave the danger, toil, and even death. After some delay and trouble, two young men were induced, by hope of a large reward, to go as his assistants. A day was appointed for starting. The young and old, from far and near, from love to Father Smiley, and deep in the object of his mission, gathered together, and, with their pastor at their head, came down from the church, fifteen miles away, to the bank of the river to bid the old man farewell.—Then a prayer was offered up by their pastor, and a parting hymn was sung. Then said the old Scotchman, 'untie the cable, and let us see what the Lord will do for us.' This was done, and the boat floated slowly away.

"More than nine months passed, and no word came back from Father Smiley. Many prayers had been breathed for him, but his fate was unknown. Another Sabbath came; they came together for worship, and there, on his rude bench, before the preacher, composed and devout, sat Father Smiley. After service, the people were requested to meet early in the week, to hear the report. All came again. After thanks had been returned to God for his safe return, Father Smiley rose and told his story: 'That the Lord had prospered his mission, that he had sold his flour for twenty-seven dollars a barrel, and then got safely back.' He then drew out a purse, and poured upon the table a larger pile of gold than most of the spectators had ever seen before. The young men were paid each one hundred dollars.—Father Smiley was asked his charge. He meekly replied, that he thought to have the same as one of the young men, though he had not done quite as much work. It was immediately proposed to pay him three hundred dollars. This he refused until the pastor was paid. Upon counting the money, it was found there was enough to pay what was due to Mr. Smith, to advance his salary for the year to come, to reward Father Smiley with three hundred dollars, and have a large dividend for each contributor. Thus their debts were paid, their pastor relieved, and while life lasted he broke for them the bread of life. The bones of both pastor and elder repose in the same churchyard, but grateful posterity still tell this pleasing story of the past."

☞ The Hon. NATHAN DAYTON, formerly Judge of the Eighth Judicial District, New York, died suddenly of apoplexy at his residence, in Lockport, N. Y., on Tuesday morning while in the act of dressing. His age was sixty-four years. Judge Dayton has been widely known in Western New York as a jurist.

The Italian States.

The germ of the present European broil, which threatens to result in a general and bloody war, is to be found in the discontent of the people of the Italian States, superinduced by the continued efforts of Austria to strengthen her hold upon them, and the counteracting influences exerted by the French Government. A glance at Italy as she is at present constituted may be interesting and may also serve to make lucid references which may hereafter be made in tracing the progress of the revolution, should it proceed.

Italy comprises the kingdom of the two Sicilies, the kingdom of Sardinia, the Papal dominions, the Austrian viceroyalty of Lombardy and the Venetian States, the duchies of Tuscany, Parma, Piacenza and Modena, and the small republic of San Marino.

In the year 1530 the duchy of Tuscany was founded. The Medici family, illustrious in its time for power and influence, but not for its virtues, had been expelled. One of its members, Girdio de Medici, who had been elected Pope, under the title of Clement VII., had long striven to secure the reascension of his family to power in Florence. He solicited and received the aid of the Emperor of Germany, Charles V., in accomplishing his ends. An army of 40,000 men was sent against Florence, which fell after siege of twelve months, during which time its inhabitants, under the leadership of Michael Angelo, fought desperately, disputing every inch of ground. Their surrender was made only upon the most honorable terms, which, however, were wholly disregarded by the conquerors. The republican leaders were either executed or banished; the people were thoroughly subdued; and upon the ruins of the Florentin republic, the duchy of Tuscany rose, with Alessandro de Medici at its head. After a short reign, he was assassinated, in the year 1537, and Cosmo I., member of a branch of the Medici family, was installed successor. He afterwards, in 1569, received the title of Grand Duke of Tuscany, from Pope Pious V., which has descended to his successors down to the present time.—Cosmo's career was one of profligacy; and his reign one of terror to his subjects.—He was succeeded by his son Francesco, who even excelled him in cruelty and wickedness. He was finally poisoned by his brother, Cardinal Ferdinando de Medici, who assumed the ducal authority.—Then succeeded a line of wicked and imbecile princes, who reduced Tuscany to the lowest degree of insignificance in the scale of nations, and run out the once powerful Medici family. By stipulations in the treaty of peace at Vienna, in 1735, it had been provided that upon the extinction of the Medici family, Francis, Duke of Lorraine, who had previously married Maria Theresa, Arch Duchess of Austria, should succeed to the ducal throne of Tuscany, which he did in 1737. Thus that duchy became linked to the house of Hapsburg, from which it has not since been detached. Francis proved a beneficent ruler, and Tuscany prospered under his reign. When Maria Theresa became Empress, he shared her throne, surrendering his place as Grand Duke of Tuscany to his second son Leopold, who likewise proved a wise and just ruler.—When the latter became Emperor of Germany, in 1790, his second son Francis Joseph succeeded to the ducal throne, which he held until 1801, when he was persuaded by Napoleon I. to resign. He was afterwards reinstated and reigned till his death in 1824, when he was succeeded by his son Leopold II., the present Duke.

Parma was originally in the possession of the German Empire, and was made over to Pope Julius II. In 1545 it was confirmed to this family by Phillip II., of Spain, in consideration of certain military services performed by Alessandro Farnese, Prince of Parma, an eminent military chieftain. His successors were weak rulers, and the duchy sank into insignificance. In the quadruple alliance, in 1718, it was provided that upon the extinction of the Farnese family, the duchy of Parma was to revert to the empire, and that Don Carlos, son of the King of Spain, by a female member of the Farnese family should succeed as Duke—which he did in 1731. A revolution in 1735 transferred the duchy to Charles VI., Emperor of Germany, in exchange for Naples and Sicily. In 1748 Parma and Placenza were united into one duchy and given to Phillip of Spain. In 1805 it was absorbed by the French under Napoleon I., who, in 1814 bequeathed it to his wife, Maria Louisa. At her death in 1847, Charles II., Duke of Lucca, became Duke of Parma and Piacenza, surrendering Lucca to Tuscany;—and the duchy at present is ruled by a succession from Maria Louisa, the right of reversion being held by Austria.

Modena was an ancient possession of the German Empire; but by the finesse of procuring the necessary matrimonial alliances and treaty stipulations, the house of the Hapsburg secured it as a fief. In 1805, Napoleon I. forced Ferdinand, the Grand Duke of Austria, the son of Maria Theresa, to cede Modena to France. At the general settling up time in 1814, it was restored to Ferdinand's son, Francis IV. His son, Francis V., Archduke of Austria, &c., succeeded to him in 1846, and now reigns. The right of reversion in Modena also belongs to Austria.

Tuscany embraces an area of 6,784 square miles, and contains about 1,800,000 inhabitants. Its chief productions are corn, wine, fruits, &c. Modena has an area of 1,629 square miles, and a population of 600,000. The duchy of Parma comprises an area of 1,712 square miles, and has a population of more than half a million. Austria thus has control of about 10,000 square miles and 3,000,000 of people in Italy, exclusive of her own provinces.

The above brief and necessarily imperfect sketch will show the continuous efforts Austria has put forth to possess herself of the control of the Italian States. The rulers in Italy are all somehow or other connected with the house of Hapsburg, from which they derive all the influence and power they possess. But the people of Italy detest the despotism imposed by Austria, and long to become independent. France wishes the power of her old rival curtailed, and fans the flame of discontent among the Italians; hence, the threatened revolt.

☞ "I am sorry," said a learned Judge to a young female, who hesitated much in giving some very unpleasant evidence, "I am very sorry to have to enforce such an examination as this; it must, of course, be painful to any decent person, but the ends of justice require it; and not only so, but all the well dressed females you see on either side of me, have come a long way to hear that which pains you so much to utter."

ONLY ONE YEAR.—The shad lives but a single year. It is hatched in the early summer—descends the streams as soon as large enough—feeds and fattens in the winter at the mouth of the stream—ascends in the spring to deposit its spawn—descends to die at the bottom of the ocean.

☞ An editor at the South says we have had a great many trials of reapers and mowers, but we never before heard of anything like the trial of Sickles.

A Pioneer Gone.—Death of Griffith Foos.

Mr. Griffith Foos, one of the earliest settlers of Clark county, died on Thursday, May 5th, at Cincinnati. He was in his 88th year, as claimed by him previous to his death, but it is thought by those to whom he had given his age some twenty or thirty years ago, and who had kept an account of it since, that he was full 91.—His family came from Tennessee, where he was born, to Franklinton Ohio, (near Columbus,) sometime previous to 1800, and in that year, he came to Springfield, driving the first wagon that ever came from the Scioto river to Mad river. Mr. Foos is reported to have assisted in laying out our city, and in 1801 he built and opened the first hotel of Clark county, which was known as Foos's tavern, and was located opposite the old Werden building, and performed the duties of landlord for seven or eight years. Mr. Foos saw the first school established in Springfield, in 1806, and the first church, (of the Methodist Episcopal denomination,) established in the same year. In 1807, he saw the first flouring mill erected. In the summer of this year he participated in the trials incident to frequent alarms from Indians, led by the famous Tecumseh, whose birthplace is located only five miles west of our city. In 1811 the Christian denomination having established a church and erected an edifice, Mr. Foos became an early member. In 1818, he saw a cotton factory erected, in 1817 a Presbyterian church formed, and in 1818 he participated in the general rejoicing at the making of Springfield the county seat of Clark county, which was then formed from portions of Green, Madison and Champaign counties. In 1820 he saw the first printing press established. In 1822 he saw the town incorporated, with a population of 600 or 700. And all along, from that time to 1844, when the water power of the Messrs. Barnett gave to the town a new impetus, and to the building of our local railroads, which gave the town an additional impetus, he has been a daily witness of its commercial, social, literary, educational and general progress. He saw the Springfield in 1800, a wild wilderness, dotted with a few log huts, and he lived to see the Springfield of 1850, with her 9,000 inhabitants, her palatial residences, her long and busy streets, her numerous factories whirring with activity, her gas-lights, her daily and weekly newspapers, her dozen churches, her seminaries and colleges, and the crowning of her glory, her public schools!

In politics Mr. Foos was a Whig—an old Whig, in the strictest sense of the term—and although he was not a noisy politician, he had firmness of purpose and dignity of character, and not unfrequently presided over the political conventions of the county.

Mr. Foos's private character was unexceptionable. During his long life in Springfield no one could utter about him a word of reproach. As a church-member, he was without guile, and for more than a half century, he has been looked up to as a good citizen and a sincere christian.

For a quarter of a century he has been an oracle concerning all that related to the olden time. He has sat in stores and offices and reeled off romantic tales of his pioneer experience which rivaled the tales of the Arabian Nights, and differed from them only in being true.

The last time we saw Mr. Foos was during the celebrated Elopement trial, a year or two since. We were reporting the decision of Judge Torbert, when we looked up and saw the venerable man standing in the presence of a number of persons, of not a quarter of his years, who were occupying seats. We had the satisfaction of seating the old gentleman, and his grateful smile for the small and cheap courtesy will always be a pleasant remembrance to us.

Mr. Foos lost his second wife not long ago and since that event he has been living with remaining friends. As we have already stated, he died in Cincinnati, and he has been brought to Springfield for burial.

It is felt that the most honored relic of the early days of Springfield is now taken away. Thus, one by one, those who aided in founding and rearing the social, religious, literary and commercial privileges which we enjoy—to whom we are indebted for a thousand and one blessings of which we avail ourselves with but little reflection concerning their source—are passing away to peaceful graves and a glorious recompense in the better world. Let us so live and act, for the good of our fellows, and of those who follow us, that we shall be worthy of a like reward, and leave behind us like them, a whole community as mourners.—[Springfield, Ohio, News.

First and Third Mate.

There is a good story told of an Irishman in Liverpool, who had a son desirous of trying his fortune at sea. The old man sent him to school to learn navigation, and afterwards bought him a third mate's berth on board the Hon. East India Co.'s ship Windsor Castle. The ship sailed on her voyage to Madras and Calcutta. One day, to the east of the Cape, the second officer (in nautical parlance) slipped his wind, and the third mate was promoted to his vacant berth. He proved himself to be a smart, active officer, and gained the good will of his Captain and brother officers. In Calcutta the mate was attacked by the Jungle fever, caught by imprudently camping out one night while on a hunt, and he, too, started on his last voyage.—Our Irish friend was thus promoted to his vacant berth, and thus at the end of a few months found himself first officer of a fine Indiaman.

At last the ship arrived home, and a gentleman hearing that he had come home First Mate, meeting his father on his way down to the ship, told him that his son was one mate now. The old man looked at him for a moment, then started off at a quick pace for the ship, without speaking a word. Going on board the ship, his son came forward to greet his father, upon which the old fellow, drawing himself up, and shaking his fist at him, thus addressed him:

"You dirty blaggard—forty pounds I paid for your edification and navigation, and sent you out third mate of a ship, and now you come home one mate.—You dirty Spalpeen, don't you come near the house!" and the indignant old man having delivered himself of this speech, turned and left the ship amid roars of laughter from the Captain and some gentlemen that had come on board during the delivery.

"ALESSANDRIA."—This place, the rendezvous of the Sardinian Army, whither the King has gone to take command, is probably destined to play an important part in the coming war. It is a fortified city near the eastern frontier of Piedmont, whose guns bristle towards the Austrian territory. It stands in the midst of a sterile plain. It is the great stronghold of Piedmont, and is to the Sardinians what Gibraltar is to the English, or Sebastopol was to the Russians. During the reign of the French in Italy, its formidable fortifications made it one of the strongest places in Europe, but these were subsequently demolished, leaving only the citadel. Within the past few years workmen have been busy in reconstructing them, in anticipation of the events now at hand. In the surrounding plain, two miles distant, is Napoleon's celebrated battle-field of Marengo. Alessandria is garrisoned with several thousand troops, and being connected with Turin and Genoa by railway, any number can be readily concentrated there.—To capture it would be a crowning glory to the Austrian Generals, and to lose it, a deep humiliation to Sardinia.

Love Thoughts.

The little gal who I do lov
Has 2 grate big eyes;
Her hair which is so angelick,
Was smuggled from the skies—
Her mouth is like a double peach;
Her feet is like a squawsh;
And when I set beside her a little while,
She says, "Now don't, oh gosh!"

Her fut is nuther large nor small,
But just the perfick size;
Her nose is about 2 inches long,
Her fingers most likewise.
Some day I'm gwine 2 marry her;
We'll stand up nigh the altar—
I'll say, "I'll take her for my wife,"
She'll say, "Oh, golly, Walter!"

And then how 'appy we will be—
We'll allers be 2gether;
One umberreller we will use
In thunder, stormy weather,
And then we'll have a —— oh, dear me,
I'm fraid to tell you wat—
We'll put it in a cradle for
To keep its "tallies" hot.

Vital Statistics in the United States.

It appears that the increase of population is inversely as the density of the States. This is especially true of the agricultural States. In the manufacturing States, and particularly in the manufacturing counties of the manufacturing States, the rule is changed. Thus, Massachusetts, with a population to the square mile of 94.58, increased from 1840 to 1850 34.81 per cent., while North Carolina, with a population to the square mile of 15.35, increased during the same period only 15.35 per cent.

The population of the United States is younger than in England and in Middle and Northern Europe. "A new people, or one that is growing, by immigration or natural increase," has a larger population of the young and fewer of the aged than one that is old or stationary. The average of the population in England in 1841 was 25.41 years, in Prussia in 1837 the average was 27.25, while in the United States in 1840 it was only 22.71. In 1850 it had risen a little—22.80 years. The people are younger in the new States: in New Hampshire 32 per cent. of all the people are over 60 years of age, while in Iowa only 20 per cent. are over 60 years of age.

The proportion between the productive and unproductive population, of those able to work and those not able, varies very materially in the different States. In Arkansas, Illinois, Michigan and Missouri, which in ten years, from 1841 to 1851, had gained 494, the dependent were to the sustaining class as 945 to 1,900. But in Connecticut, New Hampshire, North Carolina and Vermont, which had gained only 18 per cent., these proportions were 816 to 1,000.

The ratio of birth to the average annual population, has not been ascertained with certainty in any State except Massachusetts. The ratio there from 1849 to 1856 was one birth to 51.5 of the total native population, and one 17.7 of the total foreign population. The disproportionate excess of births among the foreigners in Massachusetts, is accounted for by the fact that they seem more disposed to marry than the natives, and is counterbalanced by an inordinate mortality among their infants, the excess being 22 per cent greater among the strangers.

"There seems to be a universal law that more males than females are born. This is sustained by the records of every nation where records have been kept. The excess of males varies with different people, but, so far as known, the excess is greatest in the United States. It varies widely among the different States, the excess in South Carolina and Kentucky being more than three times as great as Massachusetts. The effect of climate and other appreciable causes in producing this disproportion in the sexes is more settled. The excess is greatest in the extreme climates—Russia and South Carolina.

The proportion of births to marriages, as ascertained only in Massachusetts, is 2.75 to a marriage, while in England and Wales, it is 4.015; but these are not to be taken as the exact proportion of fecundity in the two countries.

It seems that marriages take place earlier at the South than at the North. In South Carolina, 48.24 per cent., in Kentucky, 44.7 per cent. of the females when married were under 20 years of age, while in Massachusetts, only 23.60 per cent. were under that age. Again, we find in South Carolina, 88.3 per cent., Kentucky, 87.4, and in Massachusetts, 46.98 per cent. of the females were married between 20 and 25 years of age.

The rate of mortality for the United States, has not been definitely determined, but the relative proportion of early mortality in the two sexes, is thus stated for the year 1849–50. Under one year, males 17.1, females 16.4 per cent. of all. Over 1 year and under 5, males 21.0, females 21.5. The ratio of living was: under one year, males 2.68, females 2.91 per cent. of all; over one year, and under five, males 12.2, females 12.4. This shows, in the first period, a considerable difference in favor of the females. Although more males are born than females, it is asserted that females enjoy a greater length of life, and perhaps a greater degree of health than males.

In regard to the diseases of which American people die, it is said that consumption destroys one-fifth of all who die in the Northern, and one-twelfth of all who die in the Southern States. Apart from consumption, other respiratory diseases occasion a large proportion of mortality in the warmer sections. Pneumonia, croup and whooping cough show a large excess of mortality at the South, and the various fevers, intermittent, remittent and continued, are 1,080 per cent. in excess there. Scarlet fever showed 49 per cent. more at the North, and deaths from jaundice and diseases of the liver are more frequent there.

The average longevity of persons in various employments in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New York is stated in the following order: Farmers, ship carpenters, coopers, carpenters, clergymen, lawyers, physicians, blacksmiths, tanners, masons, seamen, merchants, bakers, laborers, butchers, shoemakers, tailors, painters, machinists, printers, and lastly jewelers. Farmers live 22 per cent. longer than active mechanics working out doors, 80 per cent. longer than active mechanics in shops, and 48 per cent. longer than inactive mechanics working under cover.—The longevity in most occupations is greater, and in some much greater in England than in America.—Baltimore American.

THE TICINO.—Frequent references are made in our foreign dispatches to the Ticino—a small stream which marks the boundary line between Sardinia and the Lombardo-Venetian Provinces, occupied by Austria. This small stream or river promises to become as famous in history as "the Rubicon," which Cæsar crossed, when, returning from his conquests in Gaul, he decided upon marching with his army to Rome, in defiance of the orders of the Roman Senate.

The Ticino, or Tessin, rises in Switzerland on the Southern declivity of Mount St. Gothard, and flows south-easterly through the Lake Maggiore. Thence it runs a southerly direction, forming the boundary between Lombardy and Sardinia until it joins the river Po, near Pavia. Its whole course is about 125 miles, and it is navigable from Maggiore to the Po, which flows into the Gulf of Venice.

☞ The New Orleans Bulletin brags of being feasted already on green corn, full grown, and remarkably delicious.

SIR EDWARD BULWER LYTTON.—The London correspondent of the Charleston Mercury, in his leter of April 15, mentions a report that Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton is afflicted with insanity. He writes:

Since the close of the great reform debate, painful rumors have been in circulation relative to the Colonial Secretary, Sir Edward B. Lytton. He made an excellent speech during that debate, and it may have been his last, for it is said the brain that produced so much and such varied literary matter has given way, overtasked, and that Sir Edward is afflicted with insanity. Such is the rumor, though an address has been issued, in his name, to the electors of Hertfordshire. It is very badly written, and bears no traces of the practical pen that gave us Night and Morning. This seems to confirm the report; though the press generally abstains from alluding to the subject in any terms more precise than "indisposition." Bulwer has always been a hard worker; the mere bulk of his writings attests the fact; and his romances, though the best known of his works, were not his only achievements. Everything he did was the result of careful labor; even his speeches were never spontaneous; his deafness unfitted him for a prompt debater, he could never reply, in which Disraeli is most powerful. In his office, too, he worked hard. Novelist, dramatist, philosopher, poet, translator, statesman, minister, and a desperate smoker, to boot. Few men could have done so much, and stood it so long.

PAT AND THE HAMS.—There are many ways laid down for the preservation of bacon, and among others to place in bags, and put them in a barrel, covering them with wood ashes to protect them from the air. A gentleman not long ago had two very fine hams, which he treated in this manner, calculating to keep them until Summer. One day last week he employed an Irishman to remove the ashes from his cellar, and among the rest was a barrel of wood ashes, which was carted off. On emptying the barrel out rolled the two bags. Now the Irishman was aware that the gentleman was connected with a bank, and possibly the bags might contain his treasure, and so carefully concealing the packages he carried them home and unwrapped them, when to his astonishment, instead of two bags of sovereigns, he had in their stead two most excellent hams, which an epicure might envy. Pat and his family did ample justice to the hams, and came to the conclusion that the gentleman might have been a Mohammedan and had eschewed pork. A few days elapsed after this event, when it occurred to the gentleman that his hams might have been taken off with his ashes, and on going into the cellar his suspicions were confirmed, which drew a sigh from his epicurean stomach. Having hunted up the Irishman, he made inquiry of him if he had seen the hams when he emptied the ashes, and was told he had. "Be jabers," says Pat, "when you have any more to throw away as bad as them, I would like to haul them away for you."—Newburyport Herald.

GROVER & BAKER'S
CELEBRATED
FAMILY SEWING MACHINES.

NEW STYLES—PRICES FROM $50 TO $125.
EXTRA CHARGE OF $5 FOR HEMMERS.

495 Broadway, - - - New York
77 Town Street, - - - Columbus
58 West Fourth Street, - - - Cincinnati

These Machines sew from two spools, as purchased from the store, requiring no re-winding of thread; they Hem, Fell, Gather, and Stitch in a superior style, finishing each seam by their own operation, without recourse to the hand-needle, as is required by other machines. They will do better and cheaper sewing than any seamstress can, even if she works for one cent an hour, and are, unquestionably, the best Machines in the market for family sewing, on account of their simplicity, durability, ease of management, and adaptation to all varieties of family sewing—executing either heavy or fine work with equal facility, and without special adjustment.

As evidence of the unquestioned superiority of their Machines, the GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE COMPANY beg leave to respectfully refer to the following

TESTIMONIALS.

[illegible testimonials]

CHOICE SEEDS.

APPLE PIE MELON.—Seeds of this delicious vegetable, per mail, 6 cents per package.
MAMMOTH PROLIFIC LIMA BEANS.—[illegible]
LARGE CHEESE SQUASH.—[illegible]
☞ The three packages for 25 cents, mailed.
Address, [illegible]
Care of editor "Horticultural Monthly," [illegible], New York.
N. B.—Editors of Country Newspapers inserting the above with this notice, twice, [illegible] will receive eight packages of each kind of the seeds.
April 28, '59—4w.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL.

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption,

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhœa proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.
DR. ROBACK'S
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. [illegible]

Original Letters,
[illegible]

Eye Witnesses.
[illegible]

Facts;
That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;
That they cure the almost universal complaints,

Dyspepsia,
[illegible]

Liver Complaint,
and restore the health and strength of the sufferer.

Sick Females,
[illegible]

Shattered Constitutions,
[illegible]

Lengthen Life,
[illegible]

Cause soon to Heal,
[illegible]

Recruit the Debilitated,
[illegible]

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, BY
[illegible list of agents]
And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, [illegible] directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, [illegible] and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. [illegible]

Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

Consumptives do not Despair

CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED.

AN OLD INDIAN DOCTOR, UNCAS BRANT, while a Missionary among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains, discovered a RARE PLANT, that proves to be a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Liver Complaint, Nervous Affections, Coughs, Colds, &c. Having now made his fortune and retired from business, he will send the prescription and directions for preparing the medicine FREE OF CHARGE to all who desire it, and will send to his agent, enclosing two stamps (6 cents), to pay the return letter, with a description of their symptoms. The Old Doctor has cured more than 3000 CASES OF CONSUMPTION alone, and hopes all afflicted people will avail themselves of this opportunity, as the Doctor wishes to do all the good he can before he dies. Address all letters to
DANIEL ADEE,
Box 3531 P. O. New York,
Who is his sole agent.

☞ 5000 Agents Wanted—
[illegible]

Cheap Dry Goods.
[illegible]
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS,
Embracing a Variety,
[illegible]
J. C. CRITTENDEN.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads.

To the South and West.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11, 1859, Four Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted,) from Columbus, [illegible]

FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—[illegible]

SECOND TRAIN.
NO. 1 EXPRESS—[illegible]

THIRD TRAIN.
NO. 2 EXPRESS—[illegible]

FOURTH TRAIN.
MAIL—[illegible]

RETURNING.
[illegible]

Columbus, April 11, 1859.

1859. 1859.
NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST.
Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line.

Two Trains Daily,
(Sundays excepted,)
Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 18th, Trains will leave Columbus as follows:
FIRST TRAIN
[illegible]
SECOND TRAIN
[illegible]
THE WAY FREIGHT
[illegible]
Columbus Ohio, April 18th, 1859.

Summer Arrangement.—Time Changed.
Great Northern & Eastern Route
Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati
RAILROAD,
Connecting at Crestline with the
Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad
For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Baltimore. Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.
Connecting at Cleveland with the
Lake Shore Railroad
For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) FROM COLUMBUS, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.
FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—[illegible]
SECOND TRAIN.
NEW YORK EXPRESS—[illegible]
THIRD TRAIN.
EXPRESS MAIL—[illegible]
☞ Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston, via of Albany, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.
RETURNING.
[illegible]
Fare as Low as by any other Route.
[illegible]

☞ 1000 Agents Wanted—
For particulars send stamp.
C. P. WHITTEN, Lowell, Mass.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,
TO BE PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT COLUMBUS, OHIO,
By J. Birney Marshall,
At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

[illegible prospectus text] ...will present the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as its first choice for the Presidency in 1860, [illegible]

Terms and Inducements:
Single copy per year $2 00
A discount of ten per cent on clubs of ten; 15 per cent on clubs of twenty; 20 per cent on clubs of thirty, and so per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards sent to a single address.
J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.
Columbus, March 28, 1859.
[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME 1. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1859. NUMBER 3.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

[illegible] freedom in matters of [illegible] regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, nor in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799; that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union —

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories, and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States, and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

THE NEXT PRESIDENT.—We see by our exchanges there is some speculation as to who will be the next Democratic candidate for President. Our first choice is Stephen A. Douglas. We believe him to be the most available man in the nation; he has been uniformly consistent on the question of slavery in the States and territories, and he has never in a single instance departed from the principles contained in the "Kansas Nebraska bill" on that subject. These principles were adopted and made part of the Cincinnati platform. Mr. Buchanan indorsed them in his letter of acceptance, and upon that issue was elected. Upon that doctrine the North and South can and will unite in the next Presidential contest. Illinois will stand firmly and triumphantly by S. Douglas has been its greatest champion and advocate; but while we are for him for the next Presidential candidate in preference to any other man, we will abide by the decision of the Democratic convention, to be held at Charleston, South Carolina, in 1860, and give its nominee our cordial and hearty support.—Montgomery County Herald.

THE CROP PROSPECTS.—The Toledo Times very graphically says:

"The teeming promise with which the whole face of nature abounds, in every section from which we have accounts, was never before so great as at the present time. From every town in this immediate vicinity, we learn that every foot of tillable land is being worked up and seeded for a coming crop. The crop of winter wheat is the most luxuriant ever before seen. It is now already knee high, and the early sown has already shot forth the heads which promise a golden harvest. Our farmers are in ecstacies with the prospect that await them. Fruit, throughout this entire region, is uncommonly promising. To every man who has not put every spot of ground under cultivation that is under his charge, we say, put in some kind of a crop. It is not too late yet. Two weeks yet will suffice for corn, potatoes, oats and barley."

If utility be one of the components of beauty, there is poetry in that as well as truth.

— The Cleveland Review of yesterday says: A few nights ago, two boys applied at the police station for lodging. Marshal Craw, being suspicious of their character, searched one of them, and found about $93 in bills and change on his person. The oldest boy stated that his father abused him, and he had taken this money from him, and with his brother, started for the West. This story having proved correct, after telegraphing to the New York Chief of Police, at his request Marshal Craw sent the boys back to their home.

Appendix to the Speech of Hon. S. A. Douglas,

In the Senate of the United States, February 23d, 1859, in reply to Hon. A. G. Brown, of Mississippi, in opposition to the passage of a Code of Laws by Congress to protect slavery in the territories, and in favor of banishing from the halls of Congress all questions touching domestic slavery in the territories, and remanding them to the people of the territories, to be disposed of as they may see proper, subject to an appeal to the judicial tribunals, to test the validity of the territorial enactments under the Constitution of the United States, together with an appendix, showing the position of distinguished public men on this question in the great contests of 1854 and 1856.

NOTE BY MR. DOUGLAS.

The debate was continued at considerable length by several Senators, some of whom emphatically repudiated the idea that it was the intention of the Kansas-Nebraska act to affirm the principle of NON-INTERVENTION BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN THE TERRITORIES, whereby all questions pertaining to African slavery, as well as all other matters of domestic concern, were banished from the halls of Congress and remanded to the people of the Territories respectively, to be disposed of as they should see proper, subject only to the constitution, with the right of appeal by any person feeling aggrieved by the territorial legislation, to the judicial tribunals to determine the validity of such enactments under the Constitution of the United States.

They went farther, and insisted that it is the duty of Congress to intervene and enact a code of laws to protect slavery in the Territories whenever the Territorial Legislature may fail or refuse to provide such legislation.

One Senator (Mr. GWIN) declared, that if he had understood the Kansas-Nebraska bill at the time of its passage as I now construe it, he never would have voted for it.

Inasmuch as I was deposed from the position of Chairman of the Committee on Territories, which I had held for eleven years in the Senate and two years in the House of Representatives, BECAUSE OF MY FIRM ADHERENCE TO THE PRINCIPLE OF NON-INTERVENTION AND POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY IN THE TERRITORIES, as defined in the Kansas-Nebraska act, [illegible] referred to the debates in 1854, when the [illegible] was passed, and in 1856 when Mr. Buchanan was elected President on the distinct issue of "NON-INTERVENTION AND POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY," to show, by extracts from speeches and the public records, what was the true construction of the Kansas-Nebraska act, had not the debate been sprung upon the Senate suddenly, without affording opportunity for an examination of the debates and public records. But an intelligent and esteemed friend has since made a thorough examination into the whole subject, and has submitted to me his report, which I believe to be fair and impartial, and which I annex to [illegible].

"The recent legislation of Congress, respecting domestic slavery, derived, as it has been, from the original and pure fountain of legitimate political power, the will of the majority, [illegible] a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."

APPENDIX.

Extract from a speech of the Hon. James L. Orr, of South Carolina, (now Speaker of the House) in the House of Representatives, December 11, 1856:

"Now, I desire the gentleman to understand that the Democratic party, North or South, do not attach the importance to this issue on squatter sovereignty which he seems to attach to it by the attempts he has made to magnify it as the chief feature of the Nebraska-Kansas bill. The great object sought to be accomplished in the introduction and passage of that bill was this: the continual agitation of the slavery question upon the floors of Congress had produced discord and dissention here; it had alienated the different parties of the Confederacy from each other, and was threatening the existence of the Government itself; and hence it was thought best by a majority of the members of Congress, in 1854, to transfer as far as possible, this agitation from the Halls of the Congress to the Territories themselves. Hence, the great and leading feature in that bill was to transfer the legislation and power of Congress on the slavery, and all other subjects, to the Territorial legislatures, and let the popular will there, shape and form the laws for their own government without restriction, save the proviso that such legislation should be consistent with the Constitution and general laws of the United States.

"This was the great idea in the legislation of 1854 and it has been endorsed in the late election by the people.

"Now, I admit that there is a difference of opinion amongst Democrats as to whether this feature of squatter sovereignty be in the bill or not. But the great point upon which the Democratic party at Cincinnati rested was, that the government of the Territories had been transferred from Congress, and [illegible] had been given to the people of the Territories. I am one of those who do not believe in the doctrine of squatter sovereignty. I do not believe that the Kansas-Nebraska bill establishes or recognizes squatter sovereignty within the limits of the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska; and the process of reasoning by which I reach that result is, that I see no authority in the Constitution of the United States which authorizes Congress to pass the Wilmot proviso or any anti-slavery restrictions in the Territories; and I do not apprehend how Congress not having the power itself can create an authority and invest a creature with greater power and authority than it possesses itself. I know there are other gentlemen belonging to the Democratic party who think that the Territorial Legislature are invested with authority to prohibit or introduce slavery within the Territories.

"But, the gentleman from Tennessee, (Mr. SMITH,) the other day struck the true point in this controversy and it takes all the wind out of the sails of my friend from Kentucky, and leaves him high and dry upon land; and I invite his attention to the statement and arguments in reference to it.

"I say, although I deny that squatter sovereignty exists in the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska by virtue of this bill, it is a matter practically of little consequence whether it does or not; and I think I shall be able to satisfy the gentleman of that.— The gentleman knows that in every slaveholding community of this Union we have local legislation and local police regulations appertaining to that institution without which the institution would not only be valueless but a curse to the community; [illegible] rights when invaded by others; and if you had no local legislation for the purpose of giving protection, the institution would be of no value. I can appeal to every gentleman upon this floor who represents a slaveholding constituency to attest the truth of what I have stated upon that point.

"Now, the legislative authority of a Territory is invested with a discretion to vote for or against laws. We think they ought to pass laws in every Territory, when the Territory is open to settlement and slaveholders go there, to protect slave property. But if they decline to pass such laws, what is the remedy? None, sir. If the majority of the people are opposed to the institution, and if they do not desire it engrafted upon their Territory, all they have to do is simply to decline to pass laws in the Territorial Legislature for its protection, and then it is as well excluded as if the power was invested in the Territorial Legislature to prohibit it. Now, I ask the gentleman what is the practical importance to result from the agitation and discussion of this question as to whether squatter sovereignty does or does not exist? Practically it is a matter of little matter."— (See Speech of Hon. JAS. L. ORR, of South Carolina, H. of Rep., Dec. 11, 1856, 3d Sess. 34th Congress; Cong. Globe, pages 103, 104.)

Extracts from a speech of Hon. A. H. Stephens, of Georgia, delivered in the House of Representatives, February 17, 1854:

"The whole question of slavery or no slavery was to be left to the people of the Territories, whether north or south of 36 deg. 30 min., or any other line. The question was to be taken out of Congress, where it had been improperly thrust from the beginning, and to be [illegible] to decide for themselves. This, I say, was the position originally held by the South when the Missouri restriction was at first proposed. The principle upon which that position rests, lies at the very foundation of all republican institutions: it is that the citizens of every district and separate community or State should have the right to govern themselves in their domestic matters as they please, and that they should be free from the intermeddling restrictions and arbitrary dictation on such matters from any other power or Government in which they have no voice. It was out of a violation of this very principle to a great extent that the war of the Revolution sprung. The South was always on the republican side of this question, while the North— no; or, at least, I will not say the entire North, for there have always been some of them with the South on this question; but I will say, while a majority of the North, under the Free-soil lead of that section, up to the settlement of the contest in 1850—were on the opposite side.

"The doctrine of the Restrictionists or Free-soilers, or those that hold that Congress ought to impose their arbitrary mandates upon the people of the Territories in this particular, whether the people be willing or unwilling, is the doctrine of Lord North and his adherents in the British Parliament, towards the colonies, during his administration.— He and they claimed the right to govern the territories in 'all cases whatsoever,' notwithstanding the want of representation on their part. The doctrine of the South upon this question has been, and is, the doctrine of the Whigs in 1775 and 1776. It involves the principle that the citizens of every community should have a voice in their government.— This was the doctrine of the people of Boston in 1775, when the response was made throughout the colonies—'The cause of Boston is the cause of us all.' And if there be any here now who call themselves Whigs, arrayed against this great principle of Republican Government, I will do towards them as Burke did in England. I will appeal from the new to the old Whigs. * * * * * *

"This, sir, is what is called the Compromise of 1850, so far as this territorial question is concerned. It was adopted after the policy of dividing territory between the two sections, North or South, was wholly abandoned, discarded, and spurned by the North.

It was based upon the truly republican and national policy of taking this disturbing element out of Congress, and leaving the whole question of slavery to the Territories to the people there to settle it for themselves. And it is in vindication of that new principle—then established for the first time in the history of our Government—in the year 1850, the middle of the nineteenth century, that we, the friends of the Nebraska bill, whether from the North or South, now call upon this House and the country, to carry out, in good faith, and give effect to the spirit and intent of those important measures of territorial legislation."—See Appendix Cong. Globe 1st Session 33d Congress, volume 29, page 195.)

Mr. STEPHENS again expressed his views on this subject, in the House of Representatives on the 17th of January, 1856, as follows:

"Now, sir, as I have stated, I voted for this bill, leaving the whole matter to the people to settle for themselves, subject to no restriction or limitation but the Constitution. With this distinct understanding of its import and meaning, and with a determination that the existence of this power being disputed and doubted, it would be better and much more consistent with our old time republican principles, to let the people settle it, than for Congress to do it. And although my own opinion is that the people, under the limitations of the Constitution, have not the rightful power to exclude slavery so long as they remain in a territorial condition, yet I am willing that they may determine it for themselves, and when they please. I shall never negative any law they may pass, if it is the result of a fair legislative expression of the popular will.— Never! I am willing that the Territorial Legislature may act upon the subject when and how they may think proper."—(See appendix to the Cong. Globe, 1st Session 34th Congress, vol. 33, page 93.)

Extract from the speech of the Hon. J. P. BENJAMIN, of Louisiana, delivered in the Senate, on the 25th of May, 1854:

"I find, then, that this bill, retracing the steps of Federal legislation so far as it interfered with this subject from the year 1820 to the present time, proposes to go back to the traditions of the fathers.— It proposes to put this Congress in the position occupied by every Congress up to the year 1820. It proposes to announce, as a principle to the people of the United States that the General Government is not to legislate at all upon this question of slavery. [illegible] to prohibit it; it is a forbidden subject. The flaming sword ought to guard all access to it. No impious foot ought to endeavor to tread within its sacred precincts. That is the principle which I find in this bill, and that is the principle which I wish to see established in the country; and when it shall have been established, it will be in vain for faction, either North or South, to endeavor to create any permanent excitement in the minds of the American people. The aliment is gone. You may light the flame, but the fuel will be wanting. It will die out of itself. And then, and then alone shall we be able to bear patiently with the taunts thrown out this day by the Senator from Ohio; then alone shall we be able to hear with composure his threat that his war-cry is formed against the South, from this time forward, and that all his energies will be devoted to repealing this bill, and overthrowing the principles upon which it is based.

"Let the American people understand this subject in its true bearing; let the North once be disabused of the false impression that the South desires any advantage over it, or any unequal share of the privileges of the Government; let our friends in the Northern States once be convinced that all we ask and desire is the simple privilege of being let alone; and can we ask less? Blest or cursed, as not please, with an institution which we find established among us when we were born, and which will probably exist when we descend to our graves, an institution which is so firmly knit among us that it cannot be torn out without tearing up the very heart-strings of society, is it wonderful, is it unreasonable, is it not most reasonable, that we should ask gentlemen from other sections of the Confederacy simply to let us alone? We ask of you the passage of no law; we ask of you the enactment of no statute, any further than to put us back just in that position occupied by our fathers when they acted upon the principle which we now invoke, of leaving each portion of the confederacy free to establish and maintain its own internal domestic institutions and promote its own happiness as it sees proper. Here is then a second great principle which I see in this bill; and for the establishment of which, I say, as other Senators have said upon this floor, I will sacrifice this amendment and a thousand others like it.

"But this is not all. The Senator from Georgia (Mr. Toombs) to-day spoke of a third principle, and he anticipated me in that respect. Here is the great fundamental principle of American liberty contained in the provisions of the bill. It is that principle which laid the foundation of American independence. It is that principle for the establishment of which we owe so many blessings to the memory of our revolutionary sires—or, sir, to our ante-revolutionary sires. They first planted on this continent the germ which has grown up into a lofty tree, that with its spreading branches overshadows and protects the nation. They first enunciated in the face of the civilized world, in the face of the then almost omnipotent English Parliament, the principle that man had a right to self-government. They first declared that it was against the inherent rights of mankind for a government to legislate for the local interests of a distant dependency. They declared—and it is upon that your Revolution is founded—that the people of the United States, although colonial dependencies of Great Britain, were entitled to representation in the British Parliament, or to be exonerated from the duties of British subjects. All that is asked now is the extension of this same principle to the Territories of the United States. Here, then, is another third great principle, this a great measure of conciliation between conflicting opinions in different parts of the confederacy, conflicting opinions which have found their enunciation upon this floor. The honorable Senator from Michigan, (Mr. CASS) in a speech replete with sound argument and true Republican principles, the force of which it would be difficult to answer, has advocated in this Senate the doctrine that there is an inherent right under the Constitution of the United States, in the people of the Territories to govern themselves. He denies the constitutional power of Congress to legislate for those Territories. The Senator from Indiana, (Mr. PETTIT) and the Senator from North Carolina, (Mr. BADGER) differ in opinion from him; but as the Senator from Georgia said this morning, both agree that it is unwise to exercise the power in contradiction to the will of the people, even if we admit its existence. We find, then, that this principle of the independence and self-government of the people in the distant Territories of the Confederacy, harmonizes all these conflicting opinions, and enables us to banish from the Halls of Congress another fertile source of discontent and excitement."—(See appendix Congressional Globe, 1st Session, 33d Congress, vol. 29, page 767.)

Extract from the speech of Hon. J. M. Mason, of Virginia, in the Senate of the United States, May 25, 1854:

"Then Mr. President, where do we stand? Here is a bill repealing and forever annulling a measure always odious to the South, and offensive to its honor, voluntarily brought forward from a quarter where the majority resides, and is the South to reject it because it contains also, an incidental policy on a different principle, which we do not approve? For one, sir, with a clear, unhesitating judgment, I answer NO!

"Mr. President, I am not going to discuss this question of squatter sovereignty, on which my honorable friend from Michigan, (Mr. Cass) appears to be so very sensitive. I do not recognize the inhabitants of a Territory as a political community at all. The very act of Congress which provides a government for the Territory is a negation of the right of the inhabitants to do it for themselves. They are mere occupants of the public domain, nothing else. And it has been only because Congress deemed it expedient to give them a right of legislation, reserving to itself a power of revision, that the Territories have any political existence whatever. But when Congress delegates the power to them, it is a mere delegation, and how Congress measures it out is a matter of expediency, not of principle. And from the experience which the Southern States have had of the tendencies of Congress heretofore, on the subject of slavery, I do not know that we may not quite as safely trust the people, come from where they may, as the Congress of the United States, with that institution.

"I say, then, Mr. President, to sum up, this bill is objectionable in some of its features, it is true,— It is objectionable in that feature of it, for one, which does not deny to the people, the right to legislate on the subject of slavery. It is also objectionable in that clause of it which provides, that foreigners—those not naturalized—shall participate in the political power of the Territory. These, however, are questions of expediency alone. There is no principle, far less any constitutional law, involved in these; and if we can get the other and higher principle established on your statute-book, that henceforth power is denied to the Congress of the United States to legislate for the exclusion of slavery by yielding the question of expediency, I do not think we shall be rebuked for a bad bargain."—(See vol. 29, Appendix Cong. Globe, page 774.)

And again, on the 11th December, 1856, Mr. Mason said:

"I wish to make an explanation in which I have [illegible] remarks on this very topic which were interpolated into the debate at the time when the Senator from Maine (Mr. Fessenden) occupied the floor, and which seem to have been the subject of misrepresentation. These remarks were in reference to the much disputed question of squatter sovereignty. It has been supposed, not only in the Senate, but elsewhere, that I meant to admit a power in territorial legislation to prohibit slavery in a Territory. The remarks which I made, may have been for all that I know, correctly reported in the Globe. I did not revise them. Here they are:

"The territorial government was so organized there, as to admit citizens of all the States; whether free or slave, to take their property into the Territories; and when they organized themselves, or were organized under the law, into a legislative body, then to determine for themselves, whether this institution should exist amongst them or not. The specific difference is, that, under the Kansas law, citizens from the slaveholding States might go into the Territory with their property; citizens from the free States might go there, holding no such property, and when they got there, and met in common council as a legislative body, they should determine whether the institution should prevail; whereas, the party which the honorable Senator is now representing here, declares that in the organic law creating the government in the Territory there shall be a prohibition in limine that no slaves shall go there."

"These remarks had reference to the subject matter of a previous debate, and to positions I then maintained; but occupying the floor by the courtesy of the Senator entitled to it, I was necessarily brief, and may have left my meaning obscure.

"The previous debate had reference to the issues raised by the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and what I intended to say, and in a more elaborate form, would have said, was this, that those with whom I act, have uniformly denied any power whatever in Congress, to legislate on the subject of slavery in the territories. The Kansas bill was intended to delegate to the occupants of the Territories whatever power Congress possessed over all subjects of rightful legislation; but of course, it could delegate no more; and when we denied that Congress possessed any power to legislate on the subject of slavery, we of course denied that the Territorial legislature could have it, because Congress could not delegate what it does not possess. I did not amplify to show what the Kansas bill shows on its face that, in order to make the meaning more specific, the power to legislate on any subject, was by the terms of the bill referred to the Constitution; and express power was given by an appeal to the Supreme Court, to determine whether the legislature could, or could not rightfully legislate on the subject of slavery. I could not occupy the time which belonged to the Senator from Maine, to elaborate the idea; but I referred to the Kansas bill to determine what power was conceded, and, of course, when we determined as our judgment that the Constitution gave to Congress no power to legislate on the subject of slavery, it followed that the bill could not delegate such power to a Territorial legislature; but, as on the other side, it was claimed that Congress did possess the power, the bill immediately referred the question to the Constitution, and the judiciary where we had been always willing to send it. I desired to say this only, that I might not be, as I have been misinterpreted. I am indebted to the courtesy of the Senator from New Hampshire in yielding me the floor for this purpose."—(See Cong. Globe, 3d Sess., 34th Cong., page 103.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. James A. Bayard, of Delaware, in the Senate of the United States, May 25, 1854:

"The honorable Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Benjamin) stated three principles as embodied in the bill. In the first place it repeals an ideal arbitrary line which tended to create and foster sectional differences in the country. I admit that it does that. But is that a principle or is it merely a repeal of an act of Congress which may be again enacted, and which whether repealed or permitted to remain, will have no practical effect on the future political condition of the country to which it applies, whether as States or Territories? The second, that is the great principle of the bill, is the renunciation by Congress of all authority to legislate in regard to the institution of slavery, either for its establishment or its prohibition, beyond the two articles contained in the Constitution which delegate two express powers in relation to slavery, one to prohibit the slave trade, and the second, to provide for the reclamation of fugitive slaves who may escape into other States where slavery is not recognized by law.

"I agree with the honorable Senator from Louisiana as to the importance of this principle; it seems to include within it the necessity for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise line. The honorable Senator from Virginia, (Mr. Mason,) assumes substantially the same position, placing the importance of the bill on the single ground that it establishes the principle of non-intervention by Congress with the institution of slavery in the Territories, as well as the States of this Union. Mr. President I consider that an important principle; and if I supposed that the effect of this bill would be to remove from the halls of Congress all agitation in regard to the question of slavery hereafter; if I supposed that it would bury forever hereafter this whole question of abolition, I would merit reasonably any of the other opinions which I entertain in order to vote for the bill."—(See Appendix Cong. Globe, vol. 29, p. 775.)

Extract from remarks of the Hon. George E. Badger, of North Carolina, in the Senate of the United States, on the 16th February, 1854:

"The clause as it stands is ample. It submits the whole authority to the Territory to determine for itself. That, in my judgment, is the place where it ought to be put. If the people of the territories choose to exclude slavery, so far from considering it as a wrong done to me or to my constituents, I shall not complain of it. It is their business."—(See Cong., 1st Sess. 33d Cong., vol. 28, Part 2, page [illegible].)

Again, on the 2d of March, 1854, Mr. Badger said:

"Mr. President, the matter is clear. Some of us think—the distinguished Senator from Michigan (Mr. Cass) is of opinion—that in the people of the territories alone belongs this power. Now I do not agree with him, I think with the honorable Senator from Indiana (Mr. Pettit,) that Congress has plenary power of government to legislate over these territories. But with regard to that question we have agreed—some of us because we thought it the only right mode, and some because we think it a right mode, and under existing circumstances the preferable mode—to confer this power upon the people of the territories."—(See Appendix Congressional Globe, vol. 29, page 287.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. Mr. Pettit, of Indiana, (lately appointed Chief Justice of Kansas) in the Senate of the United States, on the 20th February, 1854:

"There is one provision in this bill however which in order that the bill may harmonize with provisions already adopted upon that subject, it would seem to me ought to be stricken out. It will be recollected that the people are expressly authorized to legislate upon all subjects whatsoever,man's [illegible] very included. They may either establish or abolish it at their pleasure and at their will if the Constitution of the United States allows it. Such is my understanding of it and such is my desire that it should be. But to make the question plainer and clearer and to rid it of all difficulties, I will suggest, if I do not move, the striking out of the following provision in the sixth section:

"'That all laws passed by the Assembly, and approved by the Governor, shall be submitted to the Congress of the United States, and if disapproved shall be null and of none effect.'

"'My desire is to authorize the people of the territory to legislate upon all legitimate subjects of legislation, without let or hindrance by this Government."—(See Appendix to Congressional Globe, 1st session, 33d Congress, vol. 29, page 213.)

The provision referred to by Mr. Pettis in reference to the laws being disapproved by Congress was subsequently stricken out.

Extract from a speech of the Hon. A. P. Butler, of South Carolina, delivered in the United States Senate, March 2, 1854. (See Appendix Congressional Globe, 1st Session, 33d Congress, vol. 29, page 239.)

"Now, I believe that under the provisions of this bill and of the Utah and New Mexico bills, there will be a perfect carte blanche given to the Territorial Legislature to legislate as they may think proper. I am willing, as I said before, to trust the discretion and honesty and good faith of the people upon whom we devolve this power; but I can never consent that they can take it of themselves, or that it belongs to them without delegating it; for I think they are our deputies—limited, controlable deputies, not squatter sovereigns. I am willing to say that the people of the Territories of Nebraska and Kansas shall be deputed by Congress to pass such laws as may be within their constitutional competence to pass, and nothing more. Is not that an honorable, fair, liberal trust to an intelligent people? I am willing to trust them. I have been willing to trust them in Utah and New Mexico, where the Mexican law prevailed, and I am willing to trust them in Nebraska and Kansas, where the French law, according to the idea of the gentleman, may possibly be revived."

Extract from a speech of the Hon. R. T. M. Hunter, of Virginia, delivered in the United States Senate, February 24, 1854:

"The bill provides that the Legislatures of these Territories shall have power to legislate over all rightful subjects of legislation, consistently with the Constitution. And if they should assume powers which are thought to be inconsistent with the Constitution, the courts will decide that question whenever it may be raised. There is a difference of opinion among the friends of this measure, as to the extent of the limits which the Constitution imposes upon the Territorial Legislature. This bill proposes to leave these differences to the decision of the courts. To that tribunal I am willing to leave this decision, as it was once before proposed to be left by the celebrated compromise of the Senator from Delaware (Mr. Clayton) a measure which, according to my understanding, was the best compromise which was offered upon this subject of slavery. I say, then, that I am willing to leave this point, upon which the friends of the bill are at difference, to the decision of the courts."—(See Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess., 33d Cong., vol. 29, p. 224.)

Extracts from a speech of the Hon. Robert Toombs, of Georgia, in the Senate of the United States, February 28, 1856:

"We who passed this Kansas bill, both at the North and the South, intend to maintain its principles; we do not intend to be driven from them by clamor nor by assaults, nor by false oaths nor by any other invention of its faithless and impotent assailants. These principles we espouse for ourselves. We intend that the actual bona fide settlers of Kansas shall be protected in the full exercise of all the rights of freemen; that unawed and uncontrolled they shall freely, and of their own will, legislate for themselves to every extent allowed by the Constitution, while they have a Territorial government, and when they shall be in a condition to come into the Union, and may desire it, that they shall come into the Union with whatever republican constitution they may prefer and adopt for themselves; that in the exercise of these rights they shall be protected against insurrection from within and invasion from without. The rights are accorded to them without any reference to the result, and will be maintained, in my opinion, by the South and North. I stood upon this ground in the passage of the bill; I shall maintain it with fidelity and honor to the last extremity." * * * * * *

"Against all these conflicting affirmed opinions, the friends of the Constitution, justice, and equality have hitherto held, will continue to hold, the scales of justice even and unshaken. We still tell all the owners of this public domain to enter and enjoy it, both in the North and South, with property of every sort, exercise the full powers of American freemen, legislate for yourselves to any and every extent, and upon any and every subject allowed by our constitution. The Federal Government will protect you against all who attempt to disturb you in the exercise of these invaluable rights, and when you have become powerful and strong enough to bear the burdens, and desire it, we will admit you into the family of sovereigns without reference to your opinions and your action upon African slavery. Decide that question for yourselves, and we will sustain your decision, because it is your right to make it. This is the policy of the Kansas bill; it wrongs no man—no section of our common country."—(See Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess., 34th Cong., vol. 33, p. 126.)

In alluding to the same subject in the Senate, on the 9th of July, 1856, Mr. Toombs again said:

"I thought it was the duty of the Government to protect slave property in the Territories until they should come into the Union as States, and then let them do as they pleased. There was not a large party to sustain this doctrine; but I believed it was right then, and believe so now. But a large portion of the South and a great number of the North, true national men, said, 'Let us leave the people of the Territories to pass on this and all other domestic relations as far as the Constitution will allow.' I agreed to it. Congress adopted it and incorporated it into the bills of 1850. The Senator from Maine says it is not there. I offer him this evidence: three-fourths of the Senate, and those who supported those measures, say it is there. He has opposed both but he undertakes to construe our meaning for us. I do not consider him a good expounder of other's creeds."—(See Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess., 34th Cong., vol. 33, p. 872.)

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

TENDER FOOTED.—The Cleveland Leader says, that JOHN C. GRANNIS, Esq., "has, within the past week, resigned the office of U. S. Commissioner, that he might no longer be subject to the unconscionable drafts likely to be drawn on his manly spirit by the requisitions of the Fugitive Slave Law. So long as our young statesman [illegible] his strong sense of justice and country is safe." [illegible]

He should at once enter into partnership with JOSHUA R., and go the entire in opposition to law, order and government. He should ignore the Constitution, and set down the Reserve as the "proper authority" in all things. If his "manly spirit" takes that turn, his services can be dispensed with without regret.

SHOCKING TRAGEDY.—A shocking tragedy occurred on Thursday afternoon at No. 184 William Street, New York, a German named JACOB OTTENBURGH, shooting his wife and then himself. They had been separated for two years, his wife having left him on discovering he had another wife in Germany. She had recently lived with her parents in William st., and on Thursday OTTENBURGH went to a house next door to take dinner. While there his wife came in, when he followed her to the hall and shot her. She fell dead instantly; he then shot himself through the heart.

ANOTHER HABEAS CORPUS.—There was an arrest of a fugitive slave at Zanesville, a few days since, and a negro named Johnson, was afterwards arrested on the charge of attempting to rescue the slave, and was taken to Cincinnati by the Deputy Marshal. A writ of habeas corpus has been granted by Judge BRINKERHOFF, of the State Supreme Court, and the hearing set for the 30th, in this city, at which time the hearing in the case of BUSHNELL and LANGSTON comes off.

LONG AND SHORT DAYS.—At Berlin and London, the longest day has sixteen hours and a half; at Stockholm, the longest day has eighteen hours and a half; at Hamburg, the longest day has seventeen hours, and the shortest seven; at St. Petersburg, the longest day has nineteen, and the shortest five hours; at Tornea, in Finland, the longest day has twenty-one hours and a half, and the shortest two hours and a half; at Wanderhus, in Norway, the day lasts from the 21st of May to the 22d of July, without interruption; and at Spitzbergen, the longest day is three months and a half.

INTERESTING THEATRICAL AND OTHER RELICS.—In a list of the effects of the late Mr. Harley (recently deceased in London,) for sale at auction, are the following articles: The pay-ledgers of the Covent Garden Theatre, with the weekly salaries and autograph receipts of the actors and actresses for seventy-five years, occupying thirty-five folios, in green vellum. There is also a gold enameled locket with some of Mrs. Siddon's hair, and an autograph presentation letter; hair of Mrs. Jordan; hair of Charles I., hair of Byron, and hair of Nelson "with authentic testimony."

THE WASTE OF WAR.—In the sixteen years intervening between 1797 and 1815, the French army absorbed 5,536,000 men. The number raised by conscription for Napoleon's army, was 2,476,000 men. The army of 1813 was composed of recruits from eighteen to twenty years of age. Of a million and a quarter raised in 1813, only 100,000 remained in 1814. France in addition to this loss of her citizens, had to pay 700 millions of francs as indemnity of war to the allied powers, and 400 millions for the support of foreign garrisons. These figures show the cost of a war, such as the powers of Europe are now about entering into.

MARSHAL TYLER NOT TO BE GIVEN UP.—The Herald has a dispatch from Washington saying that the demand of the British Minister for the surrender of Marshal Tyler will not be acceded, as the case is not believed to come within the article of the Ashburton treaty. Tyler has been already tried for the offense, and found guilty of manslaughter, and the Government has no idea of giving him up to Canadian authorities to be tried over again.

REGRETS.

BY JAMES B. MARSHALL.

[illegible]

Sadness and gloom surround me. No more beams
[illegible]
Await me now. Void darkness fills the scene
Without a sunny gleam to intervene;
[illegible]
Arrayed in brightness—ah! too bright to last!
[illegible]
When the first sound of mortal step drawn near;

Why was my fate thus wrought? Why raise the glass
To see it shivered at my lips and pass
From me forever? Why to me was given
To build my world on entities of heaven?
[illegible]
Breathing a rapture from all sweets distilled,
Bending its eyes with tenderness on mine,
Meeting my gaze with lustre so divine,
Heaving the breast with love, and in mine own
[illegible]
Gasping me fondly on my lips to press
[illegible]
Snatch the dear object, grown to me most dear,
And pass forever, leaving me to mourn
That joy departed, never to return?

The day brings bitterness, the night no sleep;
Though bleeds my heart, my eyes no tear-drops weep;
[illegible]
Her voice that rung its music on my heart,
And from its depths bade every echo start,
Falls to another all the vows once spoken
To me, past listener—vows which now are broken!
Another holds her hand or clasps her waist,
Hangs on her lips that once were mine to taste;
Feeds on their beauty, nor yet feels the sting
Which now my "mangled heart" is withering.
Ah, me! that woman should, like fortune, prove Fickle, inconstant, wanton in her love—
Ready to seek new faces, make new friends,
Catching at shadows, vain as rainbow-ends,
Regardless of the trust, whose trusting faith
Clung madly, wildly, with the grasp of death,
Nor yet relinquish'd till attempts to tear,
[illegible]

Memory! thy spell is on me. By thy aid
I view the past—its brightness so decayed—
[illegible]
[illegible]
Too mat'ron-blush upon as fair a cheek
As morning's self, when first the roseate streak
Tinges the sky, in virgin color glows,
And in the liquid eyes its radiance throws,
Dream o'er once more the happy nights and days,
[illegible] enchanted by love's rapturous lays—
When 'mid content the future seemed more bright
Than joyous hours of [illegible] with delight;
[illegible]
Who inly feel, like me, love's bitterest woe!

[illegible]
And drank their beauty as the silver cans,
Wheel'd down the arch of heaven. And the flowers
We twined together in our rural bowers;
And trained the vines and watch'd them as they climbs
To slender threads to deck our humble home,
Together, we awoke the simple lay—
How lightly o'er the strings her fingers stray!
And then, Oh, rapture! came a ray from heaven—
A joy, a hope, a binding link was given.
We watch'd the flower, as day by day it grew,
In its strange beauty, of the rarest hue;
[illegible]
Brighten its eye, and curl its tress of gold,
Heard with amaze its melody of voice
Shape the first word to bid our hearts rejoice:
With beaten chin, led by the tiny hand,
Its tottering steps, or aided it to stand:
Breath'd prayers that would indeed a blessing prove,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
Its lithe and active step, so full of grace—
Its arch and winning smile—its genius clear—
Its sweet expression, sweeter than a [illegible]
Its air so thoughtful and considerate,
If care appear'd to hang o'er us its weight.

Beneath a sudden blight we saw him fade—
Death's icy fingers on his forehead laid.
Together bent we o'er his snowy bier,
[illegible]
Together to the dust our angel gave,
Together turn'd to sorrow from his grave,
Clasp'd in each other's arms, [illegible]
Of changeless love, our only solace now.
But vain are mortal promises—the skies
Of April are more constant when they rise
In cloudless sunshine, and are overcast
With weeping vapors flying thick and fast.
When in the Garden our first mother fell
Her heart beneath the subtle serpent [illegible]
And yielding to his artful, amorous [illegible]
[illegible]
She wrought for all her kind a dark of [illegible]
They shrink from, yet how many wander in!

The tempter sought her—courted her with smiles,
Pour'd in her ear his well-dissembled wiles;
Told her of happiness, far, far away,
Where limpid waves from golden fountains [illegible]
Of bright-hued homes, of all-enduring love,
Fix'd as the stars, warm as the sun above—
Change [illegible] constancy, and full of bliss,
Till weakness [illegible] serpent hiss;
From love as true as e'er in heart did spring,
He won her to become a blighted thing—
Wears her white beauty taste, to fling away
Bespoiled, when weary grown with hoard of [illegible]
Another victim to the countless [illegible]
Who wander hopeless by the Stygian ford,
Within full view of heaven—the fires of hell
Burning beneath their feet.

Farewell! farewell!

I can no more. My muse shrinks back aghast—
Oh, God! make this most bitter pang the last.

MR. D'ISRAELI ON THE BALANCE OF POWER.—In his speech at Aylesbury Mr. D'Israeli said:—I know well that, if there is to be a war of nationalities, of opinions and of races—a war of revolution and reconstruction—we shall weather the storm. (Cheers.) It will not be England that will suffer. It is Europe that will be injured, Europe that will be desolated, and the very potentates whose pride and ambition, and lust of conquest are bringing about this perilous state of affairs, will find themselves at the end in an inferior position to that which they now occupy. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, we hear a great deal of the balance of power, of the importance of sustaining certain barriers in Europe, and many other traditions; all of which to a certain degree are true, and which may for a certain time continue to prevail. But let me take this opportunity of impressing upon you that the day is coming, if it has not already come, when the question of the balance of power cannot be confined to Europe alone. Since the time when that doctrine obtained, great communities have risen in another hemisphere, who will not permit the balance of power to be limited to Europe. You have on the other side of the Atlantic vigorous and powerful communities, who will no longer submit to your circumscribed theory of authority. The Austrian colonies, though now in their youth, but in the youth of giants, have already, as it were, thrown their colossal shadow over Europe. And it is for old Europe I lament that she is exhausting her energies and her resources in these wars. I could wish that she would rather prepare for that awful competition which, in coming times, she must encounter. I would rather see France, and Germany, and Russia, develop their resources, improve their agriculture, increase their population, and cultivate the arts of life, social and scientific, instead of wasting their strength, risking their stability, and sinking, when the era to which I have referred arrives, by their own mismanagement and want of prescience, into an inferior and exhausted position. Remember always that England, though she is bound to Europe by tradition, by affection, by great similarity of habits, and all those ties which time alone can create and consecrate, is not a mere Power of the Old World. Her geographical position, her laws, her language and religion, connect her as much with the New World as with the Old. And, although she has occupied not only an eminent, but, I am bold to say, the most eminent position among European nations for ages, still, if ever Europe, by her short-sightedness, falls into an inferior and exhausted state, for England there will remain an illustrious future. (Cheers.) We are bound to the communities of the New World, and those great States which our own planting and colonizing energies have created by ties and by interests which will sustain our power and enable us to play as great a part in the times yet to come as we do in these days and as we have done in the past. (Cheers.) And therefore, now that Europe is on the eve of war, I say it is for Europe, not for England that my heart sinks.

☞ The second son of the Grand Duke of Tuscany is said to be ardently enlisted in the cause of Piedmont. He declared that if there were no other way of getting into the fight, he would volunteer in the Sardinian service.

(From Capital City Fact of Monday.)

What is Thought of the "People's Press."

The Statesman, if we recollect correctly, has not noticed the publication of the People's Press, a courtesy very generally accorded by editors; but in its Sunday issue, it copied two articles, one from the Cadiz Sentinel and the other from the Hillsborough Gazette, expressing doubts whether such a paper will be of any real advantage to the Democracy of Ohio, that its real mission is the gratification of some petty animosity, and to keep up a warfare with the Statesman. The Sentinel is averse to the establishment of a Democratic newspaper in Columbus, that may interfere with the monopoly of the Statesman, and thinks that only one paper can be supported here, and a year hence time enough to advocate the claims of gentlemen to the Presidency. The Hillsborough Gazette thinks it "highly impolitic to attempt to build up a paper on the DOUGLAS issue, those issues were from the first of minor importance and now they are entirely obsolete with the people."

As the Statesman published these articles without comment, it may be considered as endorsing them.

The objections of Mr. ALLEN, of the Sentinel, are entitled to vast weight, when it is understood that he was willing to go into a Democratic paper a year ago, which it was contemplated to start in Columbus, to defeat Democratic views in antagonism to the Statesman. Then he did not have such conscientious scruples about the establishment of another Democratic paper in Columbus, lest it might interfere with the support of the "old Democratic organ," for which he manifests now so much solicitude. As to his suggestion that the Press was established to make war on the Statesman, we know such was not the case, as its editor might have continued with this paper, where he had ample room and verge enough, and daily opportunity to war as much as he pleased, and that without hazarding any damage to his party, to which this paper owes no allegiance. What he says about hunting and abusing prominent Democrats, if it was intended to apply to the Statesman, on account of its abuse of Messrs. SCHUNCK, LAWRENCE, THOMAS and others, on account of their opposition to a [illegible] of the canal contracts, the application may not be inappropriate. As to the DOUGLAS issue being obsolete, as designated by the Hillsborough paper, we must beg leave to dissent. It is a live issue now among the Democrats. They are fighting each other every day in Kentucky upon that issue—it occupied the attention of Congress at the last session—it will occupy the attention of the Charleston Convention — it will probably be formally noticed by the Ohio Democratic State Convention on Thursday next— it was not only not of minor importance but has been and is the cause of all the difficulty in the Democratic party, and will continue to be unless it shall be resolved that the principle be recognized as urged by Mr. Douglas, that the people are sovereign, and that Congress shall not interfere with the domestic affairs of the territories.

But we are not undertaking to defend the Press, or expound Democracy, which we leave to the Press, itself, which it is abundantly able to do, valiantly and efficiently—we merely notice this readiness with which the Statesman has pounced down upon a couple of dubious and left-handed compliments, rather of the cold-water order, while it passed by a score or two of such welcome as must be in the highest degree gratifying to the publisher and editor— such for instance as the following

The People's Press is the title of a new paper published at Columbus, Ohio. The Press will present the claims of Stephen A. Douglas for the Presidency in 1860. The soundness of its Democracy, and manifest ability of its editor, will, we are sure, insure it a wide circulation throughout Ohio, and other Western States.— Brown Co. Democrat.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.—We received this week the first number of the People's Press, published at Columbus, by J. Birney Marshall.—The Press makes its advent in a neat and agreeable attire; its editorial department is characterized by the vigor and directness for which the pen of Mr. Marshall is so favorably distinguished. It will be seen by the following extract, from its leading article, that the Press proves out on the right scent.—Delaware Democratic Standard.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.—We have received the first number of this Democratic paper published at Columbus, by J. Birney Marshall, Esq. It is a large and handsome journal, and the well-known ability of its distinguished editor will commend it to the favorable consideration of the Democracy of Ohio.—Springfield Ohio Press.

The People's Press is the title of a new Democratic paper published at Columbus by J. Birney Marshall, the first copy of which is before us. For typographical neatness it takes the lead of any paper in the State. J. B. Marshall is well known as a writer of brilliant talent and extensive experience. The Press will advocate the cause of Douglas and popular sovereignty. Price $2 per annum.—Van Wert Constitution.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.—Mr. J. Birney Marshall's new weekly paper has made its appearance, hailing from Columbus. It plants itself on the Cincinnati platform and gives the "little giant" a hearty support. The Press presents a fine appearance and is vigorously and industriously edited.—Springfield News.

We are in the receipt of the People's Press, the new Douglas Weekly, published at Columbus, O., by J. Birney Marshall, who at one time was editor of the Statesman, but latterly associate editor of the Columbus Fact, which presents a very creditable appearance both in matter and in manner. We wish our old friend, the veritable J. B. M., the most abundant success. He is a clever writer, a whole-souled gentleman, and a capital fellow withal.—Toledo Times.

A NEW PAPER.—We have received the first number of a new weekly paper entitled The People's Press, published by J. Birney Marshall, at Columbus, Ohio. The Press is a large paper, and makes a fine appearance. It is democratic in politics, and is, we gather from the salutatory of the editor, to be mainly devoted to the elevation of Stephen A. Douglas to the Presidency. We are pleased to note that while Mr. Douglas is the first choice of the Press, it will not essay to disparage the claims of other Statesmen prominently named for the same position. This is well. Mr. Marshall is a ready writer, and as he presents a large and interesting sheet it is probable he will be successful —Dayton Empire.

☞ The Emperor of France, the Emperor of Austria, and the King of Sardinia, all intend to head their respective armies in the coming campaign. This was the character of the campaign of Austerlitz in 1805, at which battle the Emperor of France, the Emperor of Russia, and the Emperor of Austria were present.

☞ The Maine Democracy invite Judge Douglas to attend their Convention, and boldly proclaim their determination to send to Charleston anti-Buchanan delegates. They copy and endorse the resolutions of the Harrisburg Union State Rights Democratic Convention, of the 13th of April.

THE RING.—TOM SAYERS has accepted the challenge of AARON JONES, now in this country, for the championship of England, and a deposit of $250 a side has been put up to bind the match, in the hands of the editor of Bell's Life in London. There is nothing new in relation to the challenge of HEENAN.

☞ The people of Mansfield are under some excitement in regard to the Band (musical) Convention to be held there the 26th inst. They promise that the brass strings shall be out.

Habeas Corpus.

Upon application of SIMEON BUSHNELL and CHARLES LANGSTON, now under sentence of imprisonment for violating the Fugitive Slave Law of 1850, Mr. Justice SWAN, of the Supreme Court of Ohio, has allowed writs of habeas corpus to issue, directed to the Sheriff of Cuyahoga county, and made returnable at Columbus, on Wednesday, the 25th inst., at 10 o'clock A. M.

It is expected that an argument will be made, as to the constitutionality of the law, before a full bench of Judges, and the Judge who allowed the writs has requested the associate Justices to meet him at the Capital on the return day.

The Cleveland Leader says: "The applications of the persons in prison, simply set forth an unlawful detention by Sheriff WIGHTMAN, and asked the Court to inquire into the cause of imprisonment."

We are then to have the respective powers of the Federal and State tribunals delineated before our highest State tribunal. How far the proceedings of the District Court will be reviewed, rests with the counsel and the Court. What will be the result, remains to be seen. In sentencing BUSHNELL, Judge WILLSON remarked:

"It is at all times a disagreeable and painful duty for the Court to pronounce the sentence and impose the penalty which the law demands for its violation. The discharge of this duty is peculiarly painful in dealing with the class of offenders to which you belong, who deem it a praiseworthy virtue to violate the law, and then seek its penalties with exultation and defiance.

A man of your intelligence must know that the enjoyment of a rational liberty ceases the moment the laws are allowed to be broken with impunity, and thereby fail to afford any protection to society—that if the standard of right is placed above and against the laws of the land, those who set up to it are anything else than good citizens or good christians. You must know that when a man sets up any system of morals or theology which teaches him to disregard and violate the laws of the Government that protects him in life and property, his conduct is at variance with the principle is dangerous

The good order and well being of society demand an exemplary penalty in your case. You have broken the law; you express no regret for the act done, and are unable to see wrong.

It is the sentence of the Court that you pay a fine of $600 and costs of prosecution, and that you be imprisoned in the county jail in Cuyahoga County for the term of sixty days from this time, and if for any cause your Sheriff cannot be had in this county, it will be the duty of the United States Marshal to see it carried out in some other county jail in this District."

It will be seen that it is made the duty of the U. S. Marshal to see that the sentence shall be effectually carried out. The Supreme Court of Ohio, may, to use the adopted language of the Leader, "inquire into the cause of imprisonment," but were it to set aside the judgment of the Federal Court, a conflict of jurisdiction between the two powers in [illegible] and where the trouble is to end, cannot very clearly be foreseen. The Supreme Court of [illegible] to [illegible] from [illegible] of C. S. Cain, or a [illegible] of the U. S. Mails, so to discharge a [illegible] an infraction of the [illegible].

We shall [illegible] which an [illegible] is admissible, [illegible] this case, however, we are [illegible] to produce [illegible] and we hope [illegible] Court on a review [illegible] and of its own duty, [illegible] an angry and over-heated [illegible] take a step beyond its strictly legitimate province. The move to discharge [illegible] tory of the June Convention, R. P. SPALDING being warmly supported for Supreme Judge by many of the Reserve people and papers, on account of his extravagant views in this connection. We shall be disappointed greatly if they are not. The 25th inst. is the day set for hearing the argument, which we shall endeavor to report.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

— The McArthur Journal says, the crops, in this section so far as we have seen or heard from, are in most excellent condition. There is every prospect of an abundant harvest.

— The daughter of a gentleman named Doran, at Sandusky, aged [illegible], was run over by a freight car while playing on the track on Tuesday. Both her [illegible] were cut off. The Register says, it is scarcely possible for the child to survive.

— The stable attached to the Warren Hotel, at Lebanon, Warren county, Sargeant Corwin, proprietor, was destroyed by fire on Sunday morning. Six horses, several buggies and carriages, besides hay and grain were also consumed. Every effort was made to rescue the horses, but they were so frightened by the flames, that it was impossible to get them out. The fire is believed to have been the work of an incendiary.

— The Cleveland Democrat of yesterday says: Two men named [illegible] and [illegible] were arrested yesterday by [illegible], charged with having stolen [illegible] and placed them on the C. P. & A. R. R. [illegible] track, a few miles from this city, with the evident intention of throwing the cars off the track. They are in jail.

— They occasionally have [illegible] in the Forest City. The Cleveland Review of yesterday says: A fight occurred last night between some [illegible] and [illegible] men, on the corner of St. Clair and River streets. We did not learn origin of the quarrel, but believe that with the exception of some closed eyes and [illegible] serious resulted.

— A man named Neff, residing at Gallon, on Saturday night, was beaten so badly that he is not expected to recover. It seems that Neff has, for a period of eight years, been criminally familiar with the wife of Charles Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald never took any steps to prevent the intimacy between Neff and his wife, but John Waterhouse, a brother of the woman, insisted that it must be stopped, and a few months since a fight occurred between Neff and Fitzgerald. Last Saturday Fitzgerald went home, and finding Neff there assaulted him, but not possessing the strength of Neff, was terribly beaten. Waterhouse being apprised of the fight, hastened to the house, seized a chair, knocked Neff down, and beat him until he was taken away by force. Three of Neff's ribs were broken, his skull fractured, and his head terribly bruised.

— On Thursday night a boy about [illegible] years of age was drowned at the Gallipolis landing. His father, who is an Irishman, came from Kanawha on the steamer [illegible] with his family and stowed his household goods on board the lower wharf-boat to await the arrival of a downward boat to proceed to Hanging Rock. He seemed to care little or no care of his children, and early in the evening the child fell in the river from the inside guard of the warf-boat and was recovered. About midnight a steamboat arrived, and while the father was busily engaged getting his goods aboard, the child fell in the river between the warf-boat and steamer, and before assistance could be rendered, disappeared from the surface. The parents proceeded on their journey and the body of their child remains in the river, no efforts having been made to recover it.

☞ The Association of Medical Superintendents of American Insane Asylums met at Lexington, Ky., on Tuesday. Dr. ANDREW McFARLAND, of the Illinois State Hospital for the Insane, at Jacksonville, was elected President. Dr. NICHOLS was elected Secretary pro tem. Among the membership attendance, we notice the names of Dr. R. J. PATTERSON, Ohio State Asylum for Idiots, and Dr. R. HILLS, Central Ohio Lunatic Asylum, both of this city.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL, - - Editor.
TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

The Democratic Platform and the Democratic Press.

We desire with our whole heart, the success of the Democratic Party, and to be successful, we believe it should be right. When it establishes a platform embodying its principles, that platform should be plain, distinct, unambiguous, impervious to doubt or misconstruction.—It is possible that no language can be so explicit as to baffle the ingenuity of disingenuous criticism; but we did think, three years ago, that the Democracy had happily succeeded in constructing such a syllabus of their creed, as to leave no room for dubiety or difference, at least among themselves, as to its full, thorough and permanent comprehension, and appreciation.

We, in common with the entire Democratic party, as we thought, gave that platform, and the distinguished citizen who occupied and stood upon it, our hearty, and unreserved support.—But, within a short period back, a new interpretation has been given in some quarters, to that platform, which demands a new expression, declaratory of its meaning, to prevent the growth of heresy, and quell the wandering to the true path, without which dissentions must increase and irreparable divisions ensue. It is not proper to say that all is safe when all is not safe.—The Democratic party has passed through many perils, encountered and surmounted many dangerous obstacles; and is yet strong and vigorous, because it is instinct with a living principle, that the people are the sovereignty and that government was devised for their sole benefit and in theirs. But the Democratic party is not immaculate, and as "power is always stealing from the many to the few," it behooves the people themselves, who constitute the Democratic party, to look well to their record, and timely eradicate the rank growth of weeds that may endanger and eventually destroy its promising harvest.

To-day the Democratic people of Ohio assemble by their delegates to renew their fealty to their time-honored principles, and select standard-bearers for the coming campaign. It will be becoming in them, to repeat the declaration of 1856, and to re-assert beyond the possibility of a doubt, or the admissibility of an ingenious innovation, their understanding of the basis of their creed as expressed in the Cincinnati Platform.

It was the glory and the cause of triumph of the party in 1856, that the people of the Territories as well as the States, should control their domestic institutions in their own way. If this was not the true interpretation of that compact, we were mistaken in its purport, and with others performed our part in misleading and misdirecting the popular mind. It was proclaimed from the stump, it was heralded from the press, it was inculcated everywhere, that a removal from a State to a Territory did not incapacitate the people for self-government. Nowhere, then, did we hear the fantastical idea promulgated, that a territorial legislature was the mere creature or agent of Congress, and could exercise no powers save those conferred and granted by the latter. The doctrine was that Congress not only delegated the power existing in it by the Constitution, but was [illegible] conferred upon their territorial legislature powers which did not exist in Congress, and with which Congress had no right to interfere. Congress could pass an enabling act and Congress would judge of the harmony of a Constitution with the Constitution of the United States, and Congress would admit as a State on an equal footing with the other States, and there its prerogative terminated. It was the universal understanding that "popular sovereignty and non-interference by Congress" in the domestic affairs of the territories should be strictly adhered to, and it was exultingly pointed to as a rallying [illegible] to every portion of the Union. This gave us the tower of strength, which they of the adverse faction wanted." The Democratic party were well called the Union party.—It held that all the rights of property should be respected, conferring no exclusive privileges, and leaving to the people the right to regulate their domestic institutions in their own way.

It was acceptable to the Democracy alike of the North and the South. There was no hair-splitting then, claiming that it meant that the territorial interval should be under the Congressional rule, and that the territorial legislatures should be powerless to enact laws touching slave property, but it devolved upon Congress to protect (by enactment of course) such slave-owners as should remove with their slave-property to the territories, irrespective of the expressed sentiments and wishes of the people of the territories. If slave-owners chose to hazard their property by removing it to the territories, it was at their peril; and if no territorial provision were made for their protection, their remedy lay in an appeal to the Courts, but not in Congress. If the right to legislate for the territories is in Congress, where is the necessity of a territorial legislature? If Congress can protect slavery in the territories, it can establish it and consequently abolish it. But this is not Democratic doctrine. It is not consistent with sovereignty in the people. It confers a power so nearly akin to despotism, where the people are governed without representation, that it comes in conflict with the genius of our institutions.

If we understand the Republican platform, it is that Congress has the right to legislate for the territories—has the right to determine that slavery shall not exist, but has no right to carry slavery there. We do not admire their logic, which nearly resembles the Indian's barbecue. They desire to construe it all their own way—"you take the buzzard and I the turkey, or I'll take the turkey and you the buzzard." Those who insist that Congress should enact laws to protect slavery in the territories, mean no more or less, than that Congress should establish it there; for the two powers, if not synonymous, are very nearly the same, and do not vary the breadth of a hair. Sophistry may draw the distinction, but the result is the same thing, and both involve the principle of the Republican interpretation, that under the Constitution, Congress has full legislative rights in the territories except to introduce slavery where it did not originally exist.

The Democratic party, unless persuaded to depart from its devotion to the Constitution, to follow pernicious counsels, in order to gratify selfish ambition that would use it as a footstool, should be invulnerable. It is the party of the people, studying their interests and happiness alone. Its ritual is symmetry itself, and like the statuary of some sculptor of the olden time, which would be marred in the perfection of its wondrous beauty by the cold chisel of modern art, it should be guarded from innovation and preserved in its strength and harmony from the rude touch of sacrilegious pretension.

☞ We are under obligations to the Mt. Vernon Banner, for taking upon itself to declare that the Democracy of Ohio "do not want presses devoted to the interests of any man." The advice would have come with a stronger recommendation if Harper were not a slave of the Administration. True, at one time he stood aloof, and was as timid and coy as a maid, but somehow or other the ice was broke, (perhaps by the National) and the Banner healed over entirely. It now supports the Democratic party by sly digs at Douglas, and carries out its theory by abject submission to government dictation. What amount of patronage secured him, and made him so affectionate to the "Statesman," we do not know, but presume he was bought cheap.

☞ The official majority for the Massachusetts Constitutional amendment requiring two years residence, is 6,024 out of the total vote of [illegible].

[illegible]

We have heard some conversation on the subject and read some notice of an attempt on the part of the Cincinnati Enquirer, to procure the nomination of J. Scott Harrison as the Democratic candidate for Governor; but not being a daily reader of the Enquirer, and not having seen the articles transferred to other papers, we do not exactly comprehend upon what grounds such a nomination was to be secured.

Mr. Harrison is an amiable and intelligent gentleman, of very domestic habits, and not very ambitious of political distinction; and least of all, of engaging in arduous political encounter. He may, and probably does, entertain some sentiments not variant from those of the Democratic party, but there are opinions which are his and not theirs. He would not accept a nomination except upon the most honorable terms, for he is a correct and honorable gentleman.—He could not stand with the Democracy upon the Cincinnati Platform, because only a few years ago, he was elected to Congress upon a different platform, and maintained antagonistic views after the Democratic platform was announced.

We understand that he addressed a letter on this subject to some gentlemen earnest in the movement, but have not seen it. If he did so, we presume he explained the difficult and embarrassing condition in which he would be placed in consenting to accept such nomination, and expressing his preference for "private station."—We have too much respect and confidence in him as a man, to believe that he would do aught to compromise his integrity and honor, or consent to occupy a doubtful position for any purpose, and least of all for the glitter of a nomination or even an election for Governor. His ambition does not run in that way.

The proposition, if we understand it correctly, was unwise in the Enquirer, and must have been an emanation from a prurient imagination. We will not question the motives, or insinuate that it was an effort to add to the Democratic strength in Hamilton and other counties where the memory of a certain defunct organization has lingered after the soul had left the body. But it was a kind of acknowledgment of deficiency in Gubernatorial material in the Democratic party, of the right sort, which we are unwilling to admit. Such a thing might have been suggested in private conversation, at a convivial reunion, or among a party of friends; but it was rather flightly to make the suggestion seriously and publicly, in the face of the organization of the party and its antecedents, which, whatever may be individual fancies, are held in respect by the great mass of the Democracy.

True, some of the prominent Democrats have expressed a preference not to be called from their ordinary pursuits, on one plea or another; but there are others who have modestly confined from such expression; and we have yet to learn that any one, not physically disabled, or oppressed by circumstances that could not be removed, would decline so proud an honor if tendered by the Convention. With such men as Thurman, and Ranney, and Jewett, and McDowell, we should be at no loss for a candidate; and there are others who have not been brought so prominently before the public, who would inspire respect and be satisfactory to the people. We want a man with a clear Democratic record, who can not only "face the music," but mingle cordially and assimilate with the people—whose character and presence and address will entitle him to a cordial reception, wherever he may go, and who is able to expose the sophistries of the adversary and explain the system of government advocated and upheld by the Democracy. None can do this but a Democrat; and it should be held as a paramount rule, always to be observed, that the Democratic party can form no coalition, that would derange or endanger a single plank of its platform.

Popular Sovereignty.

We continue our extracts from the Appendix to Mr. Douglas's speech in the U. S. Senate in February last, upon Popular Sovereignty and non-interference of Congress in the domestic affairs of the Territories. In addition to the array we gave in our last issue, we publish to-day the sentiments of Hons. Jas. L. Orr, of South Carolina, A. H. Stephens, of Georgia, J. P. Benjamin, of Louisiana, J. M. Mason, of Virginia, Jas. A. Bayard, of Delaware, Geo. E. Badger, of North Carolina, John Pettit, of Indiana, A. P. Butler, of South Carolina, R. M. T. Hunter, of Virginia and Robert Toombs, of Georgia.

Southern Convention.—At the Southern Convention on Thursday, the vote was taken on the expediency of re-opening the slave trade—the vote was taken by States, and stands

Ayes—Alabama, 9; Arkansas, 4; South Carolina, 4; Louisiana, 6; Texas, 4; Georgia, 10; Mississippi, 7—44.

Nays—South Carolina, 4; Tennessee, 12; Florida, 3—19.

A resolution was also passed, recommending a Southern Convention, to take some means for the prevention of the installation of a Black Republican President; and in case this failed, to provide for a secession, and the forming of a Southern confederacy.
[Frankfort, Ky., Yeoman.

And that is the goal of the ambition of some of both parties, who ride the hobby of fanaticism and extremes, whether at the North or the South, although with the inevitable tendency of the circling waves of the maelstrom, its head is turned in the direction of destruction. The formation of a Southern confederacy has been in contemplation since the days of Aaron Burr. It is the last resort of overweening and disappointed ambition. Men have dreamed of it, instead of dwelling upon the glory and grandeur of the whole country.

The wish of Mr. Clay may yet be prophetic, that he would like to see on this Northern continent three great republics, so that if a man could not live happily in one, he might find the same institutions and the same mild restraint in another. Let there be no more Southern Conventions to take the wind out of the sails of that of Hartford, which will live a stigma and reproach to the end of time. Our country's annals should not furnish its counterpart. It can get along very well without two such illustrious examples, and one Arnold is enough.

Governor Medary.—We had the gratification of seeing the veteran Democratic Statesman, to-day, prior to his departure for Kansas. He bears with him our earnest wishes for his welfare and successful administration of Kansas affairs. The Government could not place there a better man. We are glad to see him in excellent health, and to know that he goes to [illegible] his charge, in excellent spirits.—Sent.

☞ Sunday's Cincinnati Enquirer says: "Last evening we had the pleasure of shaking the hand and holding social conversation, with our old editorial confrere, and the new live Governor of Kansas, Colonel Sam. Medary. The "Old War Horse" looks, and is, in vigorous health, and is enthusiastic in his praises of the climate, soil and people of the embryo State, whose early history has figured so conspicuously in the political world. Colonel Medary may well be congratulated upon the effects which his prudence, firmness and wise counsels have produced—bringing order out of chaos."

☞ The Statesman has been very obliging, and it affords us pleasure to return the compliment. The Cincinnati Commercial is responsible for this:

The Ohio Statesman claims a pre-emption right to the position of Democratic organ at the center of the State. It is troubled by Birney Marshall's new People's Press, wherein Senator Douglas is held up before the admiring world as the right man for the Charleston nomination. We do not know which has the advantage in Democracy, he of the Statesman or he of the Press, because we are not aware of the existence of any half bushel, universally accepted as a standard measure, with which to ascertain the bulk of the article as embodied in those gentlemen. But if the case should be presented to us as a question of brains, we should be obliged to give our deliberate opinion that Marshall has decidedly the advantage; and we would not consider ourselves engaged in complimenting him to any vast extent, either.

☞ The Cadiz Sentinel is not very particular when it charges us with abusing "some of Mr. Douglas's warmest friends." Who are they?

Acknowledgments.

We are under very great obligations, indeed, to the press generally, and to the Democratic press of Ohio in particular, for the kind and handsome manner in which they have mentioned this paper and its editor. Next to the approbation of our own conscience should be esteemed that of one's friends; and the words of friendly greeting and compliment that have been spoken are most gratefully appreciated. The reception we have met with from our brethren, is far more flattering than had been anticipated, and we have scarce the heart to notice one or two exceptions, where our motives have been misconstrued, and ultimate success deemed problematical. We did not expect to please everybody, but are happy to perceive a general tone of "welcome" to a field which we hope to make of usefulness to others as well as profit to ourself.

We did not embark in this enterprise without being aware of its vicissitudes, embarrassments and difficulties. The position of an editor involves a delicate trust. In a measure, he is dependent upon the public opinion, but he has a higher and nobler duty than a senseless struggle to propitiate popularity and endeavor to ride with the current. He should be right, or as near right as the frailty and imperfection of human nature will admit. To carry his point, or baffle an adversary, he should not be unfair, or persist in error, whatever be his skill in parry and defense. When wrong, it should be his pleasure to retract; not attempt to worry through a false and untenable position by adroit and cunning management. Such exploits are admired in a ready and inventive general, who by some luckless mishap or unforeseen incident, has involved his army; but are scarcely to be tolerated in him who addresses men's reason, who should distain expedients, who should advocate truth and justice and right, and deal with facts rather than the embroideries and garnishments of fancy. We may fail to reach the standard set up for our guidance, but it will not be through the want of heart to try. Our long connection with the press, if it have not improved the natural gifts with which we were endowed, has afforded the experience to know that men cannot be true to others if not true to himself, and that schemers almost universally fall in their own snares. A cunningly devised plan may succeed for the moment, and promise fruition, but some clue will lead to the labyrinth, and corresponding odium "return to plague the inventor." We, therefore, impose it upon ourself, to be frank and honest, to make no effort to mislead, and are, therefore, not induced by easy acquiescence, to follow the misdirection of others. We hold it to be our solemn duty to the people whose respect and confidence we desire to gain, [illegible] the People's Press a vehicle of truth; to attempt to inspire no temporary regard by assumed zeal, or gratify ourself or others, by intemperate eulogy or detraction. The true mission of an editor who would be respected, is to disseminate correct principles, and abide the arbitrament of time. He neither injures an adversary nor improves his own advantage by pursuing a contrary course; and no party is advanced that relies upon the press to conceal its delinquencies or cover its weaknesses.

[illegible]

We shall not add much to the article which we copy from the "Daily City Fact," for it is hardly necessary, to defend ourself from the imputations of the Cadiz Sentinel and Hillsborough Gazette; which papers have the liberty and right to think and vaticinate of us as they please. Nor are we at all disturbed that they have thought proper to throw a wet blanket upon our enterprise, which we know to be honorable and hope will be profitable. Our friend of the Hardin Democrat, too, is a little captious that we used some articles from another paper which excited his "suspicions," but as we are not advised of their nature and our imagination does not sympathise, we leave to time to dissipate any apprehensions he may have entertained.

Before we saw in the Statesman the articles which it reproduced, we had placed them with others, to be transferred to our own columns as memorials of the estimation in which we were held by the press, and the manner of its greeting. From the Statesman itself we expected nothing, unless the place was too narrow for both.

The object of republishing the two articles that in some measure reflected upon us, was apparent, and is appreciated in this community where the personal feeling of hostility has been no secret. We disregard the petty malice displayed and despise the cowardly malignity that sought to fire from behind so flimsy a breastwork. It has been our fortune to see with other optics than the Statesman's and to expose some of its infirmities, in our connection with another paper; and we defended prominent Democrats from its savage assaults, when they pursued their line of duty, as they understood it, and not as dictated by the Statesman. We know our motives to have been pure and we do not believe those of the Statesman were. We looked solely to the welfare and advancement of the Democratic party, and sought to prevent it from being involved in an issue that could only result to its detriment. We thought the Statesman more actuated by selfish motives, than the good of the party, and to follow its counsels would be suicidal to the Democratic party. This is our offense, and under similar circumstances it would be repeated. We did not intend this paper as the medium through which to perpetuate war upon the Statesman, but to promulgate Democratic truths, and insist that the party which we desire to see perpetuated, as we hope to see the perpetuity of our glorious union, should not be trammeled by false issues or be led after false gods.

Some affect to think that it is premature to advocate the claims of any one man to the Presidency, and unadvisable. So intimates friend Flood, of the Cleveland Democrat, from whom others who are not apt to have an original idea, may have taken their cue. Perhaps his experience in supporting Gen. Cass "against the world" may have enlightened him upon that point?

But we did not intend to be led into even this much talk about what we cannot consider more than little annoyances incidental to us all, and beg leave to express once more our cordial and sincere acknowledgements, for the very kind and generous manner in which the advent of our "Press" has been greeted by the press generally.

Quite Personal.—O. Jennings Wise, of the Richmond Enquirer, having recently published a very bitter letter against John Minor Botts, the latter's son, Mr. B. B. Botts, is pleased to call Mr. Wise "a base, malignant, depraved calumniator, and falsifier of truth, honor and gentlemanly instincts, which none but an outlaw and a ruffian would have resorted to."

Since writing the above, we find the following from a Washington correspondent written on Friday evening:

"It is rumored this evening that young [illegible] and Wise, who have been in this vicinity for the last three days, arranging preliminaries for a duel, have fought, and that the latter was shot dead. Their movements are kept a profound secret. The police have been on the alert for the last twenty-four hours, but are unable to get any clue to them. Gov. Wise is also here."

Later.—The Petersburgh (Va.) Express says O. Jennings Wise, Esq., so far from being killed on Wednesday, in a duel, spoke for two hours on Wednesday night, in that city, on politics.

☞ The Grand President of the Sons of Malta, Fred Hess, arrived here yesterday. He facetiously remarked that he had been crossed so often, it would be surprising if the Maltese were not among the number. He is one of the very best fellows in the world, and is everybody's friend. He is in search of Democracy for the benefit of the Cincinnati Commercial.

☞ The New England Anti-Slavery Society will hold their annual Convention at Boston on the 24th and 26th inst.

The Two Years Amendment in Massachusetts.

The coolest piece of impudence and most shameless misrepresentation we have seen, in a long while is put forth by the Napoleon, Ohio, "Citizen" of the 11th inst. It is barefaced, open and unblushing effrontery. It reminds us of the fellow whose hand was caught in another's pocket.

"You thought my hand was in your pocket?"

"Yes, I know it was."

"Now you are very much mistaken. It was an optical delusion and you only thought so."

Upon the hypothesis of the "Citizen," every victory ever gained by the Republicans was the crafty work of the Democrats "quietly voting" for the men and measures proposed by their adversaries. We make an extract from the "Citizen," that the Republican party may see to what miserable shifts some of their champions resort, to bolster up their bad cause.—Are they not ashamed of having editors who would resort to such a wretched and contemptible subterfuge? What must be thought of a party whose principles are so obnoxious that when they are sustained, claim that it was through the quiet co-operation of their opponents?—How much more manly, how much more self respect would have been the consequence, if the matter had been explained that the Republicans of Massachusetts against the advice of some of their friends elsewhere, and some of their leading men at home, had adopted the amendment to the constitution, requiring foreign born citizens to have two years residence after naturalization before entitled to the privileges of citizenship! And how despicably and contemptibly the man must feel who knows in his heart, that what he has published in the face of the world as truth is nothing more or less than a gross and libellous falsehood!

The "Citizen" says:

The amendment proposed to the Massachusetts Constitution, was submitted to the suffrage of the people on Monday last. It was to be hoped the people of Massachusetts would vote the negative of the proposition, but the Democracy of that State quietly voted for the amendment, and thus succeeded in engrafting the provision that naturalized foreigners shall not vote under two years from the date of their final papers. The Republican party in Ohio and every other State, have spoken out in very decided terms against the infamous and foolish movement in Massachusetts. The success of the measure is wholly chargeable upon the Democracy, who will endeavor to make capital of it, to bring back into their ranks the adopted citizens who have left them.

But the "Citizen" is not alone in this sort of argument. The disease seems to be epidemic in the Republican camp. We do not know how our nearer neighbors of the "State Journal" reason, but hardly expect men of their acknowledged sagacity would place the adoption of the amendment upon such trivial and untenable grounds. The Tiffin "Tribune," however, argues with the Napoleon "Citizen" and says:

The reports from Massachusetts indicate that the two years amendment to the Constitution has been carried, by about 6,000 majority.—The vote was very small, amounting in all to not more than 40,000. The ultra Americans and the Democrats united and thus the proscriptive measure was carried. The Republicans mostly voted against it.

What will the Republicans of Massachusetts think when they see the fires of their triumph thus damped down by their brethren in Ohio?

The Legislature which submitted the proposition was Republican. Every Democrat in that body voted against it; and at the polls the Democracy voted against it, the New York "Tribune" avowed that the Republicans of Massachusetts had the whole matter in their hands, that they alone would be responsible for it, and that the Republican party of the whole country would have to share the odium, if it were adopted. The former editor of the "Ohio State Journal," now of the Boston Bee and Atlas, was perfectly rampant for it, as were the leading Republicans of the State, while it was opposed by every Democratic paper.

Nothing could be more conclusive that it is a Republican measure, and although it is rather restrictive upon the privileges of white freemen, do they not make up for it in extending on all occasions those of the negro?

Well Represented and in Force.

At the Democratic County Convention on Saturday last, we learn that the Columbus Post-Office was strongly represented, and that if its representatives did not speak publicly so that all might hear, they were busy in whispers, and took an active part in the game. First there was Tom Miller himself, as busy as if he were a delegate chosen by the people and invested with the privilege of casting their votes, in arranging the ticket that must be supported. His son-in-law John Joyce, a clerk in the Post-Office, was there, as busy as he knew how to be, in forwarding the same arrangement. His chum Levi Wilson, also a clerk in the Post-Office, was there, doing his best. Abner Thompson, another Post-Office clerk, was there, engaged in the same business. Ed. Hall, who has a son-in-law in the Post-Office, was there too doing the same thing, although he was a defeated candidate for dele[illegible]

The interest manifested by these men was not such as is common. They had a purpose. The reign of Millerism was threatened, and there was some probability that delegates might be chosen to the State Convention upon whom "the Miller clique" had not impressed its signet. This would never do. Such an event would be an outrage upon prescriptive rights which they were there to defend. It would not do to permit the delegates of the people to manage their own affairs, without their counsel and advisement. They had the game in their own hands, and played it out beautifully.

It is no particular business of ours to animadvert upon this officious zeal to manage the affairs of the people, but it does seem a little singular that the Post Office should require the presence of so many of its force at the County Convention, instead of being at their legitimate business. The time has been when such an interference with elections would have met with little favor from the head of the government, if it did not entail a severe reprimand—perhaps dismissal. If the Democratic party is to be handed over body and breeches to "the Post Office clique," be it so; it is an affair that concerns them, and to them will be the advantage of having their work cut out for them, without the trouble of more than a little ceremony.

It must be refreshing, too, to the Democracy to know that Hon. S. S. Cox, who is one of "Miller clique," was there also the whole day, engaged in the same business—a very interesting occupation for an M. C., who is serving his last term, and for which he was paid in an endorsement as part of the Democratic platform.

To the management of these officious gentlemen Judge Thurman was excluded from the position of a delegate, and Esq. Slyh was cheated after being as good as assured that he would be selected. They had the cards stocked, as they will always have, unless the people take steps to check them, or the constant and successive defeats of their nominees shall render their efforts unavailing.

"State Auditor.—A correspondent of the Cleveland National Democrat of this morning proposes General W. S. V. Prentiss "as a man of experience, ability, energy and integrity to fill the responsible office of State Auditor," and adds that "General P. is a native Buckeye, and is among the most promising young men of Ohio in the ranks of the Democratic party. The State cannot make a better selection."

The editor of the Democrat has this endorsement:

We cheerfully underwrite all that our correspondent says in regard to General Prentiss. His nomination is one eminently fit to be made.

Sunday Excursions.

To those who dwell in palaces, and have the comforts of proper ventilation, can go and come when they please, ride, walk, sit or stand as they list, the luxury of a little fresh air is an everyday matter, and becomes blase. But to those cribbed and confined, in workshops by day and crowded tenements at night, where may be a whole family are huddled into one small room—breathing a sulphury atmosphere by day and one fouled with impure and commingled breaths at night, it is indeed a most vivifying luxury to breathe the pure air of heaven once a week.

It has been aptly said that one half the world does not know how the other half lives; and there are many who do not know, themselves, how they live. They work and eat and sleep—dragging on a miserable existence, sometimes seeing a helpless family springing up only to wither and droop and perish in the miserable hole which they inhabit. They never breathe the free, healthy air, which is to invigorate and give health and strength and heart to their labor. Toil is the only companion they know, and, when the day of rest comes they know no rest. The home is perhaps a dingy room, ill-furnished, smoky, with ragged and dirty children squalling on the floor, and the hard-tasked mother preparing the frugal meal, or going through the hebdomadal ablutions—these give no rest to the laborer. He saunters out upon the streets, meets some neighbor or fellow-workman, and they adjourn to the dramshop. There over villainous "fluid" they drown the miseries of life, only to debilitate their frames and render them unfit for the task to be recommenced on the morrow.

This is no fancy sketch. It is of actual occurrence every day, in the large cities, in which the poorer class suffer, especially the women who do all the drudgery of home, from the foul and pestilential atmosphere they are compelled from day to day, and night to night to breathe.

When railroads were invented, we thought there would be Sunday excursions out of the large cities, which would afford the laborer an opportunity to breathe. It is the only day of the week that the carrier can call his own, and can go with his wife and little ones out of the heated, brick-walled city and give them a breath of heaven. But, it seems the iron-horse also wants rest; and it would hurt the nerves of those who seated on velvet cushions, learn the fashionable path to Heaven, to hear him snort on a day that must be devoted to church worship!

O, is it not glorious to go out beneath the blue sky, beneath the umbrageous boughs of some wide-spreading tree, to feel the cooling breeze as it floats along laden with perfume, and soft and balmy with the fragrance of flowers, to listen to the thousand echoes of the woods—the hum of insects, the songs of birds—to see the children skipping like lambkins over the green sward, to hear their innocent prattle, to behold their cheeks ruddy with the hues of health, to see everywhere around evidences of the greatness and goodness of God—these are the monitors that make their way to the heart, and teach it to bow in meekness and thankfulness to Him from whom all blessings flow.

How easy to have an excursion train leaving a city at the matin hour when the sun first wheels above the horizon to begin his diurnal march, and to return again before the shades of evening bring dew to the flower? Make Sunday a day of recreation in the summer time, and it would give additional wealth to the rest of the week; for it would inspire the toiling million with health and heart that would soon tell in their daily task.

We throw out these suggestions, because, may be, even here at Columbus, where the mechanics and laborers are better provided than in larger cities, and not so crowded in their lodging places, something of the kind might be inaugurated. We shall hail the day when it does take place, as putting the railroad to one of its most useful purposes.

White Sulphur Springs.

Since the last watering season, this splendid summer resort has had numerous additions and embellishments, which will render it still more attractive during the present season. It is said that the liberal proprietor, Mr. Wilson, has expended $30,000 in adding to the comforts and the conveniences of the place. As a summer resort it is unquestionably at the head of all western establishments, and those in search of recreation, of pure, country air, of elegant leisure, of health-inspiring waters, and the most sumptuous accommodations, need go no further than the White Sulphur, which is a short and pleasant buggy ride from Columbus, and only a half-hour's rail-road trip, to the station. A great business will be done this season.

On the fourth page of this paper, among the miscellaneous articles, there will be found a much more full and complete notice of the place from the Cincinnati Gazette, than we are able to give, not having been able, last season, to avail ourself of the complimentary invitation to pass a few days at the Springs, but which pleasure we intend to enjoy this summer. From our numerous friends who have partaken of Mr. Wilson's hospitalities, we have had the most glowing accounts, as well as the multifarious and uncommonly romantic beauties of the place, the liberality displayed in every thing, and the exceeding care and attention of the management to the comfort, convenience and enjoyment of visitors and guests.

Columbus Plow Works of John L. Gill & Son.—It has been a pleasure and a satisfaction to notice the many and striking improvements in agricultural implements, which have been made from time to time, by the long and well established firm of Messrs. John L. Gill & Son of this city. There is no useful invention which promises to be advantageous in agriculture, but receives their early attention, and the superiority of their manufacture is attested throughout the west. Their catalogue for 1859 may be had by addressing or calling upon them, and embraces the different kinds of plows manufactured by them, with full descriptions and illustrations. We notice at their establishment within a short time, a most useful invention—the clod-crusher—which seems to us should be in the hands of every farmer who would put his grounds in complete order. The long experience of Messrs. Gill & Son, and close observation enable them to select no implement for manufacture that is not of the most useful and valuable character.

German Saengerbund Festival.—The first German Saengerbund Festival, composed of the German Glee clubs of the North Western States, will be held at Cleveland next month. The festival will commence on Tuesday, the 14th of June, and continue four days. Three hundred singers are expected to be in attendance. On the evening of the first day will be performed, at the Cleveland Theater, Flotow's romantic opera, Alessandro Stradella, by the Cleveland Gesang Verein. On the evening of the second day a grand tableau, "A Night on the Sea." The chorus to consist of 300 singers, assisted by a powerful orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Abel. In the afternoon of the third day a prize concert, the victorious society winning a silver goblet worth $50. In the evening a banquet. This grand musical festival will close on Friday, the fourth day, with a procession, pic-nic, and a ball in the evening at the National Hotel.

Shocking Casualty.—In the Columbus Machine Shop this afternoon, a young man named Geo. Smith, had a leg broken and torn in a horrible manner by its being caught in the machinery. Smith, who is a man of family, was immediately taken to his residence on Third street, near South Public Lane, and medical aid called.

Democratic Convention to Appoint Delegates.—Elias Gaver and Henry Wilson were nominated for Chairman, and Wilson declining, the former was unanimously elected and took the chair. Geo. Wilson was nominated Sec'y and Jno. W. Thompson Assist.

On motion of Esq. Slyh, the Secretaries were instructed to call the wards and townships that delegates might present credentials.

On motion of T. Arnold to appoint a committee of three on credentials, Esq. Slyh gained the floor and spoke against the motion, as he did not believe there were men in the Democratic ranks who would present a credential when they had no right to.

Mr. Arnold knew there were men on the floor who had fought the Democratic party and he would never recognize them as Democrats.

Esq. Slyh again attempted to speak but was called to order.

The motion was reconsidered.

Pleasant and Plain townships were not represented.

On motion the chair appointed Messrs. Dr. Durant, Jacob Slyh and Thos. Sparrow a Committee on Credentials.

Mr. Slyh then proposed that the Convention proceed to district the county into five districts, of which Montgomery township and the City of Columbus should form one, being entitled to five delegates, the remainder of the county being divided into four districts of one delegate each. This motion was laid on the table, the Committee on Credentials retired and calls being made for Mr. Cox that gentleman ascended the chairman's stand and addressed the Convention.

Mr. Cox referred to the economy of the Democrats in Congress, in reducing government expenditures to some $51,000,000 which the revenue system was fully equal to discharge. What he had predicted of Kansas matters had been fully verified, under the operation of the enabling act and English conference bill. He alluded to the recent scenes which occurred in the northern part of the State, where the U. S. officers were resisted in the execution of process under the Fugitive Slave Law. He drew a contrast between the remarkable fondness and regard for the negroe's rights, and the law recently passed by the Republicans of Massachusetts, requiring two years' residence from foreigners, (unless they are black) subsequent to the naturalization. He briefly alluded to the law passed by the late Democratic Legislature of Ohio, excluding negroes from the privilege of voting; and concluded by appealing to Democrats to stand true and firm by the Star-Spangled Banner and the Union.

Mr. Durant, on the part of the Committee on Credentials, made a report of the Delegates properly authenticated to represent the Democrats of Franklin county in the Convention.

Mr. Durant said that the credentials of the delegation from Jefferson township were informal, having neither the certificate of Judge nor Clerk; and he suggested that the delegates should make explanation. The delegates having explained that it was the wish of the citizens that they should represent the township, on motion, they were received as the delegates from Jefferson.

Mr. Slyh proposed to district the county into four parts, so as to equalize the representation.

Mr. Rice moved to amend by going at once into an election of delegates.

Mr. Arnold moved that the motion be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Edwards moved to take a recess until half past one o'clock.

Mr. Arnold opposed the motion to take a recess.

The motion to take a recess was lost.

The motion to district the county was lost.

A motion to go into the election prevailed.

Mr. Durant moved that a Committee of three on Resolutions be appointed.—Carried. The chair appointed Dr. Durant, Mr. Fleser and J. J. Funston.

Mr. Arnold moved that in voting for delegates the nine receiving the highest vote be considered delegates.

On motion, two tellers, Mr. Arnold and Mr. Rice, were appointed.

Mr. Marshall moved to amend by electing delegates separately. Affirmative 26, negative 28. So the motion was lost.

Mr. Arnold's motion to elect the nine highest was lost. Affirmative 24, negative 27.

Mr. King moved to elect delegates separately.—Carried.

On motion the Convention took a recess till half past one, P. M.

AFTERNOON.

Mr. Durant urged that the rule to elect separately be rescinded. Lost.

Mr. Dunn moved that a majority of all votes be necessary to an election.

Mr. King moved to amend by making the person having the highest number of votes the delegate. Carried.

I. O. Reamy, Geo. W. Manypenny, Isaac H. Morrow, John G. Edwards, [illegible]

1st Ballot, J. O. Reamy 39; Manypenny 16; S. G. Foster 11; Isaac H. Morrow 6, Jno. G. Edwards 5; A. G. Thurman 1; Alex. Moobery 1; J. Reinhard 1; P. P. Rice 1.

Mr. Reamy having the highest vote was declared elected.

2d Ballot, G. W. Manypenny 45; A. G. Thurman 20; S. G. Foster 3; J. H. Morrow 1; R. H. Thompson 1.

Mr. Manypenny having received the highest vote, was declared elected.

3d Ballot, J. Reinhard 46; A. G. Thurman 12; J. H. Morrow 12; R. H. Thompson 4.

Mr. Reinhard having received the highest vote, was declared elected.

4th Ballot, Alex. Moobery 67; P. P. Rice 19; John Gore 4; John Wright 1; S. G. Foster 1.

Mr. Moobery having received the highest vote, was declared elected.

Mr. Sparrow moved that the remaining five delegates be appointed by acclamation, and named Messrs. John G. Edwards, John Wright, Jonathan Bobo, John Gore and Jacob Slyh.

Mr. Durant opposed the motion, as unparliamentary, and was disposed to hold gentlemen to the rule.

Mr. Marshall said to reduce the proposition to order, he moved a division of the question.

The motion to suspend the rule was lost.

5th Ballot, J. G. Edwards 60; J. Gore 13; Moses Davis 1; W. Hunter 1.

Seventy-five votes having been given, two more than the proper number, on motion, Mr. Edwards having the highest number was declared elected a delegate.

6th Ballot, Dr. Bullen 61; Geo. Griswold 2; H. Wilson 2; Jacob Slyh 6; J. Bobo 1.

Mr. Bullen having received the highest number, was declared elected a delegate.

7th Ballot, John Wright 63; Jacob Slyh 10.

Mr. Wright having received the highest number of votes was declared a delegate.

8th Ballot, Jacob Slyh 22; Moses Davis 49; Jonathan Bobo.

Mr. Davis having received the highest vote was declared elected.

9th Ballot, Jonathan Bobo 54; Jacob Slyh 19.

Mr. Bobo having received the highest vote was declared elected.

Prior to the 7th ballot, Mr. Slyh being assured that he would have no opposition on the next ballot had his name withdrawn; but after the ballot, it was asserted that there was no such understanding, and a different candidate was nominated.

It had been determined to elect certain delegates, who were amiable to certain political managers, and with the exception of the first (Mr. Reamy) it was carried out, in the selection of the "cut and dried ticket, every one having his cue."

When the delegation was full Mr. Durant reported a few brief resolutions, approving the law to prevent negro voting, the sub-treasury law, the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty, of territorial expansion, the acquisition of Cuba, Hon. S. S. Cox, carrying out of the fugitive slave law, and condemning the attempts to resist the U. S. officers, and the Massachusetts amendment—all as part of the Democratic creed.

Which resolutions were adopted in a lump, and the convention adjourned.

The Seat of War—Relative Position of the Belligerents.

In the obscurity which clouds all intelligence from the seat of war, we can hardly do better than furnish our readers with some preliminary knowledge of the extent and features of the scene, proceeding which will be all the more acceptable as it admits of being made both simple and precise.—Whether the war can, indeed, be confined to those territories, is a very different question; but as long as it is limited by the boundaries now assigned to it there can be no reason why the exact import of every telegram should not be immediately comprehended.

We find the following succinct and comprehensive description of the position in the London Times:

The Kingdom of Sardinia, composed of Piedmont—its principal mass—in the centre, the ancient province of Savoy in the northwest, and the maritime territory of Genoa in the southeast, is not above one hundred miles in breadth from its western to its eastern frontier. On the former of these frontiers it is conterminous along its entire length with France, its ally, but on the latter it is only partly conterminous with Austria, its enemy. In the north a portion of the Swiss territory and in the south the Duchy of Parma, supply the border line, leaving only a central portion—perhaps about half of the entire length, to be formed by the territories of Austrian Lombardy. The line in question, as everybody is now aware, is constituted by the river Ticino and by the Lago Maggiore, through which that river flows, as the Rhone does through the Lake of Geneva. On the French side the border is formed by the Alps, so that the seat of war may be regarded in a general aspect as a broad piece of territory between a chain of mountains and a river. The French had to cross the mountains, the Austrians, the stream, the distance between them, as we have said, was about 100 miles.

The features of Piedmont itself, however, deserve particular attention, as they are regulating the present distribution of the contending armies. Piedmont is traversed in its breadth by the windings of the river Po, and the division of the country thus affected corresponds very nearly with the division of the eastern frontier between Lombardy and Parma, so that to the south of the stream Piedmont borders on Parma, and to its north only on the hostile territory of Lombardy. These two divisions of the Sardinian Kingdom differ totally in their natural characters. To the north of the river—the district immediately exposed to the Austrians—all is a level plain up to the foot of the Swiss Alps, whereas on the southern side all is mountainous, and the whole space filled with the shoots or spurs of the Ligurian Apennines sloping away from Genoa. In this division of the kingdom lie the strong places of the Sardinians—Alessandria, Cassale and Tortona, and on its western edge stands Turin itself, the capital of the State. Within or around these fortresses the Sardinians have collected the bulk of their army, perhaps some 75,000 men, leaving the plains of the North comparatively open to the incursions of the enemy.

Before the actual commencement of hostilities the Austrians at Milan stood just about as far from the river as the French at Briancon did from the mountains; and a line drawn from one of these points to the other would pass through the common mark of both armies—the Royal city of Turin. Turin, however, is about as far again from Buffalora, where the Austrians crossed the river, as it is from Susa, where the French halt on crossing the Alps, the distance being about seventy miles in the former case against thirty-three in the latter. But this inequality was more than compensated by the relative difficulties of the two roads, for, whereas the Austrians have a plain country to traverse, the French can only reach Susa by passing the Alps. In reality, the advantage of ground so far, was on the side of the Austrians, but their operations have been influenced by further considerations, arising from the position of the Sardinian army before described. The French, as they descend upon Susa and push forward to Turin, are directly confronting the Austrians on their march towards the same point from Milan, and if this was all, and there were no Sardinians except in the capital, the shock of battle could be anticipated with great facility. Sooner or later—in fact, very soon indeed—the belligerents would meet, and an engagement on a large scale ensue. It will be observed, however, from what we have said, that the Austrians, in their advance across Piedmont from east to west, would have on their left flank the whole concentrated strength of the Sardinian army, resting on its finest fortresses. What the chain of the Tyrol, indeed, is to Austria in the plains of Lombardy, the chain of the Ligurian Apenines is to Sardinia in the plains of Piedmont, and the parallel can be carried still further, for exactly as Germany lies in reserve behind the Tyrol, so does a second French force gather in strength behind the Apenines. On the seaboard of these mountains stands Genoa, which, as France commands the sea, can be reached from Toulon with the greatest facility. The Sardinians, therefore, while they cluster in force about their citadels to the south of the Po, have in their rear the support of a powerful French army within fifty miles distance.

The Austrians are thus opposed by two bodies of the enemy—one directly facing them at Turin, and drawing daily reinforcements from the passes of the Alps, and another at Casale and Alessandria, flanking their march and receiving succors from a distinct base of operations at Genoa. By crossing their frontiers at its northern extremity, as they have done, they might occupy the northern districts of Sardinia, or, if they descended thence upon the Po, they might get the Sardinian army in front of them, but they would then have the army of the Alps upon their right. They must, in short, advance in any case against two lines of foes posted at right angles to each other; and, for simplicity's sake, we may consider these lines to be represented by the river Dora Baltea, running from north to south by Ivrea, and the Po, running from west to east by Casale—Turin being pretty nearly at the angle.

All the places named, be it understood, lie within a comparatively small compass. From Arona, the point occupied by the Austrians, in the north, to Genoa, on the seaboard of the south, the distance is about 110 miles, or very nearly the same as from Susa to Buffalora. From Genoa to Alessandria it is only forty-six miles, and from Alessandria to Turin less than sixty. From Susa to Turin, again, the distance is but thirty-three miles; so that in their two principal positions of Turin and Alessandria the Sardinians are, in the one case, within forty, and in the other within fifty miles, of their powerful allies. The Austrians, too, would be equally near their resources. Novara is about five miles, Mortara about ten miles, and Vercelli but some twenty miles, from the Lombardy frontier; and these are the points at which the first collision may be anticipated. The great feature, however, of the campaign, as far as it can be comprehended at present, is the double base of operations from which the Sardinians and their allies are proceeding; and if the Austrians find themselves in strength sufficient for such a plan, it is not improbable that they also may divide their forces, so that the troops now said to be at Mortara may advance towards the South, and those at Novara towards the West. It will not have escaped notice that the Austrians are said to be particularly strong at Mortara, while the Imperial Guard, the select corps of the French army, is at Genoa. These dispositions would seem to indicate that the hardest struggle is expected on the line to Genoa rather than on the line to Turin, but this is a point on which we can hardly remain long in the dark. In the interval we can only be too sure that war, in so narrow a field, and between armies so powerful and so fiercely animated, will lose none of those horrors from which civilization revolts in despair.

The Duration of the War.—The Emperor of France seems to think that the pending war is to be a short affair. We see it stated in a letter from the Paris correspondent of the New York Times, that at a dinner given to the superior officers of the Imperial Guard by the Emperor before their departure, his Majesty said to them on bidding them adieu: "We are going to have a summer's work of it, but I hope we shall be able to hunt together at Compeigne in September." His Majesty limits the war to four months. It is said he never appeared so gay and joyous as at present. His Majesty may find it a more of job than he anticipates. He evidently snuffs burning powder with a gusto, and may have enough of it before the war is over. He gives evidence that the blood of the Old Napoleon courses in his veins and prompts him to action. His personal interference with the dangers and duties of fighting will give an important interest to the campaign.

☞ Mrs. Edward Frese committed suicide at Middletown, Conn., on Sunday, by cutting her throat from ear to ear with a razor. She had been dejected and melancholy for some time, and is supposed to have been deranged.

Opinions of "The Press."

People's Press.—We have received from Columbus a new paper bearing the above title, and edited by J. Birney Marshall, at $2, per year in advance. It is a large paper and neatly printed. It professes to be devoted to the advocacy of Stephen A. Douglas for the Presidency, and at the same time abuses some of Mr. D.'s warmest friends.

We have our doubts whether such a paper as the Press will be of any real advantage to the Democracy of Ohio. The number before us indicates that one real object of the paper is to try to keep up a warfare with the publishers of the Statesman. This would not only be useless but foolish. The Statesman under its present management, is doing good service for the Democracy of Ohio; and we know that one Democratic paper is as much as can be well supported at Columbus; and that support we prefer to see given to the old Democratic organ, the Ohio Statesman, as long as it remains true to Democratic principles. It is time enough for a year yet to advocate the claims of gentlemen to the Presidency. Then we shall have the nominee of the Charleston Convention, and he ought to be the person that every Democrat should labor for. Advocating the claims of any one person for the Presidency in advance of the Convention only injures the party. We desire to see the Democracy of Ohio united during the coming campaign; but if prominent Democrats are to be abused and berated, then there will be no harmony in our party. And for the sake of this harmony in the party, is why we have our fears whether the Press will be of any real benefit to the Democracy of Ohio.—[Cadiz Sentinel.

The People's Press.—The above is the title of a large and neatly printed paper, just started at Columbus by J. Birney Marshall, Esq. Mr. Marshall has won for himself considerable reputation in the editorial fraternity, and is capable of making a good paper. The "People's Press" professes to be Democratic, but some of the articles which appear in its columns lead us to suppose that its real mission is the gratification of some petty animosity, as otherwise which it would not hesitate to sow the seeds of dissention in the ranks of the Democratic party. And moreover, we think it highly impolitic to attempt to build up a paper on the Douglas issue; those differences were from the first of but minor importance, and now they are entirely obsolete with the people—all are willing to forget them, and work together in harmony, as in days of yore. The "Press" may preach harmony, but its course, we think, is not at all calculated to bring it about. We may be mistaken in our convictions, but time will tell.—[Hillsborough Gazette.

The People's Press.—Such is the title of a new Democratic paper published at Columbus, Ohio, the initial number of which is before us. It is edited by J. Birney Marshall Esq., a Kentuckian, who has an extended reputation as a journalist. The Press advocates Mr. Douglas' peculiar views of the territorial question, and its editorials display marked ability. It is of the size and of the neatest typographical appearance. We welcome it very cordially to our exchange list.—Frankfort, Ky., Yeoman.

The People's Press.—We received the first number of a paper bearing the above title, and printed in Columbus. The editor, J. Birney Marshall, Esq., was formerly editor of the Statesman, and is a writer of fine ability. It is devoted to the interests of Douglas for President in 1860, and we like the editorials, but think it a very suspicious circumstance, to see so much copied from the "City Fact." It is a large, well filled weekly, and can be had for $2,00 per annum, with a discount of ten per cent. on clubs of ten; 15 per cent. on clubs of thirty, and 20 per cent. on clubs of fifty.—Hardin County Democrat.

The People's Press.—We are in receipt of the new Columbus weekly paper, bearing the above title. It is a large and handsomely got up sheet, leaving nothing to be desired in the way of mechanical appearance, and under the vigorous and able editorial guidance of J. Birney Marshall, Esq., will be sure to command a liberal and we trust remunerative support. In politics it is strongly for the Democratic doctrines as expounded and successfully maintained by the "Little Giant" of Illinois. We wish Mr. Marshall every success in his enterprise.—Toledo Herald.

The People's Press.—We have received the first number of a very neat and spirited paper, bearing the above title, published at Columbus, Ohio, and edited by J. Birney Marshall. It is Democratic in politics.—Alliance Democrat.

The People's Press.—This is the title of a new weekly paper published at Columbus, Ohio, by J. B. Marshall, Esq., formerly editor of the Statesman and latterly associate editor of the City Fact. The first No. of the Press presents a handsome appearance, and its editorials are able and well calculated to aid its favorite, Senator Douglas, in obtaining the nomination of the Charleston Convention. We trust the Press will be a paying concern.—McArthur Democrat.

The People's Press.—Mr. J. B. Marshall has retired from editorial connection with the Columbus Fact, and will devote his energies and attention to the management of "The People's Press," a large and good looking weekly he has established as a Douglas organ at the Capital.—Cleveland Leader.

The People's Press.—This is the name of a new paper just started at Columbus, under the management of J. Birney Marshall. It is a Douglas paper, and takes the Cincinnati platform as its creed; the same creed that Buchanan papers profess. The Press is well conducted and well edited—at least in this its initial number—but we fancy time will show in Columbus and in Cleveland that the newspaper business is a little overdone.—[Cleveland Herald.

The People's Press.—Mr. J. Birney Marshall's new weekly paper has made its appearance, hailing from Columbus. It plants itself on the Cincinnati platform and gives the "Little giant" a hearty support. The Press presents a fine appearance and is vigorously and industriously edited.—[Springfield News and Journal.

☞ We have received the first number of the "People's Press," a weekly paper published at Columbus, Ohio, by James Birney Marshall, formerly connected with the press of that city. Mr. Marshall is an agreeable, versatile, and able writer, and, aside from his Douglasism, we wish his great success in his new enterprise.—[Louisville Courier.

☞ J. Birney Marshall, of Columbus, has issued the first No. of the People's Press, a handsome weekly sheet, devoted to the cause of Senator Douglas. Mr Marshall is a sprightly writer, and will make an interesting paper.—[Dayton Journal.

The People's Press.—J. Birney Marshall has issued the first number of his People's Press at Columbus. It is a beautiful sheet, and well filled with interesting matter. Its object is to aid in the elevation of Mr Douglas to the Presidency, and is called a Democratic paper. This we think is a misnomer, for no paper wedded to the fortunes of a single man can truly be called a Democratic paper, for such always make principles subservient to men, whereas the reverse of this doctrine is the correct one.—[Clev. Nat. Democrat.

The People's Press.—We have received the first number of the above named paper edited and published weekly in Columbus, by J. Birney Marshall. It is a large elegant looking paper, filled with choice political and miscellaneous matter, and earnestly supports the nomination of Hon. Stephen A. Douglas for the next Presidency. Long may it wave.—[Madison National Democrat.

The People's Press.—We have received the first number of the People's Press, published at Columbus, with J. Birney Marshall, late official Reporter of the Ohio Senate, at its head, as proprietor. It is a large sheet and neatly printed. Mr. Marshall's experience as a publisher, together with his well known ability, is sufficient guarantee that the Press will be an able accession to the Ohio press.—[Lancaster Eagle.

The first number of the People's Press, a paper just started at Columbus, Ohio, has been received. It is published weekly by J. Birney Marshall, and advocates the nomination of Stephen A. Douglas for President. It is a large and handsome sheet, and is conducted with great ability.—[Chicago Times.

☞ The first number of "The People's Press," a new paper, with Douglas proclivities, published at Columbus, Ohio, has been received.—The "Press" makes a neat appearance. It is open and decided for S. A. Douglas as the nominee of the Charleston Convention in 1860. Such as want a Democratic paper of the Douglas politics are advised to send for the "People's Press."—[Clermont Courier.

People's Press.—This is the title of a new Democratic paper started at Columbus, J. Birney Marshall, editor. The Press is a strong advocate of Douglas for President in 1860.—Mr. Marshall is a forcible writer and should have good success, which we certainly wish him in his new enterprise.—[Marietta Rep.

☞ We have received the first number of the "People's Press," published at Columbus, Ohio, by J. Birney Marshall. It advocates the claims of Stephen A. Douglas for the next Presidency. It is a very neatly gotten-up paper, and the marks of Mr. Marshall as a good writer are plainly visible.—[Washington Reg.

People's Press.—We have received the first number of the Press, published at Columbus, Ohio, by J. Birney Marshall. It is Democratic in politics and will do service in the coming campaign. Mr Marshall is a man of fine talents and a sprightly writer, and a Douglas Popular Sovereignty Democrat. We wish Brother Marshall success.—[Adams Co. Democrat.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1859.

The Habeas Corpus Argument.

In the Supreme Court, to-day, the argument in the case of Bushnell and Langston was commenced by A. G. Riddle, Esq., who contended that the Constitution conferred no power to legislate for the purpose of sustaining slavery and the object of the Fugitive Slave Law was to sustain slavery. Slavery is not a national institution, and does not fall within the powers of the General Government. It is a State institution, and exists by express municipal enactment or legislation of some kind. All presumption is adverse to slavery. If it be not an express grant, it is not implied. If the presumption is against slavery, it is against the law by which it exists.

He argued that Congressional power was not co-extensive with the Judicial. Fugitives from labor it enjoined on the States alone, and not on Congress to restore. He did not stand there to argue that it was the duty of Ohio to return persons escaped from slavery. If there were no express, there were no implied grant of legislative power on this subject. Congress had not the power to enact this particular law, which subjects the escaped slave to the management of the master. It cannot confer the power to seize. The presumption is that the person is free. As soon as the slave steps over the boundary of the north west territory, out of which Ohio was formed, his shackles fall, and he stands next to his freedom. The person is protected by "due process of law," and may not be seized by owner or attorney.

He contended that the Constitution had no power to grant, could confer no power to legislate upon Congress, and could not grant to Congress to exercise the powers it has assumed. As no crime had been charged in the record, the court had no jurisdiction. If when reviewed, the record showed no crime, the prisoners were entitled to enlargement.

Mr. Riddle addressed the Court for two hours and a-half, during which he sought to establish that the Constitution did not, and had no power to confer upon Congress the right to legislate upon the subject—that the articles in the Constitution, touching slavery, were mere compacts, and did not authorize legislation—that as soon as a slave crossed into Ohio he was free, and that his status was that of freedom, not slavery.

Having no facilities for reporting, and placed behind the Speaker, we heard but indistinctly. It seemed a good argument, and very consistent with our pre conceived notions of the Constitution. As he understands it, the argument is not of much force. The Court adjourned till half past 2 P. M.

No argument was submitted by the counsel for the United States, Messrs. Belden and Swayne, the latter stating that the Court was in possession of the points.

Mr. Wolcott, Attorney-General, commenced an ingenious argument for States' Rights and had not concluded when the Court adjourned.

"Occasional," the Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, says:

I am promised a very full and detailed account of the money which has been expended for the support of the Administration papers in Illinois and Ohio. Will it not be a novel sight to see a President of the United States before a Congressional Investigation Committee furnishing evidences of corruption and explaining the J. B. notes and letters?

When this investigation and exposition takes place, where will the Hon. S. S. Cox and Tom Miller be? Do these bottle-holders of Democracy think, that with all their adroitness they can forever keep their iniquitous bargain from the public eye?

"A fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind," and the love for "J. B." in that hour of trial and tribulation, when there will be a knocking of the knees and rattling of dry bones, will be greatly enhanced.

The Journal of this morning says: "It is currently reported in the city and throughout the State that Capt. Wray Thomas, of this place, will be a candidate before the Democratic convention to-morrow for Lieutenant Governor. If a Democrat is to be elected, we know no one more eminently fitted to fill the chair of President of the Senate with grace and true Old Virginia dignity than Capt. Wray Thomas."

We know that Mr Thomas does not desire any such distinction, but if he did, there has been no one named in connection with the office who would fill it with more dignity and impartiality. We had not heard the report, and set it down as a Journal canard, a species of amusement to which our neighbor is sometimes addicted.

An Editor Assaulted.—For some time past, the Toledo Times has reflected very severely upon the exorbitant charges of United States Express, and its management, especially upon O Cone, Assistant Superintendent. On Monday, Cone assaulted Mr. Nash, as the latter represents, "while on the way to dinner, at the Island House, with a hickory bludgeon." He continues:

"At first we felt like dealing him the measure of justice dealt his father on the race course of Sandusky, years ago, by the Kentuckian, who shot him dead, for such an ebullition of temper and spleen as was evinced by the son yesterday; but that feeling gave way to one of pity and contempt for the poor fool."

Nash is too good natured to entertain malice, and the result of the attack shows the evenness of his temper, and the command he had over his muscles. We rather think we should have given a small return for such a personal compliment.

☞ The President has not yet selected a Secretary in the place of Mr. J. Buchanan Henry, but it is supposed that the appointee will be another nephew.

☞ All the sufferers by the recent accident at Jordan, on the New York Central Railroad, are doing well. Their injuries are less severe than was feared at the first moment of excitement.

☞ The birthday of Queen Victoria was yesterday celebrated by the English residents of New York. The Cunard steamer Persia hauled into the stream for the purpose of the better displaying her flags and for firing the Royal salute on the occasion.

New York Loan.—The State corporation of New York advertises for a five per cent. loan of $300,000. Proposals are to be received till June 23d, in sums of not less than $5,000.

The $100,000 worth of New York & Erie certificates, reimbursable on the 1st Oct. next will be received in payment of bids for the loan.

Mexican Affairs.—The instructions to our Minister to Mexico contemplate the acquisition by the United States of a perpetual control over the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and the strengthening of the Golden purchase of the Rio Grande to the Gulf of California terminating at Guaymas, [also a mixed commission for the settlement of claims.]

The consideration has not been fixed, but a margin will be left for Judge McLean's decision under the consideration that the awards against Mexico shall be deducted.

The negotiations is to be opened with Senor Mata.

The Turf.—The trot on the Union, Long Course, N. Y., on Monday, between Pilot, Miller's Damsel, and Cora d'Estelle, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, for a purse stake of $450, was won by Pilot very easily in three straight heats. The last heat he [illegible] with the greatest apparent ease.—Time, 2:32½, 2:32½, 2:29½. Pilot is matched [illegible] Mr. Monnott's black gelding Native [illegible] for $2,000 aside, mile heats; the race off about the middle of June.

☞ Governor Corwin will be a delegate to the Republican State Convention from Lebanon, Warren county.

A Bonne Bouche for the Statesman.

Lest our generous and unselfish neighbors of the Statesman should overlook the following very acceptable paragraph (as well adapted as if written for their columns,) we take the first opportunity of presenting it to their notice:

James R. Marshall, a flippant, but very foolish writer, has commenced a paper at Columbus, to advocate the claims of Judge Douglas to the Presidency. The Democracy of Ohio will support the nominee of the Charleston Convention, and do not want presses devoted to the interests of any man. The Statesman is at present ably and judiciously conducted, and we see no occasion for another Democratic paper at Columbus.—Mansfield Banner.

Perhaps Mr. Harper did not see any "occasion for another Democratic paper at" Mt. Vernon, when the friends of Popular Sovereignty tired of seeing the "Banner" carry water on both shoulders, and fight shy of the prevailing issues established the "National?" "Lucky" was as mute as an oyster, until a large Republican Mass Meeting was held at Mt. Vernon, and he was persuaded to lean a little that way. The "flippant, but very foolish writer" will, doubtless, mend his pen and take more pains to entitle himself to a better opinion from this Leviathan, who flounders with such a swell among the little fishes. The manner in which the Statesman is conducted is a matter of taste, and the Banner has as much right to admire it, as the old woman had to kiss "Brindle."

Virginia Election.—The election in Virginia takes place on Thursday next, the 26th inst. As to the result, so strong is the Democratic party in that State, that the defeat of Letcher seems out of the question. He is, however, opposed with energy and effect by Goggin, who seems at least his match on the stump.

The following are the two tickets:

Governor—John Letcher, Democrat; Wm. L. Goggin, Opposition.

Lieut. Governor—R. L. Montague, Democrat; W. T. Willey, Opposition.

Attorney General—J. R. Tucker, Democrat; Walter Preston, Opposition.

Besides, State officers, members of Congress, and of the Legislature, are chosen at this election. The choice of Governor occurs but once in three years.

The Recent Attempt at Mail Robbery—Arrest.—A few days since we noticed a daring attempt to rob the mail and express train on the N. Y. & E. Railroad, bound west, with mail and express valuables amounting to $200,000, and the escape of the robber by jumping down an embankment into the river. On Thursday last a young man, who afterwards gave his name as Edwin Jackson, applied at the ticket office of Otisville station, about twelve miles from the scene of the late attempt, and asked for a ticket to New York, which he obtained, but the fellow presenting a black eye, and other suspicious marks of a recent "mill," the ticket agent notified the conductor to keep an eye on him, and also telegraphed to the Division Superintendent and police authorities at the other end of the route. The fellow fell asleep in the cars, and, his chin drooping, a severe gash on the inside of his mouth was visible, possibly another token of success from the hands of Mr. Keck, the mail agent, with whom the robber fought in the cars. At a station a few miles this side of Jersey City he wanted to leave the train, but the conductor detained him, and, upon the arrival at Jersey City, Thos. Clarke, Esq., special agent for the New York Post-Office, took him over to the city, where, before a United States Commissioner, he was held to bail in the sum of $2,500, to await an examination on Monday. Mr. Keck has been telegraphed at Cincinnati, and has passed on to New York.

☞ Application has been made to our government at Washington in behalf of Dr. King, who was recently convicted at Cobourg, Canada West, of poisoning his wife, and is now awaiting his execution. It is alleged on behalf of King that he was illegally arrested for this crime at Cape Vincent, within the United States, without any application having been made for his surrender under the existing treaty, and that he was forcibly carried back to Canada. It is probable that a demand will be made upon the British government for redress for this infraction of the treaty. Smaller matters are made ground for grave complaints on the part of the British Minister.

The Alleged Kidnappers at Home.—Deputy Marshal Lowe and Samuel Davis arrived at home yesterday after a brief sojourn in the vicinity of the jail at Elyria, looking as fat and saucy as ever. Messrs. Lowe and Davis, with Mitchell and Jennings, having on Thursday appeared before the court, entered a plea of not guilty, were held to bail in the sum of $500 each. Joseph L. Whiton of Amherst, O. T. Wadsworth, of Wellington, and Malachi Warren, of Oberlin, became their bail.

From Utah.—Private advices from Utah indicate further serious trouble in that Territory. The differences so long existing between the Executive and Judiciary are about to result in a collision between the United States troops under General Johnston, and the Mormon military under Gen. Wells, 5,000 of the latter having been called out by Governor Cumming to protect the citizens from what he deems the usurpation of authority on the part of Judges and military.

Dissatisfaction in Paris.—A correspondent writing from Paris intimates that the Emperor's delay in leaving for the seat of war was owing to the discovery of a combination among the disaffected Orleanists in the quartier St. Germain to make trouble during his absence.

Gen'l's Changarnier and Lamoriciere are said to be in the combination. The Emperor was aware of the scheme but made no arrests.

Venezuela.—A Caraccas correspondent states that on the 30th ult. the whole of the republic of Venezuela was in very great disorder owing to the factious divisions of the federalists, against the government. Maturin, Cumana and the interior of Barcelona were held by the former. Spiritualism was making great way there in opposition to the Catholic church.

Walker's Movements.—A Californian, who professes to know something of Walker's movements, [illegible] the telegraphic report, that he has reached Sonora with 300 men [illegible] his designs [illegible] with [illegible] of Gen. Alvarez in southern Mexico, and take part in the Mexican revolution.

☞ At Burlington, Vt., on Saturday night, John McKeen was called to his door by three rowdies named Peter McDonald, John Bayne and Thomas Kelly, when McDonald stabbed him to the heart. The murderer was arrested last night. McKeen was a native of [illegible]ville, N. H., highly respected, and thirty-five years old, and leaves a wife and two children.

The La Crosse (Wis.) Railroad.—Mr. Cleveland's injunction against the sale of the La Crosse Railroad, under the third mortgage, was dissolved by the Judge who granted it on the 18th inst. On Saturday the trustees sold the road, under the act of the Legislature of last winter, for seventy-five per cent. of the amount due, being over $1,500,000.

The Pope for Peace.—The Pope has addressed a circular letter to all the Catholic bishops, inviting them to order public prayers for peace. Cardinal Antonelli has delivered a diplomatic note to the governments of France and Austria, declaring the intention of the Pontifical government to maintain the strictest neutrality [illegible].

☞ Mr. Phillips, arrested at Washington, charged with forging the frank of Senator Douglas, is again at liberty, and is attending to his business. Senator Douglas has exonerated him from all blame, and so stated to the Grand Jury. How the legal point was settled is not stated.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

Monroe County.—The Central Democratic Committee held a meeting at Woodsfield on the 2d inst., at which Edward Archbold presided. It was resolved that the primary election for the purpose of nominating candidates for the several county officers be held on the last Saturday in August.

The following gentlemen were appointed delegates to the State Convention: W. T. Sinclair, Edward Archbold, Jere. Williams and Daniel Walton. The following named persons were appointed alternates: James R. Stout, M. Morrow, Wm. P. Richardson, J. S. Way and F. M. Sinclair.

The following resolution, reported by Jere. Williams and F. M. Sinclair, was unanimously agreed to:

Resolved, That the act of Assembly of this State, commonly called the Sub-Treasury Law, is a valuable statute, indispensable to the good government of the commonwealth, and essential to the welfare and prosperity of the people; and that its repeal would be a great public calamity.

We perceive by the Spirit of Democracy that Mr. Williams, the editor of that paper, one of the most genial and clever gentlemen in the last Legislature, declines a nomination for re-election. By the apportionment, Monroe loses one member this year. James R. Morris, Esq., the Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, in the last contest, a most estimable gentleman, is spoken of as a candidate for representative, and Dr. J. M. Stout is highly recommended for re-election in consideration of his attention and fidelity to the interests of his county, in the last Legislature. A writer in the Spirit, thus compliments, and very deservedly, too, the late representatives:

The writer has not heard a word of censure upon either of our worthy Representatives, but on the contrary, universal approbation and praise, and if either of them wishes a re-election, justice to that one and the best interests of the people would suggest his election, and inasmuch as Mr. Williams declines, the Democracy should unanimously nominate and elect Dr. Stout, whose election would be but a compliment for his manly, fearless and efficient labors in defense of the interests of the people of Monroe county.

Pickaway County.—The Democracy of Pickaway county, Ohio, held their convention at Circleville on the 8th inst., and appointed delegates to the State Convention. A series of resolutions was reported and unanimously adopted. After affirming the doctrine of the Cincinnati platform and President Buchanan's letter of acceptance, they add:

Resolved, That we look upon this plain and explicit language, as settling the whole question of slavery and removing it entirely from Congress, and leaving the people either in States or Territories to settle this and all domestic questions for themselves; and that we utterly repudiate the doctrine of congressional intervention to remove or protect slavery in the new Territories, whether it comes from the fanatics of the North or South.

Wood.—The murrain is said to be prevailing to some extent among the cattle in the vicinity of Perrysburg. Some very valuable stock has been lost by the disease.

Vinton.—The Democrats of Vinton will assemble at McArthur to-morrow, Saturday, 21st, to appoint delegates to the State Convention.

Delaware.—They hold no meeting or primary election, but as many Democrats are invited to attend the convention as can make it convenient, and to appoint three of their number to cast the vote of Delaware.

Richland.—Messrs. Brinkerhoff and Beatty have disposed of the Mansfield Herald to Messrs. Geo. T. and L. D. Myers, who will make no change in its political creed, and say:

"Believing that the interests of our country can be best promoted by the supremacy of the Republican party, and having been identified with it ever since its organization, it will be the labor we delight in to secure its success and permanence."

The Herald is one of the uncompromising sort, and is a devoted friend of the "called person."

Speaking of the crops the Herald says: The crops in this region never presented a finer appearance than now. The past two weeks of fine weather has brought forward vegetation with great rapidity, and there is every indication of a most abundant harvest. The fruit trees are also promising well, and, should this favorable weather continue, fruit of every kind will be more plenty than it has for several years past.

Morrow.—We are in the receipt of the first number of the Morrow County Democrat, by Wm. H. Rhoads, who promises to come out in a new dress, and make his paper worthy of a generous support by the Democracy of Morrow.

Knox.—The Mount Vernon National has been sold to Mr. J. F. Bright of Richmond, Va., who has not yet arrived to take possession, in consequence of which the publication is suspended, a week or more, until he shall arrive, Mr. Reed the late proprietor having made imperative engagements elsewhere.

The Democratic voters of the County were to assemble in Convention at the Court House, in Mt. Vernon, on the 21st day of May, 1859, to appoint Delegates to the Democratic State Convention, to be held in Columbus, on the 20th inst.; also to consult in regard to the propriety of celebrating the coming Fourth of July, as in old times, and to hear the report of the Investigating Committee on the [illegible] of the County.

Charity Lodge No. 153 of the Independent Order of Sons of Malta, of this city, will give their first Midnight Parade this (Friday) evening, May 20th.

On the 30th inst. Curtis Howe, Esq., of Granville, entered on his 86th year.—Mr. Howe is one of the old land-marks of the county, having emigrated there from Vt., in 1812. On the day named, his relatives held a festival at his house which is said to have been an interesting affair.

—The Cleveland Chess Club have given an invitation to Mr. Morphy to visit that city.

—Mr. Elijah Cowles, an old citizen of Cleveland, dropped out of his chair dead on Sunday evening last.

—Charity Lodge No. 153, of the Sons of Malta at Mt. Vernon, only organized a month, already numbers 74 members.

—A boatman named Gideon Hurd was accidentally shot dead on Friday at Texas, Henry county, by his captain who was handing him a gun which exploded.

—The Toledo Times reports that a fight took place in that city on Friday last between the landlord of the American hotel, and Judge Mason, in which the latter came off victor.

—Daniel Keefe beat his wife so brutally at Cleveland, on Friday, that the unfortunate woman died on Saturday. Keefe has been arrested.

—Messrs. [illegible] Hardy & Co., private bankers at Marion, have suspended payment, and placed their assets in the hands of G. H. Busby as trustee, for the benefit of creditors. The Republican thinks depositors will be paid in full.

—J. R. Young, of Geauga, Mitchell county, Iowa, has been victimizing the people of Geauga, Medina and Lorain counties, by trading, and giving deeds for lands in Iowa to which he had no title, and for which he received some $2,500 worth of property. The police are after him.

—An insane German escaped from a train while in full motion, on the Cleveland and Toledo Railroad on Thursday, at [illegible]. The bones of one knee were so shattered that his leg was amputated at Toledo. He had recently arrived from Germany, had since become insane, and was with a brother bound to Chicago.

—The Iron Valley Times, at Canal Dover, has changed owners. V. F. Wilson not having capital enough to stand the draw, has relinquished in favor of J. G. Fox who is not intimidated by the unsuccessful and brief career of his predecessor. Perhaps a year or two may satisfy his curiosity.

—On Saturday last, Robert L. Irwin, a resident of Youngstown, Mahoning county, and a brakesman on the Express Train of the C. & M. Railroad, was so fatally injured by coming in contact with a bridge this side of Solon, while standing on a freight car, that he died the same evening.

J. R. Stevens, a Virginia Democratic politician, has consented to run for office on the following conditions:

"I wish it distinctly understood, however, that I must be elected by spontaneous combustion, as I cannot condescend to electioneer. If any of the sovereigns wish to shake my hand they can do so by calling at Conrad's store and their children will be kissed when presented to me with clean faces."

It is said to be dangerous to be working with a sewing machine near a window when there is a thunder storm. It is also very dangerous to sit near some sewing machines when there is no thunder storm.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

St. Johns, N. F., May 19.—It is reported that the Sardinian Government has seized all the Austrian ships at Genoa.

The French troops are entering Piedmont in great numbers, and they will soon number 100,000.

Napoleon was to leave about the 12th to take command of the army.

It is whispered that martial law will be proclaimed in Paris.

The Emperor of Austria is preparing to take the field.

[illegible] failed for two millions.

Marshal Vaillant and Count Walewski are appointed members of the Privy Council. M. Bandon succeeds to the French Ministry. M. Rayer becomes President of the Senate. M. De Langle returns from Minister of the Interior to Minister of Justice. Duke [illegible] becomes Minister of the Interior.

Saturday—Noon.—Cotton quiet but steady. Provisions quiet; all qualities considerably advanced. Market closed quiet.

Liverpool.—Breadstuffs generally quiet at a slight decline. Richardson & Spence's circular reports the wheat market opened excited, being a large speculative inquiry. Prices advanced 9d, but market closed quiet; quotations nominal; red 9s@11s 3d; white 10s@11s 6d; Southern 10s 9d@13s 6d. Flour dull and offered at a decline of 6d. Corn dull and 3d@6d lower; yellow 7s 2d@7s 3d; white 8s 3d@8s 6d.

Liverpool Provision Market.—Buoyant, and at the opening advanced 10s@20s, but closed quiet. Pork also opened buoyant and advanced 5s@10s, but closed quiet. Lard firm at 60s@63s.

Liverpool Produce Market.—Sugar steady. Rosin firm. Spirits of Turpentine firm and slightly advanced. Linseed Oil is quoted at 31s to 33s. Corn dull at [illegible]. Coffee heavy and declining. Rice firm.

Liverpool Cotton Market, May 7.—Sales of cotton for the week, amount to 29,000 bales, including 12,000 bales to speculators, and 2,000 bales for export. The quotations are nominal, and have suffered a decline of ½d@⅝d in one week. Sales on yesterday, Friday, estimated at 4,000 bales. Market closing dull at following prices. Orleans fair 7¾; middlings 6⅞; Mobile fair 7; middling 6½; uplands fair 6¾. The stock in port amounts to 403,000 bales, including 314,500 bales American.

Manchester advices were unfavorable.

Havre Market, May 6.—Cotton declined 3f; Orleans tres ordinaire is quoted at 104f. Market very dull, and all quotations have declined; only 1,000 bales have been sold during the week.

Railway bonds declined considerably; but few sales have been made.

Bank rates have been advanced to 4½ per cent. and the demand is active. The bullion in the bank has decreased £436,000.

On the 7th intelligence was hourly expected of a serious battle between the contending forces, but nothing of importance had occurred up to that time. The Austrians had crossed the Po near Cambrio and advanced towards Sala, they had also made an unsuccessful effort to cross the same river near Trassenelto on the 3d of May. The Sardinian account of the latter effort says that the cannonading lasted 16 hours, it re-commenced at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the 4th, and was kept up during the remainder of the day. The Piedmontese troops had but few wounded while the Austrians suffered considerably.

The Austrians on the 3d commenced a cannonade from the direction of Valenzia, without much effect.

The official Bulletin issued at Turin on the 4th says, that the Austrians have increased their force at Vercelli, and constructed defensive works. They have also occupied Trino and Tabiatto, having their vanguard at Tronsano. They withdrew last night from Tortona and yesterday burned seven arches of the bridge of the Scrivia at Picecanza. The [illegible] of the houses erected on the fortification have also been ordered.

A Hamburg dispatch says that England has officially notified the government that she will not be able to protect commercial vessels in case of a war between Germany and France.

The London Globe's Paris correspondent says that Queen Victoria has sent an autograph letter to the Emperor Napoleon, expressing confidence in his strict honor and that he would not go a step farther than he assured her some months since.

The London News looks for the first great battle to occur at Novi.

The Turin correspondent of the London News asserts positively that France is about to mobilize between seven and eight hundred thousand men and that the French army on the Rhine will amount to 500,000. The same correspondent also asserts that on the day the Emperor leaves Paris for the army he will address a solemn manifesto to Europe, espousing the cause of Nationalities.

The Paris Moniteur states that Austrian vessels in French ports or those entering in ignorance of the war are to have a delay of six weeks. It also states that the Emperor has decided that Austrian subjects may continue to reside in France and the French colonies as long as their conduct furnishes no reason for complaint.

Steamers are being chartered at Havre to convey stores and troops to Genoa.

The Austrian ambassador before quitting Paris confided the protection of Austrian subjects to the Dutch ambassador.

It was reported that the French government was endeavoring to secure the neutrality of Prussia, and had promised on their side, not to form an army of observation on the Rhine, and that the war shall be confined to Italy.

The French subjects in Austria have placed themselves under the protection of the Spanish Minister.

An Austrian corps of observation will be posted near Cracow to watch the Russians who were gathering on the Austrian frontier.

The citizens of Milan had been ordered to deliver up all the arms in their possession.

General Wimper has been entrusted with the defense of the Trieste and the Illyrian coast.

The Russian consul at Venice had undertaken the protection of the Sardinian subjects in that country.

The King of Sardinia had issued a decree giving a forced currency to the notes of the National bank at Turin. The bank has moreover authorized the issue of additional notes to the amount of six millions of francs, and engages to lend the government 30,000,000 at 2 per cent. per annum.

Arnstein and Eskles is the name of the house which failed at Vienna. Money was so scarce at Vienna that the discount on first rate paper was 10@12 per cent.

THE LATEST.

Vienna, May 6.—The official bulletin of Gen. Giulay reports that on Wednesday we made a demonstration near Candia and Trassinetta. On our side we had twenty wounded. Near Cagnolo we have thrown a bridge over the Po river, and the troops have crossed and fortified the head of the bridge. Yesterday on our Railroad near Verona, a train filled with troops came in collision with the ammunition wagons, some of which exploded. 22 of the men were killed and 124 wounded.

Great Britain.—An election riot took place at Limerick, the military were called out and fired on the mob, killing two and wounding five.

At the Chester Cup races Leamington won, the American mare Prioress coming in fourth. Twenty-three horses ran.

Dr. Lardner is dead.

The Prince of Wales had embarked at Civita Vecchia on a British man-of-war for Gibraltar.

The Duke of Leeds, not Lewes, is dead.

It was said that Persigny will certainly be the French Ambassador to London.

It was reported in military circles that the Ministers of Great Britain intended to call out the whole militia, fifty new battalions to be added to the line.

Lord Cowley reached London on Friday, and had a protracted interview with Lord Malmesbury.

St. Johns, N. F., May 19.—The Archbishop of Vienna had issued a pastoral letter, attacking the armies of Piedmont, and the ambition of Napoleon.

A counter revolution by the troops had taken place in Parma in favor of the Ducal government, and the reigning Duchess had re-entered her territory.

Great activity prevailed in the English naval department. More vessels are placed in commission, and recruiting was active. At last advices the Austrians appeared to be retreating, but nothing was known as to the object of their manoeuvers.

Rome was tranquil. The French troops will not leave at present. 6,000 Austrians provisioned for six months had arrived at Ancona.

Sir Moses Montefiore has failed in his mission to the Pope respecting the boy Mortara.

A letter from Vienna, in the Times, says, European Turkey is on the eve of rising; great agitation in the southern provinces. The Porte has 120,000 troops concentrated at Shumla, and Omer Pasha was hastening from Bagdad. The writer thinks that the days of the Musselman in Europe are numbered.

St. Johns, May 20.—The Steamship City of Baltimore has been intercepted off Cape Race by the News Yacht of the Associated Press, and European advices to the 11th inst obtained. This is four days later than received by the Canada.

The papers furnish no political news of special importance.

The Cotton market closed on the 10th with a declining tendency, though there had been a slight improvement on the quotations by the Canada.

All qualities of Breadstuffs had considerably declined. Provisions closed quiet.

London, May 10.—Consols 91½@91¾.

The latest intelligence state that no battle had yet occurred.

The London press views the movements of the Austrian troops as inexplicable, except on the supposition that they are waiting for more favorable weather before commencing the actual plans for the campaign.

The Emperor Napoleon and the Prince had quitted Paris on their route to Genoa.

The steamer Europa arrived out on the 8th inst.

Liverpool, May 10th.—Sales of cotton for the past three days 27,000 bales, at an advance of 1-16@⅛d. Prices show a declining tendency at the close. Flour was very dull and prices were tending downwards. Corn was very dull and materially lower.

The Austrians are exhibiting much indecision in their movements, occupying and abandoning positions apparently without motive. There has been material change in the state of affairs in Italy since the sailing of the Canada.

A Vienna bulletin says that the Austrian troops are awaiting better weather before assuming offensive operations.

On the departure of Napoleon, Princess Eugenie was proclaimed Regent.

The Sardinian General Marmora has made the river Dora the strategical line. The Austrians are fortifying positions on the river Sesia.

The French General Canrobert directs the operations of the allies from Alessandria.

Much sickness prevails among the Austrians.

The Sardinians are preparing a magnificent reception for the Emperor Napoleon, on his arrival at Genoa. It is reported that Austria will soon have 750,000 men under arms. Austria had declared the Papal port on the Adriatic in a state of seige. The Pope had protested, and Austria has promised to reconsider.

Liverpool Breadstuffs Market.—Richardson, Spence & Co., report flour as very dull at 11s@14s 6d. Wheat dull and declined 6d@9d. Sales of Western red at 7s 6d@10s 6d; Western white 10s@11s; Corn dull and 6d lower; mixed at 6s 3d@6s 6d; yellow at 6s 6d@8s; white at 7s 9d@8s 4d.

London Markets.—Wheat has a declining tendency, all qualities are 2s lower. Sugar is dull and 6d lower.

St. Johns—Noon—May 21.—The City of Baltimore passed Cork on the 12th, she brings dispatches from London and Liverpool to Thursday noon.

Turin, May 11.—The Austrians are recrossing the river Sesia in haste.

THE LATEST BY TELEGRAPH FROM LONDON TO CORK.

London, Thursday.—The Daily News city article of last evening says the price of consols improved one-eighth to one-quarter per cent. over Tuesday. This favorable effect had been produced by checking the drain of gold to the Continent.

At Paris the subscription to the French loan of twenty millions already exceed forty millions, including a very large number for only ten francs of annual income. All parties connected with the government were expected to take part in the new national demonstration.

The Bank of Belgium had raised its rate of discount from three to four per cent.

Marseilles, Wednesday evening.—The Emperor arrived here at midday en route. He embarked on board the Hortense, where he received the city authorities and left in the afternoon.

It was said in Paris that the Emperor expects to be at Milan by the end of May or the beginning of June.

London, Thursday.—In the London Times it is said that the continued suspense between the hostile forces in Italy excites daily new conjectures. The condition of Turkey has also been a subject of comment.

At Mark Lane, yesterday, wheat met with a slow sale at a reduction of from six to eight shillings per quarter.

There was much buoyancy on the Paris Bourse, owing to the enthusiastic demonstration attending the Emperor's departure for Italy, being considered as a security for the maintainance of order at home.

A dispatch from Rome has been sent to the Pope's Nuncio to leave Florence.

The Austrian war brig Trifon has been accidentally blown up while the commander of the vessel was on shore. The number of deaths and missing is estimated at about eighty. Another report says that part of the crew were ashore when the explosion took place, and the number killed was only four.

Turin, May 11th—10 o'clock P. M.—On reaching Vercelli the Austrians ceased their retrograde movement. To-day they made an excursion towards Pomaro. Count Cavour leaves to-day to meet the Emperor Napoleon at Genoa.

Paris, May 12.—The Moniteur publishes the following telegraph:

Rome May, 10.—According to orders from Vienna the state of seige has been raised at Ancona and the light-house is again lit.

Vienna, May 10.—The Arch Duke is dead.

LATEST COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Liverpool, Wednesday P. M.—Wheat has an advancing tendency. French wheat has slightly advanced. The other markets are generally without change.

Liverpool, Thursday—Noon.—Cotton quiet, there is little inquiry and prices are slow, sales to-day are estimated at 5,000 bales. Richardson, Spence & Co. report Breadstuffs quiet with weaker prices than were obtained yesterday, quotations are however unchanged.

The Provision market is dull, the quotations for Produce are generally unchanged.

New York, May 21.—The arrival of the steamship Vanderbilt from Havre and Southampton furnishes files the 11th inst. Though not so late as those by the City of Baltimore, there are some items of interest.

The British steam frigate Curacoa with Lord Napier on board arrived at Plymouth from Annapolis on the 7th.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

Piedmont has laid an embargo on all Austrian vessels in Sardinian ports, but neutral property is to be respected.

A revolution is expected to occur at Ferno.

Lombardy.—The tricolor flag having been hoisted by the people before the castle the commander imposed a contribution of 300,000 francs on the town of Vercelli.

The subscription to the new French loan opened on the 7th, 500,000,000 francs are already subscribed.

The French Garrison at Rome is to be maintained entire.

Bavaria has raised a loan of four million francs at 5-12 per cent.

New York, May 21.—The London correspondent of the Commercial says, preparations are going on at every arsenal and dockyard throughout the country. Supplies of cannon are still being sent to Gibraltar and other important stations. The manning of the navy is also making progress. Every day furnishes new proofs of the fact of a secret agreement, menacing to England, having been concluded between France and Russia; the correspondent says no one ought to feel surprised if we wake up some morning to a coincidence that we may spare ourselves all further discussion on the neutrality question.

The Independance Belge contains a rumor that explanations have been asked of France by England, as to a phrase in the imperial manifesto, in anticipating the independence of Italy to the Adriatic, which implies the entire disregard of the treaties of 1815, and that the replies having appeared sufficient in London, a better understanding appeared between the two.

The Le Nord says the Cabinets of London and Berlin have resolved to maintain a strict neutrality.

The London Times says, it seems impossible that the Austrians can retire without fighting a battle, and it is equally impossible that the French can remain much longer without striking a blow at them.

The Grand Duke of Tuscany, who is a colonel in the Austrian dragoons, is about to take active service with his regiment.

A secret address from Garibaldi, Vice President of the National Society of Italy, is published. It instructs immediate insurrection, the vanquishing and disorganization of the Austrian army; the interception of its communications; the appointment of provisional governments under King Victor Emmanuel; the abolition of taxes on bread, and carry the levy of troops by conscription, and the enrollment of volunteers, &c.

Mr. Ten Broeck's mare, Prioress, had won the Queen's plate for mares, at Newmarket, beating a second Polestar twenty lengths. The £2,000 Queen's stake was won by "Promised Land," the favorite.

A Turin letter says there is every appearance of an approaching great battle on the ground of Marengo.

A Berne dispatch says, advices from the frontiers of Lombardy state that the inhabitants of Valtellare are making great purchases of arms and ammunition, and a revolution appears imminent. A French squadron is in the advance. A new Ministry has been formed in Florence.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

Indianapolis, May 19.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, convened in this city to-day. In the absence of Dr. Scott, of California, the last moderator, Dr. Rice, of Chicago, preached the opening sermon, and presided till a new moderator was chosen. 312 delegates are already present from every part of the country, and some missionaries from Asia and Africa, Rev. Mr. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, was elected Moderator. Rev. Mr. Mann, of New York, temporary Clerk.

Wilmington, Del., May 19.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, commenced its session in this city to-day. About 175 delegates were in attendance. Rev. Dr. Thompson, of Buffalo, delivered the opening sermon. The Rev. Dr. Patterson, of Chicago, was elected Moderator, and Rev. H. R. Wilson, of New York, temporary Chairman. The city of Pittsburgh was selected as the next place of meeting.

Zanesville, May 19.—A portion of the County Infirmary was destroyed by fire this afternoon. Loss $10,000. No insurance.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 20.—On motion of Mr. Harding, the Supreme Court awarded this morning a pre-emptory mandamus against the Commissioners of Allegheny county, in relation to the Steubenville bonds.

Louisville, May 20.—The two Democratic candidates for Congress in the sixth district, Rice (Independent) and Garrard (regular) had a difficulty at Booneville on Monday. Rice was badly shot twice, a man named Smith was killed. No further particulars.

New York, May 20.—At the tea sale to-day nearly all of the catalogue was sold at slightly easier prices. Some green were sold, but the prices for blacks were lower.

Washington, May 20.—Receipts into U. S. treasury for the week ending on Monday amounted to $1,261,000. The amount on hand subject to draft is $385,000.

The President has recognized Franz August Hersch as consul of the Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg Schwerin at Boston.

New Orleans, May 20.—The steamship Coatzacoalcos, of the Tehuantepec line, is below, from Minatitlan, with San Francisco dates to the 5th inst. The trip was made in fifteen days, being the shortest time on record.

The steamships Golden Gate and Orizaba left San Francisco on the 5th, with $2,400,000 in gold dust, the portion consigned to New York being $2,000,000.

The markets at San Francisco were dull and quotations unchanged.

The ship Reindeer, from China for Boston, has been wrecked one hundred miles north of Manilla. The ship and cargo were a total loss.

The steamer Coatzacoalcos left Minatitlan on the 17th inst. Advices had been received there of the defeat of Gen. Mejia by the Constitutionalists. Both of the contending parties in Mexico were inactive for want of the necessary funds.

Wilmington, May 20.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States reassembled this morning. The report of the Committee on Foreign Missions was read. It showed that the body is second in the proportionate number of the foreign missionaries, and the amount of its contributions, to but one of the large denominations in the country, viz: the Congregationalists. The O. S. Presbyterians stand next in the list. The document, which is lengthy, was heard with interest.

The Rev. John W. Dulles, of Philadelphia, read the report of the Publication Committee, which shows an unprecedented progress in sales and contributions, as well as in new issues. Rev. F. A. Miller read the report of Education, showing great progress. No final action was taken on these reports.

St. Louis, May 20, via Leavenworth.—The first Overland Express from Denver City arrived this morning, ten days out, with seven hundred dollars in shot and scale gold, and four passengers. Advices from Denver City to the 9th report a large force employed in building ditches along Cherry Creek. One tom, with a limited supply of water, yielded an ounce the first day. The accounts from the mountains are conflicting. There are still too much snow and ice to operate with advantage. The general aspect is favorable. Miners value the dust at $20 per ounce. The route is 625 miles, and it is said to possess superior facilities, which is evidenced by the quickness of the first trip.

Pittsburgh, May 20.—Jacobi and Evans, convicted of the murder of their wives, were hung at 2 o'clock P. M. The execution was strictly private. No military were present, and but few were admitted. The crowd outside was not large. Jacobi declined making a speech. Evans spoke half an hour, declaring his innocence. Both died hard.

Indianapolis, May 20.—The names and number of more commissioners were reported. The whole number now present is about 250. The Board of Foreign Missions made their 22d annual report. Rochester, New York, was selected as the next place of meeting. A memorial from the Churches of Philadelphia on the subject of Church extension was received and referred.

New York, May 21.—The steamship Vanderbilt, from Havre and Southampton, with dates to Wednesday, the 11th inst., is signalled below. Her dates are not so late as received by the City of Baltimore.

Lucius O'Brien, who bore a notorious reputation as a pickpocket and burglar, was assaulted last night in the vicinity of Front and French streets, by a gang of men, and so cruelly beaten that he died this morning. He was to have been tried in a few days on a charge of being implicated in a burglarious operation.

Wilmington, Del., May 21.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, N. S. held their third session to-day. Dr. Thurston delegate from the General Conference of Maine, was heard. The overture from the synod of the Free Presbyterian Church of Ohio was referred to Special Committee.

Dr. McLean read a report from the Church Erection fund, showing that the funds amount to nearly $68,000.

The whole number of churches aided by fund during the last year is 118, and these represented over $300,000 worth of property. The balance, subject to draft, was $67,000. The Board report adversely to the prayer of the Southern Synod, asking for a portion of the funds.

The Committee of Conference, with the American Home Missionary Society, report that the time has now come to secure the final adjustment of all difficulties or to separate from the Congregationalists. The reports were referred.

New York, May 23.—The steamship City of Baltimore, from Liverpool on the 12th inst., arrived at this port at 8 o'clock this morning. A summary of her advices were obtained off Cape Race, but the papers furnish the following additional intelligence:

The number of volunteers to the English Navy offered at Woolwich was 200 daily.

It was stated confidentially in the London Clubs, that immediately on the meeting of Parliament Lord Palmerston will move and Mr. Russell second a vote of censure on the ministers for having dissolved Parliament under the critical circumstances of the times.

The Moniteur Belge gives notice to those Belgian subjects who may attempt privateering or act contrary to the duties of neutrality, that they will be considered as pirates abroad and be liable to prosecution by the Belgian tribunals.

Mrs. Sheridan Muspratt, a sister of Charlotte Cushman, died at Liverpool on the 10th inst.

London, Thursday Noon.—Consols are now quoted at 91½@92¼.

St. Louis, May 21.—A private letter dated Pacific City, Iowa, states that a report just reached that place that a party of starving Pike's Peak emigrants attacked and captured two eastward-bound trains near O'Fallon's Bluffs. During the melee D. C. Oaks, conductor of the trains, was killed, and Mr. Griffith, newly appointed Postmaster of Auraria, en route to take charge of his office, was hung by the desperadoes.

New Mexican mails of the 3d reached Independence last night. The Overland Mails from Stockton for February and March, which arrived at Santa Fe on the 1st, were driven back while crossing the Colorado by the Mohave Indians.

A letter dated Fort Yuma, May 6th, informs the Republican that Col. Hoffman had concluded a treaty with the Mohave Indians.

New Orleans, Saturday, May 21.—Tehuantepec advices of the 14th, received by the Coatzacoalcos, state that the passengers by the steamship Oregon, which makes the connection between Ventosa and Acapulco, report that Gen. Walker and three hundred men were on board the Vanderbilt steamship Orizaba, which had arrived at Acapulco from San Francisco. Their intentions were unknown, but it was supposed they were bound to Southern Mexico.

Indianapolis, May 24.—The General Assembly adopted the report on foreign missions. The day was occupied in consideration of the report of the Committee on Domestic Missions.

New York, May 24.—A report prevailed on Wall street this afternoon that Messrs. Hargous & Brothers had suspended on acceptances for the Tehuantepec Company.

May 24.—Attorney General Black to-day decided the questions submitted to him by the State Department on the claims of Capt. B. W. Perkins against the Russian Government. The decision settles the right of Capt. Perkins to recover under his contract to furnish one hundred and fifty tons of powder and thirty-five thousand stand of arms. Some unimportant questions have not been fully disposed of, but the integrity of such contracts is fully maintained. The entire amount involved is about $365,000, which will probably be paid on the return of the Russian Minister, who is daily expected from Europe.

The Patent Office to-day re-issued to Horace H. Day, assignee of Tyler & Helm, a patent for an improvement in the manufacture of India Rubber goods, by means of zinc compounds.

Washington, May 25.—The opinion of Attorney-General Black on the point submitted by the Secretary of State in the Perkins case alluded to yesterday did not discuss the claim against the Russian government, but merely shows how the subject is affected by the law of this country. It is, under this that the parties interested and not the Attorney-General conceive that the integrity of the contracts will be fully maintained and all things considered the matter promptly adjusted. The sufficiency of the proof however must be left to the conscience of the Emperor.

Washington, May 24.—In the session of the General Assembly to-day, the presbytery of Kansas was recognized and connected with the Synod of Iowa. A deeply interesting debate arose in regard to Church members of good moral character, who neglect the communion table. It was decided by a large vote that no new action on the subject is expedient. The entire judicial business of the Assembly was disposed of. The special report made on the foreign mission, without proposing a dissolution of relations with the American board, concludes that the time has come for bringing the work in the foreign field in close connection with the denomination, and two and a half per cent. on the Church erection fund was voted to Kansas.

St. Louis, May 24.—From Leavenworth we learn that the charges preferred against Capt. Van Vliet, by some mule contractors in the Utah campaign, is generally regarded here in the light of a persecution. It is understood by affidavits from parties represented as having paid Van Vliet a bonus, have gone to Washington, and that they will effectually crush the case of his accusers, and that Van Vliet will demand a court of inquiry into his official conduct.

Dreadful Suffering of Pike's Peak Emigrants.

St. Louis, May 24.—The regular correspondent of the Democrat, writing from Denver City, on the ninth, recounts the most deplorable condition of things on the plains. The emigrants are dying of starvation. Others are subsisting on prickly pears, wild onions, found along the road. The stage agent reports picking up a man named Blue, reduced to a skeleton from starvation. He started with two brothers, one died, the remaining one ate his body. Another died, and he in turn was nearly devoured by the survivor.

A man named Gibbs reached the mines in a starving condition; he expressed the opinion that his party, numbering nine, had all perished. Many graves are reported along the route, much property has been destroyed and abandoned on the road.

The writer of the letter says the departures from the mines are about equal to the arrivals. About five hundred returning emigrants had reached St. Joseph, Saturday, all of whom confirmed the previous accounts of suffering and privation.

St. Louis, May 25.—Much bad feeling existed between the Americans and Mexicans along the line of Sonora. Several Mexicans had been killed. Walker had an agent at the [illegible] mines, enrolling volunteers for the filibuster expedition.

Passengers from San Francisco deny the published statement that Walker and 300 men had sailed in the steamer Orizaba for Acapulco.

The treaty between Col. Hoffman and the Mojave Indians was confirmed.

Honolulu, April 16.—King Kamehameha addressed a message to the Legislature advising a change in the Constitution.

The French had abandoned the Marquesas Islands for military purposes. The design is to establish a strong military naval depot at New Caledonia Island, near Sidney. The plan embraces the restoration of Pomare as ruler of the Society Islands.

Edinburgh Review, No. 225, April, 1859.—This standard Quarterly has been forwarded us by the American publishers, Leonard Scott & Co. The present number is of unusual interest. The first article, "Female Industry," gives a sketch of the labors and employments of Females in Great Britain, from the days of King Alfred, when the surplus women and girls of England were sold into slavery in Ireland, down to the present time, when under the factory and other systems of labor, they are still scarcely less than slaves.

"Barth's Discoveries in Africa" is elaborately reviewed, and the author pronounced, among the first, if not the very first of African travellers. "Dr. Trench on English Dictionaries" forms the subject of an article favoring the proposed publication of a new Dictionary by the London Philological Society, and criticising, with some severity, Noah Webster and other distinguished Lexicographers. "The West Indies as they were and are" gives a hopeful view of the British W. I. Islands.

The article on "Montenegro" gives a graphic account of that Mountain Country and its brave people who have so long withstood the attempts of the Turks to subjugate them. "Rifled Guns and Modern Tactics" shows the giant strides which have recently been made in the improvement of implements of war—the Minie rifle carrying a ball with the greatest accuracy more than a mile and with as much effect as the old musket at twenty yards, and Armstrong's rifled cannon carrying an 18lb. ball with no larger bore than an old "four-pounder," and with almost the accuracy of a rifle proper, to the incredible distance of more than five miles!

"Sir F. Palgrave's Normandy and England," "Major Hodson's Life" in India, and a very interesting article on the political relations of "Austria, France, and Italy," to which countries all eyes are now turned with the most intense anxiety, complete this very able number of the Review.

Republished by Leonard Scott & Co., 54 Gold Street, New York. Price, $3 a year, or $5 when taken with Blackwood's Magazine or any of the other British Quarterlies republished by the same House.

Worcester's Quarto Dictionary.—The following extracts from the Democratic Age relate to a work of eighteen hundred pages, beautifully stereotyped, and illustrated by twelve hundred finely executed engravings. The library edition, now being published for subscribers only, will be furnished at the same price that the common edition will cost.

"We are not disposed to depreciate the merits or high service rendered to his country, and to the literature of its language, by the late Noah Webster. His name is associated with our earliest recollection of books or letters. His work still lies at our right hand, whenever we write English; and none but the most pleasant reminiscences connected with his illustrious name will ever come back to us when that name occurs to our memory. But it is not to be supposed, nor did Webster himself so assume, that he had passed to the grand climateric of learning beyond which there was to be no progress. Webster's labors ceased about twenty years ago, and during that period we have had the full development of the daguerreotype, the electrotype, sailing, and ocean steam navigation. These are only fair indications that have marked the progress of the world during the last quarter of a century. The ramifications of progress have penetrated every continent and shot up every river, they have scaled every mountain top, and shook the dust from every library. We are therefore prepared to look into the future with the inspiration of better hopes and higher aspirations, and we, therefore, hail the advent of Worcester's great Lexicon of the English Language with enthusiasm and delight, while we leave Webster with the regard with which we part from an ancestor, to go forward into the future with an earnestness and a joy with which we greet advancing generations.

"In examining the advance sheets of the forthcoming work of Dr Worcester, we have been struck with the conciseness and clearness of the definitions, the logical order, and the absence of repetition or redundancy, and the excellent treatment of synonymes."

☞ At Pittsburgh, on Tuesday, about noon, a man named William Wright, aged forty-five, was fatally injured by a bank of clay falling on him. He was still living when extricated, but died shortly afterwards. The ribs on both sides of his chest were broken, the lungs lacerated, and the right upper arm near the elbow broken, the bone piercing the skin.

Markets.

New York, May 25.—Flour continues to have a declining tendency; sales of 4,000 bbls to-day at prices 15c lower, State is quoted at $6 20@6 60, Ohio $7 15@7 40. Wheat heavy; sales 6,000 bush at $1 60@1 85 for red and $2 00 for white. Corn had a declining tendency, the quotations are nominal, mixed 91c, yellow 93c. Oats dull and lower at 50@60c. Pork at $17 50 for mess and $13 50 for prime. Lard quiet at 11½@12½. Whisky dull at 28c. [illegible] firm.

Philadelphia, May 25.—Flour dull to-day and prices again declined 12c, sales 2,000 bbls at $5 for superfine, $7 25@7 50 for extras and $7 75 for extra family. The receipts continue very small and the stock is gradually becoming reduced. Rye flour continues to command $4 75 and cornmeal $4. The supply of wheat although small is in excess of the demand and prices are drooping, sales of 2,500 bu at $1 75@1 80 for red and $1 85@1 95 for white. 4,000 bu barley malt sold at 90c. Corn is arriving very freely and has declined 2c per bu; 7,000 bu yellow sold at 97@98c. Oats also lower, 5,000 bu Pennsylvania sold at 52@53c. Coffee is less firm, 2,000 bags rio sold at 10½@12½c. Sugar dull and drooping, about 400 hhds Cuba and New Orleans sold at 5½@7½c. In provisions there is a firmer feeling but the transactions have been limited. Whisky declined 3c, sales of Ohio at 30c.

Napoleon, Henry Co., O., June 5, 1858.—Dr. C. W. Roback.—Dear Sir:—For the benefit of suffering humanity, permit us to announce, through the columns of your Circular, the surprising properties of your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills, which is a sure cure for Indigestion and Liver Complaints. We have several persons in town, who have been suffering with Liver Complaint and Indigestion, and notwithstanding that we have as good physicians as can be found in Northern Ohio, yet the disease baffled their skill. Consequently as were in a state of despondency until we commenced using your Pills, through and by the advice of our friend, Mr. [illegible]. We used the medicine according to directions and are now full of life and hilarity, and our gratitude is equal to our improvement in health and spirits. When we take into consideration what we have been, and what we are at present, we feel like charging ourselves of the sin of ingratitude, if we did not try to announce to the public the great benefits of your Medicine. Therefore, we recommend to the public at large, the expediency of having recourse to your Medicine, and consequently, as in duty bound, discharge what we feel to be our duty, in advising persons who are suffering as we have suffered, to make use of the very true and sure cure for the diseases already mentioned.

[illegible]

See advertisement.

CITY NOTICES.

Soda Fountain.—The most beautiful [illegible] we have seen any where is at Kitts & Lippincott's and the Soda and Syrups are all [illegible].

☞ Hats [illegible] of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others [illegible] variety. Call at [illegible].

☞ [illegible] establishment at the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to [illegible]. They have made [illegible] for the last two or three years.

"If music be the food of love, play on, Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakespeare to the humblest wight [illegible]

C. A. Wagner, [illegible] Fruits, Preserves, Wines, Liquors and Cigars. [illegible] Wagner's Restaurant, [illegible] may 19

Great Dry Goods [illegible]

☞ [illegible]

☞ [illegible] Knoss & Co.'s [illegible] if equaled.

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY

Cash Capital $200,000. [illegible] Offices 757 Broadway, 50 Wall Street N. Y. [illegible]

M. SCHLESSINGER,

SALOON AND RESTAURANT,

No 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.

CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF [illegible]

OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS

Announcement of the Proprietor for the season of 1859.

THE OHIO WHITE SULPHUR [illegible]

ON THE 1st DAY OF JUNE.

THE WHITE SULPHUR.

MEDICINAL PROPERTIES

THE WHITE SULPHUR WATER.

THE CHALYBEATE SPRINGS.

THE MAGNESIAN WATER.

BATHS.

TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1859.

Spring Among the Hills.

We take the following beautiful lines from a volume of poems by Fields, recently printed "for a few friends." The lyric is just as fresh as the May-dew. One can hear the rush of foliage in it.

[illegible] and talk with the mountain streams
In the beautiful spring of the year,
When the violet gleams through the [illegible]
And whispers, "Come look for me here"
In the beautiful spring of the year.

I will show you a glorious world
Where the cataracts of morning are swung;
Nature will lead you her [illegible]
Where the chimes of the forest are hung—
And the [illegible] of morning are swung.

Come and breathe in this honeysuckle air—
The [illegible] that the wild bird [illegible]
Come and forget that life has a care,
In these [illegible] mountain [illegible]
[illegible] that the wild bird [illegible].

O, [illegible] of God! O, Beautiful and Good!
We feel that your presence is here—
That Thine infinite voice is abroad in the wood
In the beautiful spring of the year.
And we know that our Father is here.

A Texas Ranger's Best Shot.

Wilson and Cameron stood apart from their companions. With folded arms and thoughtful faces, they watched the shadows of night stealing over lake and chapparal.

"An hour like this casts a spell upon my spirit," said Cameron. "I love to see the glare of day fade, and give place to the dim, placid twilight."

"I have similar feelings," replied Wilson, "but I like night best when more advanced towards the small hours and the moon and stars are brightly beaming."

Cameron made no reply, and the parties remained silent. Wilson was the first to speak.

"That is a heavy rifle of yours," he said, glancing at the weapon upon which Cameron was leaning. "I dare say it has been of service to you in its time."

"No money could induce me to part with it, because I have proved its metal on many occasions. Did I ever tell you of an adventure that I once had near the Red River?"

"You never did; I should like to hear it," said Wilson.

"Several years ago," resumed Cameron, "I was hunting near Cross Timbers, not far from Red River. The Indians were then troublesome, and frequently committed their depredations on the frontier settlements; but I was fond of hunting and cared little for them, willing to trust to my own courage and ingenuity in any emergency that might occur. I carried this same rifle, and was called one of the best shots in the country.

"Many people said it was too heavy for common use; but I was accustomed to it, and it didn't feel burdensome to me—and when I fired, it was sure to do the right thing, for what animal could carry off an ounce and a half of lead, skilfully sped on its errand?

"Having discovered Indian signs one day, I thought it best to change my hunting ground, and so put a considerable distance between me and the spot, and encamped on a wide prairie bounded on the east by Cross Timbers. Not long after this event, I was sitting on the bank of a small stream resting my weary limbs, after a long and fatiguing hunt, when I was fired upon and slightly wounded.

"I was fortunate enough to discover the marksman, who proved to be an Indian, of what tribe I do not remember. I instantly shot him dead, and then perceived he was not alone, for one of his brethren was with him, who made good his escape. Time passed on, and I was undisturbed in my amusements for a long time.

"One day, not feeling very well, I returned to my camp sooner than usual.—I laid down to sleep, but could not. I felt very uneasy and nervous, and so arose and went to the prairie. The grass was not very tall, and the hot suns of the season had dried it until it was crispy and rattled as I walked through it. I ascended a gentle swell and looked around me. The scene was a grand one. On one hand were the Cross Timbers dimly seen in the distance, resembling a dense wall of wood built of human hands, while in every direction the prairie stretched away until lost in the distance. The sun was getting low, and looked like a sunset on the sea. As my eyes wandered from point to point, they were suddenly fixed upon a solitary figure several hundred yards distant, at the foot of the long swell or roll upon which I was standing.

"He stood in the open space, and I at first wondered how that could be, as the grass was so high in every other place, but the affair soon explained itself. More careful examination showed me that the solitary object was an Indian, and his object in picking up the dry grass was evident—he was going to fire the prairie! It was doubtless the same fellow that had escaped at the time I had been fired on.—He had discovered my retreat, and was about to revenge himself in a singular manner."

"The wind was blowing fresh toward me, and if the grass had been set on fire, no power on earth could have saved me, for the fleetest horse could not run fast enough to escape its devouring flames. A terrible dread of that kind of death came over me, I stood like one fascinated, and gazed at the preparations of the savage. He stood in the middle of the open space he had made, with a blazing torch in his hand.—Innumerable thoughts rushed to my mind in an instant of time. I was never so completely paralyzed and stupefied before in my life. The power of thought seemed to be the only power left me, and that was stimulated to an unnatural degree.—The past, present and the future were reviewed and speculated upon in that brief broken fragment of time which the savage stood watching for the brand to burn more brightly before he thrust it into the grass.

"Yes, my destiny was to be burned!—Some hunter or traveler would find my body charred or blackened; and others, after a time, would pass my bones bleaching in the sun.

"I shuddered, my eyes felt hot, my throat dry, and I imagined that I felt the flames creeping over me. If it had been a danger that I could have battled with, or if I could have seen any chance of escape depending upon my own exertions, it would have been different; now all I could do was to stand and but stare the most dreadful of all deaths in the face.

You must remember that all these ideas and reflections ran through my mind in the shortest appreciable space of time; for you must know that the sudden prospect of great danger, from which there is no apparent mode of escape, imparts to the brain a horrible faculty of thought of which the mind at ease can form no possible conception.

I closed my eyes in prayer, and commended my soul to God; but it was impossible for me to close my eyes against the one great and absorbing idea in my mind—that of being burnt up like a vile reptile that crawls in the weeds.

"My lids unclosed, and as they did so, my eyes rested upon my trusty rifle; it was the first time I had thought of it, for the distance was great between me and the enemy; but now it looked like an old friend, the only one that had power to save me.

"I embraced the thought that the sight of my rifle called up, with a species of joy which was nearly overpowered by an agonizing feeling.

"One chance remained; a small chance it was true, and still a chance; and despair cannot paralyze and subdue the heart, while one faint hope remains. I lifted the instrument upon which hung my destiny. As my glance ran over the intervening distance, I felt how desperate indeed was my prospect of life, for a hundred good marksmen might try their skill in vain at an object so far off. Then I remembered that my weapon was of uncommon calibre and weight, and would throw a ball farther than any I had ever seen. I recollected also that I had loaded it that very day with uncommon care, and for a long shot.

"The Indian moved the torch, and was about to apply the combustible material; there was no time to lose. The rifle came to my shoulder quick and firm, and I braced up my nerves for a steady aim with a strong effort of the will. I looked through the double sights, and the muzzle covered the Indian's head. My heart seemed to stop beating, held in the grasp of that terrible suspense. It was but an instant—then the rifle sent an ounce and a half of lead on its mission, with a crack that was unusually loud and sharp, and a recoil which threw me back a few paces.

"The smoke curled away, but I dared not look. I passed my hand slowly across my forehead, for my brain was throbbing painfully. Every moment I expected to be greeted by a dense smoke from the burning prairie, and to hear the hissing of the burning flame; but nothing of the kind occurred, and I looked towards the spot where the savage had stood with his torch; I took courage, re-loaded my rifle, and hastily advanced towards the place.

"I reached it—the Indian lay upon his back, the brand, half extinguished, beside him; an ounce and a half of lead had passed through his head. I sank down overpowered with gratitude, and the various emotions which such an incident was calculated to inspire.

"This was the greatest shot I ever made, and probably I shall never equal it again. Can you wonder that I am attached to my rifle?"

"Not at all!" said the Captain earnestly. "I should never part with it if it were mine!"

Modes of Death.

A recent Quarterly Review contained the following article, which will be read with interest:

"To be shot dead is one of the easiest modes of terminating life; rapid as it is, the body has leisure to feel and reflect.—On the first attempt by one of the frantic adherents of Spain to assassinate William, Prince of Orange, who took the lead in the revolt of the Netherlands, the ball passed through the bones in the face, and brought him to the ground. In the instant that preceded stupefaction, he was able to form the notion that the ceiling of the room had fallen and crushed him. The cannon shot which plunged into the brain of Charles XII. did not prevent him from seizing his sword by the hilt. The idea of attack and the necessity for defense was pressed on him by a blow which we would suppose too tremendous to leave an interval for thought. But it by no means follows that the inflicting of fatal wounds is accompanied by a pang. From what is known of the first effects of gunshot wounds, it is probable the impression is rather stunning than acute. Unless death be immediate, the pain is varied as to the nature of the injuries, and these are past counting up.

But there is nothing singular in the dying sensation, though Lord Byron remarked the physiological peculiarity that the expression is invariably that of languor, while in death from a stab, the countenance reflects the natural character of gentleness or ferocity, to the last gasp.

Some of these cases are of interest to show with what slight disturbance life may go on under a mortal wound, till it comes to a full stop. A foot soldier at Waterloo, pierced by a musket ball in the hip, begged water of a soldier who chanced to possess a canteen of beer. The wounded man drank, returned his heartiest thanks, mentioned that his regiment was nearly exterminated, and having proceeded a dozen yards on his way to the rear, fell to the earth, and with one convulsive movement of the limbs, concluded his career. "His voice," said the trooper, who himself tells the story, "gave scarcely the slightest sound of weakness."

Captain Basil Hall, who, in his early youth, was present at the battle of Corunna, has singled out, from the conclusion that consigns to oblivion the woes and gallantry of war, another instance, extremely similar, which occurred on that occasion. An old officer, who was shot in the head, arrived pale and faint, at the temporary hospital, and begged the surgeon to look at his wound, which was pronounced mortal.

"Indeed, I feared so," he responded, with impeded utterance, and I yet should wish very much to live a little longer, if it were possible."

He laid the sword upon the stone at his side, as gently, says Hall, as if the steel had been turned into glass, and almost immediately sank senseless upon the turf.

Singular Illusions.

The strange illusions with which hypochondriacs and insane persons are oftentimes affected are not a little amusing to the unconcerned spectator, however uncomfortable they may be to the patient himself. There are many anecdotes respecting these illusions related by medical authors.

Marcus Donatus informs us that a baker of Ferrara believed he was made of butter, and on that account would not approach the oven, lest he should melt.

The same author relates that a person by the name of Vicentinus [illegible] was of such an enormous size that he could not go through the door of his apartment. His physician gave orders that he should be forcibly led through it, which was done accordingly, but not without a fatal effect for Vicentinus cried out, as he was forced along, that the flesh was torn from his bones, and that his limbs were broken off, of which terrible impression he died in a few days, accusing those who conducted him of being his murderers.

Tulpius tells us that the wife of one Solomon Galmus fancied she had been dead, but that God had sent her back to the world without a heart, for He had kept it in Heaven. On this account she was extremely unhappy, and more miserable than any creature on earth.

Gruner relates the case of a German student of theology, by the name of Bau. Imagining himself the subject of a Divine call without waiting for holy orders, he commenced preaching. The following is the conclusion of one of his discourses:—"He who believeth not in witches does not believe in the devil; he who does believe in the devil does not believe in God; he who believes not in God must be damned."

Hypochondriacs have sometimes imagined themselves a frail article of China, and of course, have been in constant fear of being dashed to pieces, by the carelessness of servants or the forgetfulness of friends. Pope, in "The cave of spleen," thus represents these same breathing articles of brittleware:

"Here living tea-pots stand, one arm held out,
One bent; the handle this, and that the spout;
A pipkin there, like Homer's tripod walks;
Here sighs a jar." &c.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs.

For a brief time past, we have had premonitions of the long, sultry summer days now at hand. Not many weeks hence, the customary "sittings" of the season will commence among the dwellers in the city, and it is already agreeable to think of the pleasant country retreats and comfortable watering-places whither the tides of travel ere long turn. Such resorts, whether for health or pleasure, have become indispensable, and those who have been at the expense and pains to provide acceptable places of the kind, within a convenient distance, are public benefactors.

It is but recently that efforts have been made in this state, on an extensive scale, to supply this want. Decidedly the most successful and promising undertaking of this sort, is that projected by Andrew Wilson, of this city, and fully demonstrated to be feasible, last season of the Ohio White Sulpur Springs. This year, numerous ample fications have been made, greatly enlarging and otherwise improving the buildings and grounds at that beautiful location. About twice as many can now be accommodated there as at the last season. New walks and drives have been laid out many additional buildings erected, the former ones enlarged, the barns reconstructed, and a variety of changes made for the better, which will undoubtedly render the place a point of attraction for crowds of summer sojourners during the coming "hot term."

For invalids, every facility is provided for the use of the mineral waters, in bathing or otherwise. The medicinal properties of several springs (four or five in number, and all essentially different from each other,) have been minutely set forth by Dr. Moorman, of the Virginia White Sulpur, and by Dr. W. W. Dawson, of this city, both of whom have given the subject careful and continued attention. A pamphlet containing full particulars on this head—including a scientific analysis of the waters by Prof. E. S. Wayne, of this city—together with a variety of general intelligence in regard to this excellent summer resort, in the centre of our State, has been published by Messrs. Anderson, Gates and Wright, and will be read with much interest by those desiring fuller information on the subject.

Some of the most important improvements made by Mr. Wilson for this year are worthy of more particular mention, in this connection. A Telegraph Office, to be kept open during the season, has been established at the Springs,—a convenience that will be duly appreciated by all. In the way of buildings, a large hotel, new cottages, bowling alleys, bath houses, a steam laundry, &c, have been added.—The new hotel is more than two hundred feet in length, containing elegant parlors, suites of rooms, reception-room, and a commodious dining hall. A large room for evening amusements has also been provided.

A method has been adopted for heating the water, for bathing, in the bath-tub, avoiding the loss of important mineral ingredients as under the old system of using a boiler or tank.

The grounds have been extended and much improved in their appearance. The beautiful grove of about one hundred acres, belonging to the premises, has been laid out in attractive walks and drives. The lawn has been enlarged and further beautified by trees, walks, summer-houses, &c. A drive, two miles in length, has been graded, around the estate. The surrounding country also, which presents rare and varied scenery, is traversed by good roads, affording ample inducements for more extended airings, in the carriage, or on horseback.

No pains will be spared, we are sure, to make the sojourn of visitors at the Ohio White Sulphur Springs agreeable. The hotel will be under the superintendence of Mr. Swayzie, a gentleman of experience and of special fitness for the position.—Excellent fare, containing the peculiar luxuries of the country no less than of the city, may be expected, as well as polite and assiduous attentions.

We have spoken thus freely of this enterprise, not only because we believe it to be intrinsically all we have claimed for it, but also because it is emphatically a home interest, and as such we desire to see it encouraged. All the advantages sought in traveling to distant places may be secured within our own borders, and at comparatively a moderate cost. Our citizens, we doubt not, when they rightly understand the merits of this (or any other similar) endeavor to serve them, in their own State, will see that such enterprises are sustained and maintained upon a first class footing.—[Cin. Gaz.

A good name is above all price. Have you not found it so, young man; you whose well-known virtues have placed you in a position which you occupy with feelings of commendable pride? And you whose fame has been the target of envious tongues, have not you seen a good name to be the only breast-plate that is impervious to the poisoned shafts of calumny? Gold and talent, what are these without character? A light to render darkness visible; a gilding, which, by contrast, makes the substance more revolting! Cherish it, then, all ye who possess it, guard it carefully; for depend on this, its purity once tarnished, the most unwearying effort will hardly restore it to its prime lustre. Let it attend you through the journey of life, crowning your days with peace and happiness. The rectitude which won it will engrave it upon your face, a letter of recommendation to people of every nation and tongue; and when the treasure is no longer needful to you, it shall descend to your posterity, a legacy with which millions on millions would not bear to be compared.

ANECDOTE OF AN EX-PRESIDENT.—When M—ll—d F—lm—re was practising law in the Buffalo courts, he was a pretty formidable antagonist even in that city of bars and benches. Upon one occasion a witty lawyer by the name of Falcott was his opponent, and the latter, wishing to show to the jury how strongly the rival case was fortified, made use of a phrase which he presumed would come home to their feelings. "Not only," said he "have my client's rights been thus invaded, but also in order to sustain that inroad, you find arrayed against him the best talent in the country—I may say, the right bower of the profession!"

"When does the gentleman on the opposite side mean by the right bower?" said Mr. M. F., who had never played a game of euchre in his life.

"Why," said Palcott, with a sly wink at the jury, "I thought everybody knew what that meant—the biggest knave in the pack!"—Commons' Wine Press.

An Irishman being called to testify in court as a witness, was told by the clerk to hold up his left hand. The man immediately held up his right hand. "Hold up your right hand!" said the clerk.—"Please your honor," said the witness, still keeping up his left hand. "Please your honor, I am left handed."

There is dew in one flower and not in another, because one opens its cup and takes it in, while the other closes itself, and the drop runs off. God rains his goodness and mercy as wide spread as the dew, and if we lack them, it is because we will not open our hearts to receive them.

The Irish Abroad.

The army list of Austria is naturally an object of scrutiny just now. It appears that over one hundred principal officers are Hanoverians, and nearly as many born Bavarians; numbers also from Saxony and the minor States have taken service under the two-necked bird of dark omen. There are few, if any, Prussians in Austrian pay, though many Irish, as this list will show:—First Aid-de-Camp to the Emperor, Maximilian, Count O'Donnell; Field Marshal Lavel, Count Nugent; Field Marshal's Lieutenant, Simon Fitzgerald, Colonel 6th Chasseurs; Felix, Count Meynes, Colonel 4th Regiment Uhlans; Constantine, Baron Herbert of Rathkeale.—Major-Generals, Peter Von Mulholl, and Ambrose O'Ferall; Count Albert Nugent, Daniel O'Connor, of Kerry, Count Charles Taafe, Baron Brady, Oliver Wallis, Count Carrick Mayne, Major of the 8th Uhlans; Maximilian, Count M'Gaffrey, Rittmeister, 9th Uhlans; O'Hanlon, Frank, Baron O Byrne, 39th Infantry; Maurice Piers, Baron Charles M'Sherry, 8th Uhlans; Baron Julius Wallis, of Carrick Mayne; Tim O'Mahony, 4th Dragoons; Aloysius M'Cullen, 23d Infantry; Antony Adler Mulholland, 44th Infantry; Edward, Baron Herbert, Rathkeale, 45th Infantry; Joseph Hickey, Register of Military Archives. Should France cross the Alps, a far more numerous array of fighting Irish will be marshalled against their Austrian kinsmen, about two hundred officers appearing on the French roll. The Paris garrison counts many; the 73d of the Line, now quartered at the Chateau d'Eau, on the Boulevards, is commanded by Colonel H. C. O'Mallery; and the Cuirassiers of the Imperial Guard, quartered at St. Germain's by Lucius O'Brien; not to mention General P. McMahon, who is likely to guide the whole campaign. Tom Moore's son died a lieutenant in Algeria, or that minstrel boy to the wars would have gone.

CUSTOMS OF THE TURKS.—Here is a whole volume concerning the customs, manners, and habits of the Turks, contained in a single paragraph;

"The Turks abhor the hat; but uncovering the head, which with us is an expression of respect, is considered by them disrespectful and indecent; no offense is given by keeping on a hat in a mosque, but shoes must be left on the threshold; the slipper, and not the turban, is removed in token of respect. The Turks turn in their toes; they write from right to left; they mount on the right side of a horse; they follow their guests to a room, and precede them on leaving it; the left hand is the place of honor; they do the honors of a table by serving themselves first; they are great smokers and coffee drinkers; they take the wall and walk hastily in respect; they beckon by throwing back the hand, instead of throwing it toward them; they cut the hair from the head, but leave it on the chin; they sleep in their clothes; they look on beheading as a more disgraceful punishment than strangling; they deem our short and close dresses indecent, our shaven chins a mark of effeminacy and servitude; they resent an inquiry after wives as an insult; they commence their wooden houses at the top, and their upper apartments are frequently finished before the lower ones are closed up; they eschew pork as an abomination; they regard dancing as a theatrical performance, only to be looked at, and not mingled in, except by slaves; their mourning habit is white; their sacred color is green; their Sabbath day is Friday, and interment follows immediately on death. The death of their women are not registered—those of the men are. Marriages are registered, and with the marriage the woman is virtually struck from existence, so far as government is concerned. She is not known officially to the government of Turkey. Her 'lord' or husband does with her as pleases him best."

SPREADING A SECRET.—Stuart, the painter, had, as he supposed, discovered a secret art of coloring, very valuable. He told it to a friend. His friend valued it highly, and came a time afterwards to ask permission to communicate it under oath of eternal secrecy to a friend of his who needed every possible aid to enable him to rise.

"Let me see," said Stuart, making a chalk mark on a board at hand, "I know the art and that is—"

"One," said his friend.

"You know it," continued Stuart, making another mark by the side of the one already made, "and that is—"

"Two," cried the other.

"Well, and I tell your friend, and that will be—" making a mark.

"Three, only," said the other.

"No," said Stuart, "it is one hundred and eleven!" (III.)

"LAST OF THE HUGGERMUGGERS."—A sprightly school-girl, who attends the Central High School, where the teachers have a way of inciting the pupils to understand what they say to the class, was reading the "Last of the Huggermuggers," and stirred by the spirit of inquiry stimulated by her teachers, if not by natural feminine curiosity asked a boy cousin of her's the meaning of Huggermugger.—John looked thoughtful for a moment, and then said: "I'll show you!" and before the incipient woman had time to make any further remark, John had his arms around her waist and subjected it to a gentle pressure—"That's a hugger, and this (putting his lips to hers in affectionate collision) is mugger." "Yes," said the not more than half displeased Sarah Ann, "and this is the last of the huggermuggers; for if ever you attempt to give me another such definition, I'll box your ears."

TO MAKE EXCELLENT BREAD.—Take eight quarts of wheat flour, spread it in your mixing dish, so as to leave a large cavity in the center; pour a sufficient quantity of boiling milk, or water, over two quarts of sifted white corn meal to scald it thoroughly, and let it stand till it is only lukewarm, turn into the flour, add a teacupful of good hop yeast and a little warm milk or water; stir it well, mixing in a portion of the flour, and let it stand ten or twelve hours in a warm place; knead it well; make it into loaves which will rise, near the fire, in less than an hour. When baked well, this bread is light, sweet, and nutritious; quite as good as bread made of potato yeast, and it keeps moist longer, besides being a saving of labor.

A FAMILY PUZZLE.—The family of Mrs. Lucinda Burr, of North Wilbraham, according to the Palmer Journal, consists of one father, three mothers, two grandmothers, one great-grandmother, two widows, three children, one husband, one wife, two daughters, one grand daughter, one son, one grandson, one great-grandson, one mother-in-law and son-in-law; yet the family numbers but five persons, who all live under the same roof.

CURIOUS PHENOMENON.—Troubled with hot whisky and cold weather, Nat came "hump on the ice," and remarked to a bystander, "ve-very sing'lar! I allers observe, "at when-e-ever water fr-freezes, it's sur-sure to freeze with the sl-slipp'y side up!"

A gentleman who had a scolding wife, in answer to an inquiry after her health, said she was pretty well, only subject at times, to a breaking out in the mouth."

A DEATH-BED AT ROME, 1859.

[illegible]

Could I pass them hanging curtains, through the silk-bordered entries, up the sweep of squalid stair.
On through chamber after chamber, where the [illegible] gold and amber turn decay to beauty rare;
I should reach a guarded portal, where for [illegible] mortal, face to face two Kings are met—
One the grisly King of terrors, one a Bourbon, with his errors, late to conscience-clearing set;
Well his favored palace many flatter, and his [illegible] may smatter with such fervor as they may;
Cross and chrysm, and genuflexion, mop and mow, and interjection, will not frighten Death away.
By the dying despot sitting, at the hard heart's portals hitting, shocking the dull brain to work,
Death makes clear what life has hidden, chides what life has left unchidden, quickens truth life tried to burke.
He has ruled within his councils, after Holy Church's orders; did what Austria bade him do;
By their guidance, flogged and tortured; high-born men and gently nurtured chained with crime's [illegible] crew.
What if summer fevers gripped them, what if winter frostings nipped them, till they rotted in their chains?
He had word of Pope and Kaiser; none could make him wiser or wheel; them the contrast, his the gains;
So he pleads careless [illegible], clutching with his fingers meagre, at the bed-clothes as he speaks;
But King Death sits grimly grinning, at the Bourbon's cobweb-spinning—as each cobweb-cable breaks,
And the poor soul, from life's eyelet, rudderless, without a pilot, driftless slowly down the dark:
While mid rolling incense vapor, chaunted dirge and flaming taper, lies the body stiff and stark.
[Punch.

A Rich Scene.

In the Canadian House of Assembly, lately, they had quite a spirited debate on the bill to prohibit the use of hoops and crinoline, introduced by Aiken. We publish a few of the most brilliant passages:

Mr. Drummond was an ardent admirer of hoops from childhood. He was born with a love of hoops. When he was a child of tender growth, he used to trundle his hoop, all unconscious of the fate that was in store for him. Later in life he had swallowed a ring, which resulted in a hoop-in-cough; and even now the sight of an empty hogshead brought tears into his eyes.

Mr. Brown complained that it was impossible now to choose a wife, since her defects were so hid by hoops, and enveloped in crinoline, that the naked—

Speaker—Order.

Mr. Brown—Mr. Speaker—

Speaker—The honorable gentleman is out of order.

Mr. Brown—But, Mr. Speaker, the naked—

Speaker—Hold your tongue, sir.

Mr. Brown—The naked—

Speaker—Upon my soul, Mr. Brown, cork up, or I'll have you arrested.

Mr. Brown—Permit me to explain, Mr. Speaker. When I said naked—

Speaker—(yelling)—Clear the galleries of ladies, Mr. Sergeant.

Mr. Brown—in the name of the seventeen graces and the fifteen muses, Mr. Speaker—dearly beloved Smith—let me apologies, then. I only meant to say that hoops and crinoline had reached to such a rotundancy, that it was impossible to arrive at the naked—

Speaker—(frantically)—Death and blue devils! Stop, or I'll brain you with the mace. Consider the impropriety of—

Mr. Brown(wildly)—Truth! truth! truth!—naked truth, was what I was going to say.

Mr. Dunbar Ross understood his honorable friend to say that people cannot pass along the streets without being assaulted by highwaymen.—Now, surely, the honorable member from Lake Ontario could not but be aware that the character of every member in the House was affected by such dam—

Mr. Talbot objected to such unparliamentary language.

Mr. Ross protested against interruption. He was going to say, by such a dam—

Mr. J. Cameron—The honorable member should not swear in that dreadful manner.

Mr. Ross—Wasn't doing anything of the kind, but would tempted to do so, if not allowed to finish his sentence—but such a dam (order, order,) a dam—(confusion) he would repeat it—by such a dam—(tremendous uproar.)

Mr. Wright stood up and moved, amidst the wildest confusion, that Mr. be expelled from the House for such awful language.

Mr. Ross—(black in the face)—exclaimed that damaging statements was all he meant to say when he was interrupted by the fool—

Mr. Talbot—Who's a fool—

Mr. Ross—Foolish ass—

Mr. Cameron—Who's an ass—

Mr. Ross—(wildly)—foolish assertion of profanity.

"My Son," said a doating father, who was about taking his son into business, "what shall be the style of the new firm?" "Well, governor" said the one and twenty youth, looking up to find an answer, "I don't know; but suppose we call it John H. Samplin and father?"

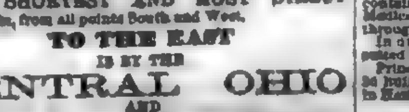
In the anatomy of the hand, we find that the muscle by which we shut it is much stronger than the one by which we open it; and this holds true as to giving and receiving.

An eminent divine preached one Sunday morning from the text—"Ye are children of the devil," and in the afternoon by a funny coincidence from the words: "Children, obey your parents."

Notice to Bridge Builders.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED at the County Auditor's Office, Franklin county, Ohio, until 12 o'clock M. THURSDAY, JUNE 9th, 1859, for furnishing the materials and building a Bridge over Big Walnut Creek, at Lockbourne, in said county. The distance between the abutments to be 155 feet, and the entire length of the superstructure to be 258 feet; to be a single track bridge of two spans, and to be 12 feet wide from out to out; and 18 feet 9 inches high in the clear, between the floor and the bed, or 18 feet 3 inches from top to top of lower and upper chords.

Estimated amount of work and materials:
300 yards excavation the foundation of abutments.
[illegible] do grading road at end of bridge.
146 perch stone work (25 cubic feet to the perch) in abutments and wings.
[illegible] perch stone work (25 cubic feet to the perch) in pier.
[illegible] feet Bridge or Superstructure.



Separate bids will be received for the above 4 sets of work, or for the whole job, and will be let on the lowest responsible bidder or bidders, the Commissioners reserving the right to reject any and all bids.

Plans and specifications can be seen at the County Auditor's Office.

EDWARD LIVINGSTON,
ISAAC WHITE,
D. L. BOLTON,
Commissioners.

Columbus, May 19, 1859—[illegible]

TWO DAILY TRAINS
FROM COLUMBUS VIA THE GREAT NATIONAL ROUTE
TO
Washington City, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

THE SHORTEST AND MOST DIRECT Route, from all points South and West.

TO THE EAST IS BY THE CENTRAL OHIO
AND
BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROADS!
VIA
Columbus, Newark, Zanesville and Wheeling,

Forming one great consolidated line of travel from Columbus, Ohio, to Baltimore, connecting at Washington Junction nine miles from Baltimore, with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company's Branch Road to WASHINGTON CITY, affording the only direct communication between the cities of the West and the National Capital, connecting also at the Station in Baltimore with the railroads to PHILADELPHIA, NEW YORK and BOSTON, being the only route by which merchants and travelers can purchase tickets that will enable them to visit the cities of Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York at the cost of a ticket to New York by other lines, an advantage that is afforded by this route only.

TWO DAILY TRAINS FROM COLUMBUS.

At 4:05 a. m. and 12:05 p. m.

Through Tickets to the Eastern Cities can be procured via Washington city, at an additional charge of $1.50.

Be sure to ask for tickets by the Wheeling route and Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Baggage checked through from Cincinnati to Baltimore and New York.

Fare to New York and Boston, $1.00 less than via any other route.

FOR THROUGH TICKETS

and all information please apply at the office of the Union Depot. R. L. DOHERTY, Agent.
[illegible], General Ticket Agent, C. O. R. R.
W. P. SMITH, Master of Transportation, Baltimore.
E. P. FULLER, General Western Agent B. & O. R. R.

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

Cheap Dry Goods.
(Silks and Dress Goods.)

NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS.
Embracing a Variety,
Not excelled in this market.

Silks, Satins, Lawns, Robes, Challis, Bareges, Calicoes,
Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles,
Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.

Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.

J. O. CHITTENDEN.

may 12.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads

To the South and West.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11, 1859, Four Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted,) from Columbus, in connection with Trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

FIRST TRAIN.
(EXCEPT.)

NIGHT EXPRESS—At 2:15 A. M., stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati, arriving at Cincinnati at 7:50 A. M. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c., &c. At Loveland for Chillicothe, Athens and all stations on M. & C. R. R. and at Cincinnati with morning trains on Ohio & Mississippi R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, and all points South and West, and mail line steamers for Louisville.

SECOND TRAIN.
(Daily except Sundays.)

NO. 1 EXPRESS—[illegible] A. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Fort Ancient, Morrow, Loveland, (and on signal at Alton, Sel[illegible], Claysville and Deerfield) arriving at Cincinnati at 1:30 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, &c., &c.

THIRD TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY.)

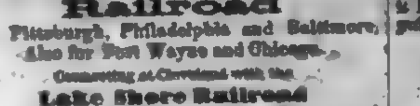
NO. 2 EXPRESS—At 2:40 P. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, Xenia, Morrow, Deerfield, Fosters, Loveland, Milford and Plainville, arriving at Cincinnati at 7:45 P. M., connecting at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c., &c., and at Cincinnati with evening train on O. & M. R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c., &c.

FOURTH TRAIN.
(Daily except Sundays.)

MAIL—At 3:00 P. M., stopping at Alton, Jefferson, London, Charlestown, Selma, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Morrow, Loveland, arriving at Cincinnati at 10:00 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, &c., &c.

RETURNING.

Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express 4:30 A. M.; No. 1 Express 10:31 a. m.; No. 2 Express 12:35 p. m.; Accommodation 9:56 p. m.



For further information and Through Tickets apply to R. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot.

J. DURAND, Superintendent, Cincinnati.
P. W. STRADER, General Ticket Agent, Cincinnati.
JNO. W. DOHERTY, Agent, Columbus, O.

Columbus, April 12, 1859.

Summer Arrangement.—Time Changed.

Great Northern & Eastern Route.
Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD.

Connecting at Crestline with the
Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad

For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Baltimore, Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.

Connecting at Cleveland with the
Lake Shore Railroad

For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) FROM COLUMBUS, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.

FIRST TRAIN.

NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 4:50 a. m. Will leave passengers at all stations, south of Galion, stop for passengers at Delaware, Ashley, Cardington, Gilead and all stations North of Galion, connecting at Crestline with the 7:00 a. m. mail train for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 2:15 p. m. also with same road at Crestline, with the 8:05 a. m. Express for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at 6:45 p. m. Also at Grafton with Toledo road for Toledo. Arrive at Cleveland at 10:30 a. m.

SECOND TRAIN.

NEW YORK EXPRESS.—Leaves Columbus at 10:30 a. m., stopping only at Delaware, North Switch, Cardington, Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London, and Grafton, connecting at Crestline with the 12:35 p. m. Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburg, arriving at Pittsburgh at 8:10 p. m.; arriving at Cleveland 3:30 p. m., connecting at 3:30 p. m. with a fast Express on Lake Shore road for the East arriving at Erie at 6:45 p. m., Dunkirk 8:50 p. m., Buffalo 10:30 p. m., New York 1:30 p. m. next day, two hours ahead of any other line, Boston [illegible] p. m., eight hours quicker than any other line.

THIRD TRAIN.

EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at 3:00 p. m., stopping at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at 7:30 p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad at Crestline, for Chicago arriving at Chicago at 8:47 a. m. at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad for New York and Boston; arriving at Erie 2:15 a. m., Dunkirk 3:45 a. m., Buffalo 6:40 a. m.

Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.

RETURNING.

Night Express, arrives at Columbus 1:35 a. m.
Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at 2:00 p. m.
Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at 6:50 p. m.

Fare as Low as by any other Route.

For further information, and Through and Local Tickets apply to M. L. Doherty, Ticket Agent, in the Passenger Depot of the C. C. & C. and L. M. C. & X. Railroads.

E. S. FLINT, Supt., Cleveland, Ohio.
E. C. MARSHALL, Gen'l Ticket Agent, Cleveland, Ohio.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent, Columbus, Ohio.

Columbus, April 12, 1859.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.
DR. ROBACK'S
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN Dr. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and Ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts:

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they relieve

Liver Complaint,

and restore the health and strength of the sufferer.—The

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in hopeless weakness, and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual Debilitance removed by their cordial and gently stimulating properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been tried with and also That their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That operating directly upon the poison of disease in the Blood, they

Cause sores to Heal,

and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels, the liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief and, (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They hunt disease through every avenue and organ of the system, and to expel it thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, as it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notice and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

Principal Office and Sales Rooms, No 6 East Fourth St. 3d building from Main street, Cincinnati, O. Laboratory in Hammond street.

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, BY
Roberts & Samuel, Columbus
Amos J. Schueller, Columbus
[illegible] & Son, Columbus.
A. Algire, Canal Winchester.
Isaac Thompson, Worthington.
[illegible] Johnston, Reynoldsburg.
[illegible] Buckley, Clintonville.
[illegible] Seiter, Westerville.
Henry Miller, Harrisburg.
John Malott, Grove City.
Geo. W. Evans, Dublin.

And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union.
[illegible]

5000 Agents Wanted—

To sell four new Inventions. Agents have made over $5 000 on one,—better than all other similar agencies. Send four stamps and get 80 pages particulars, gratis.
EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.

mr 1 y.

1000 Agents Wanted—

For particulars send stamp.
C. P. WHITTIER, Lowell, Mass.

mr 1 y.

DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, & INDIGESTION, by which persons are more or less afflicted, can usually be cured by taking moderate exercise, wholesome food, and a dose of Boerhave's Holland Bitters, an hour before each meal.

CHOICE SEEDS.

APPLE PIE MELON.—Seeds of this delicious substitute for pies, 5 cents package.

MAMMOTH PROLIFIC LIMA BEANS.—These grow only six feet high and are completely covered with bunches of from 15 to 40 pods to the bunch, 5 cents package.

LARGE CHEESE SQUASH.—That for pies or as a substitute for the Sweet Potato cannot be excelled, and keeps well through the winter, 13 cents.

The three Packages for [illegible] [illegible]

Address, C. T. HARALE, Care of editor "Horticultural Monthly," [illegible]

N. B.—Editors of Country Newspapers inserting the above with this notice, twice, appropriately displayed, before the 15th of May, will receive eight packages of each kind of, the seeds.

April 21, '59—6w.

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid, and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.

We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Billious Headache, Billious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitations, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
PRICE ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.

FOR COSTIVENESS;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSPEPSIA;
FOR JAUNDICE;
FOR THE CURE OF INDIGESTION;
FOR HEADACHE;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSENTERY;
FOR A FOUL STOMACH;
FOR THE CURE OF ERYSIPELAS;
FOR THE PILES;
FOR THE CURE OF SCROFULA;
FOR ALL SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS;
FOR THE CURE OF RHEUMATISM;
FOR DISEASES OF THE SKIN;
FOR THE CURE OF LIVER COMPLAINT;
FOR DROPSY;
FOR THE CURE OF TETTER, TUMORS, AND SALT RHEUM; FOR WORMS;
FOR THE CURE OF GOUT;
FOR A DINNER PILL;
FOR THE CURE OF NEURALGIA;
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per Box; Five Boxes for $1.00.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which they are given: with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand AYER'S, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

All our Remedies are for sale by

Roberts & Samuels, No. 34 N. High St., Columbus O., Suire Eckstine & Co., Cincinnati O., Mr. Fiske Cleveland O., W. A. Graham, Zanesville, O., and by all druggists, and dealers in medicines.

Consumptives do not Dispare

CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED. CONSUMPTION CURED.

BY AN OLD INDIAN DOCTOR, UNCAS BRANT, while a Missionary among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains, discovered a RARE PLANT, that proves to be a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Liver Complaint, Nervous Affections, Coughs, Colds, &c. Having now made his fortune and retired from business, he will send the prescription and directions for preparing the medicine FREE OF CHARGE to all who desire it, and will send to his agent, enclosing two stamps (6 cents), to pay the return letter, with a description of their symptoms. The Old Doctor has cured more than 3000 CASES OF CONSUMPTION alone, and hopes all afflicted people will avail themselves of this opportunity, as the Doctor wishes to do all the good he can before he dies. Address at once to

DANIEL ADEE,
Box 3531 P. O. New York,
Who is his sole agent.

[illegible]

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL.

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys,

and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption,

and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,

A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practised upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in cases of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeon in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c. are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

GROVER & BAKER'S
CELEBRATED
FAMILY SEWING MACHINES.

NEW STYLES—PRICES FROM $50 TO $125.
EXTRA CHARGE OF $5 FOR HEMMERS.

495 Broadway, - - - New York
77 Town Street, - - - Columbus
58 West Fourth Street, - - - Cincinnati

These Machines sew from two spools, as purchased from the store, requiring no re-winding of thread; they Hem, Fell, Gather, and Stitch in a superior style, finishing each seam by their own operation, without recourse to the hand-needle, as is required by other machines. They will do better and cheaper sewing than any seamstress can, even if she works for one cent an hour, and are, unquestionably, the best Machines in the market for family sewing, on account of their simplicity, durability, ease of management, and adaptation to all varieties of family sewing—executing either heavy or fine work with equal facility, and without special adjustment.

As evidence of the unquestioned superiority of their Machines, the GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE COMPANY beg leave to respectfully refer to the following

TESTIMONIALS.

[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,
TO BE PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT COLUMBUS, OHIO
By J. Birney Marshall,
At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have determined (on or about the 1st of May next) to establish in the city of Columbus, ONE, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor in every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic Truths, and its columns shall be characterized by frankness and honesty; its statements relied on for their undeviating veracity. Nor shall it be used for cliques or factions, but consistently pursue the object for which it is founded,—that of preventing the misdirection of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the perpetuity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the cause of the Democratic Party, and resist everything like schism, or Convention—whilst it will support every Democratic measure with all the ability it can bring to the task, it[illegible] must know that it is a Democratic one, [illegible] to bear—and it will support the present Administration, in all that is deemed consistent with true Democracy and the best interests of the party. THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will present the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as the first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and use every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to procure his nomination and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute details, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. [illegible]

Terms and Inducements.

Single copy per year, in advance, [illegible] $2. A discount of ten per cent on clubs of ten, [illegible] per cent on clubs of twenty, fifteen per cent on clubs of thirty, and twenty per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards sent to a single address.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

Columbus, March 22, 1859.

N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation, which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, by giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1859.

Spring Among the Hills.

We take the following beautiful lines from a volume of poems by Fields, recently printed "for a few friends." The lyric is met as freely [illegible]

Go and talk with the mountain [illegible]
In the beautiful spring of the year,
When the violet gleams through the golden [illegible]
And whispers, "Come look for me here"—
In the beautiful spring of the year.

I will show you a glorious nook
Where the cataracts of morning are [illegible]
Nature will lend you her [illegible]
Where the [illegible]
And the [illegible]

Come and breathe in this [illegible]
The breeze that the wild bird inhales,
Come and forget that life has a care,
In the [illegible] mountain [illegible]
The breeze that the wild bird inhales.

O, wonders of God! O, Boundless and Good!
We feel that your presence is here—
That Thine and His voice is abroad in this wood
In the beautiful spring of the year—
And we know that our Father is here.

A Texas Ranger's Best Shot.

Wilson and Cameron stood apart from their companions. With folded arms and thoughtful faces, they watched the shadows of night stealing over lake and chapparal.

"An hour like this casts a spell upon my spirit," said Cameron. "I love to see the glare of day fade, and give place to the dim, placid twilight."

"I have similar feelings," replied Wilson, "but I like night best when more advanced towards the small hours and the moon and stars are brightly beaming."

Cameron made no reply, and the parties remained silent. Wilson was the first to speak.

"That's a heavy rifle of yours," he said, glancing at the weapon upon which Cameron was leaning. "I dare say it has been of service to you in its time."

"No money could induce me to part with it, because I have proved its metal on many occasions. Did I ever tell you of an adventure that I once had near the Red River?"

"You never did; I should like to hear it," said Wilson.

"Several years ago," resumed Cameron, "I was hunting near Cross Timbers, not far from Red River. The Indians were then troublesome, and frequently committed their depredations on the frontier settlements; but I was fond of hunting and cared little for them, willing to trust to my own courage and ingenuity in any emergency that might occur. I carried this same rifle, and was called one of the best shots in the country.

"Many people said it was too heavy for common use; but I was accustomed to it, and it don't feel burdensome to me—and when I fired, it was sure to do the right thing, for what animal could carry off an ounce and a half of lead, skilfully sped on its errand?

"Having discovered Indian signs one day, I thought it best to change my hunting ground, and so put a considerable distance between me and the spot, and encamped on a wide prairie bounded on the east by Cross Timbers. Not long after this event, I was sitting on the bank of a small stream resting my weary limbs, after a long and fatiguing hunt, when I was fired upon and slightly wounded.

"I was fortunate enough to discover the marksman, who proved to be an Indian, of what tribe I do not remember. I instantly shot him dead, and then perceived he was not alone, for one of his brethren was with him, who made good his escape. Time passed on, and I was undisturbed in my amusements for a long time.

"One day, not feeling very well, I returned to my camp sooner than usual.—I laid down to sleep, but could not. I felt very uneasy and nervous, and so arose and went to the prairie. The grass was not very tall, and the hot suns of the season had dried it until it was crispy and rattled as I walked through it. I ascended a gentle swell and looked around me. The scene was a grand one. On one hand were the Cross Timbers dimly seen in the distance, resembling a dense wall of wood built of human hands, while in every direction the prairie stretched away until lost in the distance. The sun was getting low, and looked like a sunset on the sea. As my eyes wandered from point to point, they were suddenly fixed upon a solitary figure several hundred yards distant, at the foot of the long swell or roll upon which I was standing.

"He stood in the open space, and I at first wondered how that could be, as the grass was so high in every other place, but the affair soon explained itself. More careful examination showed me that the solitary object was an Indian, and his object in picking up the dry grass was evident—he was going to fire the prairie! It was doubtless the same fellow that had escaped at the time I had been fired on.—He had discovered my retreat, and was about to revenge himself in a singular manner.

"The wind was blowing fresh toward me, and if the grass had been set on fire, no power on earth could have saved me, for the fleetest horse could not run fast enough to escape its devouring flames. A terrible dread of that kind of death came over me, I stood like one fascinated, and gazed at the preparations of the savage. He stood in the middle of the open space he had made, with a blazing torch in his hand.—Innumerable thoughts rushed to my mind in an instant of time. I was never so completely paralyzed and stupefied before in my life. The power of thought seemed to be the only power left me, and that was stimulated to an unnatural degree.—The past, present and the future were reviewed and speculated upon in that brief broken fragment of time which the savage stood watching for the brand to burn more brightly before he thrust it into the grass.

"Yes, my destiny was to be burned!—Some hunter or traveler would find my body charred or blackened; and others, after a time, would pass my bones bleaching in the sun.

"I shuddered, my eyes felt hot, my throat dry, and I imagined that I felt the flames creeping over me. If it had been a danger that I could have battled with, or if I could have seen any chance of escape depending upon my own exertions, it would have been different; now all I could do was to stand and but stare the most dreadful of all deaths in the face.

You must remember that all these ideas and reflections ran through my mind in the shortest appreciable space of time; for you must know that the sudden prospect of great danger, from which there is no apparent mode of escape, imparts to the brain a horrible faculty of thought of which the mind at ease can form no possible conception.

I closed my eyes in prayer, and commended my soul to God; but it was impossible for me to close my eyes against the one great and absorbing idea in my mind—that of being burnt up like a vile reptile that crawls in the weeds.

"My lids unclosed, and as they did so, my eyes rested upon my trusty rifle; it was the first time I had thought of it, for the distance was great between me and the enemy; but now it looked like an old friend, the only one that had power to save me.

"I embraced the thought that the sight of my rifle called up, with a species of joy which was nearly overpowered by an agonizing feeling.

"One chance remained; a small chance it was true, and still a chance; and despair cannot paralyze and subdue the heart, while one faint hope remains. I lifted the instrument upon which hung my destiny. As my glance ran over the intervening distance, I felt how desperate indeed was my prospect of life, for a hundred good marksmen might try their skill in vain at an object so far off. Then I remembered that my weapon was of uncommon calibre and weight, and would throw a ball farther than any I had ever seen. I recollected also that I had loaded it that very day with uncommon care, and for a long shot.

"The Indian moved the torch, and was about to apply the combustible material; there was no time to lose. The rifle came to my shoulder quick and firm, and I braced up my nerves for a steady aim with a strong effort of the will. I looked through the double sights, and the muzzle covered the Indian's head. My heart seemed to stop beating, held in the grasp of that terrible suspense. It was but an instant—then the rifle sent an ounce and a half of lead on its mission, with a crack that was unusually loud and sharp, and a recoil which threw me back a few paces.

"The smoke curled away, but I dared not look. I passed my hand slowly across my forehead, for my brain was throbbing painfully. Every moment I expected to be greeted by a dense smoke from the burning prairie, and to hear the hissing of the burning flame; but nothing of the kind occurred, and I looked towards the spot where the savage had stood with his torch; I took courage, re-loaded my rifle, and hastily advanced towards the place.

"I reached it—the Indian lay upon his back, the brand, half extinguished, beside him; an ounce and a half of lead had passed through his head. I sank down overpowered with gratitude, and the various emotions which such an incident was calculated to inspire.

"This was the greatest shot I ever made, and probably I shall never equal it again. Can you wonder that I am attached to my rifle?"

"Not at all!" said the Captain earnestly. "I should never part with it if it were mine!"

Modes of Death.

A recent Quarterly Review contained the following article, which will be read with interest:

"To be shot dead is one of the easiest modes of terminating life; rapid as it is, the body has leisure to feel and reflect.—On the first attempt by one of the frantic adherents of Spain to assassinate William, Prince of Orange, who took the lead in the revolt of the Netherlands, the ball passed through the bones in the face, and brought him to the ground. In the instant that preceded stupefaction, he was able to form the notion that the ceiling of the room had fallen and crushed him. The cannon shot which plunged into the brain of Charles XII. did not prevent him from seizing his sword by the hilt. The idea of attack and the necessity for defence was pressed on him by a blow which we would suppose too tremendous to leave an interval for thought. But it by no means follows that the inflicting of fatal wounds is accompanied by a pang. From what is known of the first effects of gunshot wounds, it is probable the impression is rather stunning than acute. Unless death be immediate, the pain is varied as to the nature of the injuries, and these are past counting up.

But there is nothing singular in the dying sensation, though Lord Byron remarked the physiological peculiarity that the expression is invariably that of languor, while in death from a stab, the countenance reflects the natural character of gentleness or ferocity, to the last gasp.

Some of these cases are of interest to show with what slight disturbance life may go on under a mortal wound, till it comes to a full stop. A foot soldier at Waterloo, pierced by a musket ball in the hip, begged water of a soldier who chanced to possess a canteen of beer. The wounded man drank, returned his heartiest thanks, mentioned that his regiment was nearly exterminated, and having proceeded a dozen yards on his way to the rear, fell to the earth, and with one convulsive movement of the limbs, concluded his career. "His voice," said the trooper, who himself tells the story, "gave scarcely the slightest sound of weakness."

Captain Basil Hall, who, in his early youth, was present at the battle of Corunna, has singled out, from the conclusion that consigns to oblivion the woes and gallantry of war, another instance, extremely similar, which occurred on that occasion. An old officer, who was shot in the head, arrived pale and faint, at the temporary hospital, and begged the surgeon to look at his wound, which was pronounced mortal.

"Indeed, I feared so," he responded, with impeded utterance, and I yet should wish very much to live a little longer, if it were possible."

He laid the sword upon the stone at his side, as gently, says Hall, as if the steel had been turned into glass, and almost immediately sank senseless upon the turf.

Singular Illusions.

The strange illusions with which hypochondriacs and insane persons are oftentimes affected are not a little amusing to the unconcerned spectator, however uncomfortable they may be to the patient himself. There are many anecdotes respecting these illusions related by medical authors.

Marcus Donatus informs us that a baker of Ferrara believed he was made of butter, and on that account would not approach the oven, lest he should melt.

The same author relates that a person by the name of Vicentinus imagined he was of such an enormous size that he could not go through the door of his apartment. His physician gave orders that he should be forcibly led through it, which was done accordingly, but not without a fatal effect for Vicentinus cried out, as he was forced along, that the flesh was torn from his bones, and that his limbs were broken off, of which terrible impression he died in a few days, accusing those who conducted him of being his murderers.

Tulpius tells us that the wife of one Solomon Galmus fancied she had been dead, but that God had sent her back to the world without a heart, for He had kept it in Heaven. On this account she was extremely unhappy, and more miserable than any creature on earth.

Gruner relates the case of a German student of theology, by the name of Rau. Imagining himself the subject of a Divine call without waiting for holy orders, he commenced preaching. The following is the conclusion of one of his discourses:—"He who believeth not in witches does not believe in the devil; he who does believe in the devil does not believe in God; he who believes not in God must be damned."

Hypochondriacs have sometimes imagined themselves a frail article of China, and of course, have been in constant fear of being dashed to pieces, by the carelessness of servants or the forgetfulness of friends. Pope, in "The cave of spleen," thus represents these same breathing articles of brittleware:

"Here living tea-pots stand, one arm held out,
One bent; the handle this, and that the spout;
A pipkin there, like Homer's tripod walks;
Here sighs a jar." &c.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs.

For a brief time past, we have had premonitions of the long, sultry summer days now at hand. Not many weeks hence, the customary "flittings" of the season will commence among the dwellers in the city, and it is already agreeable to think of the pleasant country retreats and comfortable watering-places whither the tides of travel ere long turn. Such resorts, whether for health or pleasure, have become indispensable, and those who have been at the expense and pains to provide acceptable places of the kind, within a convenient distance, are public benefactors.

It is but recently that efforts have been made in this state, on an extensive scale, to supply this want. Decidedly the most successful and promising undertaking of this sort, is that projected by Andrew Wilson, of this city, and fully demonstrated to be feasible last season of the Ohio White Sulpur Springs. This year, numerous ample ficiations have been made, greatly enlarging and otherwise improving the buildings and grounds at that beautiful location. About twice as many can now be accommodated there as at the last season. New walks and drives have been laid out many additional buildings erected, the former ones enlarged, the barns reconstructed, and a variety of changes made for the better, which will undoubtedly render the place a point of attraction for crowds of summer sojourners during the coming "hot term."

For invalids, every facility is provided for the use of the mineral waters, in bathing or otherwise. The medicinal properties of several springs (four or five in number, and all essentially different from each other,) have been minutely set forth by Dr. Moorman, of the Virginia White Sulpur, and by Dr. W. W. Dawson, of this city, both of whom have given the subject careful and continued attention. A pamphlet containing full particulars on this head—including a scientific analysis of the waters by Prof. E. S. Wayne, of this city—together with a variety of general intelligence in regard to this excellent summer resort, in the centre of our State, has been published by Messrs. Anderson, Gates and Wright, and will be read with much interest by those desiring fuller information on the subject.

Some of the most important improvements made by Mr. Wilson for this year are worthy of more particular mention, in this connection. A Telegraph Office, to be kept open during the season, has been established at the Springs,—a convenience that will be duly appreciated by all. In the way of buildings, a large hotel, new cottages, bowling alleys, bath houses, a steam laundry, &c, have been added.—The new hotel is more than two hundred feet in length, containing elegant parlors, suites of rooms, reception-room, and a commodious dining hall. A large room for evening amusements has also been provided.

A method has been adopted for heating the water, for bathing, in the bath-tub, avoiding the loss of important mineral ingredients as under the old system of using a boiler or tank.

The grounds have been extended and much improved in their appearance. The beautiful grove of about one hundred acres, belonging to the premises, has been laid out in attractive walks and drives. The lawn has been enlarged and further beautified by trees, walks, summer-houses, &c. A drive, two miles in length, has been graded, around the estate. The surrounding country also, which presents rare and varied scenery, is traversed by good roads, affording ample inducements for more extended airings, in the carriage, or on horseback.

No pains will be spared, we are sure, to make the sojourn of visitors at the Ohio White Sulphur Springs agreeable. The hotel will be under the superintendence of Mr. Swaynie, a gentleman of experience and of special fitness for the position.—Excellent fare, containing the peculiar luxuries of the country no less than of the city, may be expected, as well as polite and assiduous attentions.

We have spoken thus freely of this enterprise, not only because we believe it to be intrinsically all we have claimed for it, but also because it is emphatically a home interest, and as such we desire to see it encouraged. All the advantages sought in traveling to distant places may be secured within our own borders, and at comparatively a moderate cost. Our citizens, we doubt not, when they rightly understand the merits of this (or any other similar) endeavor to serve them, in their own State, will see that such enterprises are sustained and maintained upon a first class footing.—[Cin. Gaz.

A good name is above all price. Have you not found it so, young man; you whose well-known virtues have placed you in a position which you occupy with feelings of commendable pride? And you whose fame has been the target of envious tongues, have not you seen a good name to be the only breast-plate that is impervious to the poisoned shafts of calumny? Gold and talent, what are these without character? A light to render darkness visible; a gilding, which, by contrast, makes the substance more revolting! Cherish it, then, all ye who possess it, guard it carefully; for depend on this, its purity once tarnished, the most unwearying effort will hardly restore it to its prime lustre. Let it attend you through the journey of life, crowning your days with peace and happiness. The rectitude which won it will engrave it upon your face, a letter of recommendation to people of every nation and tongue; and when the treasure is no longer needful to you, it shall descend to your posterity, a legacy with which millions on millions would not bear to be compared.

ANECDOTE OF AN EX-PRESIDENT.—When M—— F——re was practising law in the Buffalo courts, he was a pretty formidable antagonist even in that city of bars and benches. Upon one occasion a witty lawyer by the name of Falcott was his opponent, and the latter, wishing to show to the jury how strongly the rival case was fortified, made use of a phrase which he presumed would come home to their feelings. "Not only," said he "have my client's rights been thus invaded, but also in order to sustain that inroad, you find arrayed against him the best talent in the country—I may say, the right bower of the profession!"

"When does the gentleman on the opposite side mean by the right bower?" said Mr. M. F., who had never played a game of euchre in his life.

"Why," said Falcott, with a sly wink at the jury, "I thought everybody knew what that meant—the biggest knave in the pack!"—Cozzens' Wine Press.

An Irishman being called to testify in court as a witness, was told by the clerk to hold up his left hand. The man immediately held up his right hand. "Hold up your right hand!" said the clerk.—"Please your honor," said the witness, still keeping up his left hand. "Please your honor, I am left handed."

There is dew in one flower and not in another, because one opens its cup and takes it in, while the other closes itself, and the drop runs off. God rains his goodness and mercy as wide spread as the dew, and if we lack them, it is because we will not open our hearts to receive them.

The Irish abroad.

The army list of Austria is naturally an object of scrutiny just now. It appears that over one hundred principal officers are Hanoverians, and nearly as many born Bavarians; numbers also from Saxony and the minor States have taken service under the two-necked bird of dark omen. There are few, if any, Prussians in Austrian pay, though many Irish, as this list will show;—First Aid-de-Camp to the Emperor, Maximilian, Count O'Donnell; Field Marshal Lavel, Count Nugent; Field Marshal's Lieutenant, Simon Fitzgerald, Colonel 6th Chasseurs; Felix, Count Moyna, Colonel 4th Regiment Uhlans; Constantine, Baron Herbert of Rathkeale.—Major-Generals, Peter Von Mulholl, and Ambrose O'Ferall; Count Albert Nugent, Danial O'Connor, of Kerry, Count Charles Taafe, Baron Brady, Oliver Wallis, Count Carrick Mayne, Major of the 8th Uhlans; Maximilian, Count M'Gaffrey, Rittmeister, 9th Uhlans; O'Hanlon, Frank, Baron O Byrne, 39th Infantry; Maurice Piers, Baron Charles M'Sherry, 8th Uhlans; Baron Julius Wallis, of Carrick Mayne; Tim O'Mahony, 4th Dragoons; Aloysius M'Cullen, 23d Infantry; Antony Adler Mulholland, 44th Infantry; Edward, Baron Herbert, Rathkeale, 45th Infantry; Joseph Hickey, Register of Military Archives. Should France cross the Alps, a far more numerous array of fighting Irish will be marshalled against their Austrian kinsmen, about two hundred officers appearing on the French roll. The Paris garrison counts many; the 73d of the Line, now quartered at the Chateau d'Eau, on the Boulevards, is commanded by Colonel H. O. O'Malley; and the Cuirassiers of the Imperial Guard, quartered at St. Germain's by Lucius O'Brien; not to mention General P. McMahon, who is likely to guide the whole campaign. Tom Moore's son died a lieutenant in Algeria, or that minstrel boy to the wars would have gone.

CUSTOMS OF THE TURKS.— Here is a whole volume concerning the customs, manners, and habits of the Turks, contained in a single paragraph;

"The Turks abhor the hat; but uncovering the head, which with us is an expression of respect, is considered by them disrespectful and indecent; no offense is given by keeping on a hat in a mosque, but shoes must be left on the threshold; the slipper, and not the turban, is removed in token of respect. The Turks turn in their toes; they write from right to left; they mount on the right side of a horse; they follow their guests to a room, and precede them on leaving it; the left hand is the place of honor; they do the honors of a table by serving themselves first; they are great smokers and coffee drinkers; they take the wall and walk hastily in respect; they beckon by throwing back the hand, instead of throwing it toward them; they cut the hair from the head, but leave it on the chin; they sleep in their clothes; they look on beheading as a more disgraceful punishment than strangling; they deem our short and close dresses indecent, our shaven chins a mark of effeminacy and servitude; they resent an inquiry after wives as an insult; they commence their wooden houses at the top, and their upper apartments are frequently finished before the lower ones are closed up; they eschew pork as an abomination; they regard dancing as a theatrical performance, only to be looked at, and not mingled in, except by slaves; their mourning habit is white; their sacred color is green; their Sabbath day is Friday, and interment follows immediately on death. The death of their women are not registered—those of the men are. Marriages are registered, and with the marriage the woman is virtually struck from existence, so far as government is concerned. She is not known officially to the government of Turkey. Her 'lord' or husband does with her as pleases him best."

SPREADING A SECRET.—Stuart, the painter, had, as he supposed, discovered a secret art of coloring, very valuable. He told it to a friend. His friend valued it highly, and came a time afterwards to ask permission to communicate it under oath of eternal secrecy to a friend of his who needed every possible aid to enable him to rise.

"Let me see," said Stuart, making a chalk mark on a board at hand, "I know the art and that is—"

"One," said his friend.

"You know it," continued Stuart, making another mark by the side of the one already made, "and that is—"

"Two," cried the other.

"Well, and I tell your friend, and that will be—" making a mark.

"Three, only," said the other.

"No," said Stuart, "it is one hundred and eleven!" (III.)

"LAST OF THE HUGGERMUGGERS."—A sprightly school-girl, who attends the Central High School, where the teachers have a way of inciting the pupils to understand what they say to the class, was reading the "Last of the Huggermuggers," and stirred by the spirit of inquiry stimulated by her teachers, if not by natural feminine curiosity asked a boy cousin of her's the meaning of Huggermugger.—John looked thoughtful for a moment, and then said: "I'll show you!" and before the incipient woman had time to make any further remark, John had his arms around her waist and subjected it to a gentle pressure—"That's a hugger, and this (putting his lips to hers in affectionate collision) is mugger." "Yes," said the not more than half displeased Sarah Ann, "and this is the last of the huggermuggers; for if ever you attempt to give me another such definition, I'll box your ears."—

TO MAKE EXCELLENT BREAD.—Take eight quarts of wheat flour, spread it in your mixing dish, so as to leave a large cavity in the center; pour a sufficient quantity of boiling milk, or water, over two quarts of sifted white corn meal to scald it thoroughly, and let it stand till it is only lukewarm, turn into the flour, add a teacupful of good hop yeast and a little warm milk or water; stir it well, mixing in a portion of the flour, and let it stand ten or twelve hours in a warm place; knead it well; make it into loaves which will rise, near the fire, in less than an hour. When baked well, this bread is light, sweet, and nutritious; quite as good as bread made of potato yeast, and it keeps moist longer, besides being a saving of labor.

A FAMILY PUZZLE.—The family of Mrs. Lucinda Burr, of North Wilbraham, according to the Palmer Journal, consists of one father, three mothers, two grandmothers, one great-grandmother, two widows, three children, one husband, one wife, two daughters, one grand daughter, one son, one grandson, one great-grandson, one mother-in-law and son-in-law; yet the family numbers but five persons, who all live under the same roof.

CURIOUS PHENOMENON.—Troubled with hot whisky and cold weather, Nat came "home on the ice," and remarked to a bystander, "ve-very sing'lar! I allers observe, 'at whea-e-ever water fr-freezes, it's sur-sure to freeze with the sl-slipp'y side up!"

A gentleman who had a scolding wife, in answer to an inquiry after her health, said she was pretty well, only subject at times, to a breaking out in the mouth."

A DEATH-BED AT NAPLES, 1859.

Could I pass those lounging sentries, through the aloe-bordered entries, up the sweep of squalid stair,
On through chamber after chamber, where the sunshine gold and amber turn decay to beauty rare,
I should reach a guarded portal, where for strife of sense mortal, face to face two Kings are met—
One the grisly King of terrors, one a Bourbon, with his errors, late to conscience-clearing set;
Well his fevered pulse may flutter, and the priests their masses mutter with such fervor as they may;
Cross and chrism, and genuflexion, mass and mew, and interjection, will not frighten Death away.
By the dying despot sitting, at the hard heart's portals hitting, shocking the dull brain to work,
Death makes clear what life has hidden, chases what life has left unbidden, [illegible] births.
He had ruled within his borders, after Holy Church's orders; did what Austria bade him do;
By their guidance, flogged and tortured; high-born men and gently nurtured chained with crime's felonious crew.
What if summer fevers gripped them, what if winter freezings nipped them, till they rotted in their chains?
He had wealth of Pope and Kaiser; none could tell him better or wiser; theirs the counsel, his the reins;
So he pleads excuses eager, [illegible] with his finger meagre, at the bed-clothes as he speaks;
But King Death sits grimly grinning, at the Bourbon's cobweb-spinning—as each cobweb-cable breaks,
And the poor soul, from life's [illegible], pilot, drifteth slowly down the dark;
While [illegible] the body stiff and stark.

[Punch.

A Rich Scene.

In the Canadian House of Assembly, lately, they had quite a spirited debate on the bill to prohibit the use of hoops and crinoline, introduced by Aiken. We publish a few of the most brilliant passages:

Mr. Drummond was an ardent admirer of hoops from childhood. He was born with a love of hoops. When he was a child of tender growth, he used to trundle his hoop, all unconscious of the fate that was in store for him. Later in life he had swallowed a ring, which resulted in a hoop-in-cough; and even now the sight of an empty hogshead brought tears into his eyes.

Mr. Brown complained that it was impossible now to choose a wife, since her defects were so hid by hoops, and enveloped in crinoline, that the naked—

Speaker—Order.

Mr. Brown—Mr. Speaker—

Speaker—The honorable gentleman is out of order.

Mr. Brown—But, Mr. Speaker, the naked—

Speaker—Hold your tongue, sir.

Mr. Brown—The naked—

Speaker—Upon my soul, Mr. Brown, cork up, or I'll have you arrested.

Mr. Brown—Permit me to explain, Mr. Speaker. When I said naked—

Speaker—(yelling)—Clear the galleries of ladies, Mr. Sergeant.

Mr. Brown—In the name of the seventeen graces and the fifteen muses, Mr. Speaker—dearly beloved Smith—let me apologise, then. I only meant to say that hoops and crinoline had reached to such a rotundensy, that it was impossible to arrive at the naked—

Speaker—(frantically)—Death and blue devils! Stop, or I'll brain you with the mace. Consider the impropriety of—

Mr. Brown (wildly)—Truth! truth! truth!—naked truth, was what I was going to say.

Mr. Dunbar Ross understood his honorable friend to say that people cannot pass along the streets without being assaulted by highwaymen.—Now, surely, the honorable member from Lake Ontario could not but be aware that the character of every member in the House was affected by such dam—

Mr. Talbot objected to such unparliamentary language.

Mr. Ross protested against interruption. He was going to say, by such a dam—

Mr. J. Cameron—The honorable member should not swear in that dreadful manner.

Mr. Ross—Wasn't doing anything of the kind, but would tempted to do so, if not allowed to finish his sentence—but such a dam (order, order,) a dam—(confusion) he would repeat it—by such a dam—(tremendous uproar.)

Mr. Wright stood up and moved, amidst the wildest confusion, that Mr. be expelled from the House for such awful language.

Mr. Ross—(black in the face)—exclaimed that damaging statements was all he meant to say when he was interrupted by the fool—

Mr. Talbot—Who's a fool—

Mr. Ross—Foolish ass—

Mr. Cameron—Who's an ass—

Mr. Ross—(wildly)—foolish assertion of profanity.

"My Son," said a doting father, who was about taking his son into business, "what shall be the style of the new firm?" "Well, governor" said the one and twenty youth, looking up to find an answer, "I don't know; but suppose we call it John H. Samplin and father?"

In the anatomy of the hand, we find that the muscle by which we shut it is much stronger than the one by which we open it; and this holds true as to giving and receiving.

An eminent divine preached one Sunday morning from the text—"Ye are children of the devil," and in the afternoon by a funny coincidence from the words: "Children, obey your parents."

Notice to Bridge Builders.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED at the County Auditor's Office, Franklin county, Ohio, until 12 o'clock M. THURSDAY, JUNE 9th, 1859, for furnishing the materials and building a Bridge over Big Walnut Creek, at Lockbourne, in said county. The distance between the abutments to be [illegible] feet, and the entire length of the superstructure [illegible] feet: to be a single track bridge of two spans, and to be [illegible] feet wide from out to out; and [illegible] feet [illegible] inches high in the clear, between the floor and tie band, or [illegible] feet 3 inches from top to top of lower and upper chords.

Estimated amount of work and materials.
[illegible] yards excavation for foundation of abutments.
[illegible] do grading road at end of bridge.
[illegible] perch stone work (25 cubic feet to the perch) in abutments and wings.
[illegible] perch stone work (25 cubic feet to the perch) in pier.
[illegible] feet Bridge or Superstructure.

Separate bids will be received for the above [illegible] of work, or for the whole job, and will be let to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders, the Commissioners reserving the right to reject any and all bids.

Plans and specifications can be seen at the County Auditor's Office.

EDWARD LIVINGSTON,
ISAAC WHITE,
D. L. HOLTON,
Commissioners.

Columbus, May 12, 1859—[illegible]

TWO DAILY TRAINS
FROM COLUMBUS VIA THE
GREAT NATIONAL ROUTE
TO
Washington City, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

THE SHORTEST AND MOST DIRECT Route, from all points South and West, TO THE EAST
IS BY THE CENTRAL OHIO
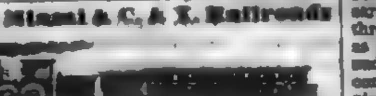
AND
BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROADS!
VIA
Columbus, Newark, Zanesville and Wheeling,

Forming one great consolidated line of travel from Columbus, Ohio, to Baltimore, connecting at Washington Junction, nine miles from Baltimore, with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company's Branch Road to WASHINGTON CITY, affording the exclusive and only through Ticket and Baggage Check arrangement between the cities of the West and the National Capital; connecting also at the Station in Baltimore with the railroads to PHILADELPHIA, NEW YORK and BOSTON, being the only route by which merchants and travelers can purchase through tickets that will enable them to visit the cities of Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York at the cost of a ticket to New York by other lines, an advantage that is afforded by this route only.

TWO DAILY TRAINS FROM COLUMBUS.
At 4:05 a. m., and 12:50 p. m.



Through Tickets to the Eastern Cities can be procured via Washington city, at an additional charge of $1.50.
Be sure to ask for tickets by the Wheeling route and Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.
Baggage checked through from Cincinnati to Baltimore and New York.
Fare to New York and Boston, $1.00 less than via any other route.

FOR THROUGH TICKETS
and all information please apply at the office of the Union Depot.
E. L. DOHERTY, General Ticket Agent, C. O. R. R.
W. P. SMITH, Master of Transportation, Baltimore.
E. V. FULLER, General Western Agent B. & O. R. R.
april 28

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS.
Embracing a Variety,
Not exceeded in this market.
Silks, Satins, Lawns, Calicoes, Cloths, Delaines, Robes, Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles, Cloaks, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.
J. C. CHITTENDEN.
may 12.

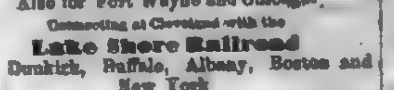
Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads

To the South and West.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 4th, 1859, Four Trains Daily (Sundays excepted,) from Columbus, in connection with Trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

FIRST TRAIN. (Daily.)
NIGHT EXPRESS—At 2:15 A. M. stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati, arriving at Cincinnati at 7:30 A. M. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c. &c. At Loveland for Chillicothe, Athens and all points on M. & C. R. R., and at Cincinnati with morning trains on Ohio & Mississippi R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, and all points South and West, and mail line steamers for Louisville.

SECOND TRAIN. (Daily except Sundays.)
NO. 1 EXPRESS—At 6 A. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin Freeport, Fort Ancient, Morrow, Loveland, (and on signal at Alton, Selma, Claysville and Deerfield) arriving at Cincinnati at 1:25 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, &c. &c.



THIRD TRAIN. (Daily except Sundays.)
NO. 2 EXPRESS—At 2 P. M. stopping at West Jefferson, London, Xenia, Morrow, Deerfield, Foster's, Loveland, Milford and Plainville, arriving at Cincinnati at 7:30 P. M., connecting at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c. &c., and at Cincinnati with evening trains on O. & M. R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c. &c.

FOURTH TRAIN. (Daily except Sundays.)
MAIL—At 3:30 P. M. stopping at Alton, Jefferson, London, Charlestown, Selma, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin Freeport, Morrow, Loveland, arriving at Cincinnati at 10:15 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, &c. &c.

RETURNING.
Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express 4:30 A. M.; No. 1 Express 10:20 a. m.; No. 2 Express 12:55 p. m.; accommodation 7:55 p. m.

For further information and Through Tickets apply to M. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot.
J. DURAND, Superintendent, Cincinnati.
P. W. STRADER, General Ticket Agent, Cincinnati.
JNO. W. DOHERTY, Agent, Columbus, O.
Columbus, April 12, 1859.

Summer Arrangement.—Time Changed.
Great Northern & Eastern Route.
Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD.
Connecting at Crestline with the
Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad
For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Baltimore, Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.
Connecting at Cleveland with the
Lake Shore Railroad
For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) FROM COLUMBUS, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.

FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 4:00 a. m. Will leave passengers at all stations, and at Galion, stop for passengers at Delaware, Ashley, Cardington, Gilead and all stations North of Galion, connecting at Crestline with the 7:00 a. m. mail train for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 2:10 p. m. also with same road at Crestline, with the 8:00 a. m. Express for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at 6:47 p. m. Also at Grafton with Toledo road for Toledo. Arrives at Cleveland at 10:00 a. m.

SECOND TRAIN.
NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 11:30 a. m., stopping only at Delaware, North Lewis, Cardington, Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London and Grafton; connecting at Crestline with the 12:25 p. m. Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 9:10 p. m.; arriving at Cleveland 3:40 p. m., connecting at 3:20 p. m. with the fast Express on Lake Shore road for the East, arriving at Erie at 8:45 p. m., Dunkirk 11:00 p. m., Buffalo 12:20 a. m., New York 2:00 p. m. next day, two hours ahead of any other line, Boston 6:00 p. m., eight hours quicker than any other line.

THIRD TRAIN.
EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at 1:20 p. m.; stopping at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at 7:20 p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad at Crestline, for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at 6:17 a. m., at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad for New York and Boston; arriving at Erie 1:55 a. m., Dunkirk 3:15 a. m.

Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.

RETURNING.
Night Express, arrives at Columbus 1:30 a. m.
Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at 3:00 p. m.
Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at 3:30 p. m.

Fare as Low as by any other Route.
For further information, and Through and Local Tickets apply to M. L. Doherty, Ticket Agent, in the Passenger Depot of the C. C. & C. and L. M. C. & X. Railroads.
E. S. FLINT, Sup't, Cleveland, Ohio.
H. C. MARSHALL, Gen'l Ticket Agent, Cleveland, Ohio.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent, Columbus, Ohio.
Columbus, April 12, 1859.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills,
DR. ROBACK'S
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts:

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they relieve

Liver Complaint,

and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. The

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in hopeless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. Thus all sexual Disabilities are removed by their cordial and gently [illegible] properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been trifled with and abused. That their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly upon the poison of disease in the blood, they

Cause soon to Heal,

and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels the liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief and, (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They hunt disease through every avenue and organ of the system, and expel it thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

Principal Office and Sales Rooms, No. 6 East Fourth St. 3d building from Main street, Cincinnati, O. Laboratory in Hammond street.

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, BY
Roberts & Samuel, Columbus.
A. J. Schueller, Columbus.
J. Nichols & Son, Columbus.
F. Alspus, Canal Winchester.
Isaac Thompson, Worthington.
R. R. Johnson, Reynoldsburg.
R. N. Buckley, Groveport.
D. Gutner, Westerville.
Henry Miller, Harrisburg.
John Malott, [illegible]
Geo. W. Evans, Dublin.
And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union.

5000 Agents Wanted—
To sell four new inventions. Agents have made over $2500 on one,—better than all other similar agencies. Send four stamps and get 80 pages particulars, gratis.
EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.
my 1 y.

1000 Agents Wanted—
For particulars send stamp.
C. P. WHITTEN, Lowell, Mass.
my 1 y.

DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, & INDIGESTION, by which persons are more or less affected, can usually be cured by taking moderate exercise, wholesome food, and a dose of Boerhave's Holland Bitters, an hour before each meal.

CHOICE SEEDS.

APPLE PIE MELON.—Seeds of this delicious substitute for pies, 6 cents [illegible] package.
MAMMOTH PROLIFIC LIMA BEANS.—These grow only six feet high and are completely covered with bunches of from 10 to 20 pods to the bunch, 6 cents package.
LARGE CHEESE SQUASH—That for pies or as a substitute for the Sweet Potato cannot be excelled, and keeps well through the winter, 12 cents.
The three Packages for 21 cents mailed.
Address, C. T. [illegible],
Care of editor "Horticultural Monthly," [illegible]
Editors of Country Newspapers inserting the above with this notice, twice, appropriately displayed, before the 15th of May, will receive eight packages of each kind of the seeds.
April 28, '59—2w.

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through that other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.

We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote,

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habitual to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
PRICE ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.

For Costiveness;
For the Cure of Dyspepsia;
For Jaundice;
For the Cure of Indigestion;
For Headache;
For the Cure of Dysentery;
For a Foul Stomach;
For the Cure of Erysipelas;
For the Piles;
For the Cure of Scrofula;
For all Scrofulous Complaints;
For the Cure of Rheumatism;
For Diseases of the Skin;
For the Cure of Liver Complaint;
For Dropsy;
For the Cure of Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum;
For Worms;
For the Cure of Gout;
For a Dinner Pill;
For the Cure of Neuralgia;
For Purifying the Blood.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per Box; Five Boxes for $1.00.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand AYER'S, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

All our Remedies are for sale by
Roberts & Samuels, No. 34 N. High St., Columbus O., Suire Eckstine & Co., Cincinnati O., Mr. Fisher Cleveland O., W. A. Graham, Zanesville, O., and by all druggists, and dealers in medicines.

Consumptives do not Dispare

CONSUMPTION CURED.
CONSUMPTION CURED.
CONSUMPTION CURED.
CONSUMPTION CURED.
CONSUMPTION CURED.

AN OLD INDIAN DOCTOR, UNCAS BRANT, while a Missionary among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains, discovered a RARE PLANT, that proves to be a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Liver Complaint, Nervous Affections, Coughs, Colds, &c. Having now made his fortune and retired from business, he will send the prescription and directions for preparing the medicine FREE OF CHARGE to all who desire it, and will send to his agent, enclosing two stamps (6 cents), to pay the return letter, with a description of their symptoms. The Old Doctor has cured more than 3000 CASES OF CONSUMPTION alone, and hopes all afflicted people will avail themselves of this opportunity, as the Doctor wishes to do all the good he can before he dies. Address all letters to

DANIEL ADEE,
Box 3331 P. O. New York.
Who is his Sole agent.
Sept 1-1m.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL.

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption,

and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,

A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in cases of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope), FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLIN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.
dec 12 1y

GROVER & BAKER'S
CELEBRATED
FAMILY SEWING MACHINES.
NEW STYLES—PRICES FROM $50 TO $125.
EXTRA CHARGE OF $5 FOR HEMMERS.

495 Broadway, - - - New York
77 Town Street, - - - Columbus
58 West Fourth Street, - - Cincinnati

These Machines sew from two spools, as purchased from the store, requiring no re-winding of thread; they Hem, Fell, Gather, and Stitch in a superior style, finishing each seam by their own operation, without recourse to the hand-needle, as is required by other machines. They will do better and cheaper sewing than any seamstress can, even if she works for one cent an hour, and are, unquestionably, the best Machines in the market for family sewing, on account of their simplicity, durability, ease of management, and adaptation to all varieties of family sewing—executing either heavy or fine work with equal facility, and without special adjustment.

As evidence of the unquestioned superiority of their Machines, the GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE COMPANY beg leave to respectfully refer to the following

TESTIMONIALS.

"Having had one of Grover & Baker's Machines in my family for nearly a year and a half, I take pleasure in commending it as every way reliable for the purpose for which it is designed—Family Sewing."—Mrs. Joshua Leavitt, wife of Rev. Dr. Leavitt, Editor of N. Y. Independent.

"I confess myself delighted with your Sewing Machine, which has been in my family for many months. It has always been ready for duty, requiring no adjustment, and is easily adapted to every variety of family sewing, by simply changing the spools of thread."—Mrs. Elizabeth Strickland, wife of Rev. Dr. Strickland, Editor of N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"After trying several different good machines, I preferred yours, on account of its simplicity, and the perfect ease with which it is managed, as well as the strength and durability of the seam. After long experience, I feel competent to speak in this manner, and to confidently recommend it for every variety of family sewing."—Mrs. E. B. Spooner, wife of the Editor of Brooklyn Star.

"I have used a Grover & Baker Sewing Machine for two years, and have found it adapted to all kinds of family sewing, from Cambric to Broadcloth. Garments have been worn out without the giving way of a stitch. The Machine is easily kept in order, and easily used."—Mrs. A. B. Whipple, wife of Rev. Geo. Whipple, New York.

"Your Sewing Machine has been in use in my family the past two years, and the ladies request me to give you their testimonials to its perfect adaptedness, as well as labor-saving qualities in the performance of family and household sewing."—Robert Boorman, New York.

"For several months we have used Grover & Baker's Sewing Machine, and have come to the conclusion that every lady who desires her sewing beautifully and quickly done, would be most fortunate in possessing one of these reliable and indefatigable 'iron needle-women,' whose combined qualities of beauty, strength and simplicity, are invaluable."—J. W. Morris, daughter of Gen. Geo. P. Morris, Editor of the Home Journal.

Extract of a letter from Thos. R. Leavitt, Esq., an American gentleman, now resident in Sydney, New South Wales, dated January 12, 1858: "I had a tent made in Melbourne, in 1853, in which there were over three thousand yards of sewing done with one of Grover & Baker's Machines, and a single seam of that has outstood all the double seams sewed by sailors with a needle and twine."

"If Homer could be called up from his murky Hades, he would sing the advent of Grover & Baker as a more benignant miracle of art than was ever Vulcan's smithy. He would denounce midnight shirt-making as 'the direful spring of woes unnumbered.'"—Prof. North.

"I take pleasure in saying that the Grover & Baker Sewing Machines have more than sustained my expectation. After trying and returning others, I have three of them in operation in my different places, and, after four years' trial, have no fault to find."—J. H. Hammond, Senator of South Carolina.

"My wife has had one of Grover & Baker's Family Sewing Machines for some time, and I am satisfied it is one of the best labor-saving machines that has been invented. I take much pleasure in recommending it to the public."—J. G. Harris, Governor of Tennessee.

"It is a beautiful thing, and puts everybody into a state of excitement of good humor. Were I a Catholic, I should insist upon Saints Grover and Baker having an eternal holiday in commemoration of their good deeds for humanity."—Cassius M. Clay.

"I think it by far the best patent in use. This Machine can be adapted from the finest cambric to the heaviest cassimere. It sews stronger, faster, and more beautifully than one can imagine. If mine could not be replaced, money could not buy it."—Mrs. J. G. Brown, Nashville, Tenn.

"It is speedy, very neat, and durable in its work; is easily understood and kept in repair. I earnestly recommend this Machine to all my acquaintances and others."—Mrs. M. A. Forrest, Memphis, Tenn.

"We find this machine to work to our satisfaction, and with pleasure recommend it to the public, as we believe the Grover & Baker to be the best Sewing Machine in use."—Deary Brothers, Allisonia, Tenn.

"If used exclusively for family purposes, with ordinary care, I will wager they will last one 'three score years and ten,' and never get out of fix."—John Erskine, Nashville, Tenn.

"I have had your Machine for several weeks, and am perfectly satisfied that the work it does is the best and most beautiful that ever was made."—Maggie Aimison, Nashville, Tenn.

"I use my Machine on coats, dressmaking, and fine linen stitching, and the work is admirable—far better than the best hand-sewing, or any other machine I have ever seen."—Lucy B. Thompson, Nashville, Tenn.

"I find the work the strongest and most beautiful I have ever seen, made either by hand or machine, and regard the Grover & Baker Machine as one of the greatest blessings to our sex."—Mrs. Taylor, Nashville, Tenn.

"I have one of Grover & Baker's Sewing Machines in use in my family, and find it invaluable. I can confidently recommend it to all persons in want of a machine."—G. T. Thompson, Nashville, Tenn.

"I take pleasure in certifying to the utility of the Grover & Baker Sewing Machines. I have used one on almost every description of work for months, and find it much stronger and better in every respect than work done by hand."—Mrs. D. W. Wheeler, Nashville, Tenn.

"I would be unwilling to dispose of my Grover & Baker Machine for a large amount, could I not replace it again at pleasure."—Mrs. H. G. Scovel, Nashville, Tenn.

"Our two Machines, purchased from you, do the work of twenty young ladies. We with pleasure recommend the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine to be the best in use."—N. Stillman & Co., Memphis, Tenn.

"The Grover & Baker Sewing Machine works admirably. I think the stitch and work far superior to that of any Sewing Machine I ever saw. On fine work, I think the Machine would be hard to beat."—W. J. Davie, Memphis, Tenn.

"I find the Machine easily managed, very durable, and take pleasure in recommending it to all who wish convenience, economy, and pleasure."—Mrs. F. Titus, Memphis, Tenn.

"The Grover & Baker Sewing Machines have given such satisfaction that we cheerfully recommend them to all who wish a good and substantial Sewing Machine. It executes work with much care and speed, and more finely than any other Machine I have seen."—Mrs. R. B. Mitchell, Memphis, Tenn.

"I am happy to give my testimony in favor of Grover & Baker's Sewing Machine, and of the perfect satisfaction it gives in every respect. It sews neatly, and is by no means complicated, and I prefer it to all others I have seen."—Mrs. Bryan, wife of Rev. A. M. Bryan, Memphis, Tenn.

"It affords me much pleasure to say, that the Machine works well, and I do not hesitate to recommend it as possessing all the advantages you claim. My wife is very much pleased with it, and we take pleasure in certifying to this effect."—R. C. Brinkley, Memphis, Tenn.

"It gives me pleasure to find the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine is giving so much satisfaction. I have it in constant use, and find it all that could be desired. It is the most simple and durable machine in use, and I heartily recommend it."—F. W. White, Memphis, Tenn.

"Having used, examined, and seen some other Sewing Machines, I feel free to say, that the Grover & Baker Machines are far superior to all others in use."—[illegible], Nashville, Tenn.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,
TO BE PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT COLUMBUS, OHIO.
By J. Birney Marshall,
At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and wholly to their interests, untrammeled by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have determined (on or about the 1st of May next) to establish in the city of Columbus, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic doctrine, and its columns shall be characterized by frankness and honesty. Its sentiments will be [illegible] veracity. Nor shall it be used for cliques or factions, but will consistently pursue the object for which it is established—that of perpetuating the institutions of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the perpetuity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the nominee of the Democratic Party, and resist everything like division, or dissension—while it will support every Democratic measure with all the ability it can bring to the duty, [illegible]—while it will support the present Administration, in all that is deemed consistent with true Democracy, and the best interests of the party, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will present the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as its first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and use every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to procure his nomination and election.

This Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on a generous and liberal support, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements.

Single copy per year, [illegible] $2
A discount of ten per cent. on clubs of ten, fifteen per cent. on clubs of twenty, and twenty per cent on those of fifty and upwards sent to a single address.
J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.
Columbus, March 22, 1859.

N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation, which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, by giving this Prospectus an insertion in their respective papers.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME I. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1859. NUMBER 4.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - - Editor.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, nor in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people North and South, to the Constitution and the Union.

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850, confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with the other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States, and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it should be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and, by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exercise of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

CLEVELAND MASS REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.—The telegraph dispatches of the 24th, say: The mass convention of the foes of the fugitive slave act, to-day, was well attended by very large numbers from the Reserve counties. Everything was orderly. A declaration was read, denouncing the fugitive slave law and the Dred Scott decision. Resolutions were also read of the same tenor, declaring the fugitive act unconstitutional and void. The Supreme Court, as designed, was subservient to party politics, and the life tenure should be abolished—the judicial circuit should be remodeled. The conviction of the Oberlin men was disgraceful and unparalleled. The prisoners were entitled to liberty and freedom. The salvation of the country rests on the great Republican party. Speeches were made by Giddings, Chase, Wade, and others.

In this connection we give the letter of WM. DENNISON, Esq., in answer to the invitation to be present and explaining his unavoidable absence, which as he will probably be the nominee of the Republican convention on the 2d, has peculiar significance at this time, and may have some influence in the future.

COLUMBUS, May 20, 1859.

S. O. GRISWOLD, Esq., and others:

GENTS—A prior engagement to attend a meeting of the Republican National Executive Committee, at Albany, New York, on the 25th inst., will prevent me complying with your kind invitation to attend the Convention you have called, to be held at Cleveland the preceding day:

Let me express my ardent hope that the proceedings of your Convention may be such as will permanently contribute to the advancement of the sacred principles of freedom, justice and humanity, which have been so violently assailed by the imprisonment in your County Jail of Plumb and Peck, and their devoted colleagues, under the insulting provisions of the Fugitive Slave Act, and that in the contest between the antagonisms of freedom and slavery, forced upon us by the Southern oligarchy and its Northern allies, we may at all times prove ourselves worthy descendants of the heroic founders of the Republic, who declared one of the greatest purposes of the Federal Constitution to be, the securing to themselves and their posterity "the blessings of liberty."

Accept the assurance of my sincere regard personally, and of my uncompromising hostility to slavery and despotism in every form.

Truly yours,

W. DENNISON, Jr.

Appendix to the Speech of Hon. S. A. Douglas.

In the Senate of the United States, February 23d, 1859, in reply to Hon. A. G. Brown, of Mississippi, in opposition to the passage of a Code of Laws by Congress to protect slavery in the territories, and in favor of banishing from the halls of Congress all questions touching domestic slavery in the territories, and remanding them to the people of the territories, to be disposed of as they may see proper, subject to an appeal to the judicial tribunals, to test the validity of the territorial enactments under the Constitution of the United States, together with an appendix showing the position of distinguished public men on this question in the great contests of 1854 and 1856.

NOTE BY MR. DOUGLAS.

The debate was continued at considerable length by several Senators, some of whom emphatically repudiated the idea that it was the intention of the Kansas-Nebraska act to affirm the principle of NON-INTERVENTION BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN THE TERRITORIES, [illegible] by all questions pertaining to African slavery, as well as all other matters of [illegible], [illegible] from the halls of Congress, and [illegible] to the people of the Territories respectively, to be disposed of as they should see proper, subject only to the constitution, with the right of appeal to [illegible] the decision of the territorial legislation, to the judicial tribunals to determine the validity of such enactments under the Constitution of the United States.

They went farther, and insisted that it is the duty of Congress to [illegible] and enact [illegible] laws to protect slavery in the Territories whenever the Territorial Legislature [illegible].

One Senator (Mr. [illegible]) [illegible], that if he had understood the Kansas-Nebraska bill at the time of its passage as I now construe it, he never would have voted for it.

Inasmuch as I was deprived from the position of (leadership) of the [illegible] Territories, which I had held for eleven years in the Senate and two years in the House of Representatives, because of my firm adherence to the principle of NON-INTERVENTION AND POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY in the Territories, as defined in the Kansas-Nebraska act, I should have referred to the debates in 1854, when that act was passed, and in 1856 when Mr. Buchanan was elected President on the distinct issue of "NON-INTERVENTION AND POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY," to show, by extracts from speeches and the public records, what was the true construction of the Kansas-Nebraska act, had not the debate been sprung upon the Senate suddenly, without affording opportunity for an examination of the debates and public records. But an intelligent and esteemed friend has since made a thorough examination into the whole subject, and has submitted to me his report, which I believe to be fair and impartial, and which I [illegible].

"The record legislation of Congress, respecting domestic slavery, derived, as it has been, from the original and pure fountain of legitimate political power, the will of the majority, promises ere long to allay the dangerous excitement. This legislation is founded upon principles as ancient as free government itself, and, in accordance with them, has simply declared that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."

APPENDIX.

Extracts from the speech of Hon. S. A. Smith, of Tennessee, delivered in the House of Representatives, June 25, 1856:

"The controlling minds in that hour (1850) which tried the strength of the band which binds us (Cass, Clay and Webster,) found no solution of the problem which they were compelled to solve, but in the great fundamental principle which relieved our fathers from like difficulties in the formation and adoption of the Constitution itself.

"For twenty years this question had agitated Congress and the country without a single beneficial result. They resolved that it should be transferred from these halls, that all unconstitutional restrictions should be removed, and that the people should determine for themselves the charters of their local and domestic institutions under which they were to live, with precisely the same rights, but no greater than those which were enjoyed by the old Thirteen States.

"Excitement was intense and clamor loud, but the sober judgment of the people ratified the constitutional action of their representatives.

"In 1854 the same question was presented when the necessity arose for the organization of the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska, and the identical principle was applied for its solution. I, for one, as a Southern man, did not accept it with reference to the result which it might probably produce. I accepted it because it was constitutional, just, and safe. I accepted it because I believed it to be the only principle which could secure the legitimate rights of all sections of the Union. It had not merely the convictions of my own judgment to sustain it, but it had the sanction of the patriotism and wisdom of the Revolutionary fathers. If this great principle of popular sovereignty be justly carried out and sacredly maintained, it will give in time to come what we have enjoyed in the past—union, strength, prosperity and happiness. If it be struck down by passion, fanaticism or sectional prejudice, in either section of the Confederation, I will not [illegible].

"I say here, as a Southern man, and I believe the [illegible] are representative on this floor, that if a bill were introduced in Congress to establish slavery in Kansas or any other Territory of the United States, I should unhesitatingly vote against it. And this I would do notwithstanding I honestly believe African slavery to be a moral, a social, and a political blessing, applicable alike to the master and to the slave. Why, then, cannot the North meet us upon this common ground, and declare that they would not prohibit slavery by congressional enactment in any of the Territories of the United States? This would leave the people to be affected by the institution to determine the question for themselves in their own way, 'subject only to the Constitution of the United States.'"—(See Cong. Globe, 1st Sess. 34th Congress, part 2, p. 1471.)

Extracts from a speech of the Hon. A. C. Dodge, of Iowa, in the United States Senate, February 25, 1854:

"With this digression upon points wholly unlooked for in the discussion, and being a sincere believer in the doctrine of 'squatter sovereignty' in its fullest, broadest, deepest sense, I propose now, in my humble way, to offer some arguments in support of the bill for the organization of Nebraska and Kansas—it being in its present shape, as its friends propose to make it, the noblest tribute which has ever yet been offered by the Congress of the United States to the sovereignty of the people."

"The addresses, resolutions, and petitions of the fathers of the Revolution, both in matter and spirit, touching the extent of the power of the Parliament of England to legislate for the colonies, are thoroughly imbued with the principles for which the advocates of non-intervention are to-day contending—The Continental Congress of 1774 declared that—

"'The English colonists are entitled to a free and exclusive power of legislation in their several provincial Legislatures, where their rights of representation can alone be preserved in all cases of taxation and internal polity.'

"The same principle seems to have governed the wise patriotic men who framed our Constitution after the independence of the Republic was secured."

* * * * * * * * *

"And, sir, honesty and consistency, with ourselves in 1850, demand that those of us who supported the Compromise measures, should zealously support this bill, because it is a return to the sound principle of leaving to the people of the Territories the right of determining for themselves their domestic institutions."—Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess., 33d Cong., vol. 29, pages 376, 377, 378.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. T. F. Bowie, of Maryland, in the House of Representatives, January 28, 1856:

"If this be so—and I scarcely think it can admit of a doubt—it follows clearly that the rules and regulations which Congress is empowered to make respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States, relate exclusively themselves to such rules and regulations only as may be needful for Congress to make in reference to the disposition, preservation and management of such territory as the common property of all the States, and not to a class of powers entirely political in their nature, which have for their end only the establishment of forms of government for the protection and enjoyment of civil and religious freedom. This latter class of of powers, sir, it seems to me, will more appropriately be found among those which were reserved for the people, and which the framers of the Constitution never intended should be surrendered to the Federal Government by any portion of the people of this country, whether living in the States or after-acquired territories. The great struggle between the British crown, under the administration of Lord North, and the United Colonies, as to the right of the colonies to govern themselves in all cases whatever, had been finally closed by the establishment of that great fundamental political truth, that man is capable of self-goverment, and had the framers of our Constitution inserted in that instrument any provisions inconsistent with that great truth, to be afterwards applied or enforced against the people of any of the States or after-acquired territories of the Union, they would, in my judgment, sir, have falsified every principle which induced the colonies to take up arms in defense of their own rights to separate and independent sovereignty. But, sir, I have not time to pursue these reflections further, in the present condition of the House. I will take the opportunity of doing so at some other time."—See Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Session 34th Con., vol. 33, page 56.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. George W. Jones, of Tennessee, delivered in the House of Representatives, December 28, 1855:

"Then, sir, you may call it by what name you please—non-intervention, squatter sovereignty, or popular sovereignty. It is, sir, the power of the people to govern themselves, and they, and they alone, should exercise it, in my opinion, as well while in a territorial condition as in the position of a State. I would ask those who deny this doctrine, whether they are of my party or of any other party—whether they are from the North or from the South—to reconcile another provision of that act with the doctrine that neither this Government nor the people of the Territory have any power over this isolated question while in a territorial condition. Look to the Kansas and Nebraska act and you will there find prescribed the qualifications of voters. How long to continue, sir? Until the first election. And the qualifications of voters and of holding office at all subsequent elections, shall be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly. Which is the higher prerogative of sovereignty, to prescribe the rights of property, or to prescribe the qualification of voters? I hold that the highest prerogative of sovereignty is to prescribe the qualification of voters—to draw the line between the citizen, the coequal constituent of sovereignty in a country, and the subject, vassal or serf.

"I believe that the great principle—the right of the people in the Territories, as well as in the States, to form and regulate their own domestic institutions in their own way—is clearly and unequivocally embodied in the Kansas-Nebraska act, and if it is not, it should have been. Believing that it was the living, vital principle of the act, I voted for it.—Those are my views, honestly entertained, and will be defended."—(Cong. Globe, 1st Session 34th Congress, part 1, page 99.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. J. M. Elliott, of Kentucky, delivered in the House of Representatives, August 4th, 1856:

"In 1854, the Democratic party, in order to carry out the spirit of the Compromise of 1850, declared that the line in prohibition of slavery north of 36 deg 30 min., known as the Missouri Compromise line, was inoperative and void; and in forming Territorial Governments for Kansas and Nebraska, they inserted a provision leaving the question of slavery, as well as all other domestic questions, to be settled by the people of said Territories, just as has been done in the formation of the Territories of Utah and New Mexico, by the Compromise measures of 1850.—(See Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Session 34th Congress, vol. 36.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. John S. Caskie, of Virginia, delivered in the House of Representatives, May 19, 1854:

"Now comes the question, is there any sufficient reason in the difference between myself and some of the friends of the Nebraska-Kansas bill in regard to the opinions I have just expressed, for division between us in reference to it, a hesitation on their part or mine in its support? I answer at once there is none. The bill gives the inhabitants of Kansas and Nebraska all the rights which they possess under the Constitution, and none other, and leaves the decision of what those rights are to the Courts. That is the agreement as to Territorial powers, plain as a pike staff on the face of the bill, and fair and honorable as it is plain. What says the bill?

"'It being the true intent and meaning of this act not to legislate slavery into any Territory or State, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States.'

"I have heard objections to the strength of the word 'form' in this connection. But it will be observed that the clause in which it is used embraces the power of the people of Nebraska and Kansas over the institution of slavery not only while they are in the territorial germ, but when they reach the State of development—a period at which their jurisdiction becomes exclusive and complete. The Constitution is made the measure of their power in both stages of their advancement. The language used in its definition is brief, plain, and not, while the rule by which it is gauged is unerring.

"In other sections, (sections six and twenty-four,) the bill limits the legislative power of these Territories to 'all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act.'

"Now, is it not clear, that territorial sovereignty can be in the bill only, if it is in the Constitution—if not in the Constitution, it is not in the bill? We make the judiciary the umpire of our difference on this point. This is a ground, and the only ground on which just men united against the Missouri restriction, but divided as to an incidental question connected with it can meet and stand together. If territorial sovereignty be in the Constitution, I hope I am patriot enough to yield my opposition to it. If it be not, I am sure my friends who differ from me about it are patriots enough to yield their advocacy of it. And so we go hand in hand to break down that disunion, 'middle wall of partition,' which now separates sections, and to re-establish that broad brotherhood, under which our Independence was achieved, and on which our Government is based.—Can I object to the arbitrament to which the bill submits the question of territorial authority to exclude slavery? Never, while I retain the confidence I now have, in the position I now hold; never, until I can believe that the illustrious Carolinian—my political morning star—was no herald of the day; and that the whole host of Southern men were dolts, when, in 1848, they proposed upon far less inducement, to submit equally grave issues to the same tribunal."—See Appendix Cong. Globe, vol. 38, page 1104.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. A. G. Brown of Mississippi, delivered in the United States Senate, July 2d 1856:

"I learn now, for the first time, that the people of a Territory have not the competence to regulate their own domestic and police matters in their own way, but that it belongs to Congress; that it is only in the higher branches that they have the right to regulate their own affairs in their own way. Am I to understand by this that the people of a Territory have the right, if they choose, to exclude or abolish slavery; and that if I believe, as a southern man, such an abolition to be unconstitutional, I must go to the courts for the maintenance of my rights; and yet, if other measures of less importance, mere matters of police regulation, are adopted, they may come to Congress and beseech legislation to put it all right? If the major proposition includes the minor, as I suppose it does, and the people of the Territory have the right to legislate on these great questions for themselves, independent of the action of Congress, I apprehend they have an equal right to legislate for themselves on smaller questions. I [illegible] tell me where the line is; to what particular question is it applicable?

"Under the general phraseology of the Kansas bill, he admits the people of the Territory have the exclusive right to legislate. I suppose, when we passed the bill, that we intended by it to give them a right to legislate on all subjects touching their domestic policy; and that if anybody was dissatisfied he should go to the courts, and not come to Congress for his remedy. This has been my understanding, and I have endeavored to live up to it. My friend from Michigan and myself differ very widely as to what are the powers of a Territorial Legislature—he believing that they can exercise sovereign rights, and I believing no such thing; he contending that they have a right to exclude slavery, and I not admitting the proposition; but both of us concurring in the opinion that it is a question to be decided by the courts, and not by Congress. If we are agreed on that, let us agree on this other proposition. If I had been the party aggrieved by the laws of Kansas, I know the place to which I was pointed to seek my remedy. If others are aggrieved, let them go to the same place.—(Appendix to Congressional Globe, 34th Congress, 1st sess., p. 801.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. Wm. C. Dawson, of Georgia, in the Senate of the United States, March 3, 1854:

"Is there any other object as to the organization of these two Territories? I do not know of any other which was sufficiently strong to make an impression on my mind. I have disposed, therefore, of the objections to the organization.

"Now, sir, the next question is, how are these Territories to be organized? There seems to be a division of sentiment upon this point. Some wish to have a governor and a few other gentlemen compose a council and govern them. This bill provides for a legislative body, to be chosen by the people. I have one observation to make upon this matter, which I think will cover a great deal of the argument. The people who settle there are American citizens, entitled, under the Constitution of the United States, to the same privileges and immunities which you and I possess and enjoy. They are entitled to the right of voting for those who are to govern them. Those of us who are friendly to this bill, let the people elect to their Legislature; they know whom to choose to govern them, and control and manage their rights better than we do. Where is the man who, at this day, would rise up and say that there is anybody known to the Constitution of this country, or any part of the organization of this Government, which can take away the representative right of citizens of the United States? However we may differ on other matters, all of us will yield that point.

"The next question is, should that legislative council, thus chosen by the people, have the right of making laws to govern all the domestic concerns of that people—plenary power like the States? We impose one limitation upon the exercise of their power. What is that limitation? It is that they shall legislate, subject to the Constitution of the United States. That Constitution limits them as well as it does us, and we propose to confer upon them all the powers of self-government which any other people in this country have under the limitations of the Constitution.—(Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess. 33d Cong., vol. 29, p. 299.)

Extracts from the speech of the Hon. T. L. Clingman, at present a Senator of the United States from North Carolina, in the House of Representatives, April 4, 1854:

"This, in my judgment, is the best species of non-intervention. We say that the people of the Territory may legislate as the Constitution of the United States permits them to do, without the intervention of Congressional law, French law, Spanish law, Mexican law, or Indian law. It makes the Territory like a sheet of blank paper, on which our citizens may write American constitutional law."

* * * * * * * *

"It has been well said that there is a great resemblance between this issue and that involved in the struggle between the colonies and Great Britain at the Declaration of Independence. There is, however, one great striking difference between the two cases. The colonies in 1776 denied the right of Great Britain to tax them to the smallest extent; but the people of Kansas and Nebraska say to Congress, you may impose any amount of taxation upon us and we will cheerfully pay it; you may make your own disposition of the public lands, lay off your military roads and post roads, and establish your forts and arsenals; you may subject us to the action of every law of Congress that the citizens of any State in this Union is subject to; but when you have done all that, when you have exhausted all your powers under the Constitution of the United States, then we ask the poor privilege of managing our local affairs according to our own wishes. And why should they not have it? Why should Massachusetts or North Carolina control the people of those Territories? Sir, the question stands upon the great republican right of every community to legislate for itself."—(Appen. Cong. Globe, 1st Sess 33d Cong., vol. 29, p. 469.)

Extract from the speech of the Hon. E. Kidwell, of Virginia, [illegible] the House of Representatives, August 11, 1856:

"The people of Kansas and Nebraska are allowed by organic act, to pass such laws as they please, subject only to the Constitution of the United States. If a majority of the people of either of the Territories named are opposed to establishing slavery, and they pass an act prohibiting the introduction of additional slaves, many Southern statesmen believe such an act would be unconstitutional, while many Northern statesmen think it would not be. Which is right and which is wrong, the Supreme Court, under the Kansas-Nebraska act, would decide. This law does not take sides with either North or South, but leaves the question open for the decision of the Court, to which it rightfully belongs."—Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess. 34th Congress, vol. 33, pages 1267.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. C. J. Faulkner, of Virginia, delivered in the House of Representatives, April 10, 1854:

"But, sir, it may be that slavery will seek its expansion in Kansas and Nebraska, and if so, who, here has the right to complain? It will be their own act—the act of the people of those Territories, and they surely are competent to determine for themselves, whether their social and political condition will be most advanced by its toleration or exclusion. They will not be without the most ample experience to guide them to a proper conclusion; and it is rank arrogance and folly for this Government to seek to control them upon a point which their own interests and instincts can far more safely instruct them, than they can be by the gratuitous advice of those who will never partake of the good or the evil of their institutions.

"Sir, much obloquy has been cast upon the distinguished Senator from Illinois, for his agency in bringing forward this great measure. For one, I take this occasion to say that I honor him for it; and when the passion and the excitement of the hour have passed away, the country will do justice to the motives and to the wisdom and sagacity of his act. Distinguished as he has been throughout his whole public career, for enlarged, liberal, and comprehensive views, this act places him upon the highest pedestal of national statesmanship. The principles of this bill belong neither to the North nor to the South, but to the whole country. They are promulgated with no view to advance the interests of any one section, but to promote the peace and tranquility of all. They embody the vital principle of the Constitution; they reflect the recorded wisdom of the sages of the Revolution. They are the principles of justice, of equality, of free government, of popular sovereignty, of perpetual union, every departure from which has filled the country with commotion, and left behind it the scars of fraternal strife."—(Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess. 33d Congress, vol. 29, page 482.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. J. H. Lumpkin, of Georgia, delivered in the House of Representatives, August 2, 1856:

"It became necessary, in 1854, to provide a government for the Territories west of Missouri; and the Democratic party of the Senate and House of Representatives faithful to their pledges and to the Constitution of the United States, did, in framing Governments for Kansas and Nebraska, incorporate the same principle, even to the very letter, of the language employed in the bill organizing Territorial Governments for Utah and New Mexico, and thus manifested their willingness to perpetuate the principles of non-intervention by any Congressional legislation on the purely domestic institution of negro slavery."—(See Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Session 34th Congress, vol. 33, page 1126.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. A. G. Talbott, of Kentucky, delivered in the House of Representatives, July 28, 1856:

"Well, sir, the slavery agitation ceased, the country was quiet, the measures of 1850 were approved by everybody and by every section; the more the principle of non-intervention was investigated, the more popular and acceptable it seemed to be. Every one who looked at it and investigated it saw at once that it was only carrying out the great principle upon which our Government is based—man's right and capability of self-government. They saw at once that it was only extending to the Territories precisely the same privileges which are now, and have been since the Government was first organized, enjoyed by every State in the Union. And in 1852, the Whig party and the Democratic party both met in national convention, and endorsed the principle of non-intervention, which had been so adopted in lieu of the Missouri restriction, in spirit and in substance."

"Now, sir, I say that in view of all these facts, Congress could not have done otherwise than pass the Kansas-Nebraska bill, just as it is. It is just, constitutional and right; it neither legislates slavery into nor excludes it from the Territories, but leaves the people thereof perfectly free to organize their own governments, and regulate their own domestic institutions for themselves. If, Mr. Chairman, the people are capable of self-government, who, in our country, will say they ought not to do it? If they have the right, who will say they shall not do it?—If, then, they have both the capacity and the right, in reason's name, in the name of justice and our glorious Constitution, let them do it."—(See Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Session 34th Congress, vol. 33, page 1249.)

[illegible]

☞ A report from San. Antonio, Texas, states that Gen. Twiggs is lying dangerously ill there, and is not expected to live.

THE STORM.—Several beautiful shade trees on State street were blown down by the storm Sunday afternoon.

☞ The statement that the New York and Erie Railroad had suspended payments is confirmed. Coupons noted for payment Thursday and Friday are unpaid.

☞ PAUL MORPHY arrived at Boston on Saturday, and was received at the depot by a Committee of the Boston Chess Club and escorted to the Revere House.

DIOCESAN CONVENTIONS.—The following are the places and times of meetings of the Diocesan Conventions of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the Western States:

Ohio—Columbus, June 2; Kentucky—Louisville, May 2, Indiana—Indianapolis, June 1; Illinois—Chicago, September 21; Michigan—Detroit, June 14; Iowa—Davenport, May 25; Wisconsin—Fond du Lac, June 8; Missouri—Booneville, May 27. The General Convention is to be held at Richmond, Virginia, on the 5th of October.

PREPARING FOR WALKER.—The Administration is considerably puzzled and taken aback at the sudden turning up of WALKER. They have all along been assured by the filibuster leaders at Washington and elsewhere that he had given up all intention of interfering further with Nicaraguan affairs. Our squadron in those waters, however, have full instructions what to do with him in case they catch him. It is believed at Washington that he contemplated landing at Sonora.

Democratic State Convention—Armory Hall—Thursday, May 26.

The delegates did not meet at the appointed hour it being thought advisable on the part of the Committee having the matter in charge to postpone the time until 11 o'clock A. M. Early in the morning it was generally understood that H. B. PAYNE, Esq., of Cuyahoga Co., had withdrawn his name as candidate for Governor; this was probably the result of a caucus held last evening.

The number of delegates in attendance was unusually large, and it was obvious at an early hour, that there were many conflicting elements among the delegates.

DISPATCH FROM JUDGE RANNEY.

The following dispatch was received in the morning from Judge RANNEY.

RAVENNA, O., May 26, 1859.

Messrs. Chas. Thomas, J. B. Egley, [illegible] and Wm. Myers, Columbus, O.

I do not wish to compete for a nomination, but if pretty unanimously desired, I will not refuse.

R. P. RANNEY.

At 11 o'clock precisely the convention came to order by the nomination of WM. B. WOODS of Licking, by Mr. DURBIN of Lawrence, temporary chairman.

Mr. WOODS, on taking the chair, made a few pertinent remarks.

SECRETARIES.

C B Flood, of Cuyahoga;
W C Hood, of Scioto;
L E Critchfield, of Holmes;
S Browne, of Cuyahoga;
W C Hall, of Brown.

A motion to appoint temporary secretaries met with decided objections.

Colonel Manypenny moved that the delegates come forward and present their credentials—Tabled.

A motion to appoint Committees on Credentials, Rules, Resolutions, Permanent Organization, and by calling the districts, allowing one from each district, was carried.

The following is the list of committees:

COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS.

For	1st District—	S B McGinness
"	2d "	B Smith
"	3d "	G W Houck
"	4th "	J Counts
"	5th "	O D Wilson
"	6th "	M Devoe
"	7th "	D B Warner
"	8th "	J B Burnett
"	9th "	R Wilson
"	10th "	Ralph Leete
"	11th "	G Leans
"	12th "	W Griswold
"	13th "	Jno M Brown
"	14th "	J J Bootman
"	15th "	Col Mungen
"	16th "	A W McCormick
"	17th "	T W Peacock
"	18th "	H E Smith
"	19th "	J W Fitch
"	20th "	T J Carlin
"	21st "	Jas Means

COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

For	1st District—	Geo E Pugh
"	2d "	J M Armstrong
"	3d "	C L Vallandigham
"	4th "	G V Dorsey
"	5th "	A J Taylor
"	6th "	M Patterson
"	7th "	Durbin Ward
"	8th "	J S Ludlow
"	9th "	J W Payne
"	10th "	E B Eshelman
"	11th "	Judge Cheney
"	12th "	S W Sellypenny
"	13th "	B C Brumback
"	14th "	William Givens
"	15th "	Chas Johnston
"	16th "	D A Bell
"	17th "	J H Heaton
"	18th "	S S Tyler
"	19th "	H B Payne
"	20th "	Wm Russell
"	21st "	Chas N Allen

ON RULES AND ORGANIZATION.

For	1st District—	G W C Johnson
"	2d "	C W Hendrickson
"	3d "	R H Hendrickson
"	4th "	W B Kelly
"	5th "	C P Edson
"	6th "	R S Clement
"	7th "	G V Baldwin
"	8th "	G F Stayman
"	9th "	Judge Bell
"	10th "	J Vallery
"	11th "	Judge Hutchinson
"	12th "	C Follett
"	13th "	H Wildman
"	14th "	A P Dayton
"	15th "	Dr Perkey
"	16th "	J S Roberts
"	17th "	J Williams
"	18th "	R H Hammond
"	19th "	M Johnston
"	20th "	J M Nash
"	21st "	B F Potts

Motions were made and carried, appointing meeting places for the several committees, when on motion the Convention took a recess until 2 o'clock, P. M. [illegible]

During the recess the Committee on Credentials met at the Hall to arrange matters pertaining to the presentation and reception of credentials. Several counties entitled to two or three delegates had a representation in attendance of from five to nine, and much discussion took place as to the manner of receiving the proper delegates, and debarring from participating in the Convention those who had no right to a vote.

Mr. Griswold, from [illegible], stated that he thought the former rules adopted by State Conventions the most applicable to the case,—i. e., that each county should cast her proper number of votes through one delegate, that is, that each delegation should elect one of their number to cast the entire vote, he being subject to the will of his delegation. The matter was finally settled by the passage of a resolution, to the effect that each county delegation immediately inform the Committee on Credentials how many votes they were entitled to, and also the name of each delegate.

[It was here discovered that Perry Co., had in convention two sets of delegates, one from Somerset, and one from New Lexington, both vehemently claiming their rights. The Somerset delegates were represented by Mr. Cox of the late House of Representatives and the New Lexington delegates by Mr. Vanatta late Senator. The contest for the honor was warm, and prolonged, and finally concluded by the New Lexington delegation gaining the day, much to the dissatisfaction of Somerset.]

AFTERNOON SESSION—2 O'CLOCK P. M.

The Convention convened at the appointed hour, and was called to order by pro tem President Woods. The Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity and was distressingly hot, so much, so that it was almost impossible to keep any order, which added to the want of seats to accommodate the delegates, put the convention to considerable inconvenience.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS.

The Committee on credentials made their report; they stated that there were many delegates in attendance, who were not entitled to seats in Convention, and they had taken the responsibility of selecting such delegates from the number as were necessary to fill the delegations. A motion to adopt the report of the Committee without reading, met with serious objections and opened an animated discussion.

Mr. McKenzie moved that the report be referred back to the Committee, with instructions to report to the Convention the lists of delegates from each county, as they had received them. He did not think it was Democratic for any committee to strike from the list of delegates any names without the consent of the Convention, it was unprecedented, and he for one would not allow it. Many other objections were urged, and great confusion prevailed.—(Cries of "order," "go on," "question," "sit down," &c. [illegible]

A delegate from Brown Co., got the floor, he was one of the Committee on Credentials, and considered it within their province to strike from overfilled lists any names they thought proper. It was the only way in which business could be got through with.

Here several delegates rose to the floor, amid loud cries of "Mr. Chairman," "question," "sit down," and the knocking of the Speaker's hammer reigned supreme for the time being.

A delegate in front, made some remark about the scarcity of seats, when some one near the door stated that there was plenty of room over him.

Another turmoil took place, when the Speaker decided that both gentlemen were out of order, and quiet was once more restored. The question now turned on the motion to refer the report of the Committee on Credentials back with instructions.

A member of the committee stated that if the report was referred back to them, they should have to ask until to-morrow to report, as some of the names handed them were so badly written that they could not decypher them.

A voice—Get some one to help you that can read.

Judge Parker offered an amendment to the motion of Mr. McKenzie, that, the motion be voted upon by counties,—carried.

A vote was then taken by counties, which resulted—yeas 101, nays 211. So the motion to refer back was lost.

Mr. McKenzie moved that the Committee on Credentials give the counties that are over represented the privilege of selecting their own delegates, and not allow the committee to dictate to them. [illegible]

The chairman stated that, that motion was provided for in their report, if the Convention was ready to hear it read. [illegible]

The motion to accept the report without reading, was withdrawn, and the reading of the report commenced.

Another motion was here made to dispense with the reading, which, after some debate, was carried.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PERMANENT ORGANIZATION, RULES AND BUSINESS.

The Committee on Permanent Organization, Rules and Business reported the following officers:

For President—Barnabas Burns, [illegible]

Vice Presidents

1st district—		G W C Johnson
2nd	"	W M Robb
3d	"	D Morts
4th	"	S Scott
5th	"	H J Boesner
6th	"	W Roudebush
7th	"	G B Gardner
8th	"	J S Robb
9th	"	D Riblett
10th	"	Thos McNelly
11th	"	E Vanatta
12th	"	J R Stansbery
13th	"	G S Patterson
14th	"	J Larwell
15th	"	J Burns
16th	"	A Taggart
17th	"	W Spriggs
18th	"	D O'Brien
19th	"	D R Page
20th	"	John R Wood
21st	"	J S Wood

Secretary—E D Kinsman, of Cuyahoga

Assistant Secretaries.

1st district—		S S McGinness
2nd	"	C W Hendrickson
3d	"	T Thrasher
4th	"	P Dumbaugh
5th	"	G Roberts
6th	"	W Hall
7th	"	L Smith
8th	"	G S Lincoln
9th	"	J A Estell
10th	"	W C Hood
11th	"	S Pennebaker
12th	"	A L Perrill
13th	"	H C Brumback
14th	"	A P Dayton
15th	"	L Harper
16th	"	F Snell
17th	"	J R Mitchell
18th	"	W H Burke
19th	"	None reported
20th	"	J M Nash
21st	"	W M Clark

[illegible] RULES OF ORDER.

Resolved, That the Convention select candidates for the several State offices in the following order:

1st Governor
2d Lieut Governor
3d Judge of Supreme Court
4th Auditor of State
5th Treasurer of State
6th Secretary of State
7th Member of Board of Public Works
8th Commissioner of Common Schools.

Resolved, That the vote shall be taken by counties in alphabetical order and viva voce, and a majority of [illegible] necessary to a choice.

Resolved, That the ordinary Parliamentary Rules shall be the rules for the government of this Convention.

The President on taking the chair addressed the Convention, advising order, harmony and united action during the approaching campaign and promised the party a glorious victory. On taking his seat the report of the Committee on Resolutions was called for.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States, and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we affirm, immovably, to the principle of "Non-Intervention, by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal government; after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted; and our Union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those practices which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population. For these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor; is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure rendition, in 1793 and 1850 ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress, to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully [illegible] hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together, under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we should hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice, and that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the dangers of War rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah, in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commends our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right, desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the paramount interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the late Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to the people of Ohio at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of mere violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

The reading of the resolutions were loudly applauded. A tremendous round following the reading of each. The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

GOVERNOR.

The nomination of State offices being next in order Henry C. Payne, of Cuyahoga co. moved that Rufus P. Ranney, of Portage co., be the unanimous nominee of the Convention. Carried.

LT. GOVERNOR.

The following named gentlemen were brought before the Convention as candidates of this office: Chas. W. Blair, of Clinton, Genl. W. T. Lytle, of Hamilton, T. J. Gallagher, of Hamilton, W. H. Safford, of Ross, Daniel Leadbetter of Holmes, Jas. G. Egley, of Hamilton, Wm. Dunbar, of Knox, Jos. Burns, of Coshocton, G. W. Andrews, of Auglaize, G. W. Hough, of Columbiana, and Henry West, of Belmont. The name of Genl. W. T. Lytle was withdrawn by his friends.

FIRST BALLOT.—Total No. of votes cast 316, necessary to a choice 159.—Blair 72, Gallagher 39, Safford 48, Egley 63, Leadbetter 6, Dunbar 36, Burns 17, Andrews 30, Hough 2, West 18.

SECOND BALLOT—Total No. of votes 313, necessary to a choice 157.—Blair 81, Gallagher 35, Safford 67, Egley (withdrawn) Leadbetter 0, Dunbar 60, Burns 5, Andrews 60, Hough 0, West 24.

THIRD BALLOT.—Total number of votes 314, necessary to a choice 158.—Blair, 70; Gallagher, 31; Safford 67, Leadbetter, 0, Dunbar, 40, Burns, 0; West 18; Hough, 0 Andrews, 68.

A motion was made and carried, to drop the candidate having the least number of votes on the fourth and each successive ballot, until a choice was made.

No choice being made on the third ballot, the friends of Mr. Gallagher withdrew his name. Leadbetter, Burns and Hough having received no votes were dropped and Mr. West's name was dropped in accordance with the above motion.

FOURTH BALLOT.—Total No. of votes 199, necessary to a choice 160.—Blair 116, Safford 130, Dunbar 4, Andrews 63. No choice having been made, and Mr. Dunbar having received no votes, his name was dropped. Mr. Andrews' name was dropped in accordance with the resolution.

FIFTH BALLOT—Total number of votes 317 necessary to a choice 159—Blair 133, Safford 184, Safford having received a majority of all votes cast, was declared the nominee of the Convention for Lieut Governor.

FOR JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT.

The following named were presented to the convention: [illegible]

Henry C. Whitman, of Fairfield Co., W H Baldwin, of Clinton; Geo. Sliter, of Wayne; Wm. Kennon, Jr., of Belmont; Edward Archbold, Monroe. [illegible]

A motion was made and adopted, that in the event of no one being made on the first ballot, the candidate receiving the least number of votes should be dropped on each successive ballot.

FIRST BALLOT—Whitman 130, Baldwin 68, Sliter 81, Kennon 26, Archbold 16. The name of Mr. Kennon was withdrawn and the name of Edward Archbold was dropped in accordance with the resolution.

SECOND BALLOT—Whitman 182½, Baldwin 25, Sliter 109½. Whitman having received a majority of all the votes cast was declared the nominee.

AUDITOR OF STATE.

The following names were presented: A. H. Gale, of Erie; Edwin M Phelps, of Auglaize, G V Dorsey, of Miami, W H Woodrow, of of Crawford; James Lodwick, of Scioto

Mr. Dorsey wished his name withdrawn, as he was not a candidate for any office. His friends would not listen to the proposition.

FIRST BALLOT.—Dorsey 198, Woodrow 16, Gale 40, Kinsley 25, Lodwick 2.

Mr Dorsey having received a majority of all votes was declared the nominee.

TREASURER OF STATE.

The following names were presented: W Bushnell, of Richland; M B Davis, of Clermont; G W Holmes, of Hamilton, James Blake, of Knox. W Carey, of Hardin; — Harmount, of Tuscarawas.

FIRST BALLOT — Bushnell 135, Davis 53, Holmes 100, Blake 7, Harmount 21. No choice being made, Messrs. Harmount, Blake and Carey were either dropped or withdrawn.

SECOND BALLOT—Bushnell 177, Davis 20, Holmes 121. Mr. Bushnell having received a majority of all votes cast was declared the nominee.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

The following names were presented: Jno G. Hunt, of Clark, Henry Pomeroy, of Belmont; Jacob Reinhard, of Franklin; John Sheridan, of Jefferson.

A motion to adjourn for an hour was lost during an uproarious contest.

FIRST BALLOT—Hunt, 60, Pomeroy 18, Reinhard 182, Sheridan 50.

Mr. Reinhard having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared nominated.

MEMBER OF BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

The following named of candidates were presented: Ebenezer Rawson, of Portage, James Tomlinson, of Washington; Saml. G. Foster, of Franklin.

FIRST BALLOT.—Rawson 43, Tomlinson 178, Foster 105.

Mr. Tomlinson was nominated.

FOR SCHOOL COMMISSIONER.

The names presented were: Chas. N. Allen, of Harrison, Eli T. Tappan, of Jefferson, A. McGregor, of Crawford, Geo. W. Andrews, of Auglaize; H. Rice, of Clinton.

FIRST BALLOT—Allen 161, Tappan 66, McGregor 63, Andrews 6, Rice 13.

Allen was declared nominated.

On motion, the nominations were made unanimous.

The committee to appoint a State Central Committee reported

For	1st District—	L W Bishop, Cincinnati
"	2d "	W T Forrest
"	3d "	Geo W Houck, Dayton
"	4th "	Henry Miller, [illegible]
"	5th "	Ed Phelps, Defiance
"	6th "	Jas P Kyle, Georgetown
"	7th "	Lauren Smith, [illegible]
"	8th "	Wm D Hill, Springfield
"	9th "	A McGregor, Bucyrus
"	10th "	Jacob Vallery, Piketon
"	11th "	Geo Jos Lowly, [illegible]
"	12th "	Geo W Manypenny, [illegible]
"	13th "	J H Gale, Sandusky
"	14th "	J A Marchand, Wooster
"	15th "	H B Banning, Mt. Vernon
"	16th "	S B Hosmer, [illegible]
"	17th "	T W Peacock, Cambridge
"	18th "	H E Smith, Massillon
"	19th "	D P Rhodes, Cleveland
"	20th "	S D Dana, Jefferson
"	21st "	J McKinney, [illegible]

Mr. Leete, of Lawrence, offered the following which was adopted:

Resolved, That no former legislature of Ohio could cripple and impair the sovereignty of the State by contracting away its power to [illegible] taxes upon banks or upon other property; and that the 60th section of the Bank Act of 1845 exempting the banks from the ordinary burdens of taxation, is utterly void as against the provisions of the new Constitution and the laws enacted in pursuance thereof, to tax banks and other property in equal [illegible].

McKenzie, of Allen, offered the following, which was adopted with three cheers and a tiger:

Resolved, That the Report of the Treasury Investigating Committee in regard to the frauds in the State Treasury in connection with the Banking Institutions of the State, has developed a startling and alarming degree of abuse and corruption in the management of the finances of the State by the Republican party, demanding the earnest attention of the People, and vigilance in the execution of the Independent Treasury [illegible].

The following, offered by some person unknown, was adopted

Resolved, That to the support of our principles and the ticket this day nominated, [illegible] cordially invite every patriot to rally under our banner.

The following, by Mr. Leete, was adopted.

Resolved, That this convention recommend to the Democratic Electors of the several Congressional Districts the election by conventions of Delegates to the Democratic National Convention to be held at Charleston in 1860.

Upon motion of A. P. Miller, of Butler, Geo. E. Pugh, C. L. Vallandigham and the President of the Convention were appointed a Committee to inform the candidates not present of their nomination.

Capt. Ranney moved an adjournment sine die, which was unanimously carried.

Legal Opinions on the Habeas Corpus Case—Judge Warden's Letter.

In speaking of the Habeas Corpus case which is to be decided this afternoon, the Cleveland National Democrat of this morning says:

"The law of the case is so strong—the Constitutional objection so plain, [illegible], that we cannot believe that the Judges will dare do anything but refuse the writ, and remand the prisoners into custody.

"Without a single exception the Bar of Columbus declare that the Supreme Court of Ohio have no jurisdiction in the case, and even such men as John W. Andrews, P. B. Wilcox, Col. N. B. Swayne, Samuel Galloway, and Judge Warden of Columbus, aided by Thos. Ewing, Henry Stanbery, Hocking Hunter, Tom Corwin and John H. James, of Central and Southern Ohio, and Messrs. Kelly, Andrews and Mason, and Judges Bolton, Foote and Bishop, of this city, eminent as Lawyers, and all old Whigs, and with two exceptions (Messrs. Stanbery and James, Republicans.) It is not to be presumed that a Supreme Court will so far dare run counter to the Constitution, the law and public opinion, as to make a decision that must end in a conflict between the State and General Government, with not a shadow of a shade of right on the side of the State.

In that connection we publish part of the letter of B. B. WARDEN, Esq., to the Lawless and Disorganizing Convention, about which much has been said, as the managers of the Convention undertook the suppression of the letter as the Democrat suggests, "[illegible]" that their readers should hear the truth from a Republican lawyer of undoubted ability.

Judge WARDEN, in reference to that Mass Convention, called together by those who would involve the State with the Federal Government, remarks:

In all legal, just, and constitutional modes, I would endeavor to restore the present Government of the constitution and the true relations of the States.—But as I understand the making, the occasion and the purpose of the movement now begun, I cannot join in it. It contemplates, I think, a species of agitation which, however humble my position as a citizen, I cannot suffer myself to countenance. Its motive is, I fear, a resistance to the constituted powers, which, until the hour of revolution sounds, is not to be encouraged. Its tendency is, the issue of a trial, growing out of such resistance to the laws, no less certainly to regard as patriotic or consistent the teaching of the law, which all who live in the protection of the law should yield to its commandments. Its purpose, I have reason to believe, is such an agitation against slavery, as I have never learned to look upon as other than unwise and apt to hinder rather than advance the cause of human freedom.

The Democrat, in speaking of this letter of Judge WARDEN, says:

It is but an act of simple justice to Judge Warden and to the other Republican lawyers to say, that in the view he has taken, he is borne out by the ablest lawyers of his party, not only in Columbus and in other parts of the State, but in Cleveland.

This letter no doubt had its effect in leading the more prudent of the party to denounce Giddings, and his Sons of Liberty, who made their advent to this city, with clubs in hand and the lowest men, black and white, from Oberlin, who came here on the 25th inst., to commit violence, and succeeded so well, by the efforts of Ex-Governor Root, who came here as a special messenger from Gov. Chase, protesting against violence as ruinous to the Republican cause—the real leaders, with Giddings and Professor Monroe at their head were brought here and Cleveland was spared the disgrace of a mob, and the exposure of the plotting of these hair-brained fanatics.

☞ ROBERT MCCALLON, a well known citizen of West Troy, N. Y., and Deputy Sheriff of Albany county, was robbed and murdered on Friday night, and his body thrown into the Canal basin. The body of Mr. McCallon was recovered on Saturday.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.
TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

State Democratic Convention.

In the present number of the "PEOPLE'S PRESS" will be found the Proceedings of the State Democratic Convention, which assembled on Thursday, May 26th, 1859, and nominated a State ticket.

The Hall selected for the accommodation of the Convention, although the largest in the city, was close, sultry and very uncomfortable, and altogether too small for the number of delegates; consequently the heat was insufferable; at times, confusion was supreme; and the raps of the President, although heard above the din, were almost unavailable to preserve order. It was an oversight not to have secured the theater, which would have greatly added to the comfort and convenience of delegates in the transaction of business.

During the evening previous, it had been announced that Judge Ranney had peremptorily declined a nomination for Governor, and the same impression prevailed in the morning. A dispatch, however, relieved all anxiety, and the greatest unanimity prevailed among those who shaped the action of the Convention.

When the nomination was announced by Henry B. Payne, Esq., it was received with enthusiastic shouts, as if every voice in the hall joined in one loud, hearty, unbridled hurrah. No further ballot was necessary. It was made by ACCLAMATION.

The nomination of Judge RUFUS P. RANNEY has our unqualified approbation. There is no man in Ohio for whom we would sooner cast our suffrage. He has adorned and filled every station to which he has been called, and entitled himself to the largest confidence of the people by his strict and unbending integrity; his faithful observance of every trust; his just, discriminating mind, and his genial, amiable and unostentatious disposition. He is a worthy champion of a glorious cause, and will give additional strength to the ticket, respected by his opponents and admired by his friends.

Hon. WM. H. SAFFORD, the Senator from Ross in the last Legislature, was nominated for Lieut. Governor, over several competitors. The most formidable was Chas. W. Blair, Esq., of Clinton, a gallant and talented gentleman, who was deemed worthy last Fall to enter the lists for a seat in Congress, with Hon. Tom Corwin. Mr. Safford is a high-minded, honorable gentleman, of affable manners and dignified deportment.—A fluent speaker, and ardent politician he will make a thorough canvass of the State, and in his hands the cause of Democracy will have an able and eloquent advocate.

Judge H. C. WHITMAN is one of the most popular Common Pleas Judges in the State. He is a sound lawyer, a fine, forcible speaker, dignified and agreeable in his manners, and beloved by those who know him best for his amiable and excellent qualities. Firm, independent, industrious and energetic, he possesses the highest qualifications for the station to which he has been named.

Fairfield, (his own) county, will give him a majority of 1,800 to start with; and in his district he is so popular as a Common Pleas Judge, that even those of different political opinions will find it difficult to cast their suffrages against him.—He brings strength to the ticket in every way.

Of Dr. DORSEY it is unnecessary to speak. He is known to the Democracy of the State, as an untiring champion of Democratic principles. We were his class mate and friend at Miami University, long years ago, and it is with the greatest satisfaction we shall support him for Auditor of State, for which station he possesses such qualifications as entitle him to the fullest confidence of the people. We may say that he was born a Democrat, and had Democratic sentiments inculcated in his earliest youth. He has matured in life, a firm, consistent, unyielding Democrat, and it must have been a source of pride as well as gratification to him, to witness the unanimity by which he was forced, against his inclination, to yield to the acceptance of the important nomination for Auditor—an office not second to any in the State. Eloquent and impressive as a debator and thoroughly versed in political philosophy and history, the flash of his keen weapon will tell in the coming contest.

Dr. WM. BUSHNELL, the nominee for Treasurer of State, has a large experience, is a gentleman of unimpeachable integrity, and is both widely known and universally respected. His vote over the most honorable and popular competitors, is an evidence of the estimation in which he is held; and the strength he will bring to the ticket.

For Secretary of State, our fellow-citizen, J. REINHARD, of the "Westbote," notwithstanding he had declined the honor of a nomination, was nominated on the first ballot. It was thought by some of the friends of other candidates, that he should have insisted on withdrawing his name, but he is too earnest in his Democracy to refuse anything to his party. He is a prudent politician, and without being showy—commands respect as a man. He is amiable and unobtrusive in his manners, and if elected would make a careful, vigilant and excellent officer.

Mr. TOMLINSON, who was nominated for member of the Board of Public Works is represented as capable of the position, and calculated to fill the office with credit and assiduity. The office is one of importance, whether the canals shall be leased or not, and requires judgment, industry and capacity which he is said to possess.

Mr. C. N. ALLEN, who was nominated for School Commissioner, is editor of the "Cadiz Sentinel;" and was Secretary of the last Democratic Central Committee. The vote he obtained on the first ballot must have been flattering, since he succeeded over such competitors as Geo. W. Andrews, J. McGregor and Eli T. Tappan. We have not heard Mr. A. as a speaker, but presume that he will make the "Sentinel" do double duty in the campaign.

The ticket, taken as a whole, is entitled to the cordial support of the party, and we hope to see it triumphantly sustained.

The resolutions adopted by the Convention fully sustain the great principles of the Cincinnati Platform, which they endorse. We should have preferred to see the first resolution divested of some of its verbosity and made more direct. That it was intended to be ambiguous we do not believe, although the ingenious critic may attempt to force upon it a construction which the looseness of the response by the Convention would not warrant. It was regarded in the reading, as a full endorsement of popular sovereignty and non-intervention by Congress in territorial affairs, and under that impression was confirmed with great enthusiasm.

The best feeling prevailed in the Convention; and there was a universal expression of confidence, and a determination to succeed. Never, since the coalition of Republicanism and Know-Nothingism have we seen the Democracy so united or so confident.

The Presidency.

A private dispatch from Washington says:

"Though efforts are made and continued by various leaders to reconcile differences in dispute, the President refuses to compromise with Douglas except upon humiliating (to the latter) conditions, which must be rejected.

"A movement is now making to unite the North and the South, irrespective of the Administration, with Hunter for President, and Douglas for Vice President, giving the latter the track for '64. If Douglas will give his support to this combination, it is easily made."

Such are the speculations of interested letter-writers, which, with others more absurd, are craftily distributed through the country. If the President continues his ill feeling towards Mr. DOUGLAS, it is solely upon the ground that the latter has been steadfast to his opinions, and will not forego the great principle of popular sovereignty, and Congressional non-intervention, to which the President himself was pledged. Mr. DOUGLAS can enter into no compromise which compromises that principle. To do so would not only be "humiliating" but disastrous. He has never thought of such a thing. Mr. Douglas is true to the country and to himself. He stands pledged to the principles enshrined in the Kansas-Nebraska act; of which and its author, C. J. Faulkner, of Virginia, on the 10th of April, 1854, said in the Congress of the United States:

"For one, I take this occasion to say that I honor him for it; and when the passion and the excitement of the hour have passed away, the country will do justice to the purity of his motives and to the wisdom and sagacity of his act. Distinguished as he has been throughout his whole public career, for enlarged, liberal and comprehensive views, this act places him upon the highest pedestal of national statesmanship. The principles of this bill belong neither to the North nor to the South, but to the whole country!"

The expression of the recent State Convention leaves no doubt of the choice of the Democracy of Ohio. Interested office-holders pass it around in mysterious whispers, that nothing must be said of any individual in connection with the Presidency, that it will injure the cause, and that it will injure Mr. Douglas. Wise counsellors forsooth! Most excellent counsellors! A post office or a printing house may depend upon their silence, and like the fox deprived of his caudal extremity, they would have others follow the fashion.

It is said that a movement is making "irrespective of the Administration!" Has it become necessary for the American people to wait, in the formation of their opinions or the expression of their wishes, until they receive their cue from the Administration? Must the Administration dictate who shall have the succession? As well have a hereditary monarchy at once! Must we speak of the Administration only in praise?—Then should its acts be only worthy, elevated, and for its country's good. It should confine itself to its prescribed duties, and not aim to dictate the succession. This Administration stands pledged, and every administration should stand pledged to a single term; and non-intervention on its part with the succession should be demanded by the American people.

"Irrespective of the Administration!" There is a species of grovelling in the very expression unbecoming an American citizen. It would do for a serf, a vassal, but for a freeman, it involves a position of obedience which is beneath a freeman.

Mr. Douglas makes no bargains. He stands before the American people, upon his own merits; upon the measures with which his political life is identified; upon which he is content to stand or fall—"irrespective of the Administration."

Douglas and the African Slave Trade.

The Louisville "Journal" remarks that "the Washington States, understood to be the organ of Judge Douglas, favors the re-opening of the African Slave Trade in defiance of the laws. This, we suppose, is now to be considered as Mr. Douglas's ground. Having offended the Southern Democracy by his abolition doctrine of squatter sovereignty, he thinks to conciliate them by going for the Congo traffic. In other words, he expects to make amends for being an abolitionist by turning pirate."—[Scioto Gaz.

The efforts to misrepresent Mr. DOUGLAS are not confined to party or section. There seems to be a savage delight in creating false impressions concerning his position, and to confuse the public mind in relation to it. We have seen this attributed to the Louisville "Journal" before, a paper that not unfrequently indulges in imaginative flights, and is not over scrupulous and nice in regard to political opponents.

No politician in the Union has a cleaner or more consistent record than Mr. Douglas. As an illustration of the fact, it need only be pointed to that his speeches in Illinois, on the bases of them, were repeated at Memphis, New Orleans, New York and Baltimore, and were equally well received North and South, East and West.

Mr. Douglas has denounced the re-opening of the slave trade as alike obnoxious to American interests and the feelings of humanity.—He has pointed to it as a consequence of disturbing and agitating the question of slavery, and the re-opening of the African Slave Trade in defiance of the laws is not to be "considered as Mr. Douglas's ground." If Mr. Douglas have "offended the Southern Democracy," by holding unwaveringly to the great principle of Popular Sovereignty, he will be content to have so offended—for neither to catch a favorable Southern breeze, nor to propitiate Northern sentiment, would he change one single point of the political compass on that score. His opinion, so far as popular sovereignty is concerned, is as fixed as the pole-star in the heavens.

The Louisville "Journal" is but an indifferent exponent of Mr. Douglas's views. Besides, being willing to plunge into any absurdity or romance for the sake of antithesis, it was solicitous for the election of ABE LINCOLN to the U. S. Senate, and hallooed and shouted for him during the Illinois champaign. We should as soon accept the Ohio State Journal, or the Cleveland Leader or any other abolition sheet as an exponent of Mr. Douglas's views, as the Louisville Journal, which seems to have a life-long lease of opposition to the Democracy, on the principle that,

> "I do not like thee Doctor Fell,
> The reason why I cannot tell;
> But this I know, I know full well,
> I do not like thee Doctor Fell."

The Chicago "Times" in allusion to the subject very appropriately remarks:

"If the existing laws are not sufficient for the purpose for which they were framed, enact such laws as will secure the object sought. If the laws to suppress and prohibit the African slave trade are insufficient, enact others that will be sufficient. The Louisville Journal, which last year supported Lincoln,—the advocate of a perpetual war upon slavery until it had ceased to exist in the Union, and which now supports candidates who demand of the general government laws compelling the people of Kansas to have and to protect slavery against their will, is a very appropriate mouth-piece for the words "abolitionist and pirate." The editor knows the full meaning of both terms."

What benefit the Republicans expect to derive from quoting, with approbation, the Louisville Journal, we cannot imagine. That paper "out herods Herod" in its clamor for slave protection in the territories, and arraigns the Democracy of Kentucky for maintaining the Democratic doctrine that the people of the territories have the undoubted right to manage their domestic institutions in their own way without the intervention of Congress.

HEAVY SUIT.—In the United States District Court of New York on Thursday, the Jury in the case of GRAHAM v. MEYER, which has been on trial during the past ten days, rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for $242,000. The action was brought to recover the value of three steamships, alleged to have been illegally converted by the defendant.

☞ The Italians residing in Richmond, Va., are forming an association to raise funds for transmission to their brothers in Italy now about to engage in a war for freedom.

Mr. Douglas and the Presidency.

Senator Douglas is said to have stated that he would not be a candidate for the Presidency, in 1860, because, "the Opposition are sure to succeed." Stephens, of Georgia, it is reported, gives a similar reason for his retiring at present from public life. "As there is bound to be a smash up," he really says, "I am for getting off at the first station."—[Cin. Commercial.

It will at once occur to any one who is posted upon public men and measures, and who understands what he reads, that such statements as are made in the paragraph at the head of this article are untrue; that they are more: they are both simple and false. The veriest novice in political matters will feel very sure that Mr. Douglas never made the declaration that "the Opposition are sure to succeed" in 1860; the falsity of "is said" is apparent on the face of the saying; and the author of the statement is either a knave or a fool. Those who circulate it, by giving it the semblance of truth, are in the same category.

If any thing could be more thoroughly ridiculous than the "is said" about Senator Douglas, it is the "similar reason" offered for the Hon. A. H. Stephens, of Georgia. He is represented as saying the Democratic party is being disorganized, and that he has left it, "not wishing to go down with the wreck!" That it is a canard, gotten up without the slightest regard to truth, the authors of it know; and that they have the face to send it out to the reading world only proves that they have lost all decent regard for the truth. The opposition press must be exceeding hard run for capital upon which to work, when they stoop to such silly misrepresentation; it plainly shows the desperate condition into which they have fallen; and indicates that they are blindly grabbing at straws to keep above the waves that are now threatening to engulf them.—[Dayton Empire.

That Senator DOUGLAS should not covet the Charleston nomination, we can readily believe; but he never thought, much less said, that the "opposition are sure to succeed." If the Democratic party should continue inharmonious, and to delight in assailing members of its own organization, because they do not relinquish cardinal principles, or cease to support favorites, he might well think so. But a "second sober thought" seems to be taking place of frenzy and retaliation, and there is more harmony now than has existed for some time back, although the mischievous interpolations in the Democratic creed have not been thoroughly eradicated, and the impatient would-be directors of future movements have not been yet sent to the rear.

We can hear of reconciliations in the Democratic family occurring on every side, in our own State,—a most gratifying event and highly promising of the future. Men who since the winter and spring of 1858 have been embittered toward each other, and would have preferred the common enemy, have come together in harmonious action and agreed to bury by-gones. The endorsement of the Cincinnati Platform is unequivocal, by the State Convention, recently held. It may be considered just as unequivocal an endorsement of Mr. DOUGLAS. Although the question was not mooted, he was indisputably the favorite of the Convention. The special and limited approval of the acts of the administration of Mr. Buchanan, is in striking contrast, and conclusively shows that a full, free, and unrestricted approbation of all the acts was neither entertained nor expressed. We hope the Utah imbroglio may verify that part of the resolution referring to it, and that the clouds of rebellion may give way to peace and sunshine. We are fully convinced that less forcible demonstrations would have resulted in disaster, and believe it was prudent and wise to send and maintain there an army; but the wisdom of after events remains still to be confirmed, pending which we certainly do not object to complimenting the administration upon initiatory efforts to persuade a refractory population to obedience to law and order.

That Mr. STEPHENS of Georgia, should desire repose and retirement from the labors and toil of congressional life, is quite as natural as that Mr. Marshall of Kentucky should do the same thing. If a prospective "smash up" is the sole argument applicable in such a case, why may it not apply as well to the latter as to the former? Mr. MARSHALL declines the nomination for re-election in the Louisville district, because the complexion of the canvass does not suit him.—His opponent, Mr. HOLT is avowedly for the Douglas doctrine of popular sovereignty and non-intervention. The Democratic press of the district are divided, one, at least, maintaining the doctrine of congressional intervention for protection, and assailing Mr. DOUGLAS as an abolitionist, while the other is openly for Mr. DOUGLAS and as openly and strenuously against congressional intervention in any shape. The "great gun" of the opposition, however, the Louisville Journal, which supported Mr. MARSHALL's nomination, as well as the opposition candidate for Governor, Mr. BELL, is urgent for a slave code for the territories, and denounces as abolitionists those who oppose it. Under these circumstances, then, Mr. MARSHALL withdraws from public life for the present, leaving his place, beyond all doubt, to be filled by Mr. HOLT, the Democratic candidate, who construes and supports the Cincinnati Platform as it is construed and supported by Mr. DOUGLAS. The "opposition" will lose considerably in the retirement of Mr. MARSHALL, who, beside his acknowledged ability and familiarity with the political history of the country, although unwilling to concert with the Republicans in Congress, was an implacable and formidable foe to the Democracy, and especially to the Administration of Mr. BUCHANAN, for whom he entertained the most cordial contempt.

It will be seen then, that the retirement of distinguished members of Congress is not all on one side, and in anticipation of a "smash up." It is an indifferent rule that will not work both ways, and whether the floating paragraphs be true or false relative to Mr. STEPHENS, he is not "solitary and alone" in his "motion."

Mr. DOUGLAS may not desire to be a candidate—probably does not; but his friends will place his name before the Charleston Convention, in connection with the Cincinnati Platform; and if he should be the nominee, more surely than any other, would he command the national vote for the Presidency.

Caught Kidnapping!

We must "spell it with a k," to address ourself to the "elephantine" perspicacity of our "senior;" but really we were not aware that we were poaching on anybody's manor—not having been favored before with a sight of our parental ancestor, who was a "healthy babe born on the 8th of March last," and talks so bravely of "fatherly eye" and "indiscretions." This exceedingly superannuated father like the generality of elderly gentlemen, directs that "fatherly eye" to the main chance, and seems particularly interested lest some Democrat or Republican, should make a mistake as to our identity and take the "chip" for the old "block"—head. For his comfort we may say to him that so far, nobody happened to do any such thing at the late Convention as would render the services of the Treasurer of State of the slightest importance. They were too much RAMMED in the hall to entertain a thought of paying for a PRESS outside.

The People's Press, Junior!

On Tuesday last, we received the first number of a large, neatly printed, and ably conducted paper, just started at Columbus, Ohio, by our friend and brother pioneer, J. Birney Marshall, Esq. Our first impressions were, that he who stole our "good name,"—suffice to say we swore inaudibly. Mr. M. apologises for using the title—"the People's Press"—because he wished something new, and at the same time an appropriate index as to the character of his paper.—He had read Forney's PRESS, and was knowing to the fact that there were some four PRESSES in Ohio, but believing the prefix, THE PEOPLE'S, would relieve him of trouble, he christened his babe as before stated, never dreaming that a healthy child, of the same name was born in Perrysburg, on the 8th of last March. We have no objection to the appropriation of "our property" when the public good requires it, and we will come into court and waive our right to revenue, on the condition that the People's Press, JUNIOR, shall so demean itself as not to make (or break) a jar in the Democratic family. By the way, should any subscriber, while attending our State Conventions, HAPPEN to pay you anything on subscription to "The People's Press," have it carefully locked up in the sub-treasury of the State, subject to our order. Send along your paper and we will keep a fatherly eye on it, and point out any indiscretions, should any occur.—Perrysburg People's Press.

The State Republican Convention.

This body will assemble at Armory Hall to-day. The delegates appear to be numerous, and it will be found that the hall will be insufficient to hold them comfortably and conveniently. It is thought that on the one side Mr. Dennison's Cleveland letter will injure him, while on the other the learned and unanswerable opinion of Judge Swan will create opposition to his nomination. Not being "in the family," we shall not attempt to foretell the action of the Convention, but shall report its proceedings accurately in our next.

Some difficulty may be found in the fact that three of the prominent candidates for State offices reside in Columbus—Mr. Dennison for Governor, J. R. Swan for Supreme Judge, and A. P. Stone for Treasurer. There was some talk of Hon. Samuel Galloway for Governor, and F. Wright, the present incumbent for Auditor.

During the day, yesterday, there was much canvassing going on with the delegates already arrived, and BOLTING was freely promised in case Swan be nominated, and be not. A caucus was held last night, but we are not apprised of the result. A strong effort may be made for Judge Gholson of Cincinnati, and it is conceded that Dennison is the favorite for Governor; although the friends of D. K. Carter are quite numerous and urgent.

The Northern part of the State is very largely represented, and it will take strenuous efforts to appease its delegates, unless their wishes are acceded to.

The Convention will be numerously attended; and its deliberations, (if its proceedings can be so styled,) will be animated, if not somewhat turbulent, unless it was resolved last night to move on harmoniously.

Another Instalment.

We present to our readers, on the first page of this paper, further extracts from the speeches of distinguished gentlemen, confirmatory of the impregnable position of Mr. DOUGLAS on the power of Congress in the territories. Those given to-day, embrace the opinions of Hon's. S. A. Smith of Tennessee, A. C. Dodge of Iowa, T. F. Bowie of Maryland, Geo. W. Jones of Tennessee, J. S. Caskie of Virginia, A. G. Brown of Mississippi, Wm. C. Dawson of Georgia, T. L. Clingman of North Carolina, Z. Kidwell of Virginia, C. J. Faulkner of Virginia, J. H. Lumpkin of Georgia, and A. G. Talbott of Kentucky.

Next week, we shall conclude these extracts, when the whole, with Mr. DOUGLAS's great speech may be had by addressing the publisher of this paper.

Col. Sam. Pike, of Ky., has just started a new paper at Mount Sterling, Ky., being the forty ninth paper he has had the honor of starting.—[Alliance Times.

Well, he has always started a good one, and has kept it a good one, as long as he had any thing to do with it. If he sold out or disposed of his concern, it was not because he saw failure ahead, but because he could sell advantageously, or did n't like the neighborhood. Pike's an odd fish, but he is a whole-souled Democrat, a most industrious, energetic and capable editor, a capital fellow, but of migratory propensities. He suits Kentucky and Kentucky suits him.—He should never leave it. We are in receipt of the "Ninth Legion," which is two weeks older than the "Press," and are not disappointed in its appearance or contents. It is a live paper, and we wish "Sam" a greater longevity and greater prosperity than his Know Nothing namesake, in Kentucky.

FOR GOVERNOR.—A special correspondent of ours, who has been watching the movements and "recording" the decrees of the Republican "Council of Ten" at Columbus, having got all things arranged in that quarter, undertakes to enlighten us somewhat upon the probabilities of the action of the approaching Democratic Convention. He avers, that, from present appearances, Col. Manypenny, of the Statesman, will be nominated for Governor. We will not venture to endorse the prophecy, but we do most certainly give the gallant Colonel credit for all the eminent qualifications claimed for him by our correspondent.—Toledo Herald.

As we are not in the secret, and a good many others are in the same category, would it not be well to account some of those "eminent qualifications," claimed for him by (?) our correspondent?

Arrival of Stephen A. Douglas in New Orleans.

Senator Douglas reached New Orleans on Thursday, the 24th ult. The following notice of his arrival there appeared in the True Delta the next day:

Yesterday morning the intrepid statesman of the glorious West reached our city, from the North, looking as hearty, vigorous, joyous and don't carish as his warmest admirers and most devoted friends could desire. There is no despondence in the glow of his healthy cheek, nor in the fire of his penetrating eye: on the contrary, everything about him indicates the composure of the well-poised mind and the daring resolution so befitting the American statesman. Confident of the maturely considered verdict of his countrymen, the little Prairie Giant tranquilly bides his time, conscious that no hawkings by the mousing owls of federal office, from the miserable Buchanan down, can, in the end, prevent the vindication of his claims to the respect, the gratitude and the honors of the republic. He laughs, as well he may, at the amusing fabrications of the Buchanan press, that a reconciliation had taken place between them, (Buchanan and himself,) merely to cover up the abandonment of the anti-Squatter Sovereignty doctrine which the former and his satellites had formerly maintained or affected to maintain at the North, and which they still pretend to uphold, by conspirators as Houma Slidell, in this region.

Judge Douglas will see his friends at the St. Charles, during his very brief stay here, before departing for his plantation in Mississippi, at present overflowed, and will satisfy any one curious in such matters that, so far as the outer man is an index of the placidity and happiness of the inner, no statesman in this or any other country is more at ease in regard to himself, or better pleased with all the world and the rest of mankind.

We extend a hearty welcome to the Little Giant, hope his time among us will be spent to his satisfaction and delight, and for an early realization of all the honors and appreciating distinctions a just country has in store for him and all others equally worthy whom it delights to honor.

PIKE'S PEAK.—This humbug has exploded. Criminal indeed are they who are guilty of luring the eager in their thirst for gold, to their own destruction. The accounts of suffering and starvation are horrible, but are far less so than the reality.

FASHION COURSE.—Purse $2,000, between Flora Temple and Ethan Allen, best three in five, with wagon. Flora won three straight heats. First, 2,25; second, 2,27; third, 2,271. About 15,000 persons were present.

He ought to have took it in homeopathic doses and we beseech him hereafter to do so.—Statesman.

That shows evidently that the schoolmaster was somewhere else. Where was TOBIAS DOG? Where was CHARLEY ALLEN? "Took" is a good word in its place. Why not say, at once, "he had ought to have took it?" Did not the Statesman "took" the grammar in "homeopathic doses."

THE N. Y. AND ERIE RAILROAD.—A report has obtained some currency that the Erie Road has suspended, but can be traced to no other source than the well-known fact that it has trouble to obtain money to meet its pressing payments. A meeting of the stockholders is to be called soon.

Before and After.

To those very fastidious Democrats who object to the "Press" supporting any single man for the Presidency, we commend the following paragraph from the Hocking Sentinel of the 26th. They would have a good time of it, reducing all the Democrats to their way of thinking. The Sentinel says:

"Before nominations are made, as democrats and freemen, we have, and enjoy our preferences and advocate with zeal the elevation of our favorite man, after the nominations are made, we should cheerfully acquiesce in the will of the majority, and give unto the nominee that hearty and zealous support we would expect them to give us, were positions reversed."

That's exactly it. That is the way to talk. We endorse the sentiment most cordially. Unless we have the liberty to investigate and examine—unless we are allowed to produce evidence of fitness or unfitness, how are selections to be made with any regard to merit and qualifications? If slaves, we might be willing to be silent until the master gave the word, but we are not reduced to that. Our master, in a case of that kind, is the Convention, but we have, or ought to have a voice in its proceedings.

The Prospect of Harmony.

The Toledo "Times," which is NATIONAL in sentiment, although not Democratic, gives good augury of future harmony in the Democratic party. It says, in speaking of the so-called frauds in Lucas county.

"The subdued and quiet passiveness with which the leaders of the two wings of the Democratic party in this city, bury the hatchet and smoke the pipe of peace, bodes no good to the Republican party. It is said by those personally acquainted with all the members of the Democratic State Ticket, that it is the best one put in nomination by that party during the last twenty-five years—that not one of the men nominated have been political trimmers and tricksters, and that they have always and uniformly been straight out Democrats, and that there has been no figuring and log-rolling among them to secure the nomination. If such is the case, and the present action among the malcontents of the party is general, it looks as if they might succeed in this State at the October election, the Republican party having rendered themselves so utterly disgusting by their action in the rescue cases and other equally absurd matters.

It has been with great satisfaction, we learned from the Hocking Sentinel that the differences in that good old Democratic county, have all been adjusted, and that the Democracy there present an unbroken front, which will tell to the tune of some five or six hundred majority in October.

From every part of the State, we hear of confidence, union and harmony among Democrats. They may have their dislikes, but are determined not to permit private animosities to interfere with public duty.

FORNEY'S PRESS.—This paper has expressed its determination to support the nominee of the Charleston Convention, provided that the Convention shall adopt the Cincinnati Platform, and shall not attempt to engraft new doctrines upon the Democratic creed. This is the determination, as we have heretofore shown, of the Chicago Times and the Springfield Register. Any other platform would be suicidal to the Democratic party, and it is to be hoped that there will be a grand reunion upon it. Even the Baltimore Clipper, identified with the Maryland American party, says that "if a candidate shall be nominated upon the intervention platform of the Southern Democracy, he will not get the electoral votes of a single Northern State, nor one-half of the Southern States."—From this may be estimated the force of the sine qua non, set up by Forney's Press.—[Seneca O. Democrat.

It is not the assumed or intended duty of this paper to defend "Forney's Press" from the studied effort to place it in a wrong category, by those who would divide the Democratic party, and avail themselves of every possible difference to attempt to create a schism. The Press has been bold, fearless, untiring, in its support of the great principle of Popular Sovereignty. It has not shrunk from its true mission to beat back all efforts to override or emasculate that great principle; and it has subjected itself to animadversion and misconstruction by its bold, determined course, from those who would weaken its influence and involve it in controversy with its friends. It is a watchful sentinel, and does not slumber. It is to be neither cajoled nor intimidated, but pursues its way unpersuaded by friends or a defiant of adversaries. Perhaps it is not a prudent leader, and gives way to temper or is restive under restraint; but we cannot regard it dishonest, or so vindictive as to be blind to duty in pursuit of revenge. The Democratic Party will support the nominee of the Charleston Convention, if he be a democrat, and to be a democrat he must stand squarely upon the Cincinnati Platform as it was understood in 1856, and not as some modern commentators pretend to understand it.

He must understand it as it was interpreted by Mr. Douglas, in his unequaled canvass in Illinois, and as he interpreted it at Memphis and New Orleans. He must understand it to mean that the people of a territory shall have the right to protect themselves and to appeal to the courts, but that Congress shall not intervene to protect slavery or pass any other territorial code.

☞ Our old friend, Gen. P. W. Strader, who is just a little cleverer than any body else, has resigned his connection with the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad and will now devote his great energies for the interest of the Little Miami Rail Road.—[Louisville Courier.

We thought to divide Gen. Strader from the Little Miami, was to separate soul and body, and are not at all surprised to find him relinquishing the important and responsible post he held in the Ohio and Mississippi, to return to his old love, which under the old regime prospered so flourishingly.

"SONS OF MALTA."—We have been frequently told there was such an organization in this place, and their ostensible object was to do good to the afflicted and unfortunate. This certainly is benevolent and praiseworthy. We thought to test their liberality by applying to them for one, who needed sympathy and aid. Their response was prompt. We received a very kind note from one of the order G. S. [this will answer for good Samaritan.] We have forgotten the characters—expressing a great deal of sympathy for the sufferer. A $5 00 bill fell from the note; and we involuntarily ejaculated: GOD BLESS THE SONS OF MALTA! They have lightened a sorrow-stricken heart, and relieved the pressing wants of the Orphan.
[Newark Times.

That is a way they have. We hope they may always entitle themselves at Newark to the outspoken gratitude of Mrs. Brister, who toils for her children and needs sympathy and "aid and comfort." The names of the ladies of Newark should be seen more frequently in the "receipts" column, which is generally exceedingly meager, and even at this distance would give one of the sterner sex the blues. But the "Sons of Malta" have got as far as Newark, and their object is to permit no suffering in their vicinity.

Last Thursday, they had a midnight procession here, which was very sombre, grave and imposing, and which was witnessed with great interest by thousands. Its simple though impenetrably vail of mystery is to cover its good deeds, and know that they are done.

We publish this morning on our outside form liberal extracts from the speech of the late Danial Webster, on the Fugitive Law, delivered at Buffalo, New York, on the 22d of May, 1851.—Statesman.

Who ever heard of another DANIEL WEBSTER? Neither early nor late "late" has there been more than one DANIEL WEBSTER, and it is altogether likely that there never will be another. WEBSTERS may be called DANIEL, but that will not render it necessary to designate the "God-like DANIEL," as his admirers were wont to call him, by any adjective or expletive. Who would think of saying "the late GEORGE WASHINGTON," or the late BENJAMIN FRANKLIN?"

The War.

BY ALFRED TENNYSON.

> There is a sound of thunder afar,
> Storm in the South that darkens the day,
> Storm of battle and thunder of war,
> Well if it do not roll our way.
> Storm! storm! Riflemen form!
> Ready, be ready to meet the storm!
> Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!
>
> Be not deaf to the sound that warns!
> Be not gull'd by a despot's plea!
> Are figs of thistles, or grapes of thorns?
> How should a despot set men free?
> Form! form! Riflemen form!
> Ready, be ready to meet the storm!
> Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!
>
> Let your Reforms for a moment go,
> Look to your butts and take good aims,
> Better a rotten borough or so,
> Than a rotten fleet or a city in flames!
> Form! form! Riflemen form!
> Ready, be ready to meet the storm!
> Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!
>
> Form, be ready to do or die!
> Form in Freedom's name and the Queen's!
> True that we have a faithful ally,
> But only the Devil knows what he means.
> Form! form! Riflemen form!
> Ready, be ready to meet the storm!
> Riflemen, riflemen, riflemen form!

To Alfred Tennyson.

> There's a little trash just oozed from your quill—
> A halting, wild, spasmodic display,
> Unsound, no doubt, from a rhyme making mill;
> Alfred, why do you write in this way?
> Don't! don't! Tennyson, don't!
> You'll really oblige us, sir, if you won't!
> Tennyson, Tennyson, Tennyson, don't!
>
> Be not deaf to the voice that warns,
> Your ears but Maud-lin lines indeed,
> Rather figs of thistles and grapes of thorns,
> Than laurel spring from roadside weed.
> Don't! don't! Tennyson, don't!
> You'll really oblige us, sir, if you won't!
> Tennyson, Tennyson, Tennyson, don't!
>
> Let such twaddle forever go;
> Swig at your butt of Malmsey wine,
> Better a jolly good drunk or so,
> Than lyrics drawn so devoid fine.
> Don't! don't! Tennyson, don't!
> You'll really oblige us, sir, if you won't!
> Tennyson, Tennyson, Tennyson, don't!
>
> Hold! until you've summat to say;
> Hold, my boy, in the name of the queen!
> Or somebody else should "take the butt"—
> The Malmsey butt of course, I mean.
> Don't! don't! Tennyson, don't!
> You'll really oblige us, sir, if you won't!
> Tennyson, Tennyson, Tennyson don't!

—Boston Post.

ANOTHER FUGITIVE SLAVE CASE.—Some time since Captain CROWELL, of the Brig Rollerson, on the passage from Pensacola to Boston, discovered an escaped slave on board, who was forced from his hiding place by hunger. CROWELL put the brig into Hyannis and for fifty dollars induced Capt. BACON of the schooner Elizabeth to convey the fugitive, whose name is COLUMBUS JONES, to Norfolk, from thence to be sent to his owner in Pensacola.

The fugitive as is alleged was chained to the capstan of the Elizabeth, which vessel got under weigh before the people knew of the circumstance.

The Rollerston having arrived at Boston, on Thursday, Capt. CROWELL and JOHN ORLANDO, the mate, were brought before the public Court charged with depriving of liberty and returning Jones to slavery.

The defendants were held to bail in the sum of $2,000.

A MINISTER'S SON SHOT BY A SUPPOSED LUNATIC.—Thomas Verren, son of the Rev. Dr. Verren, pastor of the French Church, corner of Franklin and Church streets, was shot twice yesterday by Napoleon Delaplace, a Frenchman. The shooting occurred in Franklin street, a few doors from the Church, and directly after the close of the forenoon service. The two came out of the Church together, and Delaplace asked young Verren to walk to Broadway with him. Verren excused himself from going, saying that it was his dinner time. He invited Delaplace to dine with him, when the latter instantly drew a revolver and fired at him. The ball passed through Verren's right cheek and out of his mouth, cutting off the tip of his tongue and dislodging two teeth. Before Verren had time to recover from his astonishment, a second shot was fired. This ball passed through his coat-sleeve on the left shoulder, and just grazing the skin, lodged in a window-blind near which a gentleman was seated reading. Following the second firing, Delaplace coolly put his revolver in his pocket, and made no attempt to escape. He was soon arrested by Captain Hutchings, and committed to the City Prison. Verren was taken to his residence, No. 99 Franklin street, and proper medical attendance rendered him. His injuries are not dangerous. No cause is assigned for the shooting except that Delaplace must have been temporarily insane. He is twice the age of Verren who is a little past 21; and, as far as is known, has always entertained the kindest feelings towards him. He has been frequently noted for eccentricities of conduct and sudden fits of violence, and on these facts is based the supposition of his insanity.—N. Y. Times, May 30.

Virginia Election.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Returns from the eighth Congressional District are incomplete, but the Democrats concede the election of Alex R. Boteler to Congress over Hon. C. J. Faulkner.

Marion county gives Letcher 229 majority. A private letter says that London county gives Goggin 1,067 maj; Princess Anne county gives Goggin 3 maj.

In the seventh District Wm. Smith, Dem., for Congress, has a majority of 814.

The Richmond Enquirer says it is impossible to give an accurate statement as to the general result for Congress or Legislature, but Letcher will be elected by between 5,000 or 8,000.

Another dispatch says: In 75 counties Goggin gains about 7,000 on the vote of '55. The Opposition claim his election by 4,000 majority. Some say that it is doubtful, but the chances favor Goggin.

RICHMOND, Va., May 29.—Returns have been received from 88 counties, showing a majority for Mr. Letcher for Governor of 420. Forty-eight counties are yet to be heard from, which at the last Governor's election gave Gov. Wise a majority of 2,047. If the average gain of Mr. Goggin, the Opposition candidate, in the counties to be heard from show the same average Mr. Goggin would be elected by a majority of about 1,200.

BALTIMORE, May 30.—A special dispatch received at the American office from the office of the Richmond Whig, says that the returns from 112 counties give Letcher a majority of 414. The remaining 38 counties gave Wise a majority of 1,200; in these, there are considerable gains for Goggin, the Opposition candidate.

Kanawha 500 and Mason 150 for Goggin. Putnam, it is represented, gives a small majority for Goggin.

Harrison, official, 312 for Letcher.

RICHMOND, Va., May 30.—The Richmond Enquirer considers that Letcher has been elected by a small majority; not over 5,000. The best informed parties estimate the majority at between 2,000 and 4,000.

ARREST OF A COUNTERFEITER.—PETER TAYLOR was arrested in Longcoming, N. J., on Thursday, and $20,000 in bs. on different banks recovered, with a large number of plates on the Merchants' Exchange Bank, Corn Exchange Bank, and Rhinebeck Bank of New York. Most of the notes were on the Corn Exchange Bank of Philadelphia and Mariners' and Mechanics' Bank of Camden, N. J.

THE FILLIBUSTER FIGHT IN NEW YORK.—We find the following additional particulars of the fight between Colonels TITUS and ANDERSON, at the St. Nicholas Hotel on Monday evening, in the Times:

"Colonel Titus, formerly of the Nicaraguan army, arrived in this City on Saturday last, and put up at the above Hotel. On learning this, Colonel Anderson, also formerly connected with General Walker, repaired last evening to the Hotel, accompanied by a few friends, and, it is asserted, attempted to get Titus into a fight, but failed to do so, and left the place about 9½ o'clock. Captain Turnbull, of the Eighth Ward, was apprised of the trouble and repaired to the spot, accompanied by Sergeant Mount. The officers had just entered the bar-room when Anderson returned with a large crowd, and one of them stepped up to Titus and struck him in the face, and, in return, was leveled to the floor. Anderson, it is said, with several others, then commenced beating Titus over the head, but this proceeding was soon stopped by the policemen. A scene of great excitement then ensued, and many of the persons present fled from the place by jumping out of the back windows into Mercer street. The lights were finally put out and Anderson and his friends were ejected from the place."

"Lord!" said Mrs. Partington, "what monsters these cotton planters must be. I am told some on' em have as many as a hundred hands."

CITY NOTICES.

☞ Nothing is more refreshing in warm weather than soda. If you wish the very best call at NEIL & PIERCE, where they keep every thing good.

SODA FOUNTAIN.—The most beautiful Fountain, we have seen any where, is at RILEY & LINDEMAN'S and the Soda and Syrups are delicious.

☞ Hats are of various patterns, and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at BOSWELL'S if you want a superior article.

☞ FASSIG'S Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made ours for the last two or three years.

"If music be the food of love, play on,
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakespeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

C. A. WAGNER, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be secured by constant attention. The Saloon is in "good condition," No. 21 East State Street.

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. G. CUTTERBOOK on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

☞ ROBBINS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "JOHN" says that he don't care if putty is three cents a pound more, he will vie in the world to judge by his bread.

☞ SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co's, celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, if equaled.

GRAND PICNICS.—John Leis, Director of the Dance, has put out a programme of a series of Picnics for the month. He will erect a portable stage for dancing, which will be removed from place to place. The Picnics will commence next week at Goodale Park, May 28 and 27; Four Mile House 28; Shadeville 31; Darbyville, June 1st; Circleville 2d; Tarlton 3d and Lancaster 4th. These will be agreeable reunions for which the expenses will be defrayed by collections.

LUNCHEON.—There is nothing that is more appetising than luncheon at about 10 A. M., these long mornings. Schlessinger sets a fine lunch about that hour every day on State street opposite the American. He will have GREEN SEA TURTLE SOUP to-morrow, the "monster" just received from Baltimore.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant success.

☞ J. W. LASHER, of the American Saloon had a beautiful silver cup presented him at Cincinnati the other day; but we don't know what; for whether or for beauty, or the want of it; for keeping the best of drinks or being the best of drinkers; we don't know. But he's got the cup, which can be seen at the American Saloon.

☞ FRED. RIPE is very anxious to see his friends and have a talk about European affairs. He may be found in the saloon of the United States Hotel, where for the present he regales himself with the news.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the rooks fit.—MORGAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

☞ FRANK LESLIE'S Family Magazine is for sale by KENNEDY, State street. It is beautifully illustrated by superior wood cuts, and contains a large amount of the most interesting reading matter.

☞ E. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

☞ CHARLEY BRETTONLE is sending out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the spring style for summer wear should look in.

☞ FRANK HERITAGE, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ KENNEDY has the latest periodicals.

☞ The representatives of the Pennsylvania Central and the New York Central Railroads not being able to agree as to an advance of freights have finally agreed to disagree. Both roads now are carrying first class freight from Cincinnati to New York at 65 cents per 100 lbs, being a further reduction of 10 cents.

☞ The Dayton Journal warmly urges Lieut. Governor Hon. MARTIN WELKER as the successor of Judge SWAN on the Supreme Bench. If the present incumbent will consent to be a candidate for re-election, the position will never be more ably and impartially filled.

☞ An Opposition State Convention for New Jersey is called for the 7th of September. The call is signed by every Opposition member of the Legislature.

☞ Dr. WILLIAM A. O. ODENHEIMER, the newly elected Bishop of New Jersey, is between forty and fifty years of age, and is an able writer and eloquent preacher. He is the author of several works on Church subjects, which have been highly approved.

NAPOLEON, HENRY CO., O., JULY 7, 1856.—Dr. C. W. ROBACK.—Dear Sir—For the benefit of suffering humanity, permit us to announce, through the columns of your Circular, the surprising properties of your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills, which is a sure cure for Indigestion and Liver Complaint. We have several persons in town, who have been suffering with Liver Complaint and Indigestion, and notwithstanding that we have as good physicians as can be found in Northern Ohio, yet the disease baffled their skill. Consequently we were in a state of despondency until we commenced using your Pills, through and by the advice of our friend, Mr. BRENNAN. We used the medicine according to directions, and are now full of life and hilarity, and our gratitude is equal to our improvement in health and spirits. When we take into consideration what we have been, and what we are at present, we feel like charging ourselves of the sin of ingratitude, if we did not try to announce to the public the great benefits of your Medicine. Therefore, we recommend to the public at large, the expediency of having recourse to your Medicine, and consequently, as in duty bound, discharge what we feel to be our duty, in advising persons who are suffering as we have suffered, to make use of the only true and sure cure for the diseases already mentioned.

Mrs. GWIN,
Mrs. BASSETT,
Miss HEATON,
C. C. SPELMAN.

See advertisement.

Superior Court of Franklin County.

Regular Terms for the Year 1859 and 1860.

THE FOLLOWING ORDER WAS ENTERED upon the Journal of the Superior Court of Franklin county, Ohio, at the opening of the May Term, 1859:
"Ordered that the Regular Terms of this Court for the ensuing year, be and the same are hereby fixed by the Court, as follows:
"September 26, 1859,
"December 26, 1859,
"March 6, 1860,
"May 4, 1860."

JAS D. SMITH, Clerk
of said Court.

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY

Cash Capital $200,000, Assets $204,000.
Offices 237 Broadway, 50 Wall Street N. Y.

This Company Insures Buildings, Merchandise, Ships and Cargoes, in Port, Household Furniture, and Personal Property generally against Loss or Damage by Fire.
JOSIAH W. BAKER, President.
JOHN BODINE, Vice President.
WM. JAFFRAY, Secretary.
DWIGHT BANNISTER, Agent,
Columbus Ohio.

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.

CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Cleveland Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free lunch daily from 10 a. m. to 12 m. One of KNABE'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a fine performer make this one of the best in the city.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads.

To the South and West.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11, 1859, Four Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted) from Columbus, in connection with Trains from Cleveland [illegible]

FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—At [illegible] A. M. stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati, arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible]. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c. At Loveland for O. & M. R. R. [illegible]

SECOND TRAIN
(Daily except Sundays)
NO. 1 EXPRESS—[illegible] M. stopping at Worthington, London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Fort Ancient, Morrow, Loveland, [illegible]

THIRD TRAIN.
(Daily except Sundays)
NO. 2 EXPRESS—At [illegible] P. M. stopping at West Jefferson, London, Xenia, Morrow, Loveland, [illegible]

FOURTH TRAIN
(Daily except Sundays)
[illegible]

RETURNING.
[illegible]

For further information and Through Tickets apply to M. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot.
[illegible]
Columbus, April 11, 1859.

Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.

Great Northern & Eastern Route.

Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati RAILROAD.

Connecting at Crestline with the
Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad
For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Baltimore, Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.
Connecting at Cleveland with the
Lake Shore Railroad
For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sundays) FROM COLUMBUS, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.

FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus [illegible]

SECOND TRAIN.
NEW YORK EXPRESS—[illegible]

THIRD TRAIN.
EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at [illegible]

☞ Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.

RETURNING.
[illegible]

Fare as Low as by any other Route.
For further information and Through Tickets apply to M. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent [illegible]
E. S. FLINT,
Superintendent.
[illegible]
Columbus, April 11, 1859.

1859. 1859.
NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST.

Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line

Two Trains Daily,
(Sundays excepted.)

Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 25th, Trains will leave Columbus as follows:

FIRST TRAIN
[illegible]

KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND PIKE'S PEAK
[illegible]

SECOND TRAIN
[illegible]

THE WAY FREIGHT
[illegible]

Be sure to get your Tickets via THE COLUMBUS & INDIANAPOLIS R. R. LINE [illegible]
[illegible]
Columbus, Ohio, April 25, 1859.

OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.

Announcement of the Proprietor for the Season of 1859.

THE OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS are situated in Delaware County, 18 miles north from Columbus, [illegible]

ON THE 1st DAY OF JUNE.

[illegible]

THE WHITE SULPHUR

is a beautiful Artesian fountain, situated near the rocky bank of the Scioto river. [illegible]

MEDICINAL PROPERTIES.

[illegible]

THE WHITE SULPHUR WATER

[illegible]

THE CHALYBEATE SPRINGS

[illegible]

THE MAGNESIAN WATER

[illegible]

BATHS.

[illegible]

TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

[illegible]

For further information, arrangements as to rooms, &c., address
ASHER WILLIS, Jr.
White Sulphur P. O.
Delaware Co. O.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1860.

Columbus and its Institutions by a Baltimorean.

A Baltimorean, writing from this City to the Baltimore Clipper under date of May 22d, thus speaks of the Capital of the Buckeye State:

I have been running over the western country, in hopes of finding a suitable place where I could locate for the balance of my natural existence. Since my departure from Baltimore I have seen cities and towns where a man might comfortably pass the remainder of his days in peace and happiness, but all locations, I have selected the above place as my future residence. The city is beautifully laid out, the streets wide and running at right angles, while inviting shade trees adorn most of the sidewalks. The houses for the most part are three stories [illegible], with fronts from 14 to 20 feet. Two thirds of the buildings are built a considerable distance back from the building line, while beautiful flower gardens, containing the choicest exotics, surround the dwellings, and give to the place the appearance of a vast nursery. Notwithstanding the great number of flowers within the reach of pedestrians, it is a rare occurrence that the gardens are disturbed by the hands of mischievous urchins.

The city has a population of about 35,000 souls, and the hospitality extended to the stranger is of such a nature, that the wanderer quickly feels himself at home. There are a great many public institutions here, which are examined into with considerable interest by the stranger. The first place visited was the State House, and a more beautiful building cannot be seen in the country. It is built of Ohio marble, and was commenced in the year 1838. The grounds attached to the building are 10 acres in extent, and a large number of shade trees are being planted, which, when fully developed, will make the place the most attractive resort in existence. The interior of the building is finished in the most elaborate manner, without any pretensions to gaudiness.

The Senate chamber is furnished with five massive chandeliers, which cost $3,000—in my opinion a considerable sum for the diffusion of light. The President's desk is situated in the eastern portion of the room, and is constructed of the purest Italian marble. The doors and casings of the room are very massive, and are beautifully carved, the arms of State being the principal features. The entrance to the chamber is marked by four beautiful Italian marble columns, costing $5,000 each.

The chamber of the House of Representatives is furnished in a similar manner as that of the Senate. In the centre of the building, a rotunda, similar to that in the capitol at Washington, is approaching completion. When completed the rotunda will be 300 feet from the base to the cone. Large niches are being built in the walls for paintings. The building is occupied by all the executive offices of the State, and during the session of the Legislature the place present a very animated appearance. The Supreme Court of the State is also held in this building, but at present there is no work on hand for this institution. In the front second story of the building, there is a room devoted to the State library, comprising over twenty thousand volumes of the best works in the country. This library has, since its formation, been the means of doing considerable good. A visit to it in the evening will find seated there scores of honest working men, who after the toils of the day resort thither to possess themselves of knowledge. The building also contains a law library, having upon its shelves 5,000 volumes, from the most eminent men in this country.

The Penitentiary is situated here, and contains nearly 600 prisoners. All the able bodied convicts are kept at work, and the articles manufactured by them are of the most excellent quality. The different shops are sustained by outside manufacturers, who pay the State about fifty cents per day for each workman. The different branches of work performed in the prison are the manufacturing of saddles, harness, buckles, moulding, chains, horse bits, willow ware, fancy carriages for children, hobby horses, stair rails, agricultural implements, bench and cabinet screws, tailoring, shoemaking, &c. The prisoners are strictly watched, and escape is almost impossible.

The Lunatic Asylum is one of the most beautiful institutions of the kind in the country. The building proper covers an acre of ground, and has about eighty acres of ground attached, a portion of which is cultivated by the inmates. There are 290 persons in the institution, and every comfort that would tend to diminish their sufferings is here found. The inmates on each Sunday are conducted to the chapel to hear the Word of God, and a large portion of them while listening to their preacher, appear conscious that something is wrong with them, and they look uneasy and continue restless until taken back to their rooms.

The Blind Asylum contains 111 inmates, some of whom are very expert in the making of bead purses and baskets. Their studies consist of the common branches of an English education, and in acquiring, from lectures and the reading of books, &c., in their hearing, such general information as seeing persons usually acquire by reading books and papers. The great object of the Institution is to give to all such social and moral culture as is needed, to render them agreeable and desirable members of the family and the social circle, so that in case of their inability, from any cause, to make for themselves an independent livelihood, they may be able to endear themselves to relatives and friends, who will never see them suffer, and will be unwilling to allow them to be thrown upon the public for support.

The Deaf and Dumb Asylum contains 123 inmates, 68 males, and 56 females. The manner of instructing this class of beings was first introduced in France and Germany, a century ago. In 1817, the first institution of the kind in this country was opened in Hartford. In 1829, the Ohio Institution was opened for the reception of pupils. But first of all the States, Ohio, assumed the care of her deaf and dumb as a matter of state duty, and proclaimed her obligation to give to the unfortunate class a complete education at the expense of the State. Attached to the Institution, there is a large gymnasium where the inmates exercise themselves. Every convenience to promote health and happiness is furnished them, and in many instances individuals leave this institution, although deprived of the power of speech, possessed of an education fitting them for the highest situations.

The city also contains an idiotic asylum, Orphans' Home and Asylum, all of which are conducted in such a manner that Ohio has been chronicled in the history of humanity as being the greatest of all friends to the unfortunate.

There are several other public institutions in the city, among which are the Esther Institute for young ladies, from which several bright stars now flashing upon the literary firmament have graduated. The Starling Medical College also occupies a prominent position in this State. The edifice is of a handsome and grotesque style of architecture, and was endowed by the late Lyne Starling. The building when completed will cost seventy-one hundred thousand dollars. Public Schools with accommodations for all the children in the city abound, and are supplied with the most efficient teachers. There is perhaps no other State in the Union where the education of the youth is more properly taken care of than in Ohio.

A short distance from the city there is situated what is known as Green Lawn Cemetery. It is about 80 acres in extent, and contains the ashes of the most distinguished men who lived in Ohio. The place is most beautifully laid out, and reminded me very forcibly of your Greenmount. Among the various monuments and tombstones I noticed the name of Lyne Starling, the founder of the above-named college, and the name of Maj. Nathan Goodall, one of the prominent actors in the revolution. In 1792 the Major, while on his farm in Belpre, Washington county, Ohio, was surprised and captured by the Indians who marched him to Sandusky, where he died a captive in the hands of his enemies. Also the name of John McDowell, who died in 1829. At the time of his death he was one of the presiding Judges for the State of Ohio, and his death caused the greatest gloom to spread over his State. Also, the name of Lucas Sullivant, who was born in Mecklenburg county, Va., but at an early age emigrated to Ohio, and was one of the first white men that ever trod the soil of Ohio. On the 8th of January, 1823, he died, having during his lifetime bravely fought the ruthless savages, and lived to see one of the greatest cities rise from the bosom of the forest. The Cemetery contains the remains of several other distinguished individuals, but as I have made this letter already too lengthy, I will defer further particulars until another time.

THE FATALISM OF RAILROAD CONDUCTORS.—These men are like soldiers and living always in certain consciousness of danger, grow to be fatalists in belief. On Monday last Mr. Gifford was conversing with a friend in Syracuse in regard to the death of Mr. Bowen, when he remarked—"It is a mere matter of time with all of us," and added, "When I go I hope I shall go quick." Little did he then think that he was soon to die and to die instantly!—So says the Albany Argus.

From the Capital City Fact of Saturday.

The Decision on the Habeas Corpus Postponed.

Judge SWAN announced this morning that the Court had been engaged up to last evening in the examination of authorities, and as they had determined to deliver written opinions they were not yet prepared, and announced that the decision was accordingly postponed until Monday afternoon at three o'clock.

Various surmises have been current on the streets, and in conversational circles, as to the result and consequences of the decision. It has been suggested that the Court would be undivided in releasing the prisoners from the custody of Uncle Sam, while others were of an entirely contrary opinion. Some think, or so express themselves, that the Court will be divided. CH. J. SWAN and PECK J. will maintain the constitutionality of the law and remand the prisoners to the custody of the U. S. Marshal; while SCOTT, BRINKERHOFF and SUTLIFF will adjudge the law to be unconstitutional, and the decision under it to be void, and the prisoners therefore to be discharged from the penalty imposed by the U. S. District Court. It was also suggested that the Court would be four to one—that Judge PECK would lean rather to the release of the prisoners, looking to the doubtful constitutionality of the law, but deeming it inexpedient to resist its execution. Such is the current opinion among outsiders.

We rather coincide with those who anticipate division in the Court—that Judges SWAN and PECK will maintain the constitutionality of the law, while Justices SCOTT, BRINKERHOFF and SUTLIFF will determine otherwise. The U. S. Marshal will doubtless re-arrest the prisoners, if they are discharged by the Court—or at least will attempt to do so. Then come the consequences. It is said that the colored population, or at least a portion of it, are prepared for "the rescue," and violence may be the result. They will find aid and co-operation from their fairer brethren; but the feeling prevalent among the majority of our citizens is to maintain the U. S. law inviolate. But it is useless to speculate. We shall see what we shall see.

From the Capital City Fact of Monday.

We confess we were proud of the Ohio Supreme Court, when we listened to the masterly decision of Ch. Justice SWAN, pronounced in the Bush Case on Habeas Corpus, this afternoon. It was broad, comprehensive, dignified and unanswerable. We have only time to announce the decision that the prisoners be remanded.

PECK, J., delivered a separate and very elaborate opinion, specifying with more particularity the decisions of the State Courts and the settlement of the question by the Supreme Court of the U. S. that the laws of 1793 and 1850 are constitutional and valid. He concurred with Chief Justice SWAN that the prisoners be remanded.

SCOTT, J., concurred in the main with the arguments and fully in the conclusion of the precedent Judges; and might hereafter elaborate his views in a written opinion.

BRINKERHOFF, J., had merely taken notes which he had not elaborated, which he might or might not write out hereafter, as he has leisure and inclination. He excepted to the omission of technicalities in the indictment which rendered the conviction illegal—but we were so well satisfied with the decision of the majority of the court we did not remain to hear him out or ascertain the status of Judge SUTLIFF.

From the Capital City Fact of Tuesday.

We announced yesterday the decision of the Supreme Court but had not time to give a sketch of the points made. Judges BRINKERHOFF and SUTLIFF dissented. We may be permitted to add that the reading of the latter was very confused, and more than once his manner if not casuistry raised a smile upon the otherwise grave and serious faces of the other members of the court.

This we trust will settle this vexed question. As Judge PECK said: "Is the true interpretation of the Constitution never to be settled?" Will not the uniform decision of the courts, State and Federal, for sixty-six years determine its validity and constitutionality? Can it ever be settled? According to the Attorney-General and Judges BRINKERHOFF and SUTLIFF, it can never be settled until the law has been pronounced unconstitutional. But then asks Judge PECK, will that settle it? Will not those who have contended for its constitutionality, and have the precedents of decisions since 1793 to sustain them, commence the controversy anew? Are precedents nothing? Is contemporaneous construction nothing? Is the unbroken decision of the Supreme Court, of the State Courts from the passage of the law of 1793 to the present time entitled to no weight? With the fanatics who would introduce discretion as an offset for precedent nothing but a compliance with their emotions may suffice, though the wildest anarchy ensue. They can scarcely be serious, and probably expect to be disappointed that they may continue to complain. We are truly gratified at the result of this trials, and breathe much more freely than when there was a prospect of serious disturbance which would surely have followed a contrary decision by a majority of the court.

With such men as Judges SWAN and PECK on the bench, "the lance of Justice" is securely and wisely entrusted, but it is a source of mortification that their legal and discriminating intelligence may be counterpoised by the political fanaticism of BRINKERHOFF and laborious dullness of SUTLIFF.

Syllabus of the Opinions of Chief Justice Swan and Peck, Justice, Concurred in by Scott, Justice.

Judges SWAN, SCOTT and PECK held:—

I. That the provisions of Art. 4, Sec. 3, of the Constitution of the United States: "No person held to service or labor in one State under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due," guarantee to the owner of an escaped slave the right of reclamation.

II. That a citizen, who, knowingly and intentionally interferes with, for the purpose of rescue or rescues from the owner an escaped slave, is guilty of a violation of the Constitution of the United States, whether the acts of 1793 and 1850, commonly called the fugitive slave laws, are unconstitutional or not.

III. That the question in this case is, not whether the fugitive act of 1850 is unconstitutional in respect to the appointment and powers of commissioners, the allowance of a writ of habeas corpus, the mode of reclamation, &c., but whether Congress has any power to pass any law whatever, however just and proper, in its provisions, for the reclamation of slaves, or to protect the owner of an escaped slave from interference, when duly asserting his constitutional rights of reclamation.

IV. That Congress, from the earliest period of the government, has, by legislative penalties, vindicated the constitutional right of the owner of slaves against unlawful interference.

V. That such legislation was adopted in 1793 by the second Congress elected under the Constitution, composed of many of the members of the Convention who framed the Constitution, has, from that day to this, been in active operation, and has been acquiesced in by all departments of the government, national and State; and the legislative power of Congress on this subject has been recognized by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio in their statutes; by the supreme Court of the United States, and by the Supreme Courts of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, California, by the Supreme Court of Ohio on the circuit, and, indeed, by the Supreme Courts of every State in the Union where the question has been made, and has never been denied by the Supreme Court of any State—the Courts of Wisconsin, notwithstanding the popular impression, not forming an exception.

VI. The right to rescue escaped slaves from their owners being denied to all citizens of the United States by the Constitution; Congress having prohibited it and enforced the prohibition by penalties; the Supreme Court of the United States and the Courts of the free States having recognized and acquiesced in such legislative prohibition and punishment, if the question is not thus put beyond the reach of the private personal views of judges, and if they possess judicial discretion or power to overrule on the authority of their individual opinions this unbroken current of decisions and this acquiescence of the States of the Union, and change the settled interpretation of the Constitution of the United States; then there is no limit, and no restraint upon judges making at any time, and under any circumstances, their own individual opinions, the arbitrary interpreters of the Constitution.

VII. Whatever differences of opinion may now exist in the public mind, as to the power of Congress to punish rescuers as provided in the acts of 1793 and 1850, no such vital blow is given either to constitutional rights or State sovereignty by Congress thus enacting a law to punish a violation of the Constitution of the United States as to demand of this Court the organization of resistance. If, after more than sixty years of acquiescence by all departments of the national and State governments, in the power of Congress to provide for the punishment of rescuers of escaped slaves, that power is to be disregarded and all laws which may be passed by Congress on this subject from henceforth are to be persistently resisted and nullified, the work of revolution should not be begun by the conservators of the public peace.

From the Capital City Fact of Saturday.

Republican Delegate Convention—Franklin County.

The Republican delegates of this county convened at the City Hall pursuant to call at 2 o'clock P. M. and organized by electing R. P. L. Baber, Esq., President, and Theo. Comstock Sec'y. The townships were not generally represented there being only partial delegations from some, while the townships of Prairie, Clinton, Brown, Perry, Washington, Norwich and Jefferson had no representation at all.

On motion of Eli F. Jennings, it was resolved that where townships were only partially represented the delegates in attendance be instructed to fill the vacancies.

On motion, it was resolved that where delegations could not be filled, that the delegates present should cast the full vote of their township or ward.

A variety of opinions existed as to the manner of making the election of the State delegates. Several resolutions were offered and withdrawn, when it was finally resolved to vote for the eight delegates in a body, and that when a delegate got a majority of all votes cast, he should be a delegate and so on till the delegation was full.

The names of twenty-three persons as delegates were presented to the Convention, and the first ballot was taken resulting in the election of C. N. Olds, F. C. Sessions, Henry Miller, H. D. Cooke and Lucien Buttles.

A motion to appoint the three delegates yet wanting to fill the delegation, from the country from the delegates who had received the highest number of votes on the last ballot, was voted down.

Mr. T. Moore, of Franklin Tp., enquired if any more delegates could be elected from the Third Ward? Without giving that gentleman any definite information regarding the matter, the convention proceeded to the second ballot which resulted in the election of James McFason, J. B. Potter and John Clark.

On motion of A. S. Buttles, eight alternates were appointed to advise with the regular delegates, or to fill vacancies should any occur. The following named gentlemen were appointed the alternates: R. R. Johnson, Horton Howard, Dr. J. Helmick, Dr. Stephenson, H. Long, W. Hoe, W. B. Thomas, David Taylor.

On motion of C. Breyfogle the Convention adjourned sine die.

COLUMBUS.—We copy from the Baltimore Clipper an interesting letter written from here, giving a description of our city and its institutions. A perusal will well repay the reader. As the writer promises to give further particulars of his impressions of Columbus, should his letter not escape our eye, we shall take pleasure in laying it before the readers of the FACT.

STOCK SHIPMENTS.—One hundred and nineteen car loads of cattle passed over the C. & C. Railroad during the month now closing. The quantity was tolerably well divided between Ohio and Kentucky.

☞ The Democratic primary election in Baltimore on Thursday resulted in carrying eight wards out of twenty for DOUGLAS.

MEXICO.—A private dispatch from New Orleans says MIRAMON's Cabinet had issued a decree restoring SANTA ANNA to all rights and titles which he formerly held in Mexico, and inviting his return via Tampico, whither Gen'l. WALL is marching to meet him. The dispatch also says the steamer Coatzacoalcos has been attached by creditors.

THE LATEST FASHIONS.—There is an intensity of style about Young America which is decidedly refreshing. In fashionable parlance "there is a change." Bloated beavers and shanghai sacks are gone; the latest in vogue is a wash-bowl head covering, a monkey jacket, and a pair of funnel-legged trowserloons. Whiskers must be taken off and moustaches kept on. Shoes are the rage. Gloves always are worn; and sticks generally carried. To be without a pipe or meerschaum holder on the promenade, is most unbecoming and vulgar.

PROCESSION OF THE SONS OF MALTA.—Thursday night this long expected and anxiously awaited spectacle took place about eleven o'clock. The procession was grand, gloomy and spectral, the main column dressed in black and white dominoes, some allegorically arrayed, the most picturesque and striking of which were "Time" and "Death," the latter of whom was appositely "behind time," as he would like to be, in company with outstrapping an old gentleman of the "glass and scythe," which by the by, would doubtless have been preferable in the shape of a goblet and demijohn, especially as Time strode with long, elastic step through clouds of dust, followed hard by grim-visaged Death who would have been a striking rider, though extremely gaunt, for the pale horse. The procession had three bands of music, one of which was the old fashioned drum and fife, which relieved the brass bands. After passing through the entire city, the large number of "Sons" quietly subsided into their original obscurity and mystery.

AMERICAN CONVENTION.—The Americans of Pennsylvania were called to meet in Convention at Harrisburgh on Wednesday. In point of numbers the Convention was a decided failure, there being not over a dozen persons at the organization and very few more in the afternoon.

Those present choose Mr. J. J. HERRON as Chairman, and passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That we still adhere with abiding faith to the principles of the American party, as enacted in the platform adopted at the American State Convention in the city of of Lancaster in June, 1857; and that we pledge to each other our united efforts in promulgating and sustaining those principles.

The Chairman was authorised to appoint a State Central Committee, whereupon the Convention adjourned sine die.

The Toronto Leader affirm that it has knowledge of a dark-lantern meeting held in that city, the object of which is to get are volutionary organization under the name of a club, with branches in all parts of the Province. It treats the matter seriously, and warns the people against becoming involved in the movement.

FURTHER FROM MEXICO.—We have received the following additional intelligence from Mexico:

Miramon's Cabinet have issued a circular, saying that they meant no disrespect to the American Government in withdrawing Mr. Black's and the other American Consuls' exequaturs. It further says, that peaceable American citizens will be allowed to remain in the country.

Consul Black remains at the capital at the desire of Minister McLane, who has sent him a new exequatur.

Accounts received from Northern Mexico state that Gen. Huerta, a Liberal, has six thousand well armed men gathering around San Louis Potosi, and whom he intends marching to join Alvarez and Degolado.

☞ The failure of a large drug house in Boston having extensive connections in New York and New Orleans, was announced in the latter city yesterday.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

☞ Senator Douglas arrived at New Orleans on Tuesday.

☞ Professor Agassiz delivered a eulogy on Humboldt before the Society of American Arts and Sciences at Boston on Tuesday.

☞ A letter from Rome states that the Pope has administered absolution to King Bomba by the electric wire.

☞ More than one dozen divorces have been granted within a fortnight, by the Supreme Court of New York.

☞ A grand encampment of the Sons of Malta is shortly to take place on a plain adjoining the Falls of Minnehaha, Minnesota.

☞ The British have launched, for the Pope, a yacht called, characteristically enough, the Immaculate Conception.

☞ The Executive Mansion of Indiana was entered by burglars on Friday night. Gov. Willard was robbed of $195 in money and some valuable papers.

☞ Owing to the counterfeits circulated in New York, and the West, the Brighton Market Bank, Boston, proposes to withdraw from circulation all its $100 bills.

☞ Advices from Austral, dated at Melbourne on the 1st of March, state American flour was selling at $130 per ton, an advance of $2 50 over the native.

☞ The Chicago Press and Tribune publishes elaborate reports of the condition and prospects of the crops in that State, which are highly favorable.

☞ The Empress of France wore on a recent occasion a bonnet of white crape, with a small humming bird placed on a spray of lilac.

☞ The average income of the Mexican church is twenty-five millions a year, while the revenue of the national government is only fifteen millions.

☞ Jas. G. Martin, a Boston stock broker, was on Wednesday held in $5,000 on a charge of embezzlement of stocks entrusted to him to negotiate.

☞ On Tuesday, the bark Mendi sailed from New York for Liberia with thirty colored emigrants, under the superivision of the Colonization Society.

☞ A number of American army officers have left for Europe to see the style of fighting and pick up any little murderous suggestions which may be of value.

☞ The Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, Commissioner of the General Land Office, is spoken of as the Democratic candidate for Governor at the next election.

☞ It is a singular fact that the number of emigrants now going from the Eastern States to California is, by actual count, greater than it was during the height of the gold fever.

☞ New wheat was sold at St Louis on Friday to A. W. Fagin for five dollars a bushel. The wheat was raised by Dr. Dockery, in Desoto county, Mississippi.

☞ Friday evening as Burill Arnold, of Centerville, Warwick Co., R. I., was sitting in his store he was shot dead by some person unknown. The ball entered his back between the shoulders.

☞ A mass meeting of the counties in Mississippi adjacent to Vicksburg who are opposed to the revival of the African slave trade was to have been held in Vicksburg on Saturday, the 21st inst.

☞ The steam saw, planing and box board mill of Bearon & Smith, and the R. R. Depot and the Post-office at the South Middleboro Mass Station of the Cape Cod R. R. were destroyed by fire on Friday night.

☞ A distinguished Italian of Boston proposes to organize a company of one hundred of his countrymen now in the United States for service in the present war of Independence in Italy.

☞ An enthusiastic gentleman, answering to the name of Marble, is diligently digging into the sand at Lynn, Mass., in quest of buried pirate-treasure. The papers are making fun of him.

☞ A Boston dispatch of the 28th says Miss Francis Cady, of Blackstone, and Miss Georgiana Brown, of Pawtucket, were carried over the dam at High Rock, Blackstone, last evening, while sailing in a boat. Their bodies were recovered this morning.

☞ The New Haven Palladium says that propositions have been made by the Austrian government for four hundred thousand dollars worth of the New Haven Volcanic Repeating Rifles.

☞ Miss Effie Carstang, a boarding-house keeper in St Louis, has sued a millionaire, Mr. Henry Shaw, sixty-five years of age, for breach of promise, laying her damages at $100,000.

☞ The corner stone of the monument to the Pilgrim Fathers, at Plymouth, will be laid on the 1st of August. About a thousand tons of granite have been delivered on the site of the proposed monument.

☞ The Toronto Leader, which formerly published under its announcement of the theatrical play bills the usual motto, "God Save the Queen" and "Vive l'Empereur," now omits the compliment to the Emperor of the French.

☞ A company of 30 pupils of the Blind Institution in Philadelphia are making the tour of the principal towns in Pennsylvania, for the purpose of exhibiting their proficiency in study.

☞ William J. Watkins, formerly associated editorially with Fred. Douglas in his paper, and somewhat noted as a colored writer and lecturer, is under arrest in Rochester to answer a charge of bastardy.

☞ Mr. Field Fowler, of Boston, who has been extensively engaged in the sugar trade, has failed for upwards of two hundred thousand dollars. A large part of his indebtedness is said to be in Cuba.

☞ A movement is on foot to locate the next U. S. Fair at Chicago. The necessary guarantees have been made, and $10,000 subscribed for fitting up the grounds, &c. An agent has gone to Washington to meet the Board.

☞ On Monday last, William Gressing, a German, aged about forty-five years, went to Philadelphia, from Pogleaville, Lehigh county, Pa., in company with two friends, for the purpose of obtaining $4,600, which had been remitted to him from Germany. He shortly afterward disappeared and has not since been heard of.

☞ On Easter Monday there took place at Salisbury, England, the wedding of a cattle dealer, who had vowed that if ever he did get married he would ride to and from the church on a donkey. His friends kept him to his word and provided fifteen donkeys, that they might bear him company in state. This ludicrous wedding procession, headed by a fife band, went the rounds.

☞ The South African Commercial Advertiser says: "The grand idea of connecting Calcutta with London by an electric wire is about to be realized, a portion of the cable, 900 miles in length, having already reached Table Bay. In a few months the capitals of India and England will be only a few hours apart, in point of time."

☞ An Indiana paper says: Such an effort to get a large crop of corn in the ground has never before been made by our farmers. Every foot of tillable ground—every old field—every new clearing—the cow yard and the stable yard, is plowed and being planted. There is not an acre that can be cultivated but will be. Every hand is busy.

Brass Band Convention at Mansfield.

On Thursday, the 24th inst., the Brass Band Convention was held at Mansfield. It was numerously attended, but the number of Bands was less than had been anticipated. It is thought that there were 12,000 persons present.

It is seldom that occasions of the kind present themselves, where hilarity and mirth abound, and indulgence to excess is allowed in the use of ardent spirits, that the enjoyment is not marred by some provoked quarrel, or serious disturbance. Such was the case at Mansfield. We learn from the Sandusky Register that several disgraceful fights occurred, and the jail being insufficient to accomodate drunken and disorderly persons arrested, a barn was brought into requisition for that purpose. In endeavoring to arrest one of the rowdies, the officers were "pitched into" by his comrades, and in the melee the person sought to be arrested was killed.

The Yager band of Sandusky received the first premium of the first class; and the Monroeville band took the first premium of the second class.

"What was the text in church, to-day, Charley, my dear?"

"I believe, father, the parson took a text from the lion that Samson killed."

"This is a fine day," as a man who neglected to attend his militia drill said to the collector [illegible].

[FOREIGN NEWS.]

NEW YORK, May 26.—The Asia arrived at 10 o'clock. She left Liverpool at 3.30 P. M. on Saturday, the 14th, having been detained till that time to enable merchants to answer their letters per Arabia, which arrived at Liverpool on that day, being only nine days and eighteen hours on the passage.

No battle had occurred. Napoleon has reached Genoa, where he was received with the greatest pomp and enthusiasm. He has issued a stirring address.

The English Government has formally proclaimed its neutrality in the European war.

Count Buol has resigned from the Austrian ministry.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL, Friday, May 13.—The sales of cotton for the week have been 53,000 bales. The market opened at an advance of ⅛d, but at the close the quotations receded to ⅛d.

The Manchester advices are unfavorable and the market closes dull and declining.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, May 13.—The money market is slightly easier. The Bullion in Bank has decreased £165,000. Consols for money are quoted at 91¼@91⅜, and for account at 91⅜@91½.

THE LATEST.

LIVERPOOL, May 14.—Flour still advancing and is held 6d higher. Holders demand an advance of 6d on wheat, and corn is firm at 6d advance; beef is quiet, pork steady. Bidders offering freely, but showing no disposition to press sales.

The steamers Fulton and City of Manchester arrived out on the 13th inst.

The Asia reports passing the steamer [illegible] on the 13th, bound for Liverpool. She also passed the Persia last evening at 10.30.

Baron De Stoeckel, Russian minister to Washington, is a passenger on the Asia.

SECOND DISPATCH.

The papers by the Asia furnish the following items of intelligence.

The Emperor's departure from France was a perfect ovation, and his reception at Genoa, when he arrived on the 12th, was most cordial. His address to the army enjoined the strictest discipline and stated that his fears were—that they would show too much enthusiasm. He was expected to proceed to the army on the 14th.

The King of Sardinia visited the Emperor at Genoa.

The official Sardinian Bulletins continued to report retrograde movements by the Austrians, whose head quarters, were at Robbio, which is about midway between Vercelli and Mortara.

The following is Napoleon's address to the army of Italy.

"Soldiers, I came to place myself at your head to conduct you to the combat. We are about to second the struggles of a people now vindicating its independence, and rescue it from foreign oppression. This is a sacred cause, which has the sympathies of the civilized world. I need not stimulate your ardor, every step will remind me of the victory. In the via sacra of ancient Rome inscriptions were chiseled upon marble reminding the people of exalted deeds. It is the same to-day. In passing Mondovi, Marengo, Lodi, Castiglione, Arcole, and Rivoli, you will be in the midst of these glorious recollections be marching in another via sacra presence. That strict discipline, which is the honor of the army, have forget it not. There are no other enemies than those who fight against you. In battle remain compact, abandon not your ranks to hasten forward, beware of a too great enthusiasm, which is the only thing I fear. The new armes de precision are dangerous only at a distance. They will not prevent the bayonet from being what it has been, the terrible weapon of the French infantry. Soldiers let us all do our duty and put our confidence in God. Your country expects much from you. From one end of France to the other, the following words of happy augury, re-echo "the new army of Italy will be worthy her older sister."

TURIN, May 13—EVENING.—The Austrians are increasing their forces near the castle of St. Giovanni on the road from Piacenza to Stradella. They have constructed bridges near Vigevano and Bassa Vescovia to protect their retreat. To-day our soldiers pushed forward in a strong reconnoitering party as far as Casino, near Vercelli, and our Artillery began cannonading the enemy, which however was not replied to. Our troops have retaken their former position.

FRANKFORT ON THE MAINE—FRIDAY.—In the extraordinary sitting of Federal diet to-day the proposition of the military commission to put the garrisons of the Federal fortresses on a war footing was agreed to.

The Prussian representatives proposed that a corps of observation should be placed on the Upper Rhine but Prussia protested. The President of the diet, the Austrian ambassador who had in consequence of a summons from the Emperor repaired to Vienna, quitted Frankfort without being present at the sitting.

MARSEILLES, Thursday evening. Advices have been received from Constantinople to 5th inst. The agitation was increasing in the Turkish provinces, especially at Bosnia. The Turkish government has consequently increased the number of troops to watch Bosnia, Servia and Montenegro.

The Austrian vessels of war have been advised merely to navigate the Danube and Dardanelles.

The Austrian government has stopped the transmission of political news to Constantinople by telegraph. The European inhabitants of that place have requested that the telegraph at Jassy should be joined to the Russian telegraph lines.

Yesterday a sanguinary conflict took place between the French and Austrians residing here.

ATHENS, May 5.—The Grand Duke Constantine has rescinded his project of visiting Jerusalem and will leave to-morrow for St. Petersburgh. Leopresnce, says the Grand Duke Constantine, has strongly recommended the Greek Government to keep neutral.

LONDON, May 14.—Noon.—The steamer Kilero with the Australian, Calcutta and China mails arrived at Marseilles last night. The letters will be delivered in London on Monday.

Joseph Sturge, of Birmingham, died suddenly this morning.

GERMANY.—It is affirmed in the ministerial circulars of Berlin that Prussia for the moment maintains an expectant policy and has not bound herself to any power to remain neutral. Germany is disposed to leave the initiative to Prussia, as she will have the heaviest burden to support in the common defense.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The steamer Bremen arrived this morning from Bremen and Southampton, bringing dates to the 16th inst.

The ship Thames from Savanna had been partially burned in the dock at Liverpool. The fire was confined to the cotton in the lower hold.

No battle had taken place.

The head quarters of the Emperor Napoleon had been fixed at Alessandria.

Austria is raising a loan of seventy five millions. The resignation of Count Buol from the ministry is confirmed. Many failures are reported as having occurred on the London Stock Exchange.

Many failures are reported on the continent and on the London stock exchange. The failure of Messrs. Cromwell & Co., of Birmingham, is announced.

Queen Victoria reviewed the troops at Aldershot on the 16th inst.

Count Persigny, the new French Minister, reached London on the 14th, Count Gortchakoff had also arrived.

It is reported that the Emperor Napoleon, before his departure, Addressed a letter to Queen Victoria, repeating his promise to take no step to compromise the interests of England.

The India and China mails had reached London. The Calcutta dates are to April 8th, and from Hong Kong to March 28th. The news is not important.

The French troops had captured Saigoton, a place of considerable strength in Cochin China.

The American frigate Germantown and steamer Mississippi were at Japan.

Trade at Canton was suffering much from the exactions of the Mandarins.

THE WAR.

Nothing further of importance had been received from the seat of war. No collision having occurred, though one expected.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says that, the confidence of success by the army in Italy is so great that preparations will soon be made at Notre Dame for a Te Deum thanksgiving, for a great victory expected to be announced next week.

All the officers of the regiment of sappers, to be commanded by Prince Napoleon, left Paris on the 14th for Toulon. A train of siege artillery had also left for Italy.

It is rumored that arms have been sent to Hungary, and that the Hungarians abroad are actively employed in, forming an insurrection in their country.

An official bulletin from Piedmont, dated the 14th, says the Austrians withdrew to-day from Robbio, recently their head-quarters, but a second and still stronger reconnoitering force has been pushed forward to the walls of Verona.

The Emperor Napoleon, with Marshal Canrobert, rode through the streets of Alessandria on horseback. He was everywhere received with the greatest demonstrations of joy.

An official bulletin from Turin announces movements made by the Austrians from Strabella towards Voghera.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL, May 17.—Breadstuffs firm. Wheat advancing, sales principally of French red. Provisions firm.

LONDON, May 17.—Consols 91½@91⅝.

A dispatch from Berlin says that the Germanic Diet was closed on the 14th by the Prince Regent in person, who in his speech said that Prussia was determined to maintain the balance of power in Europe, and stand up for the security and protection of the natural interests of Germany, and he expected that all the Germanic Confederative powers would stand by her side in the fulfillment of that mission.

The mobilization of the eight federal corps d'armee is completed. Prince Frederick is commander in chief.

The Austrian government loan of seventy-five millions is to be at five per cent, payable in silver, will be issued at seventy.

THE LATEST.

LONDON, May 17th.—A dispatch from Rome says that Duke De Grammont left that city on the 16th in consequence of a telegraphic order from the Emperor.

A dispatch from Vienna says that the English steamer with the Indian mails was overhauled off Sarrara by the boats of some French war ships.

Charles Villiers & Co. of Birmingham, failed to-day.

There has been a further recovery in Illinois Central shares, but Erie Railroad securities have declined.

French Red Wheat has advanced 3s@4s in the week.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The steamship Hammonia, from Southampton on the 18th inst., arrived at this port this morning. Her advices are one day later than those furnished by the steamer New York.

Napoleon remained at Alessandria busy with his generals in laying strategical plans.

The Piedmontist cavalry had fallen in with a detachment of Austrian hussars and made some prisoners. The Austrians had withdrawn from Voghia to Castiggio.

The business on the London stock exchange on the 17th, was limited and the tone of the market was less firm. The applications for discount were high, though the demand for money on the stock exchange was rather more active.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday.—Flour has advanced 4d@6d. Wheat advanced 2@4d. Corn is 6@8d higher.

LONDON, Tuesday.—Consols 91¼@91⅜.

MANCHESTER, May 17.—Prices of goods underwent a considerable decline and the tendency is still downward.

BREADSTUFFS.—Corn is firm, mixed quoted at 6s 10d@6s 11d and white at 8s 4d@8s 9d.

PROVISIONS.—Beef quiet, pork quiet, lard steady, bacon steady.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE MARKET.—Sugar steady, rice quiet.

All qualities of goods had suffered a slight decline in prices.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.—AMERICAN STOCKS.—The latest sales of Illinois R. R. shares 44@46; P. C. discount, Ills. R. R. Bonds 70; Erie R. R. Stock 4@7.

Austria has recognized the neutrality of the states of the church.

The bridge at Stella has been undermined by the Austrians who have workmen assembled there and at other points on the river Po, the waters of which were very high in consequence of the late rains. The women and children of the country are compelled by the brutal Austrians to labor at the works.

Several Mayors of the Sardinian towns, who refused to comply with the Austrian demand for contribution have been arrested.

Four Austrian merchant vessels have been captured by the French squadron.

The inactivity of the troops is accounted for by the rain continuing to fall incessantly. Five of the Austrian works have been damaged.

QUEBEC, May 30.—The steamship Hungarian from Liverpool on the 18th inst., arrived here this morning. As she comes directly from Liverpool her advices are still later than that furnished by the Hammonia.

THE LATEST COMMERCIAL.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday.—Flour continues to have an advancing tendency, prices are 3d higher this morning. Wheat and corn are also 3d higher. Provision market is quiet.

STATE OF TRADE.

There is some talk of the employees of the mills at Manchester being put on short time in consequence of the dullness of trade.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Express of this evening says that instructions were sent out by the steamer Persia to day, to Minister Mason, instructing him to intimate to the French Government that in case Germany should be drawn into the war, this Government will not suffer any interruption of the service of the Hamburg and Bremen steamers, now carrying United States mails, so long as they do not carry articles contraband of war.

ALBANY, May 25.—The Republican National Committee are now in session considering the question of time and place for holding the next National Convention. The proceedings are private, but outside, the cities of Wheeling and St. Louis are freely spoken of in connection with the choice of place. The present meeting is supposed to be only for discussion, and that no definite decision will now be made. Gov. Morgan entertains the delegates at the Executive mansion to-night.

ST. LOUIS, May 26.—Much bad feeling existed between the Americans and Mexicans along the line of Sonora. Several Mexicans had been killed. Walker had an agent at the Gila mines, enrolling volunteers for the filibuster expedition.

Passengers from San Francisco deny the published statement that Walker and 300 men had sailed in the steamer Orizaba for Ampulco.

The treaty between Col. Hoffman and the Mojave Indians was confirmed.

HONOLULU, April 16.—King Kamehameha addressed a message to the Legislature advising a change in the Constitution.

The French had abandoned the Marquezas Islands for military purposes. The design is to establish a strong military naval depot at New Caledonia Island, near Sidney. The plan embraces the restoration of Pomare as ruler of the Society Islands.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 25.—The Commissioners appointed to locate the new Penitentiary have designated Fort Wayne as the best point. Their report has not yet been signed by the Governor.

ST. LOUIS, May 26th.—James Maginnis, of Lockport, N. Y., just returned from the Plains publishes a statement in the Democrat, pronouncing the Kansas gold mines the most stupendous humbug ever perpetrated upon the American people, gotten up by land speculators and sustained, by parties interested in frontier towns and merchants with heavy stocks of goods.

Maginnis' statement is supported by another from Mr. Vances, of Jackson, Michigan, who positively asserts after having prospected throughout the whole country and visited all the claims and diggings that no man ever made more than 20 cents a day, or found dirt yielding more than one cent a pan.

NEW ORLEANS, May 26th.—The Tennessee is below with Vera Cruz dates to the 23d, and Mexico to the 19th.

There was a movement of the capital in favor of Santa Anna's return.

General Wual was marching on Tampico with one thousand men.

The Conducta was to leave Mexico on the 24th, with several millions for Vera Cruz.

The English strongly remonstrate with Osorio relative to Tacubaya affairs.

NEW YORK, May 28.—The steamship Moses Taylor, from Aspinwall, has arrived with California dates to the 5th inst., and two million dollars in gold.

She left Aspinwall on the 16th inst. The principle consignees of the gold are the American Exchange Bank $[illegible]; Wells, Fargo & Co. $[illegible]; Duncan, Sherman & Co. $[illegible]; Schollo Bros. $[illegible]; Freeman & Co. $[illegible]; W. T. Coleman, $[illegible].

Advices from Panama state that M. Belly has obtained from the Nicaragua Government, a concession of the Transit route—he proposes until his canal is finished to take passengers and goods across the old route. The grant, however, has yet to be confirmed by the Congress.

The United States frigate Merrimac left Panama on the 9th inst. for Callao.

The advices from Central America are not particularly important.

Later advices from Nicaragua indicate that Belly's transit grant has not been ratified by Congress.

The advices from Callao are to April 27th, from Valparaiso to the 16th ult. The news unimportant. The blockade of Guayaquil still continues in Chili. Gen. Gallo still holds Copiapo and Coquimbo, but the Government was concentrating its troops against him. Disturbances had occurred in other parts of the country, but Santiago and Valparaiso remained quiet.

The news from San Francisco has been anticipated via New Orleans.

An escort left Fort Tejon on the 9th ult. with half a million in money to pay the troops in Utah. It's said that the soldiers in that territory are nearly a year in arrear of their pay, and it has leaked out through a letter from one to a comrade in Los Angeles that so soon as they are paid off they are all going to desert.

Mr. Baldan, Douglas Democrat, has been elected Mayor of Stockton.

LAFAYETTE, IND., May 29th.—As the 8 A. M. freight train for Indianapolis on the Lafayette & Indianapolis Railroad was starting out, this morning, the locomotive Lebanon exploded, seriously injuring Thos. Colley, engineer, John Donoghue, fireman; John Tracy and Peter Foor, brakemen. The engine was blown a distance of 100 feet, and is a complete wreck. The cause of the explosion is supposed to be a defect in the boiler.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The Secretary of the Treasury has addressed a circular to the collectors of the customs, saying—The immunity of our merchant vessels at sea from seizure, search, detention, or visit in times of peace, by vessels of war of any foreign nation, being now admitted by all maritime powers, it is desirable that the flag of the United States—the proper indication of the nationality of our vessels—should be promptly displayed in the presence of a ship of war.

The Secretary of the Treasury is directed to instruct collectors of customs, to request captains in the merchant service always to display their colors whenever they meet upon the ocean an armed cruiser of any nation.

The Postmaster-General, on the 18th of April, asked the opinion of the Attorney General as to his powers to reduce the overland mail from semi-weekly to weekly service. The Attorney-General has replied that the Postmaster General cannot reduce the present rate of service.

Capt. Buchanan has been ordered to the command of the Washington Navy Yard.

WHEELING, May 26.—Ohio county gives Goggin, Opposition candidate for Governor, 300 majority. Two of the three Opposition candidate for the Legislature are elected; the other is in doubt.

CHICAGO, May 26.—A destructive and fatal tornado passed Iowa City on Tuesday last. Houses and barns, and everything moveable were swept off. The track of the whirlwind was a southerly direction, and extended 10 and 12 miles before the force was spent. As far as heard from, two persons were killed, and 12 bodily injured. One family by the name of Morgan, father and son and grandson, was killed instantly.

WILMINGTON, May 27.—The Trustees of the Church Erection Fund at New York and on the Presbyterian house at Philadelphia were elected. The report of the Committee on Church Extension, was discussed, without coming to a conclusion. An open meeting to discuss the question of Church extension is being held to-night. The Assembly will not adjourn this week.

WILMINGTON, May 28.—The time of the General Assembly was mainly occupied to-day by discussions on Church extensions and publications, but no conclusion arrived at. The report of the Committee on Church Extension was recommitted, and made the special order for Monday. The delegates will go on a steamboat excursion Monday afternoon, on the invitation of the citizens of Wilmington.

DUBUQUE, May 27.—The Odd Fellows' Block, including the Post-Office, U. S. Land Office, Odd Fellows' and Masons' Lodge rooms, People's Theater, and several stores and offices, were destroyed by fire last night. Everything in the Post and Land offices were saved. All the property of the Odd Fellows and Masons were destroyed. The loss is $50,000. Insured for $10,000.

BALTIMORE, May 27.—The arrival of the U. S. surveying schooner Howell Cobb, eight days from Key West, brings intelligence of the destruction of a portion of the town by fire.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The President of several of the Railroad Companies, whose lines extend from Weldon to Charleston Co., are now here, their object being to enter into arrangements for transporting the mails more expeditiously, especially between New Orleans and New York, and avoiding the failures now so frequent.

It has been stated that the British Minister in Mexico will soon, if he has not already, recognized the Juarez Government. There is no foundation whatever for this statement.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The following additional returns from Virginia have been received:

For Governor, Bourbon county gives Letcher 400; Loomis county, 375; Upshur county, 180; Dodridge county, 300; Harrison county, 318; Richie county, 250.

Accomac, Goggin 75; Westmoreland 600.

It is estimated at Richmond that Letcher has been elected Governor by about two thousand majority.

Letcher's majority in Brooke county is about 120. Hancock county, 150.

Goggin's majority in Ohio county, 303; Marshall county 200. Ohio county elects two Opposition and one Democrat to the Legislature. Opposition Representatives elected in Marshall. Isle of Wight as far as heard from 300 small vote. Southampton close vote, probably small majority for Letcher. Northampton small Democratic loss. Accomac and Nansemond Democratic gain. Nelson county gives Goggin 354. Shenandoah county gives Letcher 1292, precincts unheard from. Page county gives Letcher 600, five precincts unheard from. Russell county gives Goggin 400. In 50 counties heard from Goggin's majority is about 800 to 900. A private dispatch from Wytheville says seven counties in Thirteenth district heard from show a Democratic loss of 1,000 on Wise's vote.

The contest between Floyd and Martin for Congress is doubtful. Three counties in the Twelfth district heard from show a Democratic loss of 900 on Wise's vote.

BATON ROUGE, LA., May 27.—The Democratic State Convention after three days close contest nominated Thos. Moore Slidell, Democrat, for Governor, on the 16th ballot.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28.—Dr. Wilson from the Statistical Committee, reported in favor of some changes in the tables of church statistics relative to elders, licentiates, baptisms, contributions, &c. The report was discussed without action. Rev. W. Breckenridge was elected Professor of Danville Theological Seminary. The report on domestic missions was taken up, discussed and concurred in. Directors of the Danville and Western Theological Seminaries were elected.

NEW ORLEANS, May 27.—The steamer Philadelphia, with dates from Havana to the 24th inst., has arrived. The news is unimportant.

The steamer Arizona from Brazos on the 23d inst., arrived, brings $200,000 in specie.

Dates from Vera Cruz to the 23d, state that Santa Anna's titles have been restored and Miramon invites him to return.

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—LEAVENWORTH.—The Pike's Peak mail arrived last night in nine days from Denver City, with four passengers and a small amount of dust in the hands of passengers.

Provisions were arriving at the mines and the general aspect of affairs was improved.

CHICAGO, May 28.—A Jacksonville correspondent of the Springfield Register says, a most terrific tornado occurred twelve miles south of that city yesterday. The violence of the whirlwind is described as exceeding anything of the kind ever witnessed, except in the West Indies. Sixteen persons are reported killed; many others seriously injured. Houses and barns were demolished and blown to atoms. The names of the killed were not ascertained.

NEW YORK, May 28.—The Arago sailed at noon for Havre and Southampton, having on board $1,750,000 in specie. The Vigo, for Cork, carried out $700,000 and the Weiser, for Southampton and Bremen, $60,000.

SAVANNAH, May 28.—Capt. Townsend of the Slaver Echo is acquitted.

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—The river continues to recede very slowly. The recent heavy rains north and west having checked the decline in the upper streams. Weather clear and pleasant.

THE LATE FIRE AT KEY WEST.—The total loss by the fire at Key West is estimated at $300,000, on which there is insurance to the amount of $100,000 at [illegible] New York offices. Among the principal losers are Col. O'Hara's estate $35,000; also Wm. H. Wall & Co. $50,000; Packer & Clase $40,000; James Filer $15,000; Peter Gandolpho $15,000; F. S. St[illegible], 000; C. M. Hora $14,000; B. W. Shafer $10,000; L. Campbell $10,000.

The fire raged eight hours, destroying upwards of 100 buildings of which 73 were stores, ware-houses and dwellings.

State Items.

—The Norfolk Reflector is informed that Mr. A. Clawson, of Clarksfield, has lost within the last few weeks all of his children, four in number, by scarlet fever.

—William Blaskie, in default of bail has been committed at Fremont, Sandusky Co., to await his trial on a charge of rape on a girl eleven years of age.

—A correspondent of the Marietta Intelligencer says, that the first printing press ever used in Marietta, and perhaps in Ohio, was destroyed in the late fire at Marietta. It was set up between 1796 and 1800, by Mathew Backus.

—The Republicans of Summit county in Convention at Akron on the 21st, adopted resolutions that William Dennison, Jr., of this city, is their first choice for candidate for Governor, and approving of the Administration of Salmon P. Chase.

—The fourth trial of Beaudien, in Lucas county, for the murder of Uplile, has resulted in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. This is the third time the same verdict has been found in Beaudien's case. He is to be hanged on the 24th of June.

—A severe hailstorm swept over a portion of Rockport, Cuyahoga county, the afternoon of the 21st. The stones were large, and driven with great violence, breaking windows and cutting leaves, vegetables, and fruits up badly. In one orchard over a thousand young clusters were picked up after the storm.

CLEVELAND STEAMERS.—The floating palaces City of Buffalo, Capt. W. D. PEASE, and Western Metropolis, Capt. W. T. PEASE, will commence their regular trips on the 6th June. Nothing can be more delightful than a trip on one of these superb steamers, whose officers are not only experienced in their duties, but are popular and affable gentlemen. Those who like a comfortable repose, "rocked by the billows," can step on board in the evening, and after a good night's rest land in Buffalo, in time to take the cars for the East. We find the following additional particulars in a late number of the Herald:

Capt. Ward will continue to run his steamers between Cleveland and Buffalo at a low rate of fare. He is building a boat to be called the Coaster, to run between Cleveland and Buffalo, touching at Fairport, Ashtabula, Conneaut and Erie.

The Cleveland and Detroit line of steamers, Ocean and May Queen, are doing a rushing business, and will always be popular, if good boats and capital officers can make any line so.

Capt. Ward's steamer Forrester is to run between Cleveland and Toledo.

The lines of steamers between Cleveland and Lake Superior are unequalled by any lines running to the North. They are splendid boats and in excellent hands.

Washington Items.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—General Jerez, Minister from Nicaragua, has been officially advised of the ratification of the Belly contract, but with such amendments as to avoid complication of impediments in the fulfillment of treaties with other nations. It concedes no important grants of land or privileges until the canal shall be completed to Costa Rica. The amendments will, therefore, be necessary to be sent to Nicaragua before they can take effect.

Our government has accepted the resolution negotiated by Minister Lamar, which contains the principles of the Cass Yrissari treaty, but dissents to the anti-filibuster clause as unnecessary. Of this the government of Nicaragua will be informed by Gen. Jerez, who will leave Washington for New York to-morrow and return to Nicaragua on the 5th of June.

It is confident that when this fact is communicated, an extra session of Congress will be called, to act upon the subject, and that they will strike out the objectionable clause.

The last steamer brought to Jerez full authority to take measures for the re-opening of the transit as soon as practicable, and on reasonable terms. He indulges the hope to be enabled to enter into mutually satisfactory arrangements in the course of a few days.

From what has already transpired, there can be little if any doubt of his success. He expresses himself both satisfied and gratified with the views and feelings of this administration towards Nicaragua.

In his absence, Senor Molina, Costa Rican minister, will have charge of Nicaraguan affairs at Washington.

No particular importance is attached to the reported Walker filibuster movements on Nicaragua. The United States as well as Nicaraguan national vessels are in sufficient force in that quarter to intercept such expeditions, if any are contemplated.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The war department is advised of the complete success of Lieut. Col. Bonneville's expedition against the Western Indians.

The President and Secretary Thompson left this afternoon for North Carolina.

Mr. Appleton has resumed his duties as Assistant Secretary.

Secretary Floyd, who two weeks ago went to Virginia to recruit his strength, writes by stenness writes to his friends here that his health is considerably improved.

ST. LOUIS, May 29.—The Overland mail of the 6th arrived last night.

A letter from Fort Belknap, dated the 21st, says, the Express has just arrived from Camp Radziminski, bringing a report that Maj. Van Dorn had a fight with the Camanches on the fork of the Arkansas on the 13th. He killed 40 and took 36 prisoners. The soldiers were killed and several wounded. Among the latter were Lieut. Lee and Capt. Smith.

The letter also says four or five hundred Texans were encamped twenty miles from Brazos on the Indian reserve, with the avowed intention of attacking the Reserve Indians. Much excitement prevailed.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—The New York-Herald's Washington correspondent says [illegible] the time expired yesterday for the execution of the contract of Mr. Johnson, the Nicaragua mail contractor, but the Postmaster-General has not decided what course he will pursue in the premises.

The administration is determined to open the Nicaragua route in some shape.

The charges preferred against Mr. Cook, the Chicago Postmaster, have all been examined and cleared up to the entire satisfaction of the department and President.

SUSPENSION BRIDGE, N. Y., May 30.—[illegible], son clerk of the Grand Trunk Railroad was found dead yesterday on the river bank having fallen from the precipice a distance [illegible]. He came from Toronto to attend the celebration of the Queen's birthday, since which time nothing had been heard of him.

ST. LOUIS May 30.—The Arizonian published at Tubac Arizona received by the Overland mail contains the proceedings of a meeting at Arizona city on the 21st, expressing strong disapprobation of the course of Congress towards Arizona, and urgently requesting co-operation from citizens throughout the territory to establish and maintain an independent government.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 30.—The Assembly considered the report of the Committee on [illegible] and overtures, systematic, benevolence and other matters of minor importance. The Theological Seminary question, in connection with slavery, was discussed. The Professors of the Seminary at Chicago will probably be elected to-morrow.

WILMINGTON, May 30.—The report of the committee on the free synod was read. It refers the body to the action of the past general assemblies for its sentiments on the subject of slavery. The report was adopted.

The report of the committee on education was also under discussion.

By invitation of the citizens, the members of the Assembly took an excursion to the steamer Logan, this afternoon, to Fort Delaware.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The Bank statement for the week ending Saturday exhibits the following. Decrease in loans $1,944,000; decrease in specie, $1,070; decrease in circulation $120,000; decrease in net deposits, $3,[illegible]. It is said that the actual amount of specie on hand is not over $21,500,000.

NORFOLK, May 30.—The steamer Bank from Baltimore bound to New Orleans, which put in here for fuel, was burnt last night at the wharf.

RAILROAD MISHAP.—The Toledo Times of the 28th inst. says:

The passenger train due in this city at daybreak yesterday, when six miles this side of Chicago, came in contact with a loaded freight car which the high wind had blown off the siding on the main track, literally staving the engine in fragments, also the forward end of the baggage car, but happy to relate, injuring no one. Molasses and sugar, it is said, were mixed deep on the track after the catastrophe. The baggage car and engine only were thrown from the track. The train came in three hours and forty minutes behind time.

FRANCE AND RUSSIA.—The London Morning Advertiser, of the 18th, says:

We are enabled to state that a very angry correspondence is being carried on between the French and English Governments, owing to the permission granted by our Government to Austrian vessels, to take shelter under our guns at Malta. The French Government energetically complains of this as showing an undue friendship for Austria, inasmuch as France, certainly, having no fear of Austrian ships, does not seek or require the same protection.

THE TURF.—On Saturday last there were two good trots over the Central Course at Newark. Owing to a previous heavy shower of rain, the course was in bad order. The first trot came off between Mr. Granger's b. g. Granger and Mr. Dennison's blk. g. Black Morris, mile heats, the best two in three in harness for $100. Two successive heats were won by Granger.

The second race for a purse, mile heats the best two in three in harness, between Joseph Gatzrick's g. m. and M. D. Bucone b. g. John Dimond. Dimond at starting was the favorite but was distanced in the first heat.

UNION COURSE, L. I., May 26, 1860.—Purse and stake $250, mile heats, best 3 in 5 in harness:

W. Mark's [illegible] Pilot	[illegible]	1	1	1
G. Con[illegible] Millers Damsel	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
B. [illegible]	[illegible]	3	3	[illegible]

Time—2:38, 2:36, 2:38.

RAILROAD FINANCES.—The following is a statement of the loss in the receipts of the four east and west trunk lines, during the month of April, compared with the same month in 1858:

New York Central	[illegible]
New York and Erie	[illegible]
Pennsylvania	[illegible]
Baltimore and Ohio	[illegible]
Total	[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE [illegible], 1859.

Columbus and its Institutions by a Baltimorean.

A Baltimorean, writing from this City to the Baltimore Clipper under date of May 22d, thus speaks of the Capital of the Buckeye State:

I have been roaming over the western country, in hopes of finding a suitable place where I could locate for the balance of my natural existence. Since my departure from Baltimore I have seen cities and towns where a man might comfortably pass the remainder of his days in peace and happiness, but all locations, I have selected the above place as my future residence. The city is beautifully laid out, the streets wide and running at right angles, while inviting shade trees adorn most of the sidewalks. The houses for the most part are three stories in height, with fronts from 14 to 20 feet. Two thirds of the buildings are built a considerable distance back from the building line, while beautiful flower gardens, containing the choicest exotics, surround the dwellings, and give to the place the appearance of a vast nursery. Notwithstanding the great number of flowers within the reach of pedestrians, it is a rare occurrence that the gardens are disturbed by the hands of mischievous urchins.

The city has a population of about 25,000 souls, and the hospitality extended to the stranger is of such a nature, that the wanderer quickly feels himself at home. There are a great many public institutions here, which are examined into with considerable interest by the stranger. The first place visited was the State House, and a more beautiful building cannot be seen in the country. It is built of Ohio marble, and was commenced in the year 1838. The grounds attached to the building are 16 acres in extent, and a large number of shade trees are being planted, which, when fully developed, will make the place the most attractive resort in existence. The interior of the building is finished in the most elaborate manner, without any pretensions to gaudiness.

The Senate chamber is furnished with five massive chandeliers, which cost $1,000—in my opinion a considerable sum for the diffusion of light. The President's desk is situated in the eastern portion of the room, and is constructed of the purest Italian marble. The doors and casings of the room are very massive, and are beautifully carved, the arms of State being the principal features. The entrance to the chamber is marked by four beautiful Italian marble columns, costing $5,000 each.

The chamber of the House of Representatives is furnished in a similar manner as that of the Senate. In the centre of the building, a rotunda, similar to that in the capitol at Washington, is approaching completion. When completed the rotunda will be 200 feet from the base to the cone. Large niches are being built in the walls for paintings. The building is occupied by all the executive officers of the State, and during the session of the Legislature the place presents a very animated appearance. The Supreme Court of the State is also held in this building, but at present there is no work on hand for this institution. In the front second story of the building, there is a room devoted to the State library, comprising over twenty thousand volumes of the best works in the country. This library has, since its formation, been the means of doing considerable good. A visit to it in the evening will find seated there scores of honest working men, who after the toils of the day resort thither to possess themselves of knowledge. The building also contains a law library, having upon its shelves 5,000 volumes, from the most eminent men in this country.

The Penitentiary is situated here, and contains nearly 800 prisoners. All the able bodied convicts are kept at work, and the articles manufactured by them are of the most excellent quality. The different shops are sustained by outside manufacturers, who pay the State about fifty cents per day for each workman. The different branches of work performed in the prison are the manufacturing of saddles, harness, buckles, moulding, chains, horse bits, willow ware, fancy carriages for children, hobby horses, stair rails, agricultural implements, bench and cabinet screws, tailoring, shoemaking, &c. The prisoners are strictly watched, and escape is almost impossible.

The Lunatic Asylum is one of the most beautiful institutions of the kind in the country. The building proper covers an acre of ground, and has about eighty acres of ground attached, a portion of which is cultivated by the inmates. There are 220 persons in the institution, and every comfort that could tend to dissipate their sufferings is here found. The inmates on each Sunday are conducted to the chapel to hear the Word of God, and a large portion of them while listening to their preacher, appear conscious that something is wrong with them, and they look uneasy and continue restless until taken back to their rooms.

The Blind Asylum contains 111 inmates, some of whom are very expert in the making of bead purses and baskets. Their studies consist of the common branches of an English education, and in acquiring, from lectures and the reading of books, &c., to their hearing, such general information as seeing persons usually acquire by reading books and papers. The great object of the Institution is to give to all such social and moral culture as is needed, to render them agreeable and desirable members of the family and the social circle, so that in case of their inability, from any cause, to make for themselves an independent livelihood, they may be able to endear themselves to relatives and friends, who will never see them suffer, and will be unwilling to allow them to be thrown upon the public for support.

The Deaf and Dumb Asylum contains 122 inmates; 66 males, and 56 females. The manner of instructing this class of beings was first introduced in France and Germany, a century ago. In 1817, the first institution of the kind in this country was opened in Hartford. In 1829, the Ohio Institution was opened for the reception of pupils. But first of all the States, Ohio, assumed the care of her deaf and dumb as a matter of state duty, and proclaimed her obligation to give to the unfortunate class a complete education at the expense of the State. Attached to the Institution, there is a large Gymnasium where the inmates exercise themselves. Every convenience to promote health and happiness is furnished them, and in many instances individuals leave this institution, although deprived of the power of speech, possessed of an education fitting them for the highest situations.

The city also contains an Idiotic asylum, Orphans' Home and Asylum, all of which are conducted in such a manner that Ohio has been chronicled in the history of humanity as being the greatest of all friends to the unfortunate.

There are several other public institutions in the city, among which are the Esther Institute for young ladies, from which several bright stars now flashing upon the literary firmament have graduated. The Starling Medical College also occupies a prominent position in this State. The edifice is of a handsome and grotesque style of architecture, and was endowed by the late Lyne Starling. The building when completed will cost over one hundred thousand dollars. Public Schools with accommodations for all the children in the city abound, and are supplied with the most efficient teachers. There is perhaps no other State in the Union where the education of the youth is more properly taken care of than in Ohio.

A short distance from the city there is situated what is known as Green Lawn Cemetery. It is about 80 acres in extent, and contains the ashes of the most distinguished men who lived in Ohio. The place is most beautifully laid out, and reminded me very forcibly of your Greenmount. Among the various monuments and tombstones I noticed the name of Lyne Starling, the founder of the above-named college, and the name of Maj. Nathan Goodall, one of the prominent actors in the revolution. In 1797 the Major, while on his farm in Belpre, Washington county, Ohio, was surprised and captured by the Indians who marched him to Sandusky, where he died a captive in the hands of his enemies. Also the name of John McDowell, who died in 1823. At the time of his death he was one of the presiding Judges for the State of Ohio, and his death caused the greatest gloom to spread over his State. Also, the name of Lucas Sullivant, who was born in Mecklenburg county, Va., but at an early age emigrated to Ohio, and was one of the first white men that ever trod these [illegible] of Ohio. On the 8th of January, 1823, he died, having during his lifetime bravely fought the ruthless savages, and lived to see one of the greatest cities rise from the bosom of the forest. The Cemetery contains the remains of several other distinguished individuals, but as I have made this letter already too lengthy, I will defer further particulars until another time.

THE FATALISM OF RAILROAD CONDUCTORS.—These men are like soldiers and living always in certain consciousness of danger, grow to be fatalists in belief. On Monday last Mr. Gifford was conversing with a friend in Syracuse in regard to the death of Mr. Bowen, when he remarked—"It is a mere matter of time with all of us," and added, "When I go I hope I shall go quick." Little did he then think that he was soon to die and to die instantly! So says the Albany Argus.

From the Capital City Fact of Saturday.

The Decision on the Habeas Corpus Postponed.

Judge SWAN announced this morning that the Court had been engaged up to last evening in the examination of authorities, and as they had determined to deliver written opinions they were not yet prepared, and announced that the decision was accordingly postponed until Monday afternoon at three o'clock.

Various rumors have been current on the streets, and in conversational circles, as to the result and consequences of the decision. It has been suggested that the Court would be undivided in releasing the prisoners from the custody of Uncle Sam, while others were of an entirely contrary opinion. Some think, or so express themselves, that the Court will be divided. Ch. J. SWAN and PECK J. will maintain the constitutionality of the law and remand the prisoners to the custody of the U. S. Marshal; while SCOTT, BRINKERHOFF and SUTLIFF will adjudge the law to be unconstitutional, and the decision under it to be void, and the prisoners therefore to be discharged from the penalty imposed by the U. S. District Court. It was also suggested that the Court would be four to one—that Judge PECK would lean, rather to the release of the prisoners, looking to the doubtful constitutionality of the law, but deeming it inexpedient to resist its execution. Such is the current opinion among outsiders.

We rather coincide with those who anticipate division in the Court—that Judges SWAN and PECK will maintain the constitutionality of the law, while Justices SCOTT, BRINKERHOFF and SUTLIFF will determine otherwise. The U. S. Marshal will doubtless re-arrest the prisoners, if they are discharged by the Court—or at least will attempt to do so. Then come the consequences. It is said that the colored population, or at least a portion of it, are prepared for "the rescue," and violence may be the result. They will find aid and co-operation from their fairer brethren; but the feeling prevalent among the majority of our citizens is to maintain the U. S. law inviolate. But it is useless to speculate. We shall see what we shall see.

From the Capital City Fact of Monday.

We confess we were proud of the Ohio Supreme Court, when we listened to the masterly decision of Ch. Justice SWAN, pronounced in the Rescue Case on Habeas Corpus, this afternoon. It was broad, comprehensive, dignified and unanswerable. We have only time to announce the decision that the prisoners be remanded.

PECK, J., delivered a separate and very elaborate opinion, specifying with incomparable clarity the decisions of the State Courts and the settlement of the question by the Supreme Court of the U. S. that the laws of 1793 and 1850 are constitutional and valid. He concurred with Chief Justice SWAN that the prisoners be remanded.

SCOTT, J., concurred in the main with the arguments and fully in the conclusion of the precedent Judges; and might hereafter elaborate his views in a written opinion.

BRINKERHOFF, J., had merely taken notes which he had not elaborated, which he might or might not write out hereafter, as he has leisure and inclination. He excepted to the omission of technicalities in the indictment which rendered the conviction illegal—but we were as well satisfied with the decision of the majority of the court we did not remain to hear him out or ascertain the status of Judge SUTLIFF.

From the Capital City Fact of Tuesday.

We announced yesterday the decision of the Supreme Court but had not time to give a sketch of the points made. Judges BRINKERHOFF and SUTLIFF dissented. We may be permitted to add that the reading of the latter was very confused, and more than once his manner if not casuistry raised a smile upon the otherwise grave and serious faces of the other members of the court.

This we trust will settle this vexed question, as Judge PECK said: "Is the true interpretation of the Constitution never to be settled?" Will not the uniform decision of the courts, State and Federal, for sixty-six years determine its validity and constitutionality? Can it ever be settled? According to the Attorney-General and Judges BRINKERHOFF and SUTLIFF, it can never be settled until the law has been pronounced unconstitutional. But then asks Judge PECK, will that settle it? Will not those who have contended for its constitutionality, and have the precedents of decisions since 1793 to sustain them, commence the controversy anew? Are precedents nothing? Is cotemporaneous construction nothing? Is the unbroken decision of the Supreme Court; of the State Courts from the passage of the law of 1793 to the present time entitled to no weight? With the fanatics who would introduce discretion as in effect for precedent nothing but a compliance with their exactions may suffice, though the wildest anarchy ensue. They can scarcely be serious, and probably expect to be disappointed that they may continue to complain. We are truly gratified at the result of this trial, and breathe much more freely than when there was a prospect of serious disturbance which would surely have followed a contrary decision by a majority of the court.

With such men as Judges SWAN and PECK on the bench, "the lance of Justice" is securely and wisely entrusted, but it is a source of mortification that their legal and discriminating intelligence may be counterpoised by the political fanaticism of BRINKERHOFF and laborious dullness of SUTLIFF.

Syllabus of the Opinions of Chief Justice Swan and Peck, Justice, Concurred in by Scott, Justice.

Judges Swan, Scott and Peck held:—

I. That the provisions of Art. 4, Sec. 2, of the Constitution of the United States: "No person held to service or labor in one State under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due," guarantee to the owner of an escaped slave the right of reclamation.

II. That a citizen, who, knowingly and intentionally interferes with, for the purpose of rescue or rescues from the owner an escaped slave, is guilty of a violation of the Constitution of the United States, whether the acts of 1793 and 1850, commonly called the fugitive slave laws, are unconstitutional or not.

III. That the question in this case is, not whether the fugitive act of 1850 is unconstitutional in respect to the appointment and powers of commissioners, the allowance of a writ of habeas corpus, the mode of reclamation, &c., but whether Congress has any power to pass any law whatever, however just and proper, in its provisions, for the reclamation of slaves, or to protect the owner of an escaped slave from interference, when duly asserting his constitutional rights of reclamation.

IV. That Congress, from the earliest period of the government, has, by legislative penalties, vindicated the constitutional right of the owner of slaves against unlawful interference.

V. That such legislation was adopted in 1793 by the second Congress elected under the Constitution, composed of many of the members of the Convention who framed the Constitution, has, from that day to this, been in active operation, and has been acquiesced in by all departments of the government, national and State; and the legislative power of Congress on this subject has been recognized by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio in their statutes, by the supreme Court of the United States, and by the Supreme Courts of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, California, by the Supreme Court of Ohio on the circuit, and, indeed, by the Supreme Courts of every State in the Union where the question has been made, and has never been denied by the Supreme Court of any State—the Courts of Wisconsin, notwithstanding the popular impression, not forming an exception.

VI. The right to rescue escaped slaves from their owners being denied to all citizens of the United States by the Constitution; Congress having prohibited it and enforced the prohibition by penalties; the Supreme Court of the United States and the Courts of the free States having recognized and acquiesced in such legislative prohibition and punishment, if the question is not thus put beyond the reach of the private personal views of judges, and if they possess judicial discretion or power to overrule on the authority of their individual opinions this unbroken current of decisions and this acquiescence of the States of the Union, and change the settled interpretation of the Constitution of the United States; then there is no limit, and no restraint upon judges making at any time, and under any circumstances, their own individual opinions, the arbitrary interpreters of the Constitution.

VII. Whatever differences of opinion may now exist in the public mind, as to the power of Congress to punish rescuers as provided in the acts of 1793 and 1850, no such vital blow is given either to constitutional rights or State sovereignty by Congress thus enacting a law to punish a violation of the Constitution of the United States as to demand of this Court the organization of resistance. If, after more than sixty years of acquiescence by all departments of the national and State governments, in the power of Congress to provide for the punishment of rescuers of escaped slaves, that power is to be disregarded and all laws which may be passed by Congress on this subject from henceforth are to be persistently resisted and nullified, the work of revolution should not be begun by the conservators of the public peace.

From the Capital City Fact of Saturday.

Republican Delegate Convention—Franklin County.

The Republican delegates of this county convened at the City Hall pursuant to call at 2 o'clock P. M. and organized by electing R. P. L. Baber, Esq., President, and Theo. Comstock Sec'y. The townships were not generally represented there being only partial delegations from some, while the townships of Prairie, Clinton, Brown, Perry, Washington, Norwich and Jefferson had no representation at all.

On motion of Eli P. Jennings, it was resolved that where townships were only partially represented the delegates in attendance be instructed to fill the vacancies.

On motion, it was resolved that where delegations could not be filled, that the delegates present should cast the full vote of their township or ward.

A variety of opinions existed as to the manner of making the election of the State delegates. Several resolutions were offered and withdrawn, when it was finally resolved to vote for the eight delegates in a body, and that when a delegate got a majority of all votes cast, he should be a delegate and so on till the delegation was full.

The names of twenty-three persons as delegates were presented to the Convention, and the first ballot was taken resulting in the election of O. H. Olds, P. C. Sessions, Henry Miller, H. D. Cooke and Lucian Buttles.

A motion to appoint the three delegates yet wanting to fill the delegation, from the country from the delegates who had received the highest number of votes on the last ballot, was voted down.

Mr. T. Moore of Franklin Tp., enquired if any more delegates could be elected from the "Third Ward?" Without giving that gentleman any definite information regarding the matter, the convention proceeded to the second ballot which resulted in the election of James McFarson, J. B. Potter and John Clark.

On motion of A. B. Buttles, eight alternates were appointed to advise with the regular delegates, or to fill vacancies should any occur. The following named gentlemen were appointed the alternates: E. B. Johnson, Horton Howard, Dr. J. Helmick, Dr. Stephenson, H. Long, W. Ross, W. B. Thomas, David Taylor.

On motion of C. Breyfogle the Convention adjourned sine die.

COLUMBUS.—We copy from the Baltimore Clipper an interesting letter written from here, giving a description of our city and its institutions. A perusal will well repay the reader. As the writer promises to give further particulars of his impressions of Columbus, should his letter not escape our eye, we shall take pleasure in laying it before the readers of the Press.

STOCK SHIPMENTS.—One hundred and nineteen car loads of cattle passed over the C. C. & C. Railroad during the month now closing. The quantity was tolerably well divided between Ohio and Kentucky.

The Democratic primary election in Baltimore on Thursday resulted in carrying eight wards out of twenty for Douglas.

MEXICO.—A private dispatch from New Orleans says MIRAMON's Cabinet had issued a decree restoring SANTA ANNA to all rights and titles which he formerly held in Mexico, and inviting his return via Tampico, whither Gen'l. WALL is marching to meet him. The dispatch also says the screw steamer Coatzacoalcos has been attached by creditors.

THE LATEST FASHIONS.—There is an intensity of style about Young America which is decidedly refreshing. In fashionable parlance "there is a change." Bloated beavers and shanghai sacks are gone; the latest in vogue is a wash-bowl head covering, a monkey jacket, and a pair of funnel-legged trowserloons. Whiskers must be taken off and moustaches kept on. Shoes are the rage. Gloves always are worn; and sticks generally carried. To be without a pipe or meerschaum holder on the promenade, is most unbecoming and vulgar.

PROCESSION OF THE SONS OF MALTA.—Thursday night this long expected and anxiously awaited spectacle took place about eleven o'clock. The procession was grand, gloomy and spectral, the main column dressed in black and white dominoes, some allegorically arrayed, the most picturesque and striking of which were "Time" and "Death," the latter of whom was appositely "behind time," as he would like to be, in company with unstrapping an old gentleman of the "glass and scythe," which by the by, would doubtless have been preferable in the shape of a goblet and demijohn, especially as Time strode with long, elastic step through clouds of dust, followed hard by grim-visaged Death who would have been a striking rider, though extremely gaunt, for the pale horse. The procession had three bands of music, one of which was the old fashioned drum and fife, which relieved the brass bands. After passing through the entire city, the large number of "Sons" quietly subsided into their original obscurity and mystery.

AMERICAN CONVENTION.—The Americans of Pennsylvania were called to meet in Convention at Harrisburgh on Wednesday. In point of numbers the Convention was a decided failure, there being not over a dozen persons at the organization and very few more in the afternoon.

Those present chose Mr. J. R. [illegible] as Chairman, and passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That we still adhere with abiding faith to the principles of the American party, as enacted in the platform adopted at the American State Convention in the city of Lancaster in June, 1857; and that we pledge to each other our united efforts in promulgating and sustaining those principles.

The Chairman was authorized to appoint a State Central Committee, whereupon the Convention adjourned sine die.

The Toronto Leader affirm that it has knowledge of a dark-lantern meeting held in that city, the object of which is to get are volutionary organization under the name of a club, with branches in all parts of the Province. It treats the matter seriously, and warns the people against becoming involved in the movement.

FURTHER FROM MEXICO.—We have received the following additional intelligence from Mexico:

Miramon's Cabinet have issued a circular, saying that they meant no disrespect to the American Government in withdrawing Mr. Black's and the other American Consuls' exequaturs. It further says, that peaceable American citizens will be allowed to remain in the country.

Consul Black remains at the capital at the desire of Minister McLane, who has sent him a new exequatur.

Accounts received from Northern Mexico state that Gen. Huarez, a Liberal, has six thousand well armed men gathering around San Louis Potosi, and whom he intends marching to join Alvarez and Degolado.

The failure of a large drug house in Boston having extensive connections in New York and New Orleans, was announced in the latter city yesterday.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Senator Douglas arrived at New Orleans on Tuesday.

Professor Agassiz delivered a eulogy on Humboldt before the Society of American Arts and Sciences at Boston on Tuesday.

A letter from Rome states that the Pope has administered absolution to King Bomba by the electric wire.

More than one dozen divorces have been granted within a fortnight, by the Supreme Court of New York.

A grand encampment of the Sons of Malta is shortly to take place on the plain adjoining the Falls of Minnehaha, Minnesota.

The British have launched, for the Pope, a yacht called, characteristically enough, the Immaculate Conception.

The Executive Mansion of Indiana was entered by burglars on Friday night. Gov. Willard was robbed of $125 in money and some valuable papers.

Owing to the counterfeits circulated in New York, and the West, the Brighton Market Bank, Boston, proposes to withdraw from circulation all its $100 bills.

Advices from Australi, adated at Melbourne on the 1st of March, states American flour was selling at $120 per ton, an advance of $2 50 over the native.

The Chicago Press and Tribune publishes elaborate reports of the condition and prospects of the crops in that State, which are highly favorable.

The Empress of France wore on a recent occasion a bonnet of white crape, with a small humming bird placed on a spray of lilac.

The average income of the Mexican church is twenty-five millions a year, while the revenue of the national government is only fifteen millions.

Jas. G. Marith, a Boston stock broker, was on Wednesday held in $5,000 on a charge of embezzlement of stocks entrusted to him to negotiate.

On Tuesday, the bark Mendi sailed from New York for Liberia with thirty colored emigrants, under the supervision of the Colonization Society.

A number of American army officers have left for Europe to see the style of fighting and pick up any little murderous suggestions which may be of value.

The Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, Commissioner of the General Land Office, is spoken of as the Democratic candidate for Governor at the next election.

It is a singular fact that the number of emigrants now going from the Eastern States to California is, by actual count, greater than it was during the height of the gold fever.

New wheat was sold at St Louis on Friday to A. W. Fagin for five dollars a bushel. The wheat was raised by Dr. Doskery, in Desoto county, Mississippi.

Friday evening as Burill Arnold, of Centerville, Warwick Co., R. I., was sitting in his store he was shot dead by some person unknown. The ball entered his face between the [illegible].

A mass meeting of the counties in Mississippi adjacent to Vicksburg who are opposed to the revival of the African slave trade was to have been held in Vicksburg on Saturday, the 21st inst.

The steam saw, planing and box board mill of Bearon & Smith, and the R. R. Depot and the Post-office at the South Middleboro Mass Station of the Cape Cod R. R. was destroyed by fire on Friday night.

A distinguished Italian of Boston proposes to organize a company of one hundred of his countrymen now in the United States for service in the present war of independence in Italy.

An enthusiastic gentleman, answering to the name of Marble, is diligently digging into the sand at Lynn, Mass., in quest of buried pirate-treasure. The papers are making fun of him.

A Boston dispatch of the 25th says Miss Francis Cady, of Blackstone, and Miss Georgiana Brown, of Pawtucket, were drowned over the dam at High Rock, Blackstone, last evening, while sailing in a boat. Their bodies were recovered this morning.

The New Haven Palladium says that propositions have been made by the Austrian government for four hundred thousand dollars worth of the New Haven Volcanic Repeating Rifles.

Miss Effie Carstang, a boarding-house keeper in St Louis, has sued a millionaire, Mr. Henry Shaw, sixty-five years of age, for breach of promise, laying her damages at $100,000.

The corner stone of the monument to the Pilgrim Fathers, at Plymouth, will be laid on the 1st of August. About a thousand tons of granite have been delivered on the site of the proposed monument.

The Toronto Leader, which formerly published under its announcement of the theatrical play bills the usual mottos, "God Save the Queen" and "Viva l' Empereur," now omits the compliment to the Emperor of the French.

A company of 30 pupils of the Blind Institution in Philadelphia are making the tour of the principal towns in Pennsylvania, for the purpose of exhibiting their proficiency in study.

William J. Watkins, formerly associated editorially with Fred. Douglas in his paper, and somewhat noted as a colored writer and lecturer, is under arrest in Rochester to answer a charge of bastardy.

Mr. Field Fowler, of Boston, who has been extensively engaged in the sugar trade, has failed for upwards of two hundred thousand dollars. A large part of his indebtedness is said to be in Cuba.

A movement is on foot to locate the next U. S. Fair at Chicago. The necessary guarantees have been made, and $10,000 subscribed for fitting up the grounds, &c. An agent has gone to Washington to meet the Board.

On Monday last, William Gressing, a German, aged about forty-five years, went to Philadelphia, from Fogelsville, Lehigh county, Pa., in company with two friends, for the purpose of obtaining $4,500, which had been remitted to him from Germany. He shortly afterward disappeared and has not since been heard of.

On Easter Monday there took place at Salisbury, England, the wedding of a cattle dealer, who had vowed that if ever he did get married he would ride to and from the church on a donkey. His friends kept him to his word and provided fifteen donkeys, that they might bear him company en suite. This ludicrous wedding procession, headed by a fife band, went the rounds.

The South African Commercial Advertiser says: "The grand idea of connecting Calcutta with London by an electric wire is about to be realized, a portion of the cable, 800 miles in length, having already reached Table Bay. In a few months the capitals of India and England will be only a few hours apart, in point of time."

An Indiana paper says: Such an effort to get a large crop of corn in the ground has never before been made by our farmers. Every foot of tillable ground—every old field—every new clearing—the cow yard and the stable yard, is plowed and being planted. There is not an acre that can be cultivated but will be. Every hand is busy.

[illegible] Band Convention at Mansfield.

On Thursday, the 26th inst., the Brass Band Convention was held at Mansfield. It was numerously attended, but the number of Bands was less than had been anticipated. It is thought that over 12,000 persons were present.

It is seldom that occasions of the kind present themselves, where hilarity and mirth abound, and indulgence to excess is allowed in the use of ardent spirits, that the enjoyment is not marred by some provoked quarrel, or serious disturbance. Such was the case at Mansfield. We learn from the Sandusky Register that several disgraceful fights occurred, and the jail being insufficient to accomodate drunken and disorderly persons arrested, a barn was brought into requisition for that purpose. In endeavoring to arrest one of the rowdies, the officers were "pitched into" by his comrades, and in the melee the person sought to be arrested was killed.

The Tiger band of Sandusky received the first premium of the first class; and the Monroeville band took the first premium of the second class.

"What was the text in church, to-day, Charley, my dear?"

"I believe, father, the parson took a [illegible] from the lion that Samson killed."

"This is a fine day," as a man who neglected to attend his militia drill said to the collector.

[illegible]

NEW YORK, May 26.—The Asia arrived at 10 o'clock. She left Liverpool at 5:30 P. M. on Saturday, the 14th, having been detained till that time to enable merchants to answer their letters per Arabia, which arrived at Liverpool on that day, being only nine days and eighteen hours on the passage.

No battle had occurred. Napoleon has reached Genoa, where he was received with the greatest pomp and enthusiasm. He has issued a stirring address.

The English Government has formally proclaimed its neutrality in the European war.

Count Buol has resigned from the Austrian ministry.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL, Friday, May 13.—The sales of cotton for the week have been 53,000 bales. The market opened at an advance of ⅛d, but at the close the quotations receded to ⅛d.

The Manchester advices are unfavorable and the market closes dull and declining.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, May 13.—The money market is slightly easier. The Bullion in Bank has decreased £145,000. Consols for money are quoted at 91½@91⅝, and for account at 91⅜@91⅝.

THE LATEST.

LIVERPOOL, May 14.—Flour still advancing and is held 6d higher. Holders demand an advance of 6d on wheat, and corn is firm at 6d advance; beef is quiet, pork steady. Bidders offering freely, but showing no disposition to press sales.

The steamers Fulton and City of Manchester arrived out on the 13th inst.

The Asia reports passing the steamer Jura on the 13th, bound for Liverpool. She also passed the Persia last evening at 10.30.

Baron De Stoeckel, Russian minister at Washington, is a passenger on the Asia.

SECOND DISPATCH.

The papers by the Asia furnish the following items of intelligence.

The Emperor's departure from France was a perfect ovation, and his reception at Genoa, when he arrived on the 12th, was most cordial. His address to the army enjoined the strictest discipline and stated that his forces were—that they would show too much of business. He was expected to proceed to the army on the 14th.

The King of Sardinia visited the Emperor at Genoa.

The official Sardinian Bulletins continued to report retrograde movements by the Austrians, whose head quarters, were at Rabbio, which is about midway between Vercelli and Mortara.

The following is Napoleon's address to the army of Italy.

"Soldiers, I came to place myself at your head to conduct you to the combat. We are about to second the struggles of a people now vindicating its independence, and rescue it from foreign oppression. This is a sacred cause, which has the sympathies of the civilized world. I need not stimulate your ardor, every step will remind me of the victory in the via sacra of ancient Rome inscriptions were chiseled upon marble reminding the people of exalted deeds. It is the same to-day. In passing Mondovi, Marengo, Lodi, Castiglione, Arcole, and Rivoli, you will be in the midst of these glorious recollections be marching in another via sacra presence. That strict discipline, which is the honor of the army, here forget it not. There are no other enemies than those who fight against you. In battle remain compact, abandon not your ranks to hasten forward, beware of a too great enthusiasm, which is the only thing I fear. The new armes de precision are dangerous only at a distance. They will not prevent the bayonet from being what it has been, the terrible weapon of the French infantry. Soldiers let us all do our duty and put our confidence in God. Your country expects much from you. From one end of France to the other, the following words of happy augury, re-echo "the new army of Italy will be worthy her older sister."

TURIN, May 13—EVENING.—The Austrians are increasing their forces near the castle of St. Giovanni on the road from Placenza to Stradella. They have constructed bridges near Vigevano and Motta Vesionte to protect their retreat. To-day our soldiers pushed forward in a strong reconoitering party as far as Casine, near Vercelli, and our Artillery began cannonading the enemy, which however was not replied to. Our troops have retaken their former position.

FRANKFORT ON THE MAINE—FRIDAY.—In the extraordinary sitting of Federal diet to-day the proposition of the military committee to put the garrisons of the Federal fortresses on a war footing was agreed to.

The Vatorian representatives proposed that a corps of observation should be placed on the Upper Rhine but Prussia protested. The President of the diet, the Austrian ambassador who had in consequence of a summons from the Emperor repaired to Vienna, quitted Frankfort without being present at the sitting.

MARSEILLES, Thursday evening. Advices have been received from Constantinople to 4th inst. The agitation was increasing in the Turkish provinces, especially at Bosina. The Turkish government has consequently increased the number of troops to watch Bosnia, Servia and Montenegro.

The Austrian vessels of war have been advised merely to navigate the Danube and Dardanelles.

The Austrian government has stopped the transmission of political news to Constantinople by telegraph. The European inhabitants of that place have requested that the telegraph at Jassy should be joined to the Russian telegraph lines.

Yesterday a sanguinary conflict took place between the French and Austrians residing here.

ATHENS, May 7.—The Grand Duke Constantine has rescinded his project of visiting Jerusalem and will leave to-morrow for St. Petersburgh. Lessepens, says the Grand Duke Constantine, has strongly recommended the Greek Government to keep neutral.

LONDON, May 14—Noon.—The steamer Ellora with the Australian, Calcutta and China mails arrived at Marseilles last night. The latter will be delivered in London on Monday.

Joseph Sturge, of Birmingham, died suddenly this morning.

GERMANY.—It is affirmed in the ministerial circulars of Berlin that Prussia for the moment maintains an expectant policy, and has not bound herself to any power to remain neutral. Germany is disposed to leave the initiative to Prussia, as she will have the heaviest burden to support in the common defense.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The steamer Bremen arrived this morning from Bremen and Southampton, bringing dates to the 16th inst.

The ship Thames from Savanna had been partially burned in the dock at Liverpool. The fire was confined to the cotton in the lower hold.

No battle had taken place.

The head quarters of the Emperor Napoleon had been fixed at Alessandria.

Austria is raising a loan of seventy five millions. The resignation of Count Buol from the ministry is confirmed. Many failures are reported as having occurred on the London Stock Exchange.

Many failures are reported on the continent and on the London stock exchange. The failure of Messrs. Cromwell & Co., of Birmingham, is announced.

Queen Victoria reviewed the troops at Aldershot on the 14th inst.

Count Persigny, the new French Minister, reached London on the 14th. Count Gortschakoff had also arrived.

It is reported that the Emperor Napoleon before his departure, addressed a letter to Queen Victoria, repeating his promise to take no step to compromise the interests of England.

The India and China mails had reached London. The Calcutta dates are to April 8th, and from Hong Kong to March 28th. The news is not important.

The French troops had captured Saigotoo, a place of considerable strength in Cochin China.

The American frigate Germantown and steamer Mississippi were at Japan.

Trade at Canton was suffering much from the exactions of the Mandarins.

THE WAR.

Nothing farther of importance had been received from the seat of war. No collision having occurred, though soon expected.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says that the confidence of success by the army in Italy is so great that preparations will soon be made at Notre Dame for a te deum thanksgiving, for a great victory expected, to be announced next week.

All the officers of the regiment of sappers, to be commanded by Prince Napoleon, left Paris on the 14th for Toulon. A train of siege artillery had also left for Italy.

It is rumored that arms have been sent to Hungary; and that the Hungarians abroad are actively employed in, forming an insurrection in their country.

An official bulletin from Piedmont, dated the 14th, says the Austrians withdrew to-day from Robbio, recently their head-quarters, but a second and still stronger reconnoitering force has been pushed forward to the walls of Vercelli.

The Emperor Napoleon, with Marshal Canrobert, rode through the streets of Alessandria on horseback. He was everywhere received with the greatest demonstrations of joy.

An official bulletin from Turin announces movements made by the Austrians from Stradella towards Voghera.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL, May 17.—Breadstuffs firm. Wheat advancing, sales principally of French red. Provisions firm.

LONDON, May 17.—Consols 91½@91¾.

A dispatch from Berlin says that the Germanic Diet was closed on the 14th by the Prince Regent in person, who in his speech said that Prussia was determined to maintain the balance of power in Europe, and stand up for the security and protection of the natural interests of Germany, and he expected that all the Germanic Confederative powers would stand by her side in the fulfillment of that mission.

The mobilization of the eight federal corps d'armee is completed. Prince Frederick is commander [illegible].

The Austrian government loan of seventy-five millions is to be at five per cent, payable in silver, will be issued at seventy.

THE LATEST.

LONDON, May 17th.—A dispatch from Rome says that Duke De Grammont left that city on the 10th in consequence of a telegraphic order from the Emperor.

A dispatch from Vienna says that the English steamer with the Indian mails was overhauled off Sarrara by the boats of some French war ship.

Charles Villiers & Co., of Birmingham, failed to-day.

There has been a farther recovery in Illinois Central shares, but Erie Railroad securities have declined.

French Red Wheat has advanced 3d@4d in the [illegible].

NEW YORK, May 30.—The steamship Hammonia, from Southampton on the 18th inst., arrived at this port this morning. Her advices are one day later than those furnished by the steamer New York.

Napoleon remained at Alessandria busy with his generals in laying strategetical plans.

The Piedmontist cavalry had fallen in with a detachment of Austrian hussars and made some prisoners. The Austrians had withdrawn from Voghia to Castiggio.

The business on the London stock exchange on the 17th, was limited and the tone of the market was less firm. The applications for discount were high, though the demand for money on the stock exchange was rather more active.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday.—Flour has advanced 4d@6d. Wheat advanced 3@4d. Corn is 6@8d higher.

LONDON, Tuesday.—Consols 91¼@91½.

MANCHESTER, May 17.—Prices of goods underwent a considerable decline and the tendency is still downward.

BREADSTUFFS.—Corn is firm, mixed quoted at 4s 10d@5s 11d, and white at 5s 4d@5s 9d.

PROVISIONS.—Beef quiet, pork quiet, lard steady, bacon steady.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE MARKET.—Sugar steady, rice quiet.

All qualities of goods had suffered a slight decline in prices.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.—AMERICAN STOCKS—The latest sales of Illinois R. R. shares 44@45; P. C. discount, 1½; R. R. Bonds 70; Erie R. R. Stock 4@7.

Austria has recognized the neutrality of the states of the church.

The bridge at Stella has been threatened by the Austrians who have workmen assembled there and at other points on the river Po, the waters of which were very high in consequence of the late rains. The women and children of the country are compelled by the brutal Austrians to labor at the works.

Several Mayors of the Sardinian towns who refused to comply with the Austrian demand for contribution have been arrested.

Four Austrian merchant vessels have been captured by the French squadron.

The inactivity of the troops is accounted for by the rain continuing to fall incessantly. Five of the Austrian works have been damaged.

QUEBEC, May 30.—The steamship Hungarian from Liverpool on the 18th inst, arrived here this morning. As she comes directly from Liverpool her advices are still later than that furnished by the Hammonia.

THE LATEST COMMERCIAL.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday.—Flour continued to have an advancing tendency, prices are 3d higher this morning. Wheat and corn are also 3d higher. Provision market is quiet.

STATE OF TRADE.

There is some talk of the employees of the mills at Manchester being put on short time in consequence of the dullness of trade.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Express of this evening says that instructions were sent out by the steamer Persia to day, to Minister Mason, instructing him to intimate to the French Government that in case Germany should be drawn into the war, this Government will not suffer any interruption of the service of the Hamburg and Bremen steamers, now carrying United States mails, so long as they do not carry articles contraband of war.

ALBANY, May 26.—The Republican National Committee are now in session considering the question of time and place for holding the next National Convention. The proceedings are private, but outside, the cities of Wheeling and St. Louis are freely spoken of in connection with the choice of place. The present meeting is supposed to be only for discussion, and that no definite decision will now be made. Gov. Morgan entertains the delegates at the Executive Mansion to-night.

ST. LOUIS, May 26.—Much bad feeling existed between the Americans and Mexicans along the line of Sonora. Several Mexicans had been killed. Walker had an agent at the Gila mines, enrolling volunteers for the fillibuster expedition.

Passengers from San Francisco deny the published statement that Walker and 300 men had sailed in the steamer Orizaba for Acapulco.

The treaty between Col. Hoffman and the Mojave Indians was confirmed.

HONOLULU, April 16.—King Lunchasuka addressed a message to the Legislature advising a change in the Constitution.

The French had abandoned the Marquezas Islands for military purposes. The design is to establish a strong military naval depot at New Caledonia Island, near Sidney. The plan embraces the restoration of Pomare as ruler of the Society Islands.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 25.—The Commissioners appointed to locate the new Penitentiary have designated Fort Wayne as the best point. Their report has not yet been signed by the Governor.

ST. LOUIS, May 26th.—James Maginnis, of Lockport, N. Y., just returned from the Plains publishes a statement in the Democrat, pronouncing the Kansas gold mines the most stupendous humbug ever perpetrated upon the American people, gotten up by land speculators and sustained by parties interested in frontier towns and merchants with heavy stocks of goods.

Maginnis statement is supported by another from Mr. Vances, of Jackson, Michigan, who positively asserts after having prospected throughout the whole country and visited all the claims and diggings that no man ever made more than 20 cents a day, or found dirt yielding more than one cent a pan.

NEW ORLEANS, May 26th.—The Tennessee is below with Vera Cruz dates to the 23d, and Mexico to the 19th.

There was a movement of the capital in favor of Santa Anna's return.

General Waul was marching on Tampico with one thousand men.

The Guadalupe was to leave Vera Cruz on the 24th, with several millions for Vera Cruz.

The English strongly sympathize with Obregon relative to Lecumpa affairs.

NEW YORK, May 28.—The steamship Star of the West, from Aspinwall, has arrived with California dates to the 5th inst., and two million dollars in gold.

Steamer Ampitrant on the 16th inst. The principle consignees of the gold are the American Exchange Bank $287,000; Wells, Fargo & Co. $[illegible]; Duncan, Sherman & Co. $129,000; Schulle Bros. $117,000; Freeman & Co. $[illegible]; W. T. Coleman, $[illegible].

Advices from Panama state that M. Belly has obtained from the Nicaraguan Government, a concession of the Transit route—he proposes until his canal is finished to take passengers and goods across the old route. The grant, however, has yet to be confirmed by the Congress.

The United States frigate Merrimac left Panama on the 11th inst for Callao.

The advices from Central America are not particularly important.

Later advices from Nicaragua indicate that Belly's transit grant has not been ratified by Congress.

The advices from Callao are to April 27th; from Valparaiso to the 19th ult. The news unimportant.

The blockade of Guayaquil still continues in Chili. Gen. Gallo still held Copiapo and Coquimbo, but the Government was concentrating its troops against him. Disturbances had occurred in other parts of the country, but Santiago and Valparaiso remained quiet.

The news from San Francisco has been anticipated via New Orleans.

An escort left Fort Tejon on the 3d ult, with half a million in money to pay the troops in Utah. It is said that the soldiers in that territory are nearly a year in arrear of their pay, and it has leaked out through a letter from one to a comrade in Los Angelos that as soon as they are paid off they are all going to desert.

Mr. Haldan, Douglas Democrat, has been elected Mayor of Stockton.

LAFAYETTE, IND., May 28th.—As the 6 A. M. freight train for Indianapolis on the Lafayette & Indianapolis Railroad was starting out, this morning, the locomotive Lebanon exploded, seriously injuring Thos. Culley, engineer, John Daugherty, fireman; John Tracy and Peter Foos, brakemen.

The engine was blown a distance of 100 feet, and is a complete wreck. The cause of the explosion is supposed to be a defect in the boiler.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The Secretary of the Treasury has addressed a circular to the collectors of the customs, saying—The immunity of our merchant vessels at sea from seizure, search, detention, or visit in times of peace, by vessels of war of any foreign nation, being now admitted by all maritime powers, it is desirable that the flag of the United States—the proper indication of the nationality of our vessels—should be promptly displayed in the presence of a ship of war.

The Secretary of the Treasury is directed to instruct collectors of customs, to, request Captains in the merchant service always to display their colors whenever they meet upon the ocean an armed cruiser of any nation.

The Postmaster-General, on the 19th of April, asked the opinion of the Attorney General as to his powers to reduce the overland mail from semi-weekly to weekly service. The Attorney-General has replied that the Postmaster General cannot reduce the present rate of service.

Capt. Buchanan has been ordered to the command of the Washington Navy Yard.

WHEELING, May 26.—Ohio county gives Goggin, Opposition candidate for Governor, 300 majority. Two of the three Opposition candidates for the Legislature are elected; the other is in doubt.

CHICAGO, May 26.—A destructive and fatal tornado passed Iowa City on Tuesday last. Houses and barns, and everything moveable were swept off. The track of the whirlwind was a southerly direction, and extended about 12 miles before the force was spent. As far as heard from, two persons were killed, and 11 bodily injured. One family by the name of Morgan, father and son and grandson, was killed instantly.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The Trustees of the Church Erection Fund at New York and on the Presbyterian house at Philadelphia were elected. The report of the Committee on Church Extension, was discussed, without coming to a conclusion. An open meeting to discuss the question of Church extension is being held to-night. The Assembly will not adjourn this week.

WILMINGTON, May 28.—The time of the General Assembly was mainly occupied to-day by discussions on Church extensions and publications, but no conclusion arrived at. The report of the Committee on Church Extension was recommitted, and made the special order for Monday. The delegates will go on a steamboat excursion Monday afternoon, on the invitation of the citizens of Wilmington.

DUBUQUE, May 27.—The Odd Fellows' Block, including the Post-Office, U. S. Land Office, Odd Fellows' and Masons' Lodge rooms, People's Theater, and several stores and offices, were destroyed by fire last night. Everything in the Post and Land offices were saved. All the property of the Odd Fellows and Masons were destroyed. The loss is $60,000. Insured for $10,000.

BALTIMORE, May 27.—The arrival of the U. S. surveying schooner Howell Cobb, eight days from Key West, brings intelligence of the destruction of a portion of the town by fire.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The President of several of the Railroad Companies, whose lines extend from Weldon to Charleston Co., are now here, their object being to enter into arrangements for transporting the mails more expeditiously; especially between New Orleans and New York, and avoiding the failures now so frequent.

It has been stated that the British Minister in Mexico will soon, if he has not already, recognized the Juarez Government. There is no foundation whatever for this statement.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The following additional returns from Virginia have been received:

For Governor, Braxton county gives Letcher 400; Loomis county, 275; Upshur county, 180, Doddridge county, 300; Harrison county, 219; Richie county, 250.

Accomac, Goggin 15; Westmoreland 600.

It is estimated at Richmond that Letcher has been elected Governor by about two thousand majority.

Letcher's majority in Brooke county is about 136. Hancock county, 150.

Goggin's majority in Ohio county, 292, Marshall county 200. Ohio county elects two Opposition and one Democrat to the Legislature. Opposition Representatives elected in Marshall. Isle of Wight as far as heard from 302 small vote. Southampton close vote, probably small majority for Letcher. Northampton small Democratic loss. Accomac and Nansemond Democratic gain. Nelson county gives Goggin 354. Shenandoah county gives Letcher 1263, precincts unheard from. Page county gives Letcher 332, five precincts unheard from. Russell county gives Goggin 400. In 60 counties heard from Goggin's majority is about 800 to 900. A private dispatch from Wytheville says seven counties in Thirteenth district heard from show a Democratic loss of 1,600 on Wise's vote.

The contest between Floyd and Martin for Congress is doubtful. Three counties in the Twelfth district heard from show a Democratic loss of 800 on Wise's vote.

BATON ROUGE, LA., May 27.—The Democratic State Convention after three days close contest nominated Thos. Moore Slidell, Democrat, for Governor, on the 16th ballot.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28.—Dr. Wilson from the Statistical Committee, reported in favor of some changes in the tables of church statistics relative to elders, licentiates, baptisms, contributions, &c. The report was discussed without action. Rev. W. Breckenridge was elected Professor of Danville Theological Seminary. The report on domestic missions was taken up, discussed and concurred in. Directors of the Danville and Western Theological seminaries were elected.

NEW ORLEANS, May 27.—The steamer Philadelphia, with dates from Havana to the 24th inst., has arrived. The news is unimportant.

The steamer Arizona from Brazos on the 23d inst., arrived, brings $200,000 in specie.

Dates from Vera Cruz to the 23d, state that Santa Anna's titles have been restored and Miramon invites him to return.

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—LEAVENWORTH.—The Pike's Peak mail arrived last night in nine days from Denver City, with four passengers and a small amount of dust in the hands of passengers.

Provisions were arriving at the mines and the general aspect of affairs was improved.

CHICAGO, May 28.—A Jacksonville correspondent of the Springfield Register says, a most terrific tornado occurred twelve miles south of that city yesterday. The violence of the whirlwind is described as exceeding anything of the kind ever witnessed, except in the West Indies. Sixteen persons are reported killed; many others seriously injured. Houses and barns were demolished and blown to atoms. The names of the killed were not ascertained.

NEW YORK, May 28.—The Arago sailed at noon for Havre and Southampton, having on board $1,750,000 in specie. The Vigo, for Cork, carried out $70,000 and the Weser, for Southampton and Bremen, $40,000.

SAVANNAH, May 28.—Capt. Townsend of the Slaver Echo is acquitted.

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—The river continues to recede very slowly. The recent heavy rains north and west having checked the decline in the upper streams. Weather clear and pleasant.

THE LATE FIRE AT KEY WEST.—The total loss by the fire at Key West is estimated at $300,000, on which there is insurance to the amount of $100,000 all in New York offices. Among the principal losers are Col. O'Hara's estate $25,000; also Wm. H. Wall & Co., $50,000; Packer & Gies & $30,000; James Filer $15,000, Peter Crandalsbu $15,000; [illegible] 000; C. B. Horn $15,000; B. H. Shaft $15,000; L. Campbell $10,000.

The fire raged eight hours, destroying upwards of 100 buildings of which 70 were stores, ware-houses and dwellings.

State Items.

—The Norfolk Reflector is informed that Mr. A. Clawson, of Clarksfield, has lost within the last few weeks all of his children, four in number, by scarlet fever.

—William Wheeler is [illegible] committed at Fremont, Sandusky Co., to await his trial on a charge of rape on a girl eleven years of age.

—A correspondent of the Marietta Intelligencer says, that the first printing press ever used in Marietta, and perhaps in Ohio, was destroyed in the late fire at Marietta. It was set up between 1798 and 1800, by Nathaniel Backus.

—The Republicans of Summit county in Convention at Akron on the 21st, adopted resolutions that William Dennison, Jr., of this city, is their first choice for candidate for Governor, and approving of the Administration of Salmon P. Chase.

—The fourth trial of Brandiou, in Lucas county, for the murder of Upson, has resulted in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. This is the third time the same verdict has been found in Brandiou's case. He is to be hanged on the 24th of June.

—A severe hailstorm swept over a portion of Rockport, Cuyahoga county, the afternoon of the 21st. The stones were large, and driven with great violence, breaking windows and cutting leaves, vegetables, and fruits up badly. In one nursery over a thousand young [illegible] were picked up after the storm.

CLEVELAND STEAMERS.—The floating palaces City of Buffalo, Capt. W. S. Pease, and Western Metropolis, Capt. W. T. Pease, will commence their regular trips on the 6th June. Nothing can be more delightful than a trip on one of these superb steamers, whose officers are not only experienced in their duties, but are popular and affable gentlemen. Those who like a comfortable repose, "rocked by the billows," can step on board in the evening, and after a good night's rest land in Buffalo, in time to take the cars for the East. We find the following additional particulars in a late number of the Herald:

Capt. Ward will continue to run his steamers between Cleveland and Buffalo at a low rate of fare. He is building a boat to be called the Coaster, to run between Cleveland and Buffalo, touching at Fairport, Ashtabula, Conneaut and Erie.

The Cleveland and Detroit line of steamers, Ocean and May Queen, are doing a rushing business, and will always be popular, if good boats and capital officers can make any line so.

Capt. Ward's steamer Forester is to run between Cleveland and Toledo.

The lines of steamers between Cleveland and Lake Superior are unequalled by any lines running to the North. They are splendid boats and in excellent hands.

Washington Items.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—General Jerez, Minister from Nicaragua, has been officially notified of the ratification of the Belly contract, with such amendments as to avoid [illegible] tion of impediments to the fulfillment of treaties with other nations. It concedes to them no important grants of land or privileges, until the canal shall be completed in Costa Rica. The amendments will, therefore, be necessary to be sent to Nicaragua before they can take effect.

Our government has accepted the convention negotiated by Minister Lamar, which contains the principles of the Cass Yrissari treaty but dissents to the anti-fillibuster clause as unnecessary. Of this the government of Nicaragua will be informed by Gen. Jerez, who will leave Washington for New York to-morrow and return to Nicaragua on the 5th of June.

It is confident that when this fact is communicated, an extra session of Congress will be called, to act upon the subject, and that they will strike out the objectionable clause.

The last steamer brought to Jerez full authority to take measures for the re-opening of the transit at soon as practicable, and on reasonable terms. He indulged the hope he will be enabled to enter into [illegible] arrangements in the course of a few days.

From what has already transpired, there can be little if any doubt of his success. He expresses himself both satisfied and gratified with the views and feelings of this administration towards Nicaragua.

In his absence, Senor Molina, Costa Rica minister, will have charge of Nicaraguan affairs at Washington.

No particular importance is attached to the reported Walker fillibuster movements on Nicaragua. The United States as well as British national vessels are in sufficient force in that quarter to intercept such expeditions, if any are contemplated.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The war department is advised of the complete success of Lieut. Col Hoffman's expedition against the Mohave Indians.

The President and Secretary Thompson left this afternoon for North Carolina.

Mr. Appleton has resumed his duties as Assistant Secretary.

Secretary Floyd, who two weeks ago went to Virginia to recruit his strength, [illegible] by sickness, writes to his friends here that his health is considerably improved.

ST. LOUIS, May 29.—The Overland mail of the 6th arrived last night.

A letter from Fort Belknap, dated the 21st, says, the Express has just arrived from Camp Radziminski, bringing a report that Van Dorn had a fight with the Camanches on the fork of the Arkansas on the 13th. He killed 40 and took 20 prisoners. Two soldiers were killed and seven wounded. Among the latter were Lieut. Lee and Capt Smith.

The letter also says four or five hundred Texans were encamped twenty miles from Brazos on the Indian reserve, with the avowed intention of attacking the Reserve Indians. Much excitement prevailed.

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.—The New York Herald's Washington correspondent telegraphs that the time expired yesterday for the execution of the contract of Mr. Johnson the Nicaragua mail contractor, but the Postmaster General has not decided what course he will pursue in the premises.

The administration is determined to open the Nicaraguan route in some shape.

The charges preferred against Mr. Cook, the Chicago Postmaster, have all been examined and cleared up to the entire satisfaction of the department and President.

SUSPENSION BRIDGE, N. Y. May 30.—[illegible] son, clerk of the Grand Trunk Railway, was found dead yesterday on the river bank, having fallen from the precipice a distance of 200 feet. He came from Toronto to attend the celebration of the Queen's birthday, since which time nothing had been heard of him.

ST. LOUIS, May 30.—The Arizonian published at Tubac, Arizona, received by the mail, contains the proceedings of a meeting at Arizona city on the 8th, expressing strong disapprobation of the course of Congress towards Arizona and urgently requesting cooperation from citizens throughout the territory to establish and maintain an independent government.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 30.—The Assembly considered the report of the Committee on [illegible] and effective systematic benevolence, and other matters of minor importance. The Theological Seminary question, in connection with slavery, was discussed. The Professorship of the Seminary at Chicago will probably be decided to-morrow.

WILMINGTON, May 30.—The report of the committee on the free synod was read. It refers the body to the action of the general assemblies for its sentiments on the subject of slavery. The report was adopted.

The report of the committee on education was also under discussion.

By invitation of the citizens, the members of the Assembly took an excursion, [illegible] Logan, this afternoon, to Fort Delaware.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The Bank statement for the week ending Saturday exhibits the following: Decrease in loans $1,0[illegible]; increase in specie, $1,070; decrease in circulation $129,000; decrease in net deposits, $[illegible]. It is said that the actual amount of specie on hand is not over $21,500,000.

NORFOLK, May 30.—The steamer Black Warrior, Baltimore bound to New Orleans, which put in here for fuel, was burnt last night at the wharf.

RAILROAD MISHAP.—The Toledo Blade of the 28th inst. says:

The passenger train due in Toledo [illegible] yesterday, when six miles [illegible], came in contact with a loaded freight car which the high wind had blown off the switch on the main track, literally smashing the car in fragments also the forward end of the baggage car, but happy to relate, injuring no one. Molasses and sugar, it is said, were strewn along on the track after the catastrophe. The baggage car and engine only were thrown from the track. The train came in three hours and forty minutes behind time.

FRANCE AND ENGLAND.—The London Morning Advertiser, of the 13th, says:

We are enabled to state that a very angry correspondence is being carried on between the French and English Governments, owing to the permission granted by our Government to Austrian vessels, to take shelter under our guns at Malta. The French Government very [illegible] complains of this as showing an undue friendship for Austria, inasmuch as French vessels having no fear of Austrian ships, cannot seek or require the same protection.

THE TURF.—On Saturday last there were two good trots over the Central Course at Newark. Owing to a previous heavy shower of rain, the course was in bad order. The first trot came off between Mr. Grassen's b. g. Grugger and Mr. Romaine's b. m. Black Maria, mile heats, the best two in three in harness for $100. Two successive heats were won by Grugger.

The second was for a purse, mile heats, the best two in three in harness, between Jenny Fairview's g. m., and M. D. Brooks's b. g. Jake Inwood. Diamond at starting was the favorite but was distanced in the first heat.

UNION COURSE, L. I., May 26, 1859.—Purse and stake $500, mile heats, best 3 in 5 in harness.

[illegible]

RAILROAD FINANCES.—The following is a statement of the loss in the receipts of the first east and west trunk lines, during the month of April, compared with the same month in 1858:

New York Central	[illegible]
New York and Erie	[illegible]
Pennsylvania	[illegible]
Baltimore and Ohio	[illegible]
Total	[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1859.

The Student's Monthly, at Oberlin, has the following very sweet little poem.

[illegible]

BY NELLIE M. MORSE.

There's a tablet of golden clouds up the sky,
And a [illegible] of swallows, low and high;
There's a [illegible] of dew on the bending grass,
And a [illegible] low, as the breezes pass.

There's a [illegible] light on the forests fair,
And a silvery veil o'er the evening's hair,
There's a trembling star in the western sky,
[illegible]

[illegible]

LEWIS WETZEL.

Among the heroes of border warfare, Lewis Wetzel held no inferior station.—Inured to hardships while yet in boyhood, and educated in all the various arts of woodcraft, from that of hunting the beaver and bear, to that of the wily Indian, he became in manhood one of the most celebrated marksmen of the day. His form was erect, and of that height best adapted to activity, being very muscular and possessed of great bodily strength.—His frame was warmed by a heart that never palpitated with fear, and animated by a spirit that quailed not, nor became confused in the midst of danger and death. From constant practice, he could bear prolonged and violent exercise, especially that of running and walking, without fatigue, and had also acquired the art of loading his rifle, when moving at full speed through the forest, and, wheeling on the instant, could discharge a bullet with unerring aim the distance of eighty or one hundred yards, into a mark not larger than a shilling. This art he has been known more than once to practice with success on his savage foes. A celebrated marksman, in those days, was estimated by the Borderers in the same way that a Knight Templar or a Knight of the Cross was valued by his cotemporaries, who excelled in the Tournament or the charge in the days of Chivalry. Challenges of skill often took place, and marksmen frequently met by appointment, who lived at the distance of fifty miles or more from each other, to try the accuracy of their aim, on bets of considerable amount. Wetzel's fame had spread far and wide through the adjacent settlements, as the most expert rifleman of the day. In the Spring of the year, A. D. 1784, it chanced that a young man, a few years younger than Wetzel, who lived on the waters of Dunkard's Creek, a tributary of the Monongahela river, had heard of his fame, and as he was also an expert woodsman, and a first rate shot, the best in the settlement, he became very desirous of an opportunity for a trial of skill. So great was his anxiety, that he very early one morning shouldered his rifle, and whistling his faithful dog to his side, started for the neighborhood of Wetzel, who lived near the forks of Wheeling Creek, a distance of fifteen or twenty miles, although the two streams rise in the vicinity of each other. When about half way on his journey a fine buck just started up before him. He leveled his rifle with his usual accuracy, but the deer did not fall dead in his tracks, although mortally wounded. His stout dog seized him and brought him to the ground—but while in the act of so doing, another dog sprang from the forest upon the same deer, and his master made his appearance at the same time from behind a tree, and with a loud voice claimed the deer as his property, having, as he said, been brought down by his shot, and seized by his dog.—It so happened that they had both fired at the same time, and at the same deer, a fact which may very well happen where two active men are hunting on the same ground—although one of them may fire at fifty yards, and the other at double that distance.

The dogs, feeling a similar spirit to that of their masters, soon quit the deer, which was already dead, and fell to worrying and tearing each other. In separating the dogs, the stranger hunter happened to strike that of the young man. The old adage, "strike my dog strike me," arose in all force, and with hasty oaths he fell upon the strange hunter and hurled him to the ground. This was no sooner done, than he found himself turned, and under his stronger and more powerful antagonist. Perceiving that he was no match at this play, he appealed to the trial by rifle, saying it was too much like dogs for men and hunters to fight in this manner. The stranger assented to the trial, but told the young man that before he proceeded to put it to test, he had better witness what he was able to do with that weapon, saying that he was as much superior in the use of the rifle, as he was in bodily strength. In proof he bid him place a mark the size of a dollar on the side of a huge poplar that stood beside them, from which he would start with his rifle unloaded, and running a hundred yards at full speed, he would load it as he ran, and wheeling, discharge it instantly to the center of the mark.—The feat was no sooner proposed than performed, the ball striking the center of the diminutive target. Astonished at his skill, his antagonist now inquired his name.

"Lewis Wetzel, at your service."

Forgetting his animosity, the young hunter seized him by the hand with all the ardor of youthful admiration, and at once acknowledged his own inferiority. So charmed was he with Wetzel's frankness, skill, and fine personal appearance, that he insisted on his returning with him to the Dunkard's settlement, that he might exhibit his dexterity to his own family, and to the hardy backwoodsmen—his neighbors. Nothing loth to such an exhibition, and pleased with the energy of his new acquaintance, Wetzel agreed to accompany him, shortening their way with their mutual tales of hunting excursions, and hazardous contests with the common enemies of their country. Amongst other things, Wetzel stated his manner of distinguishing the footsteps of a white man from those of an Indian, although covered with moccasins, and intermixed with the tracks of the savages. He had acquired this tact from closely examining the manner of placing the feet; the Indian stepping in parallel lines, and first bringing the toe to the ground, while the white man almost invariably first touches his heel to the earth, and places his feet at an angle with the line of march.

An opportunity they little expected, soon gave him a chance of putting his skill to the trial. On reaching the young man's house, which they did late in the afternoon, they found the dwelling a smoking ruin, and all the family murdered and scalped, except a young woman, who had been brought up by his parents, and to whom the young man was tenderly attached. She had been taken away alive, as was ascertained by examining the trail of the savages. Wetzel soon discovered, by a close inspection of the foot-marks, that the party consisted of three Indians and a renegade white man, an occurance not uncommon in those early days, when for crime, or the baser purpose of revenge, the white outlaw fled to the savages, and was adopted on trial into their tribe. As it was late in the day, the nearest help still at some considerable distance, and as there were only four to contend with, they decided on immediate pursuit. And moreover, as the deed had very recently been done, they hoped to overtake them in their camp that night, or perhaps before they could cross the Ohio river, to which the Indians always retreated after effecting a successful foray; considering themselves, in a manner, safe from pursuit, when they had crossed to its right bank, at that time wholly occupied by the Indian tribes. Ardent and unwearied was the pursuit—the one to recover his lost love, and the other to assist his new friend, and take revenge for the slaughter of his countrymen; slaughter and revenge being at that period the daily business of the borderers.

Wetzel followed the trail of the retreating savages with the unerring sagacity of a blood-hound, and just at dusk traced them to the Ohio, some miles below Wheeling, nearly opposite the mouth of Captina Creek. Much to their disappointment they soon found that the Indians had crossed the river, by constructing a raft of logs and brush—their usual manner of passing a stream when at a distance from their villages. By carefully examining "the signs" on the opposite shore, Wetzel directly discovered the fire of the Indian camp, in a hollow way, a few rods from the river. Lest the noise of constructing a raft should alarm the Indians and give notice of the pursuit, the two hardy adventurers determined to swim the stream a few rods below. This they easily accomplished, being both excellent swimmers. Fastening their clothes in a bundle on the tops of their heads, with their rifles and ammunition above, they reached the opposite shore in safety. After carefully inspecting their arms, and putting every article of attack or defense in its proper place, they crawled very cautiously to a position which gave them a full view of their enemies, who believing themselves safe from pursuit, were carelessly reposing around the fire, thoughtless of the fate that awaited them. They soon discovered the young woman alive and seated by the fire, but making much moaning and complaint, while the white man, whose voice they could distinctly hear from their position, was trying to console her with the promise of kind usage, and an adoption into the tribe.

The young man could hardly restrain his rage, but was for firing and rushing instantly upon the foe. Wetzel more cautious, told him to wait until day light appeared, when they could make the attack with a better chance of success, and of also killing the whole party; while if they attacked in the dark, a part of them would certainly escape. With the earliest dawn the Indians arose, and prepared to depart. The young man selected the white renegade, and Wetzel one of the stoutest Indians; they both fired at the same instant, each killing his man. His companion rushed forward knife in hand, to release the young woman, while Wetzel reloaded his piece and pushed on in pursuit of the two Indians, who had taken to the woods until they could discover the number of their enemies. When he found he was seen by the savages, Wetzel discharged his rifle at random, in order to draw them from their cover. Directly they heard the report and found themselves unhurt, they rushed upon him before he could again reload, thinking on an easy conquest. Taking to his heels, he loaded his gun as he ran, unnoticed by his pursuers, then suddenly wheeling about, discharged its contents through the body of his nearest and unsuspecting enemy. The remaining Indian, seeing the fall of his companion, and that his antagonist's gun was now certainly empty, rushed forward with all energy—the prospect of revenge fairly before him.

Wetzel led him on, dodging from tree to tree, until his rifle was again ready, when suddenly facing about, he shot the remaining enemy dead at his feet. After taking their scalps and recovering the lost plunder, Wetzel and his friend returned with their rescued captive unharmed to the settlement.

Like honest Joshua Fleehart, after the peace of 1795, the country becoming filled with new settlers, Wetzel pushed for the distant frontiers on the Mississippi, where he could trap the beaver, hunt the buffalo and the deer, and occasionally shoot an Indian—whom he mortally hated. He died as he had always lived, "a free man of the forest."

My Experience in Hasheesh Eating.

It is now some five years since the writer of this article read accounts of Hasheesh eating, and determined some day to taste for himself the gorgeous fruits of imagination and fancy, which spring from this Indian plant. About four years since, I took four or five grains of it previous to retiring. No result beyond—if it be not a solecism—a pleasant nightmare followed. Last week I was reading in a work on hallucinations, the accounts which several Frenchmen who had taken Hasheesh, gave of their feelings when under its influence, and the old passion for trying the article myself, came upon me. So on Friday I took five grains of the alcoholic extract, at about 3 o'clock. I cannot remember that it produced any special effect. Saturday afternoon at about 4 o'clock, I took 5 grains more of the same extract, two or three hours later I took an additional dose of ten grains. While sitting at a table writing at nine o'clock, I felt two three thrills run over my entire nervous system, rising and falling like the sudden rise and fall of a great wave upon the sea-shore.—It seemed as if the influence, or whatever other name you might call it, were coming over me in waves. These "waves" were not uncomfortable. On the contrary, there was a strange and unintelligible pleasure in them. They lasted only a second or two. When they were gone, my head was perspiring freely, and I supposed the effect of the Hasheesh was gone. At half-past nine—for I had now made up my mind to give the article a fair trial, and I was more than half inclined to believe that the accounts I had read of its effects were all fancy—I took ten grains more. I went then to a Club, and while conversing with the gentlemen present, I put five more grains of the extract into my mouth. I had hardly placed it on my tongue, when a sudden shock (so to speak) like a blow, informed me that the Hasheesh was at work, and that I needed no more. So I threw the five grains away, and went towards my room. A slight dizziness and absent-mindedness, not unlike those which alcohol produces, and the frequent iteration of the waves above referred to were perceptible. As we walked down the street, once or twice the rows of lights and houses would seem interminable, the street very broad, and an exaggeration of everything seemed to take place. There was an air about the city of Eastern grandeur. These feelings, however, were very transitory. A second or less of time and they were gone. I went with the friend who accompanied me to a billiard room, and there noticed a singular effect of the hemp. I could not reckon. If I saw a succession of shots made, I could not add them up.—This destruction of my always poor arithmetical powers amused me not a little, and provoked me, too. The "waves" continued to come over me at intervals, bringing a nameless, speechless joy with them.—Shortly afterward I went to my room, having first mentioned to some one that I had taken Hasheesh, and that my nerves felt very singularly. It was a little after 12 o'clock when I reached my room, and feeling the influence coming upon me, I made preparations for it. I had a loaded pistol in my drawer, which I thought it possible I might not make good use of after I was more thoroughly possessed, so I endeavored to put it away where I would not be likely to get it. I tried to get it to pieces, but made sorry work with my attempt, and then threw it into a wardrobe, locked the door and threw the key away. While handling the pistol there was a fearful suggestion of suicide to me, which I repelled with all the will I had left. At length the pistol was out of the way, and I in bed. I had been in bed but a minute or two before there seemed to be crushing me an infinite fear. Whatever is horrible is the idea of the Fate of the old Greek drama, intensified infinitely, seemed to hang down upon me. Every nerve in my body seemed to be tingling and vibrating like a harp string. There was a ringing in my ears terribly loud, and my heart seemed to be throbbing with the regularity and force of the stroke of a large steam-engine. I sprang up and drank huge draughts of water, which did not quench my thirst in the slightest. Then I promenaded the room, and as I came near the large window, that overlooks half the city, I felt tempted to continue my walk through the window, and so on into the street, and—but I had sense enough left to know that that would be to kill me, and I shrank from suicide. I felt too, that it was no longer safe for me to be in my room alone, and so I made a very hasty and incomplete toilet with the intention of calling upon some one in the building, to "go for the doctor." When I looked at my watch, I found that what had seemed to me so indescribably long was a period of about one minute and a half. How long I was dressing, it would be impossible to say, measuring, that is, by my sensations—centuries would intervene between the putting on of different garments. I spoke to a neighboring inmate of the building, who advised me to call on the Janitor for assistance. My message, I remember, was delivered quite hurriedly, but grammatically. So I started down the stairs to find the Janitor.

Now the number of stairs, and the length of the ascent from the ground floor to my room, are the subjects of innumerable jokes among my few visitors. They talk of "starting one afternoon and getting there the next," &c.

In my Hasheesh state, however, those jokes would have seemed jokes—but because of their extravagant littleness.—Probably the cannon ball, the time of whose flight from the earth to the sun every school-boy computes, could have gone its journey and back again, and got half way to Neptune, before I reached the bottom of those interminable stairs. Down! Down! deeper than ever plummet sounded did they seem to go. And to have descended one or two stories, in no way diminished the infinite series of steps, I was traveling for an eternity upon. How easy to throw myself over! and how pleasant! This thought, for an instant, came to me. I recoiled from it, however, with horror, and, clasping the bannister, clutched it with the desperation of a dying man.

I didn't see the Janitor. Perhaps the reason may be found in the description he gave a friend: "I heard som'un a comin', and I looked, and Lor' how dat gemman wid de red har did come! He bin gone crazy, sartin sure! How he did slaw down dem ar stars! I seen him a comin', and I just stood from under."

I ran into the street and to an office near by, hoping to find some one there who would go for the Doctor. I saw no one there and then ran a square or so till I found a couple of police officers with whom I was well acquainted. I explained to one of them that I had been taking Indian Hemp and wanted to reach the office of a friend—a physician. He started with me, but I could not walk; I must run. I told him I was in a tremendous hurry, and so he proposed a dog-trot. During the rest of that night I must have laughed a hundred times at the recollection of that "dog-trot." I had run about a square when he was completely out of breath. The office was soon reached. The Doctor was spoken to, and after waiting a few centuries, I asked my companion if the Doctor wasn't very slow in coming? "Why," said he, "it isn't a minute since you spoke to him!" It is wholly impossible to describe the length of that run, as it seemed to me.—There are no figures to compute it. Sisyphus continually rolling up hill a stone that continually fell down, made no more progress than I seemed to.

The Doctor soon had me lying down and warmly wrapped up, with camphor in my mouth. I attempted to explain my feelings to him and got as far as the words "infinite multi reduplication," when the absurdity of my talk set him to smiling and the absurdity of my attempting to explain anything set me to laughing, and I held my tongue.

The quality of my nature was now made evident. The soul and the senses were disjoined. I was conscious of what was going on around me, and could have done anything mechanically. But at the same time, my mind stimulated to an unwonted activity, would have gone half over the Universe.

Between the sensuous and spiritual parts of my nature, there seemed to be an effort to establish a mutual relation. If I may so express it, they were two clocks whose pendulums would only now and then beat together. The point of juncture would be some motion which my body would make after it had been foreshadowed by the mind. I would think my head was turned. The next instant I would think in what direction, then I could feel a wave. (I know no other name) rising and falling in the mental part of me, and another in the sensuous, and then they would mingle into one and my head would turn in the direction I had anticipated. This anticipation of my actions was a source of great annoyance to me, and I at last by a strong effort of will overcame it—so far, at least, as to do something I had not anticipated at the very moment when the anticipated action should have taken place. When I dreamed, my dreams were very curious.—I remember one where all space seemed full of rockers two inches long, on each of which was seated a little old woman, not over three inches tall, grotesquely dressed and humming an air from William Tell. I slept some that night, though fitfully, and was at breakfast the next morning. Usually a valiant trencherman, I did little that morning—but who would want to eat when his mouth was full of another man that tasted like cotton, and ate all the toast you buttered for yourself? And this was my feeling.

If I reached out my cup for tea it would be a century before I got it back. This feeling I then thought could be explained by falling asleep and waking instantly, and doing this with great rapidity.

Breakfast over, I went to bed, and staid there till 4 o'clock in the afternoon, sleeping all the time. At that hour I awoke free from Hasheesh. I have felt no ill effects from my adventure, beyond considerable nervous fatigue, (which, after all, may be due to other causes.)

But I have learned several things:

1st. Never to take Hasheesh again.

2d. That a man has some control of himself even in a fearful delirium.

3d. That the effects of Hasheesh are to exaggerate time and space by a quickening of the perceptive powers of the nerves, to prompt to grotesque notions, thoughts and visions, to separate, seemingly, at least, the mind and the body.

4th. I have learned what a fearful instrument of torture and ecstatic source of bliss the mind, or that material correlative of it, the nervous system, is; for—and I would say it with reverence—that night I seemed to exhaust the joys of the Blest, and the tortures of the Damned.

5th. I have had given me a new cause for wonder at this human frame of ours. Why is it that a few grains of black, sticky extract should rouse the mind, which is supposed to be immaterial, to such an unwonted activity, should unship Reason,—should excite the fancy and wake the imagination? How is it, anyway, that the body contains the mind? Where is the boundary line between matter and mind? Such knowledge is too wonderful for me. I can only say with the Psalmist, "We are fearfully and wonderfully made"—leaving the solution of these questions to the greater light and clearer insight, for which we all hope in another state of being.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Staff of the French Army.

A letter from Paris to the N. Y. Times, gives the following interesting information respecting the officers who are to command the different divisions of the French army.

The Emperor of France will command his army in person, as will also Francis Joseph, of Austria, and Victor Emmanuel of Sardinia. Napoleon's Major General or Chief of the staff, will be the Marshal Count Randon, who distinguished himself for his administrative as well as his military ability, in his late governorship of Algeria.

Of the four Divisions that are to compose the army of the Alps—that is to say, of the Divisions that are to act against Austria in Piedmont, the commanders are Marshal Canrobert, Marshal Baraguay d'Hilliers, General MacMahon and General Niel. In the selection of these officers, it will be seen that there was an intention of securing variety of talent.—Canrobert is the best tactician in the army, d'Hilliers represents genius and foresight in military combination, MacMahon is the representative of daring and irresistible impetuosity in the charge, while Niel is the great engineer of the army. MacMahon commanded at the taking of the Malakoff, and was the first general officer that reached its heights, while Niel did all the engineering of the siege.

Marshal Pelissier, who has been recalled from London, (where it is thought he will be replaced by M. de Persigny,) is to take command of a large army of observation to be collected at Nancy, at a distance from the Rhine, at Strasburg, of about one hundred miles. The object of this army is to watch the movements of Germany, and to protect that side of France, if it be necessary, perhaps later on, if the war become general, to act against Germany. In that case, the command would become a very important one.

Marshal Magnan, one of the heroes of the coup d'etat, and an individual who is considered essential in the application of any repressive measures at the capital, remains in the command of the army of Paris: while Marshal Castellane retains his place as commandant at Lyons. These being the two revolutionary points of France, it was thought best to retain the men who had long been in command of them, and who knew best how to control them in case of difficulty. But there can be no danger for the present to the Emperor's power; the future may bring a change.—Gen. Soumain, who is technically called commandant of the place de Paris, an officer of great ability [illegible] by the Emperor and Marshal Magnan, has been placed upon Gen. Niel's staff. This officer has been in fact, the actual commandant of the army ever since the Crimean war, his chief Marshal Magnan, reposing entire confidence in his administration.

The Emperor will take with him the following officers aid-de-camps; Gen. Count de Montebello, Gen. Prince de Moskowa, Gen. Fleury, Col. de Genlis, Col. Reille, Lieut. Col. Marquis of Toulongeon, and Lieut. Col. Lepic,—seven.

His orderly officers will be, Lieut. Col. Favé, Chief d' Escadron Schmitz, Capts. Brady, Emile Tascher de la Pagerie, Prince de la Tour d' Auvergne, and Lieut. Prince Joachim Murat.

These aids and orderly officers are all personal friends of the Emperor, while three of them Gen. Fleury, Edgar Ney, (Prince de la Moskowa,) and young Joachim Murat, are his constant companions. He is surrounding himself, in fact, in this grand campaign with the men whom he loves and on whom he can rely.

Baron Larrey is to leave his military hospital at Paris, the Val-de-Grace, and his large private practice, to accompany the Emperor as his surgeon. I have not learned whether Mr. Larrey is to take charge of the surgical staff of the army as well, but it is probable that he will not. The present is the son of the Baron Larrey of the first Empire.

Capt. Jerome Bonaparte, who has lately returned to France from a visit to his parents in Baltimore, has been placed in the most dangerous service in the army. He will command in Chasseurs d'Afrique a body of light cavalry, every man of whom is mounted on an Arab stallion of great speed and endurance. This body is divided up and thrown forward in advance of the army in scouting parties, and is employed in all dangerous and rapid reconnoissances. The Captain, on arriving at Paris ten days ago, left immediately for Algiers, to join the company, from whence he will most probably land at Genoa, on Sardinian territory, which is to be, on account of its proximity to Toulon and Marseilles, the future base of the operations of the French army.

I have been told that Major Kearney of N. Y., has entered the staff of one of the French Generals of Division, as a volunteer. Major Kearney, it will be remembered, distinguished himself in the Mexican War, in which he commanded a volunteer cavalry company, raised and equipped entirely at his own expense.

Gen. Bourbaki, the youngest General of Division in the French army and perhaps the most promising, will have the honor of passing first into the Italian territory, with the army of the Alps. He will command under Marshal Canrobert, but it is thought he will have crossed the line with forty or fifty thousand men before the Marshal's arrival.

☞ A teacher wishing to explain to a little girl the manner in which a lobster casts his shell when he has outgrown it, said, "what do you do when you have outgrown your clothes? You throw them aside, don't you?" "Oh, no," replied the little one, "we let out the tucks!"

☞ A witness before Judge ——, of Mississippi, in answer to a question, replied: "Yes, sirree, Bob!" Whereupon the judge said: "Mr. Clerk, fine Mr. Jones five dollars for the ree, and five dollars for the Bob!"

☞ Printer's errors are sometimes laughable. A young clergyman printed a sermon, the subject of which was the necessity for moderate and rational recreation, in which occurred the passage: "Man should work—and play too." The want of a stroke ruined it, and the religious world was scandalized by reading, "Man should work and play loo."

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

[We intend to pay particular attention to this department of the "People's Press," furnishing such seasonable and sensible articles as will be useful to the farmer, in the work immediately before him. In our next, we shall republish from the American Agriculturalist, a synopsis of the work for June, in the Orchard, in the Kitchen Garden, and among the Flowers, the latter of which will be found advantageous to those of our lady readers who delight in adorning their parterres with choice annuals, as well as cultivating exotics in flower-pots. The limited space occupied this week should form no criterion, as an accident prevented our making the selections intended, and which would have embraced two or more columns. Ed. P. P.]

June on the Farm.

The husbandman has very little leisure, between putting in his late crops and commencing to till his first plantings. Even now, the first day of June, before the buckwheat and turnip fields are sown, the corn and potatoes, carrots and cabbages, require going through with the plow and cultivator, followed by the hoe. Some of the late implements designed to relieve hand-labor are well adapted to their work; the horse hoe almost takes the place of the hand-hoe in the corn field. Whatever is used, see that the ground is well lightened up before the roots have extended far, and early keep down weeds.

If there are any vacant spots which were too wet to plant before, let them not lie idle. There is ample time to grow a soiling crop, if not to ripen corn, upon such land. Let no soil produce weeds only, to scatter their seeds for a future crop. The prospect now is, that everything the farmer can raise will be wanted, at home or abroad, and at higher rates than for some years past.

BARLEY—Will still succeed if sown.

BEANS—Plant, any not in, among corn or alone.

BEETS—Mangel-wurtzel and Sugar varieties succeed well when sown.

BUCKWHEAT—Sow, or even first of July, that it may fill its kernels in the cool weather of Autumn.

Butter and Cheese—Read the prize articles as they appear from month to month, and try to make such products as will suffer no discount when thrown into market.

Cabbages—Plow and hoe early ones.—Plant among early potatoes and elsewhere for late use. Use tobacco dust, lime and ashes sprinkled over the plants to keep away insects.

Carrots—Hoe and thin early. Much labor may be saved, and a better crop secured by taking the carrot, turnip and beet patch in hand before the weeds get a start. Thin out liberally. Four to six inches apart in the row is near enough for carrots.

Corn—Replant failures. It is not too late for the King Phillip or other early varieties to ripen seed. Put in freely for soiling, especially if the pasture ground is small. Milkmen well know its value, and usually plant largely, in drills. It is well to make three plantings.

Fences—Should be examined often.

Haying—Will commence according to the forwardness of the grass. Mowing machines are now so common that the farmer need not commence upon his crop before the grass is ready to cut, nor will he need to cut it down while wet with dew or rain.

Hoeing will, on many farms, constitute a prominent portion of the work for June. Clean tillage now will make easy work in July.

Manures should be made at every season of the year. Keep the cattle and hog yards well covered with muck; scrape up cattle droppings each morning, and throw them in heaps under cover.

Millet—"Hungarian grass," or other kinds, may still be sown, for soiling or ripening even.

Potatoes—Keep free from weeds, but do not use the plow among them after they commence blooming.

Poultry require little attention if running at large, save feeding a little grain and collecting eggs. Where it is necessary to confine them in buildings or yards, it is always well to let them out for a short time about sundown. Keep roosts dusted with plaster, charcoal of muck, and barreling the contents frequently, for guano.

Pumpkins will still be in season if planted, either among corn or potatoes, or in patches by themselves.

Sheep—Shear, if not done. Guard against dogs.

Sorghum—Drill in a quantity, for soiling purposes.

Stock—Raise the best calves, lambs and pigs to breed from. Provide improved breeds of cattle and horses to cross with your own stock.

Swine—Where there is an orchard or small pasture accessible, hogs may properly have the range of it, but by all means keep them from the highways and door-yards. If shut up, give them weeds, turf, and other green stuff, daily, keeping their pens and yards supplied with absorbents.

Tanners' Bark—Peel from hemlock and oak, standing it up carefully to dry.

Tools for hay and grain cutting, should all be procured and put in working order. With a large quantity of hay and grain to cut, a mowing machine will, doubtless, pay, beside securing it in better order.

Turnips—Sow the last of this or in next month.

Weeds—Keep them down while small, if you would save heavy labor afterwards, and secure good crops.

TO MAKE EXCELLENT BREAD.—Take eight quarts of wheat flour, spread it in your mixing dish, so as to leave a large cavity in the center; pour a sufficient quantity of boiling milk, or water, over two quarts of sifted white corn meal to scald it thoroughly, and let it stand till it is only lukewarm, turn into the flour, add a teacupful of good hop yeast and a little warm milk or water; stir it well, mixing in a portion of the flour, and let it stand ten or twelve hours in a warm place; knead it well; make it into loaves which will rise, near the fire, in less than an hour. When baked well, this bread is light, sweet, and nutritious; quite as good as bread made of potato yeast, and it keeps moist longer, besides being a saving of labor.

SODA CAKE.—Two teacups of sweet cream, four eggs, one teaspoonful of supercarbonate of soda, two of cream of tartar, a little salt, and stir to the consistency of batter cakes. Made with white sugar, it is a delicate looking cake and very healthful. Baked in thin cakes, with jelley between the layers, it is a delicious jelly cake.

SOFT GINGERBREAD.—Two cups of sugar, two of molasses, two of butter, six eggs, six cups of flour two teaspoons of soda dissolved in a cup of sour cream, a nutmeg, one tablespoonful cloves, two tablespoonful ginger. These will keep good a long time.

CORN BREAD.—Mix three pints meal in a quart sour milk; add three eggs, a teaspoon of saleratus, and some salt; beat all to a smooth batter, pour in pans half an inch deep, and bake quick.

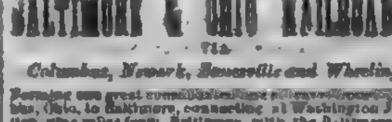
CREAM CAKES.—One cup cream; 1 cup sugar; 2 cups flour; 2 eggs; 1 teaspoon saleratus;—flavor with lemon.

CUP CAKE.—One cup of cream (best, sour) one of fresh butter, two of white sugar, four of sifted flour, five eggs beaten quite light, a teaspoon of soda dissolved in the cream. First stir the butter and sugar till light; then add the eggs alternately with the flour; bake in small tins.

KATE'S BISCUIT.—One cup of cream three of sugar, one of butter, three eggs beaten light, the white separate; dissolve a teaspoon of soda in the cream, and then strain; add flour enough to thicken; roll out and cut in cakes.

SOFT GINGERBREAD.—One cup molasses; 1 cup sugar; 1 cup buttermilk; 1 egg; 2 teaspoon saleratus; flavor with cloves—mix pretty thick.

COOKIES.—One cup butter; 2 cups sugar; 2 cup cold water; ½ teaspoon saleratus; 2 eggs—flour enough to roll.



With what "net" is a lady soonest caught? In this country, net profits; in Europe, a coronet.

Why is a tender-hearted person like a house-keeper with but little furniture? Because he is easily moved.

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
[illegible]
Embracing a Variety,
Not exceeded in this market.
[illegible] Lawns, Robes, Calicoes, Bareges, Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles, Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the Cheap and One price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.
may 12. J. C. [illegible]

TWO DAILY TRAINS
FROM COLUMBUS VIA THE
GREAT NATIONAL ROUTE
TO
Washington City, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

THE SHORTEST AND MOST DIRECT Route, from all points South and West, TO THE EAST
IS BY THE CENTRAL OHIO
AND
BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROADS!
VIA
Columbus, Newark, Zanesville and Wheeling.

Forming one great consolidated [illegible] to Baltimore, connecting at Washington Junction, nine miles from Baltimore, with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company's Branch Road to WASHINGTON CITY, affording the exclusive and only through Ticket and Baggage Check arrangement between the cities of the West and the National Capital; connecting also at the Relay to Baltimore with the railroads to PHILADELPHIA, NEW YORK and BOSTON, being the only route by which merchants and travelers can purchase tickets that will enable them to visit the cities of Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York at the cost of a ticket to New York by other lines, an advantage that is afforded by this route only.

TWO DAILY TRAINS FROM COLUMBUS,
At 3.25 a.m., and 12.25 p.m.

Through Tickets to the Eastern Cities can be procured via Washington city, at an additional charge of $1.00.
Be sure to ask for tickets by the Wheeling route and Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.
Baggage checked through from Cincinnati to Baltimore and New York.
Fare to New York and Boston, $1.50 less than via any other route.

FOR THROUGH TICKETS
and all information please apply at the office of the Union Depot. R. L. DOHERTY, Agent.
W. W. BROWN, General Ticket Agent, C. O. R. R.
W. P. SMITH, Master of Transportation, Baltimore.
E. F. FULLER,
General Western Agent B. & O. R. R.

Notice to Bridge Builders.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED at the County Auditor's Office, Franklin county, Ohio, until 12 o'clock M. THURSDAY, JUNE 9th, 1859, for furnishing the materials and building a Bridge over the Walnut Creek, at Lockbourne, in said county. The distance between the abutments to be [illegible] feet, and the entire length of the superstructure to be 60 feet; to be a single track bridge of two spans, and to be 12 feet wide from out to out, and 12 feet [illegible] inches high in the clear, between the floor and the band, or 15 feet 2 inches from top to top of lower and upper chords.

Estimated amount of work and materials:
150 yards excavation for foundation of abutments.
200 do grading road at end of bridge.
13 perch of rope work (25 cubic feet to the perch) in abutments and wings.
[illegible] perch stone work (25 cubic feet to the perch) in [illegible]
[illegible] feet Bridge or Superstructure.

Separate bids will be received for the above 1 part of work, or for the whole job and will be let to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders, the Commissioners reserving [illegible] to reject any and all bids.
Plans and specifications can be seen at the County Auditor's Office.

EDWARD LIVINGSTON,
ISAAC WHITE,
D. L. HOLTON,
Commissioners.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills,
DR. ROBACK'S
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.
Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the Original Letters,

[illegible] Merchants and Farmers, and ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.
These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes [illegible]

[illegible]
That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;
That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,
with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they relieve

Liver Complaint,
and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. That

Sick Females,
who have languished for years in helpless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual [illegible] are removed by their cordial and gentle [illegible] properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,
however they may have been tried [illegible]. That their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,
and render it enjoyable. That, [illegible] the system of disease [illegible] they

Cause soon to Heal,
and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,
and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels, the Liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief and, (if administered before the vital citadel of the life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best [illegible] thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial; they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

[illegible] consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

Principal Office and Sales Rooms, [illegible] Buildings from Main street, Cincinnati, O. Laboratory in Hammond street.

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, BY
Roberts & Samuel, Columbus
[illegible]
A. Algire, Canal Winchester.
Isaac Thompson, Worthington.
B. H. Johnson, Reynoldsburg.
B. N. Buckley, Clintonville.
D. Gutter, Westerville.
[illegible]

And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union.
[illegible]

☞ 5000 Agents Wanted—
To sell four new inventions. Agents have made over $25,000 on one,—better than all other similar agencies. Send four stamps and get 80 pages particulars, gratis.
EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.
my 1 y.

☞ 1000 Agents Wanted—
For particulars send stamp.
C. P. WHITTEN, Lowell, Mass.
my 1 y.

☞ DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, & INDIGESTION, by which persons are more or less affected, can usually be cured by taking moderate exercise, wholesome food, and a dose of Boerhave's Holland Bitters, an hour before each meal.

CHOICE SEEDS.
APPLE PIE MELON.—Seeds of this delicious [illegible] substitute for pies, 6 cents a package.
MAMMOTH [illegible] LIMA BEANS.—[illegible] 6 cents package.
LARGE CHEESE SQUASH.—[illegible] 12 cents.
☞ The three packages for 25 CENTS postpaid.
Address C. T. RAPALJE,
Care of editor "Horticultural Monthly," Rochester, New York.
N. B.—Editors of Country Newspapers inserting the above with this notice, twice, appropriately displayed, before the 15th of May, will receive eight packages of each kind of, the seeds.
April 28, [illegible]

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the Chill. But in this effort it fails. Then the Fever follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of Fever and Ague. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.

We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
PRICE ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.

FOR COSTIVENESS;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSPEPSIA;
FOR JAUNDICE;
FOR THE CURE OF INDIGESTION;
FOR HEADACHE;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSENTERY;
FOR A FOUL STOMACH;
FOR THE CURE OF ERYSIPELAS;
FOR THE PILES;
FOR THE CURE OF SCROFULA;
FOR ALL SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS;
FOR THE CURE OF RHEUMATISM;
FOR DISEASES OF THE SKIN;
FOR THE CURE OF LIVER COMPLAINT;
FOR DROPSY;
FOR THE CURE OF TETTER, TUMORS, AND SALT RHEUM; FOR WORMS;
FOR THE CURE OF GOUT;
FOR A DINNER PILL;
FOR THE CURE OF NEURALGIA;
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per Box; Five Boxes for $1.00.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The Agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand AYER's, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

All our Remedies are for sale by
Roberts & Samuels, No. 34 N. High St., Columbus O., Suire, Eckstein & Co., Cincinnati O., Mr. Fiske Cleveland O., W. A. Graham, Zanesville, O., and by all druggists, and dealers in medicines.

Consumptives do not Dispare

CONSUMPTION CURED.	AN OLD INDIAN DOCTOR, UNCAS BRANT, while a Missionary among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains, discovered a RARE PLANT, that proves to be a certain cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Liver Complaint, Nervous Affections, Coughs, Colds, &c. Having now made his fortune and retired from business, he will send the prescription and directions for preparing the medicine FREE OF CHARGE to all who desire it, and will send to his agent, enclosing two stamps (6 cents), to pay the return letter, with a description of their symptoms. The Old Doctor has cured more than 2000 cases of CONSUMPTION alone, and hopes all afflicted people will avail themselves of this opportunity, as the Doctor wishes to do all the good he can before he dies. Address all letters to DANIEL ADEE, Box 3531 P. O. New York, Who is the sole agent.
CONSUMPTION CURED.
CONSUMPTION CURED.
CONSUMPTION CURED.
CONSUMPTION CURED.
CONSUMPTION CURED.

June 1-1y.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL.

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice,
Debility of the Nervous System,
Diseases of the Kidneys,

and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption,

and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, [illegible]

By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.
may12.

GROVER & BAKER'S
CELEBRATED
FAMILY SEWING MACHINES,
NEW STYLES—PRICES FROM $50 TO $125.
EXTRA CHARGE OF $5 FOR HEMMERS.

495 Broadway, - - - New York
77 Town Street, - - - Columbus
58 West Fourth Street, - - - Cincinnati.

These Machines sew from two spools, as purchased from the store, requiring no rewinding of thread; they Hem, Fell, Gather, and Stitch in a superior style, finishing each seam by their own operation, without recourse to the hand-needle, as is required by other machines. They will do better and cheaper sewing than a seamstress can, even if she works for one cent an hour, and are, unquestionably, the best Machines in the market for family sewing, on account of their simplicity, durability, ease of management, and adaptation to all varieties of family sewing—executing either heavy or fine work with equal facility, and without special adjustment.

As evidence of the unquestioned superiority of their Machines, the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine Company beg leave to respectfully refer to the following

TESTIMONIALS.

[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,
TO BE PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT COLUMBUS OHIO
By J. Birney Marshall,
At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

[illegible]

Terms and Information:

[illegible]

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.
Columbus, March 23, 1859.

[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME I. | COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1859. | NUMBER 5.

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.

TERMS - $1 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular sovereignty.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences, and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress, and therefore the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included, which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservation of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine. their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathise with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendency in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

"PRESIDENTIAL SPECULATIONS."—Under this caption, the New York Sun says:

"On the Republican side there is an undoubted majority in favor of the nomination of Senator Seward for the next Presidency. An influential portion of the party, however, are opposed to his nomination, and the American and "Old-Line Whig" elements are decidedly in favor of taking up some other man."

In this connection, the Sun enumerates JOHN BELL, EDWARD BATES, JOHN J. CRITTENDEN, Judge MCLEAN, and N. P. BANKS, and says "among the Freesoil Democrats in the Republican ranks, Col. FREMONT has earnest and active friends."

On the Democratic side, it remarks that almost every State has a candidate, but "the office-holders, of course, pretend to be favorable to the re-nomination of Mr. BUCHANAN. This, however, is mere flattery. They do not mean what they say in public. They know that Mr. BUCHANAN is pledged, by his own declarations, not to seek a re-election; but even if he were not pledged, but few of them would give him an earnest support."

The Sun speculates very considerately upon the prospect. It says:

"At present, the leaders will not openly speak out their minds, but it is apparent that in all of the Northern and Western States, the mass of the people are so attached to the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty that they will not support any candidate who is not thoroughly identified with it. There is a fear that the South will be unreasonable and impracticable, but if the North stands firm, it can control the next National Convention. If the Democratic party would again succeed, it must give the people an assurance, in the character of the man whom it nominates, that it is not sectional but national, and that it has emancipated itself from the dictation of selfish cliques who would sacrifice the honor and the interests of the country, to attain their own dishonorable ends."

The Sun very evidently points to Mr. DOUGLAS, although it refrains from the use of his name in this connection. He is identified with "Popular Sovereignty," and is not "sectional but national."

A Yankee editor says that he liked to die laffin, to see a drunkin' chap trying to pocket the shadow of a swinging sign for a pocket handkerchief.

Appendix to the Speech of Hon. S. A. Douglas.

In the Senate of the United States, February 23d, 1859, in reply to Hon. A. G. Brown, of Mississippi, in opposition to the passage of a Code of Laws by Congress to protect slavery in the territories, and in favor of banishing from the halls of Congress all questions touching domestic slavery in the territories, and remanding them to the people of the territories, to be disposed of as they may see proper, subject to an appeal to the judicial tribunals, to test the validity of the territorial enactments under the Constitution of the United States, together with an appendix, showing the position of distinguished public men on this question in the great contests of 1854 and 1856.

NOTE BY MR. DOUGLAS.

The debate was continued at considerable length by several Senators, some of whom emphatically repudiated the idea that it was the intention of the Kansas-Nebraska act to affirm the principle of NON-INTERVENTION BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN THE TERRITORIES, whereby all questions pertaining to African slavery, as well as all other matters of domestic concern, were banished from the halls of Congress and remanded to the people of the Territories respectively, to be disposed of as they should see proper, subject only to the constitution, with the right of appeal by any person feeling aggrieved by the territorial legislation, to the judicial tribunals to determine the validity of such enactments under the Constitution of the United States.

They went farther, and insisted that it is the duty of Congress to intervene and enact a code of laws to protect slavery in the Territories whenever the Territorial Legislature may fail or refuse to provide such legislation.

One Senator (Mr. Gwin) declared, that if he had understood the Kansas-Nebraska bill at the time of its passage as I now construe it, he never would have voted for it.

Inasmuch as I was deposed from the position of Chairman of the Committee on Territories, which I had held for eleven years in the Senate and two years in the House of Representatives, BECAUSE OF MY FIRM ADHERENCE TO THE PRINCIPLE OF NON-INTERVENTION AND POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY in the Territories, as defined in the Kansas-Nebraska act, I should have referred to the debates in 1854, when that act was passed, and in 1856 when Mr. Buchanan was elected President on the distinct issue of "NON-INTERVENTION AND POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY," to show, by extracts from speeches and the public records, what was the true construction of the Kansas-Nebraska act, had not the debate been sprung upon the Senate suddenly, without affording opportunity for an examination of the debates and public records. But an intelligent and esteemed friend has since made a thorough examination into the whole subject, and has submitted to me his report, which I believe to be fair and impartial, and which I annex to these remarks as an Appendix.

"The recent legislation of Congress, respecting domestic slavery, derived, as it has been, from the original and pure fountain of legitimate political power, the will of the majority, promises ere long to allay the dangerous excitement. This legislation is founded upon principles as ancient as free government itself, and in accordance with them, has simply declared that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."

APPENDIX.

Extracts from a speech of the Hon. Moses Norris, Jr., of New Hampshire, in the Senate of the United States, March 3, 1854:

"Now, sir, I understand the spirit and true interest of this clause of the bill to be, that the legislation of 1850, organizing the Territories of Utah and New Mexico was grounded on the principle of the non-intervention of Congress with the institutions of slavery or any other domestic institution, in the Territories of the United States, and the States to be formed out of them, leaving the people free to form their own institutions for themselves; and that the principle of legislation thus agreed upon and established, as to Utah and New Mexico, 'ought to be final, not only as to these Territories, but as to all Territories organized after that time.'" * * *

"Now, I shall endeavor to maintain that the doctrine of non-interference on the part of the Federal Government with the institutions of the organized Territories was then established—leaving to the people of the Territories the rights of a free and popular government, with full power under the Constitution, to form their own domestic institutions as they may deem best suited to their condition.—I shall endeavor to establish that. I shall endeavor to establish another fact; that this measure of non-intervention was carried by the almost united vote of the North against the great mass of Southern Senators in this Chamber, as establishing a principle on which the North could stand, and not as a mere expedient, temporary, and limited in its operation, but as enduring. I will, by and by, appeal to the record in vindication of what I now say."—(Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess. 33d Cong., vol. 29, page 305.)

Extract from a speech of Hon. J. B. Weller, of California, in the United States Senate, February 13, 1854:

"But, if this be a question between slavery and freedom, then the friends of this measure hold the freedom side of the question. We propose that the people, the original source of all power, those who spoke this Government into existence, and whose agents we are, shall be allowed to decide for themselves what local institutions shall exist among them. On the other hand, the opponents of the [illegible]. They contend that the [illegible] shall not exercise this right; that their minds shall be enslaved; that their hands shall be tied up, and they prevented from a free decision, whether slavery shall exist there or not. We occupy the broad ground of freedom. We have an abiding confidence in the honesty and in the intelligence of the people. We are not afraid to trust them with the decision of this question. How stands it with you? I had supposed that you were the agents and representatives of the people; but it seems that the servant has become wiser than the master. You, who are invested with political power, are claiming now that you are better judges of what sort of government the people should have, than the people themselves. Is this so? Is there that vast amount of intelligence and of patriotism in the American Congress which makes us far better judges of what the people should have than the people themselves? Our whole system is based upon the principle that man is capable of self-government. The moment you violate this principle, that moment you transcend your authority, and destroy the vital element of the Republic.

"We propose that this, like other questions, shall be left to the free decision of the people."—(Appendix Congressional Globe, 1st Sess., 33d Cong., vol. 29, page 200.)

Extract from the speech of the Hon. Wm. H. English, of Indiana, delivered in the House of Representatives, May 9, 1854:

"Mr. Chairman, I do not choose on this occasion to express any opinion as to the power of Congress to legislate for the Territories, because the impropriety of exercising such power is so clear, to my mind, as to make the consideration of the Constitutional question entirely unnecessary.

"I am willing, as I said upon a previous occasion, to trust the people with the power of regulating their domestic institutions in their own way, not only under State government, but through their regularly constituted Territorial Legislature. I hold that if the people are of sufficient numbers and importance to merit a Territorial government at all, they are capable of governing themselves. A man who has exercised the attributes of a free citizen in Indiana, or any other State, loses none of his powers of self-government by emigrating to a Territory.—Is he less virtuous, less intelligent, less imbued with the spirit of patriotism and love of country because he resides in a Territory and not in a State? Is he less an object of government regard because he has gone into the wilderness to endure the hardships of frontier life in preparing a way for that tide of population, civilization, and empire which still flows to the West? Sir, such men can be trusted. I would refer the question of slavery, and all other questions, to them—to that best and safest of all tribunals—the people to be governed. They are the best judges of the soil, and climate, and wants of the country they inhabit, and they are true judges of what will best suit their own condition and promote their welfare and happiness.

"And, sir, I am surprised, that in this Republic, in the year 1854, any party should be found to deny the privilege to such organized State and Territory of the Union of regulating their domestic institutions in their own way, subject to the Constitution, and; more particularly, that such anti-republican doctrines should be advanced by any one claiming to be a member of the Democratic party."—(Appen. Congressional Globe, 1st Session, 33d Cong, vol. 29, page 622.)

Extracts from a speech of Hon. M. Macdonald, of Maine, delivered in the House of Representatives, April 10, 1854:

"Pass the bill, give the people of the Territories the right to determine for themselves the question whether they will tolerate slavery or not, and the question becomes local. No longer will there be inducements, and most certainly no propriety in discussing the question at the North or in non-slaveholding communities.

"The bill commends itself especially to my own mind, because it contains the principle that the people of the Territories shall regulate their own domestic affairs. This right was the great feature of the Territorial bills of 1850, and is 'the lion in the path of agitation.' The doctrine that all just powers are derived from the consent of the governed, addresses itself to the dignity of man, and teaches him the lesson that his rights are not the grant of an earthly government, but the free gift of the King of Kings. Sir, the sovereignty of the people, their right to rule in political affairs, was first proclaimed in the ears of the old world by our own Declaration of Independence. The tenacity with which our forefathers clung to this doctrine is written in the blood and carnage, the suffering and self-denial of the American Revolution. As the basis of permanent government, this principle was first recognized in the American Constitution. 'We, the people, do ordain and establish government,' are words of power which caused the kings of the earth to fear and tremble like Belshazzar of old, when the finger of a man's hand wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaster of the wall those words of fearful import, 'mene, mene, tekel, upharsin.' Our great growth as a nation, and our great prosperity as individuals, under the benign influence of the Constitution, are the legitimate fruit of the great truth that man is capable of self-government. This principle, sir, runs through the whole structure of our governmental organization. It is the central sun of our system around which revolves all other lights."

* * * * * * *

"Sir, the whole head and front of the offending of the Nebraska bill hath this extent—no more; that it allows the people of the Territory to regulate their own affairs."—(See Appen. Cong. Globe, 1st Sess., 33d Cong., vol. 29, p. 514.)

Extract from a speech of Hon. J. R. Thomson, of New Jersey, in the Senate of the United States, February 28, 1854.

"The principle of this bill is the principle of self-government, a principle which alone prompted the Declaration of Independence. Sir, it was the seminal principle of the Constitution and the Government. It lies at the foundation of all our political institutions. It is the inalienable birthright of every American freeman. The recognition of this principle has been universal in our country with the single exception of the anomaly of dictating to the people of the Territories, (in some instances) their organic laws, instead of leaving them, like the rest of the people, to the exercise of their own volition. At this moment the country resounds with clamor, from a political party, whose policy it is to keep alive agitation, because it is proposed that Congress should abjure the exercise of irresponsible power, and leave the people of the Territories established by this bill to the enjoyment of their rights of self-government."—(See App. Cong. Globe, 1st Sess., 33d Cong., vol. 29, p. 255.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. R. Brodhead, of Pennsylvania, in the United States Senate, February 28, 1854:

"But, sir, is not the bill correct in principle and will it not work as well in practice as any other which can be adopted? Does it not give the people of the Territories the right to regulate their own domestic affairs in any way they please, not in violation of the Constitution of the United States? We are not asked to give protection to the property in slaves, or say that the local Legislature shall not pass laws upon the subject of slavery. We do not say whether the slaveholder can or cannot hold a slave there by virtue of the Constitution; that is left an open question to be decided by the Supreme Court of the United States. And who can object to that? But, sir, if we put a provision in the bill, that up to the time of the formation of a State Constitution the owners of slaves should lawfully hold them there, it would be of no service to them because there would be no local police; so that the mere refusal of the Territorial Legislature to provide for the manner in which they shall be held and sold and treated and penalties for harboring them, &c., would effectually exclude them."—(Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess. 33d Cong., vol. 29, p. 248.)

Extracts from a speech of Hon. Wm. Bigler, of Pennsylvania, in the United States Senate, July 1, 1856:

"In 1850, when the peace of the country seemed to be in imminent danger, the experienced men of this body, such as Mr. Clay and Mr. Webster, and the venerable Senator in front of me, Mr. Cass, and others, conceived and presented a new mode of adjustment. That was simply to take this question out of Congress and confide it to the people of the Territory—to submit it to their judgment and their will.—For one I thought the principle an admirable one.—It seemed to me that it ought to give entire satisfaction to the country and that it would have a salutary influence upon our national relations—a principle so perfectly in unison with our whole republican system of government, a mere recognition and extension to the territories of that vital principle of self-government—a principle suited to all times, all occasions and all territories and as imperishable as our mountains—no temporary remedy, no arbitrary rule, no perishable expedient, but simply this, that as the people of a State can at all times settle this question of domestic policy for themselves, Congress will enforce that the people of a territory shall have the same opportunity—that that power which is to be complete and exclusive when the people become a State, should operate during the territorial existence. Not only because it was perfectly right in principle, but because I believed it would be wise in practice, I preferred it to any which had previously been practised in the Government, or any other idea presented at the time antagonistic to it."—(Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Session, 34th Congress, vol. 33, pages 729, 730.)

Again, on the 9th of July 1856, in the Senate when Kansas affairs were under discussion Mr. Bigler said:

"I want to put myself right on another point. I mean the question of the measure of power which the Territorial Legislature can exercise over the subject of slavery. On this point no man can misunderstand the import of the language of the Kansas bill; it is explicit to the effect, that the people shall be left perfectly free to decide the question according to their own pleasure; but it is a question of what degree of law making power it is competent for Congress to confer upon the people and Legislature of a Territory. It is a question of construing the constitution and therefore a judicial question which I am not called upon to decide.—But, sir, I have no views to conceal; I agree with the Senator from Michigan, that the Territorial Legislature has entire control over the subject—it is competent to establish, abolish or protect it. I can see but two sources of law-making power for the Territory—the one is Congress—the other is the people who inhabit the Territory, and it seems to me, that when Congress has conferred upon the people all the power it possessed, as in the case of Kansas, the people, through their local legislature, have an ample law-making power, equal to the control of the slavery or any other question."—(See Appendix Cong. Globe, vol. 33, page [illegible].)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. L. O'B. Branch, of North Carolina, in the House of Representatives, July 24, 1856:

"But it is said the bill allows the people resident there to prohibit the introduction of slavery before their admission into the Union. It contains no such feature. The thirty-second section declares its intent to be 'to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States.' If the Constitution allows them to prohibit slavery, then the bill permits it: if the Constitution does not allow them to prohibit slavery, then the bill does not permit it. The power of the people during the existence of their territorial government, is a judicial question to be settled by the courts, if a case should ever arise involving the question; and whatever Congress might have said in the bill, it could not have altered the Constitution, nor taken the question out of the hands of the Courts. Whatever may be the decision of the Courts, I will be content; for I regard the great main feature of the bill as infinitely transcending in importance any of the minor questions that can be raised under it, and I would rather trust the question to the people of the Territory than to [illegible] have, at any time in the future."—(Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Sess. 34th Congress, vol. 33, pages 1081, 1082.)

Extract from a speech of the Hon. Harry Hibberd, of New Hampshire, in the House of Representatives, May 5, 1854:

"As such the country understood and accepted it. It, sir, is the great and distinguishing feature of the pending bill. It is embodied there in the following words:

"'It being the true intent and meaning of this act not to legislate slavery into any Territory or State, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States.'

"This, sir, is plain and explicit. It enumerates the broad doctrine of non-interference on the part of the Federal Government with the institution of slavery, and the control and regulation thereof by the States and Territories concerned. It is a principle which, to be understood, needs but to be stated, and to be approved, needs but to be understood. It addresses itself to all our notions of expediency and right. It appeals to our strongest sympathies, is strengthened by our traditions, and sanctioned by all our experience as individuals and as a people. It is peculiarly congenial to the American mind, and dear to the American heart. Attachment to it the most unyielding has in all ages been a distinguishing characteristic of the race from which we sprung. Upon it the frame-work and the details of our system of government, state and national, are based. For it the battles of the Revolution were fought. It was not for the money sought to be extorted by the Stamp act, and the duties on tea and sugar that our forefathers embarked in that perilous struggle. It was, sir, because a vital principle was involved—their right of self-government was at stake—there was to be taxation without representation—they were to be made subjects of an uncontrolled central power. For this they took up arms; with God's blessing, they triumphed. The principle they established has been sacredly cherished, and will be faithfully maintained. It is the ground in which all our local and municipal institutions rest. It insists upon [illegible] independence and separate sovereignty. It would leave to the central Government no power the State can properly exercise—to the State, no function which may as well be performed by the county—to the county, nothing that can as well be done by the town. It delegates to no human hands any power or prerogative which the individual citizen may with safety to others retain to himself. Its results are Popular Sovereignty, State Rights, and Individual Freedom. Wherever understood and applied, it has been in all lands and ages the surest safeguard of civil liberty—the strongest barrier against the encroachments of arbitrary power. That principle, sir, lies at the foundation of this bill.—As a supporter of the Compromises of 1850, I voted for it then—I stand upon it now."—(Appendix Cong. Globe, 1st Session 33rd Congress, vol. 29, p. 584.)

Extract from the Report of the Senate Committee on Territories, (Mr. Douglas, Chairman,) March 12, 1856:

"Your Committee have not considered it any part of their duty to examine and review each enactment and provision of the large volume of laws adopted by the legislature of Kansas, upon almost every rightful subject of legislation, and affecting nearly every relation and interest in life, with a view either of their approval or disapproval by Congress; for the reason that they are local laws confined in their operation to the internal concerns of the Territory, the control and management of which by the principles of the Federal Constitution, as well as by the very terms of the Kansas-Nebraska act, are confided to the people of the Territory to be determined by themselves, through their Representatives, in their local Legislature and their assent to the laws upon which their rights and liberties may all depend. Under these laws marriages have taken place; children have been born; deaths have occurred; estates have been distributed; contracts have been made and rights have accrued which it is not competent for Congress to divest.—If there can be a doubt in respect to the validity of these laws, growing out of the alleged irregularity of the election of the members of the Legislature, or the lawfulness of the place where its sessions were held, which it is competent for any tribunal to inquire into with a view to its decision at this day, and after the series of events which have ensued, it must be a judicial question over which Congress can have no control, and which can be determined only by the courts of Justice, under the protection and sanction of the constitution."—(Senate Report, No. 34, from the Committee on Territories, 1st Sess., 34th Cong.)

Extract from the national Democratic platform adopted at Cincinnati, June, 1856:

"And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, north and south, to the Constitution and the Union;

"1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery which seek to embroil the States and incite to treason an armed resistance to law in the Territories, and whose avowed purposes if consummated must end in civil war and disunion,—the American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws, establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—non-interference by Congress with slavery in State and Territory, or in the District of Columbia.

"2. That this was the basis of the compromises of 1850, confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

"3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories and to the admission of new states, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect, the equal rights of all will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing in peace and harmony any future American State that may be constituted or annexed with a Republican form of government."

This platform was adopted unanimously by the convention, the vote being taken by States and each delegation casting their united vote in its favor.

Extracts from the letter of acceptance of Mr. Buchanan, of the nomination of the Cincinnati Democratic Convention, June 16, 1856:

"In accepting the nomination, I need scarcely say that I accept, in the same spirit, the resolutions constituting the platform of principles erected by the Convention. To this platform I intend to confine myself throughout the canvass, believing that I have no right, as the candidate of the Democratic party, by answering interrogatories, to present new and different issues before the people." * *

"The agitation on the question of domestic slavery has too long distracted and divided the people of this Union, and alienated their affections from each other. This agitation has assumed many forms since its commencement, but it now seems to be directed chiefly to the Territories; and judging from its present character, I think we may safely anticipate that it is rapidly approaching a 'finality.' The recent legislation of Congress respecting domestic slavery, derived, as it has been, from the original and pure fountain of legitimate political power, the will of the majority, promises, ere long, to allay the dangerous excitement. This legislation is founded upon principles as ancient as free government itself, and in accordance with them has simply declared that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits.

"The Nebraska-Kansas act does no more than give the force of law to this elementary principle of self-goverment, declaring it to be 'the true intent and meaning of this act, not to legislate slavery into any Territory or State, nor to exclude it therefrom; but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States.' This principle will surely not be controverted by any individual of any party professing devotion to popular government. Besides, how vain and illusory, would any other principle prove in practice in regard to THE TERRITORIES. This is apparent from the fact admitted by all, that after a Territory shall have entered the Union, and become a State, no constitutional power would then exist which could prevent it from either abolishing or establishing slavery as the case may be according to its sovereign will and pleasure."

KANSAS.—The Convention of the Free State party in Kansas, held at Osawatomie on the 18th and 19th of May, adopted a platform of principles, and effected a permanent organization of the Republican party in the Territory. The Convention elected for its President Mr. A. O. LEONARD, of Coffee county. During the afternoon recess on the first day, HORACE GREELEY addressed a mass meeting, in a speech an hour and a half long. The platform was reported on the following day, from a committee of thirteen, and after an animated discussion, lasting for eight hours, it was unanimously adopted. The platform declares that the Constitution does not carry Slavery into the Territories; that the people of the Territories have the right to select their own laws and elect their own officers; that further legislation by Congress is necessary for the suppression of the Slave-trade; that the passage of a liberal Homestead act is expedient—that the President has been guilty of an act of gross injustice in ordering the public lands in Kansas to be sold during a period of universal depression—that an extension of the political disabilities of naturalized voters is unwise—and that the improvement of rivers and harbors is a measure of essential importance. The Convention adjourned to the 19th.

☞ HENRY T. BARNS, aged sixteen years, second son of the senior editor of the Detroit Tribune, accidentally hung himself while exercising in a Gymnasium in that city on Friday forenoon. The Tribune says:

It is supposed that he was experimenting with the strap about his neck, upon the ladder, and that he accidentally lost his foothold and was so suddenly strangled as to prevent his helping himself with his hands or feet.

☞ The German residents of New Orleans celebrated their "Volksfest" on the 16th inst. There were 30,000 persons present to participate in the festival.

State Republican Convention, June 2, 1859.

The Republican Delegates of the State met in Convention at Armory Hall Thursday. We have never seen a larger delegation in Convention in this city.

THE ORGANIZATION.

At eleven o'clock W. T. Bascom, of Franklin, called the Convention to order, and nominated Benj. Eggleston, of Hamilton, Chairman pro tem.

Mr. E., on taking the Chair, made a few pertinent remarks.

Messrs. Thos. H. Ford and Jos. P. Dunham were appointed Secretaries pro tem.

Considerable difficulty occurred in getting the several delegations seated in proper order, but it was finally accomplished. The crowd was very great and outsiders were compelled to stand in the aisles, it being impossible to accommodate all with seats.

Hon. L. D. Campbell offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That a Committee on Resolutions be appointed, composed of one member from each Congressional District, to be chosen by the delegates from the districts, to whom all resolutions shall be referred without debate.

On motion, the following committees in the districts as numbered, were then appointed:

COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS.

1 W. [illegible]	12 S G Arnold,
2 Geo F Dorn,	13 Thos S Banker,
3 G W Thompson,	14 J Aylsworth,
4 E S Keyle,	15 J Miller,
5 W. Higgins,	16 D Green,
6 Geo L Swing,	17 S Betts,
7 John W Boyd,	18 H Jarvis,
8 J W Robinson,	19 H Losey,
9 John C Lee,	20 J Baldwin,
10 A McFarland,	21 J C McCleary.
11 John Kelley,

COMMITTEE ON ORGANIZATION.

1 J W Parker,	12 C B Mason,
2 L H Bakes,	13 F S Thorp,
3 S Craighead,	14 W A Crane,
4 H Walker,	15 G W True,
5 J Greso,	16 F W Wood,
6 J Kirby,	17 O J Albright,
7 J Q Smith,	18 C Loffin,
8 O S Hinkle,	19 B Hitchcock,
9 H Everett,	20 G P Townsend,
10 H C Messenger,	21 J A Amber.
11 A O Sands,

COMMITTEE ON RULES AND RESOLUTIONS.

1 G B Hollister,	12 H D Cook,
2 Jos Cox,	13 R Blakerhoff,
3 L D Campbell,	14 Jas Monroe,
4 M H Nichols,	15 L C Davies,
5 J M Ashley,	16 D Applegate,
6 J H Kincaid,	17 D S Cowen,
7 Thos Corwin,	18 S Edgerton,
8 B Stanton,	19 F L Backus,
9 G Spinning,	20 E F Wade,
10 A P Miller,	21 T A Bingham.
11 L H Culver,

COMMITTEE TO APPOINT A STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

1 W B Davis,	12 O N Olds,
2 A McGill,	13 R McCune,
3 F Marsh,	14 L J Sprengle,
4 E B Taylor,	15 J Riden,
5 F M Case,	16 J P Tompkins,
6 J Bettinger,	17 J O Douglass,
7 S N Yeoman,	18 J Harsh,
8 A Thompson,	19 G B Senter,
9 W P Dumble,	20 D Caldwell,
10 H Campbell,	21 J A Lindsay.
11 H S Orton,

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

1 B Eggleston,	12 J C Thompson,
2 P Zinn,	13 J T Dewey,
3 J Mills,	14 E G Washburn,
4 J Walker,	15 J W Dwyer,
5 J W Ross,	16 D Applegate,
6 E P Evans,	17 J O Douglass,
7 H W. Smith,	18 J S Herrick,
8 J C Bryan,	19 J C Grannis,
9 G W Leith,	20 U E Hunt,
10 G A North,	21 J Heaton.
11 C H Grosvenor,

A motion was made to select a larger Hall for the accommodation of the Convention.

This motion gave rise to considerable discussion and loss of time. It being finally discovered that there was no larger Hall in the city, the motion was lost.

On motion it was resolved that Hon. H. Lane, of Indiana, be called to the stand for the purpose of making a speech.

This resolution was carried with great applause.

On motion of L. D. Campbell the different committees adjourned to their respective places of meeting to arrange business for the afternoon.

Hon. H. Lane was then called to the stand, and received with a thrilling round of applause. His remarks were principally confined to the subject of free labor, and paid the State of Ohio many flattering compliments. He pitched in with a vengeance to the Slave clause in the Constitution. Neither was bleeding Kansas forgotten towards the close of his remarks Hon. Geo. E. Pugh came in for a share He hoped that the place which now knew Mr. Pugh politically would soon know him no more [illegible].

The Democratic portion of the U. S. Congress was in his opinion devoid of the least portion of respectability. He had great confidence in the ticket that would be put in the field this day, and deemed this Convention as the first chapter in the history of the Presidential campaign of 1860.

Mr. Lane spoke about three quarters of an hour, during which he was vociferously cheered. His remarks were not such as to create a deep sensation, but rather that of mirth. He told many amusing anecdotes, few of them, however, having any political bearing.

On motion the convention took a recess until 2 o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At two P. M., President Eggleston called the Convention to order, when the Committee on Organization made the following report, which was adopted:

President—Hon. B. F. Wade, of Cuyahoga.

Vice Presidents—H. Jacobi, A. Moore, G. W. Thompson, J. W. S. Conklin, J. F. Price, J. A. Adams, A. Hiveling, L. Corwin, R. Morris, H. S. Bundy, H. S. Horton, Thos. S. O'Bannon, Wm. Patterson, W. Griswold, W. R. Sapp, M. Clark, Jno. Welsh, W. Steedman, S. F. Phillbrick, Alex. McConnell, W. K. Allison.

RULES OF ORDER.

That the Convention nominate—First, Governor; Second, Lieut. Governor; Third, Judge of Supreme Court; Fourth, Auditor of State; Fifth, Treasurer of State; Sixth, Secretary of State; Seventh, Board of Public Works; Eighth, Commissioner of Common Schools.

Resolved, That the vote shall be taken by counties in Alphabetical order and viva voce, and a majority shall be necessary for a choice.

Secretaries.—J K Green, of Hamilton, S O Griswold, J Dumars, J S Herrick, Jos C Devos, J S Roe and J W McBeth [illegible]

A committee of three—W R Sapp, O W Runyon and E O Parsons—was appointed to wait upon the President elect.

A motion to proceed with the business of the Convention, with the temporary chairman, until the arrival of Mr. Wade was lost, the result of which was that the committee were obliged to go in search of the hon. gentleman.

Mr. Wade takes the Chair.

Mr. Wade being finally found, made his way into the Hall, and upon taking the chair made a speech similar to speeches on occasions of the kind. He exhorted the party to strict harmony for the entire government was now under the control of a corrupt administration. This must not continue, it would be ruinous to the Country at large. Every interest of the country was overruled and subservient to the one great question of slavery. Ten years ago this question was local, confined only to the Southern States. How is it now? Why it has spread like an epidemic until it is now the head and front of all parties, not only South but also in the North. The Fugitive slave law in its operations over-rides the sovereignty of the States. The free States had to doff the sovereignty to do homage to the aristocracy of the South, and they are to-day as much slave States as is any State south of Mason and Dixon's line. The speaker's whole hobby was the Fugitive law, on which he expatiated for half an hour.

He got very little applause, from the fact that the Convention preferred doing business to listening to him discuss the situation of the Nigger. He was finally requested to desist until evening.

Mr. Ratcliff was elected to fill the vacancy in the Committee on Resolutions occasioned by the election of B. F. Wade as President.

CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR.

William Dennison, of Franklin; and David K. Carter, Cuyahoga.

FIRST BALLOT.

Dennison, 299; Carter, 65.

Hon. William Dennison having received a majority, was declared the nominee.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR.

Candidates for Nomination.

D K Carter, of Cuyahoga.
C W Godfrey, of Putnam.
John H Williams, of Marion
W Slade, of Cuyahoga.
W B Gilmore, of Ross.
S E Brown, of Miami.
Robt C Kirk, of Knox.
N H Van Vorhes, of Athens.
Herman Canfield, of Medina.

FIRST BALLOT.

Carter, 6; Godfrey, 13; Williams, 29; Slade, 105; Gilmore, 32; Brown, 20; Kirk, 89; Van Vorhes, 69; Canfield, 16.

No choice being made, the names of Carter, Williams, Godfrey, Brown and Canfield were withdrawn.

SECOND BALLOT.

Gilmore, 29; Kirk, 144; Slade, 131; Van Vorhes 63.

No choice being made, the name of W. B. Gilmore was withdrawn.

THIRD BALLOT.

Slade, 146; Kirk, 195; Van Vorhes 19.

Kirk having a majority of all votes, was declared the nominee.

Probable Row in the Committee on Resolutions.

At this juncture something took place in the Committee on Resolutions, at the Neil House, upon which a message was dispatched to the Hall to summon Mr. Wade. He filled the chair temporarily with the Hon. R. C. Parsons, of Cuyahoga, and after a short conference with J. R. Giddings he left the Hall in search of the Committee.

SUPREME JUDGE.

Candidates for Nomination.

J R Swan, of Franklin.
W Y Gholson, of Hamilton.
Flamen Ball [illegible]

INTENSE EXCITEMENT.

The following dispatches which had been received were read, and created great excitement:

"E P L Barna, Columbus, O.

"I am not a candidate before the Convention for any office, and have not authorized my name to be used in that connection."

"Cincinnati, O., June 2." "W. Y. GHOLSON.

"J. K. GREEN, Columbus.

"I do not seek a contest for nomination, but if necessary to complete harmony will not decline. "W. Y. GHOLSON.

"Cincinnati, O., June 2."

Of course such conflicting dispatches being received just at the same time created great excitement, the friends of Gholson calling vociferously for Baber to explain how he came to receive such a message. Baber could not be found, but Eggleston, of Cincinnati, explained something in connection with the matter and order was restored.

The Hamilton delegation went tooth and toe nail for Gholson, determined to secure his nomination if possible.

FIRST BALLOT.

Swan, 149; Gholson, 207; Blank, 3.

Gholson having received the majority was declared the nominee, some of the Reserve Counties voting blank. A motion to nominate by acclamation was not responded to harmoniously.

AUDITOR OF STATE.

Candidates for Nomination.

R M Colestock, of Columbiana.
Wm. Wilson, of Darke.
H J Cox, of Muskingum.
A W Baker, of Van Wert.
S Shotwell, of Harrison.
J Williams, of Champaign.
F M Follett, of Sandusky.
R W Taylor, of Mahoning.
R Marsh, of Jefferson.
G Leaman, of Hardin.
D B Gibbard, of Gallia.
John Hilt, of Tuscarawas.
Geo R Morton, of Erie.

FIRST BALLOT.

Colestock, 24; Wilson, 63½; Cox, 43; Baker, 30, Shotwell, 43; Williams, 45½; Follett, 17; Taylor, 64; Marsh, 6; Seaman, 5; Gibbard, 0; Hilt, 10; Morton, 3. [illegible]

Previous to the second ballot being taken the names of Messrs. Follett, Seaman, Baker and Morton were withdrawn.

A second ballot being had without a choice, the name of Mr. Hilt was withdrawn.

The third ballot resulted in the choice of [illegible]

R. W. Taylor, of Mahoning, who was declared

TREASURER OF STATE.

Candidates for Nomination.

A. P. Stone, of Franklin.
Jonathan Harshman, of Montgomery.
Chas. W. James, of Hocking.
W. Carey, of Hardin.

On the first ballot Mr. Stone received 250 votes, Harshman, 63; James, 36; Carey, 11.

Mr. Stone having received a majority was declared nominated.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

The names of A. P. Russell, of Clinton, and M. H. Kirby, were presented.

Mr. Kirby being withdrawn a motion to nominate Mr. Russell by acclamation was carried unanimously.

MEMBER OF BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Candidates for Nomination.

S. J. Renaick, of Pickaway.
J. B. Gregory, of Scioto
Kent Jarvis, of Stark.
Sam'l Carpenter, of Fairfield.
Wm. Smith, of Fayette.
J. Chamberlin, of Summit.
P. Chapin, of Washington.
— Froome, of Coshocton.

FIRST BALLOT.

Renaick, 21; Jarvis, 90; Smith, 10; Chapin, 108; Gregory, 160; Carpenter, 5; Chamberlin, 42; Froome, 0.

No choice. The names of Froome, Smith, Carpenter and Renaick were withdrawn.

SECOND BALLOT.

Chapin, 130; Gregory, 164; Chamberlin, 54; Jarvis, 12.

No choice being had, the Convention proceeded to the third ballot, which resulted in the nomination of Mr. Gregory, who received 185 [illegible]

COMMISSIONER OF COMMON SCHOOLS.

Candidates for Nomination.

Anson Smyth, of Lucas.
John Lynch, of Pickaway.
A C Deuel, of Champaign.
E H Stevens, of Clermont.

FIRST BALLOT.

Smyth, 206; Lynch, 58; Stevens, 21; Deuel, 68.

Mr. Smyth having received a majority, was declared nominated.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

The Committee on Resolutions, through Mr. Bingham, made the following report:

RESOLUTIONS.

Relying confidently upon the intelligence and patriotism of the people, and invoking earnestly the favor of the Supreme Ruler, we submit to the freemen of Ohio the following declaration of Republican principles and measures:

1. We entertain an abiding confidence in the cardinal doctrines heretofore inscribed upon the banners of that party, and in the defense of which, it has never failed to secure from the free electors of the State an ardent and triumphant support; and re-affirming the same, commend them anew to the discriminating consideration of the people.

2. That the people of Ohio demand a reorganization of the Judicial Circuits of the United States, and that they be so constituted as to give to every section of the Confederacy its just and equal voice in the Supreme Court of the United States; that provision be made for reviewing the decisions of the District and Circuit Courts of the United States, by appeal or writ of error, and for securing fair and impartial juries in prosecutions for alleged violations of the laws of the United States.

3. That, proclaiming our determination rigidly to respect the constitutional obligations imposed upon the States by the Federal compact, we maintain the union of the States, the rights of the States, and the liberties of the people; and in order to attain these important ends, we demand the repeal of the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850, as subversive of both the rights of the States and the liberties of the people, and as contrary to the plainest duties of humanity and justice, and as abhorrent to the moral sense of the civilized world.

4. We claim for all citizens, native and naturalized, liberty of conscience, equality of rights, and the freest exercise of the right of suffrage; we favor whatever legislative or administrative reforms may be necessary to protect these rights, and guard against their infringement or abuse; and we oppose any abridgement whatever of the right of naturalization now secured by law to immigrants, and all discrimination between native and naturalized citizens, whether by amendment of a State constitution or otherwise; and we condemn equally such discrimination, whenever and wherever made, whether made by South Carolina, or any other State.

5. That the developments of extravagance and corruption in the administration of the national affairs impose upon us the important duty of casting out those who have proved faithless, and placing in power men who can be relied upon to reduce the public expenditures, lessen the burthens of taxation, and protect the Treasury of the people.

6. That we regard all suggestions and propositions of every kind, by whomsoever made, for a revival of the African slave trade, as shocking to the moral sentiments of the enlightened portion of mankind; and that any action on the part of the government or people conniving at, or legalizing that horrid and inhuman traffic, would justly subject the government and citizens of the United States to the reproach and execration of all civilized and christian people throughout the world.

7. That we are in favor of granting to actual settlers one hundred and sixty acres of the public lands free of charge, and we do most unqualifiedly condemn the course of the pro-slavery Democracy in Congress, in opposing and defeating in the United States Senate the Homestead Bill, which was destined to secure free homes for the poor man, whether of native or foreign birth.

8. We regard the usurpation and abuse of power by the last legislature in repeated instances, and especially in making appointments to office in plain violation of the Constitution; in virtually abolishing the Board of Public Works, and placing the several divisions (so arranged for partisan purposes as to give the largest portion to the junior member,) under the uncontrolled charge of individual members, without responsibility to the whole Board; in making inadequate provision for the safe keeping of the public moneys, and in attempting to force upon the people of Cincinnati an arbitrary system of police, against their consent, as deserving the reprobation of all good citizens.

9. That the Republicans of Ohio point with entire satisfaction and pride to the dignified, honest, faithful, and judicious manner in which the present Executive and other officers of the State Government have discharged the duties of their respective positions. That the course of Hon. B. F. Wade in the United States Senate, and of the Republican members of Congress, in their able advocacy of the interests of the poor man, in urging the passage of the Homestead Bill, and in their defense of the principles of freedom, meets our unqualified approval.

10. We cordially invite all men of all parties to join with us, in earnest endeavors to restore the Government to its original purity, and to preserve the proud heritage of American Institutions, transmitted to us by our Fathers, complete and unimpaired, to those who may come after us.

A motion to adopt the resolutions in a body was carried unanimously [illegible]

Hon. Tom Corwin was called to the stand and addressed the Convention in his usual gay and witty manner. His address was short and well received. Messrs. Dennison and Kirk also were called out and addressed the Convention. [illegible]

On motion the Convention adjourned sine die.

POST-OFFICE ROBBERIES.—"A Student," writing from Ann Arbor, Mich., to the Detroit Tribune, under date of May 25, says:

I take this method of trying, if possible, to get some clue to a thief who lurks in one of four post-offices which I shall shortly name—or at least put the postmasters of these several offices on their guard in the future.

I have had three money letters stolen from the mails somewhere between St. Thomas, C. W., and Ann Arbor, Michigan The letters only pass through St. Thomas, Windsor, Detroit and Ann Arbor. Now, in one of these offices lies a base and treacherous thief—a cowardly robber in the employ of the Canadian or American government, ready to pounce on any letter that may come under his avaricious eye. How he finds out those in which money is deposited, is more than I can imagine. My letters have all been sent in different manners; the last was an opaque envelope, small, and superscribed in a lady's hand writing on purpose to mislead, yet the rogue detected it. Though, certainly, if he had a spark of humanity left in him, did he ever stop to read a letter (which I suppose he does not) he would never have taken one addressed to a student who has been working his way through college, with no one to depend on but himself—to whom every dollar is worth ten times as much to one who is educated by rich parents.

Once I was compelled to leave college for six months on account of losing two of the above-mentioned letters, and on account of losing the last I shall have to leave before graduating. But the old proverb says, "It is a long lane that has no turn." I can endure it, and he may yet be the sufferer. My only wish is, that the thief may be brought to a speedy justice.

Such is the position of the majority of the Supreme Judges of the State of Ohio. It is the end of the legal controversy, at this time. The free people can take an appeal through the ballot boxes, State and National. This they will do. The struggle between Freedom and Slavery, Liberty and Despotism, is but begun. The Past is full of encouragement, the Future of promise, for "Revolutions never go backward."—Cleveland Leader.

We shall see by the action of the State Republican Convention to-morrow if the "revolution" is to commence with the eminent Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, whose opinion, published by the State Journal this morning, is irrefragable, and will drown all the puny voices that can be raised against it. Should Judge Swan desire a re-nomination, it will be more than the Convention dare do to set him aside, notwithstanding all the clamor of northern fanaticism and political demagoguery. The clatter of "freedom and slavery, liberty and despotism" will not divert the public mind from justice to an honest, fearless and faithful public officer, who knows the responsibilities of his position, and has the integrity, firmness and independence to discharge his duty.—[Post.

An Exciting Race—Stake $275,000.

The Cleveland Leader tells of a very exciting race, which, if not "bunkum," possesses considerable interest. A passenger who fired out had fallen asleep and in a state of somnambulism was walking to and fro on the platform at La Porte while the iron steed was watering, when he was left. Being accosted, and told that the train had been gone ten minutes, he inquired for the superintendent. The Leader tells the story:

"The section master had an office near by and the two went to find that official and to procure an engine. The traveler stated his case—he must go on—could not delay—and offered the officer $250 if he would put him on board the train. This strange demand and offer caused the station master to hasten to do what he could. The fire was not out in the engine that had drawn the train to that point—the bargain was settled—a draft given on New York for the $250, and in ten minutes the traveler started with an engine to overtake the flying Express. After rushing on for thirty or forty miles some connection gave way about the engine. The engine was stopped—the engineer found the difficulty, and in a very few minutes had a wooden pin whittled out and fitted to supply the the deficiency. With this, on they flew. The train had of course many miles the start of them, and despite the wooden pin the engineer crowded on the steam and tore through the country at a fearful rate. Thirty miles of the distance passed was run in twenty-seven minutes, but the engagement was that they should overtake the train and do it they must, and do it they did, but not until more than one hundred miles had been run, and they were approaching Toledo. Having at length overtaken and stopped the train and hurried on board, the traveler went eagerly to a berth in the sleeping car, and took therefrom a carpet bag containing $275,000. His treasure was all safe—none had molested it, and dismissing his faithful courier, he went on his way rejoicing at the success of his perilous and exciting adventure."

☞ The French journals are anticipating a holiday campaign in Italy against the Austrians. As one NAPOLEON passed from victory to victory, the French nation expects the other NAPOLEON to follow in the same path, and win the renown of a conqueror in a month. The English press hope that a speedy peace will follow the present conflict, but the hope is built upon a fear that a protracted war will involve England in the struggle. Prussia desires to keep out of the fight; but the recent debate in the Prussian Chambers upon placing the army on a war footing, shows that the feeling of the government is strongly against France, and that the least symptom on the part of the French Emperor of carrying out any scheme of territorial aggrandizement will be sufficient to place Prussia by the side of Austria, as her friend and ally. The words of the debaters are very significant: "Prussians should never forget that Austria formed a German Union, and that they were bound to Austria by the sacred bonds of the Confederation." "As in all probability Prussia would have shortly to stand side by side with Austria on the field of battle, the sooner the disapproval of the government of the policy of Austria was dropped the better." "Prussia ought to be prepared for every eventuality. Her calling is to defend the interests of Germany." These sentiments show that a common feeling of danger is uniting all the German States, and the difficulty will be to keep them from mingling in the fray. It will be fortunate for Europe if the French anticipations should prove to be correct, and the war end with the speedy driving of the Austrians out of Italy.

THE TWO YEARS' AMENDMENT IN MASSACHUSETTS.—The Boston Atlas and Bee repels with some spirit the assaults made upon the old Bay State respecting her two years' amendment. It holds the following language:

"As for excluding the Massachusetts Delegates from the National Convention unless they repudiate the two years' amendment, all we have to say is: Let the Convention try it. The Massachusetts Delegates would probably not leave alone, and those who urge such a proposition will find that a Massachusetts Republican is at least as good as a German one, and they will find also that Massachusetts will take no step backwards in this or any other proposition she can honestly and properly maintain. We say again that we have no unkind feeling towards the German voters of this country. At the same time, Massachusetts will permit no one, native or foreign, living beyond her boundaries, to dictate terms to her. Let it be known, now and forever, that if the Western Republicans submit their party and themselves to be lorded over by a few German voters, that they will break up their organization in their own State, and sow the seeds of another American Party, which will exert a power more vast than those who now traduce Massachusetts to obtain favor of the Germans, have the remotest idea of. Should the National Convention, by resolution or otherwise, be silly enough to attempt to single out Massachusetts and discredit her for having in her own way amended her own fundamental laws, or should they attempt to exclude the delegates from this State from holding seats for any such cause, a storm will be raised such as has not been heard of since Conventions had an existence. We hope we shall hear no more of this kind of talk."

The Wool Market.

The Cincinnati Price Current, June 1, says: The market is quite heavy, and we understand that agents throughout the interior, who had contracts for the new clip, have been withdrawn, leading to an unsettled market, and a downward tendency in prices At this point all of the new clip which has arrived has been taken at 30@45c.

The demand for all kinds of wool in the Philadelphia market continues limited, and the market is almost at a stand still; the sales being confined to a few small lots, mostly fleece, within the range of 37@40c for common and good tub, up to 45@58c nett, for quarter to full blood and prime, prices ruling in favor of the buyers, and 2@3c per lb off the rates current a few weeks ago.

The Detroit Advertiser says: The new clip of wool is beginning to come in, in small lots but prices are very indeterminate and market unsettled Buyers are evidently expecting lower rates, and now not over 40@45c for the best qualities will probably be obtainable.

The New York Tribune, May 31, says: The inquiry for all descriptions is quite limited, and prices favor the buyer, sales of 15,000 lb White Washed East India at 18c., six months and 130 bales Mestizo on private terms.

RHODE ISLAND LEGISLATURE.—The General Assembly of Rhode Island met at Newport on Tuesday. Mr. T. Wingate Hayes was elected speaker of the House. The old clerks were elected in both houses. Speeches were made by Gov Dyer on retiring, and by Gov. Turner on assuming the duties of office. There having been no election of Lieut. Governor and State Treasurer by the people, they were elected in grand committee as follows: For Lieut. Governor, Sanders, American Rep., 70, Brown, Dem., 11; Hill, straight Rep., 3 For Treasurer, Parker, American Rep., 76; Newton, Dem., 12, Carr, straight Rep., 3.

NEW HAMPSHIRE LEGISLATURE.—The New Hampshire Legislature organized yesterday by the choice of Republican officers throughout.

Jos. A. Gilmore, of Concord, was elected President of the Senate; Greenleaf Cummings, of Lisbon, Clerk.

In the House, W. Bryant, of Concord, was chosen Speaker, and Henry D. Kent, of Lancaster, Clerk.

☞ J. C. BURCH, a Chicago dentist, committed suicide in that city on Tuesday evening, by taking strychnine. The deceased was a native of Virginia, aged about 50 years, unmarried, a man of eccentric habits, and in the habit of drinking freely.

SUICIDE.—John Winters, on Cambridge Pike, seven miles west of Steubenville, committed suicide on Wednesday, by shooting himself with a rifle. Mr. Winters has for some time been laboring under a depression of spirits.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.
TERMS - $1 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

The Statesman and the People's Press.

We have been admonished, and the public have been advised, by a few papers claiming to be Democratic, and whose editors no doubt desire to be considered men, that they did not require another Democratic press at Columbus; that the "Statesman" was sufficient; and several hints have been thrown out that an effort would be made by this paper to disturb the harmony, if not disorganize the party.

As we disclaimed in our initial number, every thing that looked like a disturbance of the peace and quiet of the party—as we have as high a stake in its entire harmony and success, as any one can have, the admonition and advice were supererogatory. We regarded it therefore as only a covert and cowardly way of discountenancing our enterprise, by those who had received their cue from this city and were not ashamed to perform menial service for the "Statesman." We had smiled in derision and scorn at their puerility, and should have dismissed them as too contemptible to be noticed, but the "Statesman" avails itself of the fact of their publication to speak of this paper and its editor in terms that leave him no alternative but to reply, or leave by silence, the inference that the misrepresentations of the "Statesman" are true. We are as solicitous for the harmony of the party as any other Democrat can be, but not to the extent of submitting to the most gross and false imputations of an unscrupulous and knavish set of politicians who now have control of the "central organ."

We stated in our prospectus, that we thought such a paper as we proposed to publish, was needed at the capital. We not only thought so, but were not alone in thinking so. Had there been any probability of others undertaking the task, fraught with vicissitude, and toil, and uncertainty in returning a fair remuneration, we should most certainly have left the field untrodden by us. But we were not content with the "Statesman," as a political guide, and could not confide in a party organ, aspiring to the leadership. Its central position and long uninterrupted career without competition here, gave it an influence with the press, if not the people of the rest of the State, to which latterly it was not entitled. Instead of the dignified, elevated tone, the careful guardianship of party principles and party interests, and party men, it endeavored to introduce into party tactics the drill of the sergeant, and after enunciating measures of doubtful policy, and asserting them to be Democratic, when they were not Democratic, it attempted to dragoon Democrats into their support, failing in which it was not sparing in its terms of opprobrium and reproach, and undertook to read them out of the party, as its editor a year before had threatened at the theatre in this city to "read out of the party" those who failed to stand with him upon the Douglas platform— a threat he would not be likely now to repeat. Its success was not commensurate with its temper for those whom it most abused were sent as delegates to the late Democratic convention by their respective constituents, showing conclusively that the "Statesman's" Democracy and that of the people themselves differed most materially.

Although there was no other Democratic paper here, the course of the "Statesman" did not seem to evince a desire for harmony in the party, unless it could have its own way; and the party could be made a subservient instrument to realize its private speculations. We regret to say, that there were papers in the State, so accustomed to echo the "Statesman" that they, too, caught up and reiterated the sound, until some of the best and most intelligent, and most faithful, and most prominent Democrats in the State, found themselves pretty roundly scolded by persons with whom they had not the honor of an acquaintance.

We do not recur to these things to stir up the bellicose propensities of the "Statesman" and inaugurate a series of "party animosities" of which some gentlemen seem very apprehensive, but to show that we are not without apology for entering a field, the gap of which was fairly down; and which we have yet to learn was a private enclosure, duly posted.

We had seen the Democratic press of Ohio, that with singular unanimity sustained the position defended by Mr DOUGLAS on the Lecompton constitution, and re-echoed with plaudits of the "Little Giant of Illinois" for his bold and manly and impregnable stand, droop, from the "Statesman" down to its meanest follower, and hang listlessly as streamers in a calm, or curl up as vines after a hard frost, as if some withering influence had swept over them all. When the contest in Illinois was progressing, who sent a word of cheer to STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS? Did the "Statesman?" When the glorious triumph was achieved, and the Senator had won the right to stand again in the Senate House, who gloried in his success and rent the air with huzzas?—Did the "Statesman?" When Illinois, true to her noblest son, returned him to the Senate, and he was beset by the myrmidons of an exasperated power which sought his overthrow, who protested against the unnatural hunt of a gallant and unattended chieftain—who insisted that the dogs be called off, and that peace and harmony be restored? Did the "Statesman?" When returned to the place which he had made illustrious by his statesmanship, and a seat he had ennobled, by his gallant championship of Democratic principles, leading the Democratic ranks in their marches to triumph, and found, that obedient to the caprice and vengeance of a disappointed power, that place was reserved to another and he was supplanted, did the "Statesman" cry out "for shame?"

No. Few and brief have been the good words spoken for STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, by the Democratic press of Ohio, and especially by the "Statesman," since the passage of the English compromise measure, when, with not many exceptions, there seemed to be a general compromise stampede, and his name was breathed in a whisper, or not at all, and attack after attack by the government organ at Washington, was permitted to go unrebuked. Of course there could be no other object save a desire for the harmony of the party! Hired scribblers and professional letter writers might fulminate as much abuse or circulate as many falsehoods and calumnies as their busy and reckless invention could conceive, but Mr. DOUGLAS was no longer the head of the Committee on Territories, he had been formally read out of the party, and Slidell and Jones and Fitch had tried to involve him in a duel, but failed—it was not necessary then he should be defended. The "Statesman" did not defend him; no. Mr. DOUGLAS needed no defender.

"The blood of DOUGLAS can protect itself."—The same bold, determined, energetic man, who fought the valiant fight in Illinois against the Republican champion, aided by Federal and parasites of the Administration, with the same self-reliance which bore him through all the difficulties of an unparalleled political campaign, preserved his equilibrium, and he bore himself bravely up, scorning to strike at wretched hirelings, whose arms are hired to bear their staves—patiently enduring the continuous assaults of hirelings and sycophants and waiving retort or rejoinder, biding his time and leaving to the returning sense of the people, to do him justice. He had braved everything for them, and he knew them too well, and relied upon them too confidently, to believe they would forget him. Reproach and abuse and calumny he stood, for the harmony of the party. Every indignity save that which man most instinctively resents, he endured for the harmony of the party. For a time he seemed sinking into obscurity, so much was his name withdrawn from the public eye. Still he was at his post, with his eagle glance thrown backward on the past, while it drank in all the future. Unhelmeted, plumeless, his shield without a blazon, or bearing the inscription "desdichado," he stood in the Senate, liable to misconstruction or misrepresentation, no matter what course he pursued—If he sustained the measures of the Administration, he was sure to be reputed to be cringing like a fawning spaniel to be taken into favor again. If he dissented, it was ascribed to motives of revenge. What said the "Statesman" then? Whence this silence? Was it not a time to speak? Had Mr. DOUGLAS ceased to be dear to the Democratic party? Was his record of no moment? Did the harmony of the party require that when misrepresented, no word in his behalf should be uttered?

At Cleveland, and Toledo, and in one or two other points the press had not forgotten him; but the "Statesman" rarely indicated that there was such a man, or that he occupied any space in the public eye. Remembering some twelve or fourteen months since, how constant, and persistent and earnest that paper was in sounding pæan after pæan to Mr. DOUGLAS, many must have thought from the protracted silence of the "Statesman," that he had retired from public life, was dead, or had committed some heinous political offence, so that "no mention of him must more be heard." Why, it was beginning to be suspected that the Democratic party no longer had STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS. What: the Democratic party without STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS? It was impossible. There he stood, firm and immoveable as he had always been, steadfast to the people, steadfast to the Constitution. While BUCHANAN remained President, the 'Statesman' was under bonds for good behavior. It was bound to the utmost circumspection in the mere mention of his name. Popular demonstrations in his favor might be made elsewhere, which would really be grateful intelligence to the people of Ohio, but the columns of the "Statesman" were required for something else that fared better, and, besides, the harmony of the Democratic party might be disturbed by seeming to be interested in the flattering prospects of any individual. Some of the Ohio Democratic press, taking their cue, ventured to speak in his disparagement. Did the "Statesman" dare to lift its voice in his behalf? They expected to shine in "Court favor" by attacking their late vaunted champion, meanly supposing that he had fallen into disgrace,

"And none so poor to do him reverence."

The "Statesman" looked quietly on, lest it should disturb the harmony of the party!

We desire the harmony of the party. Nobody is more solicitous that it should be harmonious, that it should be so directed and united as to be harmonious, than we have been and are. In no act or word, that we have done or spoken, have we sought to disturb its harmony. When we perceive knavery at work to mislead the party, it is our duty as a Democrat to sound the alarm. To expose that knavery is not to disturb the harmony of the party. We regard the "Statesman" as characterized solely by selfishness, and swayed by unscrupulous political tricksters, who hold on to government patronage, for which they sold themselves, with the tenacity and silence of leeches, and as unfit to lead the politics of a great commonwealth like Ohio, and especially of the Democratic party, whose principles should be always fair, frank and outspoken, principles that should not fear daylight, should not shrink from investigation, should inculcate nothing but honor and integrity and patriotism.

We have explained the motives which induced us to undertake the publication of this paper.—We did not consult the "Statesman," or any of its "crew," and we consider it the height of imprudence in that paper to prate of "sincere friendship for Judge DOUGLAS," or "good intentions towards the Democratic party"—for it has no sincerity, and its good intentions are concentrated in self. The "Statesman" is in the pay of the Administration, and can know nothing of the "advice, sanction or approval of the friends of Judge DOUGLAS in Ohio" who it insinuates were opposed to the commencement of this paper—a gross piece of impertinence and altogether destitute of truth, unless the "Statesman" assumes to monopolize that prerogative by special privilege.

The charges brought against the editor of this paper by the "Statesman" are villainously and contemptibly false. We were a private citizen, in no capacity that brought us before the public when the Lecompton issue arose.—As a private citizen we deprecated the "imminent deadly breach" likely to arise on that question. We were Secretary of the Democratic meeting held in March, 1858, and not "1856," as represented by the "Statesman," and which made an effort to hold together the Democratic party, when the editor of the "Statesman," as Chairman of what was called a mass Democratic Convention, in March, 1858, (one-half of whom, at least, were Republicans,) was undertaking to read out of the party those Democrats who were then willing to support the Administration. This much is about all of the truth in the "Statesman's" article. It is false that we ever denounced Mr. DOUGLAS, or that we asserted that the principles for which he contended were not those of the Democratic party in 1856; and as to being "in the interest of the Republicans," as falsely stated by the "Statesman," the charge was refuted to the satisfaction of the Democrats of the last Senate of Ohio, when meanly, unscrupulously and malevolently urged by the editor of the "Statesman" and his insignificant underlings. It is no less false now, and there is no intelligent Republican or Democrat who knows us that gives it the slightest credit.

Nor have we, as charged by the "Statesman," been "very severe, malignantly so, on the Administration for attempting to put Lecompton through Congress." The files of our paper, and any paper with which we have been connected, will show the utter groundlessness of the charge. The "Statesman" falsely alleges that—

The "Press" expects by its constant abuse of Mr. Buchanan and its praise of Judge Douglas to array the friends of the former against those of the latter, and that way render a service to the Republican party.

This is not the expectation of the PRESS, as its columns will sufficiently indicate. It is not even believed by the unscrupulous KNAVE and LIAR who uttered it. In August last, when Mr. DOUGLAS was contending in a hand-to-hand fight with the Republicans and "the minions of power," as the "Statesman" graphically describes the office-holders of Illinois, we gave him all the aid in our power, by deprecating the suicidal course of the self-styled Democrats of Illinois, who sought his sacrifice even at the expense of electing a truculent and implacable foe to the Democratic party, and when the craven "Statesman" "said never a word."

The "Statesman" intimates that the PRESS is not countenanced by the friends of Mr. DOUGLAS in Ohio. It is not, nor would we have it countenanced by such friends of Mr. DOUGLAS as the "Statesman," whose columns are kept in duress by government patronage. We have the satisfaction to know that the PRESS is regarded by Mr. DOUGLAS himself as an able [illegible], and its editor is ranked among his personal friends.

We understand the tactics of the "Statesman." With the facile versatility of the Vicar of Bray, it is ready to change the color of its badge to suit who may be in the ascendant. If the seal of the government were off its lips it might be clamorous still for DOUGLAS and Popular Sovereignty; and if Mr. DOUGLAS's chances were gone beyond redemption, it would not move a step to prevent him from receiving his political death-warrant.

We owe an apology to our readers for transgressing upon their patience. The necessity of reply to the "Statesman" will be apparent on a moment's reflection. We sought no controversy with that paper. It is of its own choosing. It regarded our undertaking with jealousy, and no one knows the mean, petty, cowardly efforts that its proprietors have made, like moles underground, to retard the advancement of the PEOPLE'S PRESS. We might have passed along in our unobtrusive way, without "hitching horns" as we have been forced to do, but our patience is not of the stern stuff, that will endure to have a wrong "rubbed in." We look to a generous and chivalrous people to reward our labors, and increase the circulation of our paper, and we pledge them fidelity and honesty in the maintenance of their best interests.

The Republican Ticket.

The Convention which met yesterday was large, and notwithstanding some differences, very animated and we may say harmonious—for upon one idea, they seemed to come all together and harmonize most vociferously. There were conflicting elements in the Convention, but they were made to subside, by the all pervading and all-controlling superior power of the one common shibboleth. Like the word "Democracy" with their opponents, "Anti-slavery" will quiet down the most obstreperous. The sounding phrases of "slavery" and "freedom" formed the staple of the resolutions, and of every speech, and prevented a decided and material split, which was apprehended would take place, especially on the nomination of the Judge of the Supreme Court.

The Convention was, as we anticipated, very noisy, not to say clamorous. The oppressive atmosphere was intolerable, and we were not astonished that men grew restive when they could not make themselves heard through its thick and almost impenetrable consistency, reverberating with the echoes of many voices speaking at the same time.

Mr. DENNISON, of Franklin, was nominated on the first ballot almost by acclamation. It was a high compliment, and could not have been bestowed upon a more amiable and dignified gentleman. Mr. DENNISON yields the more conservative and national principles that distinguished the Whig party of which he was a member, to the demands of the "Free soil" wing, which is ultra on the subject of slavery. He will if elected subserve the purpose of continuing the administration of Gov. CHASE, and keeping together the Republican party. The power of the Northern section was visible throughout the proceedings yesterday, and in nothing more than the grandiloquent defence of freedom from the vandalism of "the slave power," by Mr. DENNISON. It is the strong element in the party, and everything else must give way when it assumes the lead.

For Lieut. Governor, Hon. R. C. KIRK, of KNOX, was chosen on the third ballot, his chief competitor being Hon. Wm. SLADE, of Cuyahoga. Mr. KIRK was formerly a Democrat, but contends that the party was not progressive enough for him. He is a gentleman of easy carriage, makes a good impression, is a fluent speaker, and not a little hasty. He will have a warm time, if he and his competitor should encounter each other in the campaign.

For Judge of the Supreme court, WM. Y. GHOLSON, of Cincinnati, was nominated. This was the cause of serious difficulty in the Convention before assembling. The Reserve were down upon Judge SWAN for his recent decision, and must be propitiated. They went in a body against him, and coalescing with the Southern delegates finished him on the first ballot. They would take anybody rather than one so fresh from deciding the constitutionality of the Fugitive slave law, and they took Mr. GHOLSON, a man of talent, of unexceptionable character, and eminent as a jurist, but who had he been on the bench would have found himself compelled to pronounce an opinion similar to Judge SWAN's, and whose views on the question do not materially differ from those of the latter.

For Auditor, the nomination of R. W. TAYLOR, better known as "TAYLOR of Mahoning," could not have been bettered. Distinguished as he is for general information and close observation, he is especially regarded, and properly so, as acquainted with the business of finance. A gentleman, an experienced financier, a deep-thinker and strong reasoner, the State will have no reason to regret his election, should his ticket prevail. Neither detraction nor sarcasm can reach him. He is beyond short weapons such as the Statesman has thrown at him, and can laugh such ridiculous thrusts to scorn. There is not a man in Ohio better qualified for the office of Auditor than R. M. TAYLOR, and we regard his nomination as unquestionably the strongest on the ticket.

For Treasurer, Hon. A. P. STONE was re-nominated without serious opposition. The fact is, that after Judge SWAN was disposed of, there was no longer any difficulty respecting other incumbents, or in Franklin county monopolizing the nominations.

For Secretary of State, Hon. A. P. RUSSELL had no opposition; and was nominated by acclamation—those who had been proposed having insisted on being withdrawn. Mr. RUSSELL has entitled himself to the consideration of his party by his faithful discharge of the duties of his office, and the uniform amenity and urbanity of his deportment. He is a partisan, fixed and immoveable, but there is a placidity in his temperament, and a geniality that render him popular.

The "Muskrats" made a desperate effort to carry the nomination for member of the Board of Public Works, but did not succeed. The large towns on the canals, such as Zanesville, Newark, Cleveland, &c., were for Chapin, but Cincinnati stood out against him. Mr. Gregory has been an engineer, under the present Board, has experience, and, a good sign, is popular in Scioto where is his home. The "muskrats" died hard and it was not until the third ballot that they had to cave.

For Commissioner of Schools, Rev. Anson Smythe, the present incumbent, was re-nominated without any trouble; a compliment from his party to which he was entitled by attending sedulously to the duties of the office, and discharging them, if not to entire satisfaction, at least to the satisfaction of his Republican friends.

We regard the ticket as a strong one—one not to be set down as unworthy of the most serious attention of their competitors. The men are competent to the stations to which they have been nominated, and are calculated to inspire their enthusiasm, wherever they display the Republican banner.

PRESSED INTO WAR SERVICE.—The Indianapolis Journal says that Mr. FREDERICK RUSCH, of that city, a well known and prosperous produce dealer, who went to Europe some six or eight weeks since, on a visit to his old home and friends, was immediately claimed as a conscript, forced into the army, and is now held there to serve his three years as a Prussian soldier.

Senator Douglas's Position.

MESSRS. EDITORS OF THE NATIONAL INTELLIGENCER:—I perceive in your journal of the date that you have copied from the "Constitution" an authoritative contradiction of the statement of the Washington correspondent of the Charleston "Mercury," that a friendly meeting had taken place between President Buchanan and Senator Douglas, with a view to bring about a union in good earnest of the two wings of the Democracy, taking sides respectively with those two distinguished individuals. The official announcement which you have copied denying the meeting on the part of President Buchanan is literally true. Senator Douglas, on his arrival here from the North, and on the eve of his leaving for New Orleans, authorized the writer of this note to deny to every body, or through any journal, the report that he had had any meeting with President Buchanan. He declared that he repudiated and denounced all propositions for a compromise by which he would have to concede an iota of the principles he had all along avowed.

WASHINGTON, May 27, 1859. JUSTICE.

It will be seen from the foregoing that we did not err when we claimed for Mr. DOUGLAS a firm, steadfast, unwavering, unfaltering adherence to his principles, and regarded the reports which had been industriously circulated, that he had held an interview with the President, at which those principles were compromised, as mere fabrications for sinister or [illegible] purposes. We knew Mr. DOUGLAS too well, to believe for a moment that he would descend to any compromise of principle. He had refused all overtures of compromise when the effort was made to introduce Kansas as a State, under a Constitution to which a majority of the people of the territory objected. He had refused to compromise when "Lecompton" was effectually killed, and its shadow or the shadow of something, was presented in the shape of the English Conference bill.

He had refused to compromise the great principle of "Popular Sovereignty and Congressional non-intervention," but bore it inscribed on his banner, through the victorious fields of Illinois. He could not compromise. It was the Democratic Platform, on which he had stood, on which we had all stood, in 1856, and upon which he stands and will stand, and the Democratic party is bound to stand, in 1860.

No Democrat would think of compromising that principle. It is the heart and soul and life of the Democratic creed. It cannot be torn away by strong hands, it cannot be frittered away by weak ones. There it is—an emanation from the genius and patriotism of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, that will be co-existent with our Union; and when it falls, if fall it must, there will be nothing left of the Democratic party, and little of the Union, to be preserved.

MR. TOMLINSON.—It will be seen from the extract we give from a private letter from Southern Ohio, written by a friend in whose judgment and discrimination we have the fullest confidence, that the choice of the Democratic State Convention for candidate for member of the Board of Public Works is most fortunate. Not being personally acquainted with Mr. TOMLINSON, we are happy to have it in our power to place him before the Democracy with an endorsement, which we are ready to accept as our own. We know our correspondent would not so speak, if Mr. TOMLINSON were anything else but a "first-class man," and entitled to all the encomium which is paid him.

ST. LOUIS CORRESPONDENCE.—We are gratified with the promise of our St. Louis friend "W. C.," whose first letter we publish to-day. Although we do not agree as to men, in the desire for the nomination of Mr. DOUGLAS, to which, being a devoted supporter of the Administration, he is adverse, we shall receive his communications with pleasure, as emanations from a close observer, and the "jottings down" of one of the best fellows in the world. Many a day have we driven the quill side by side, and it affords us lively satisfaction to be so remembered by one whom we have not met for nearly a decade.

Fanaticism Flourishing.

The days of fanaticism in this country are about numbered; and we can safely permit every politician who is out of business and opposed to manual labor, to engage in his normal vocation—that of harmlessly "saving" or destroying the Union of the States.—Cincinnati Times.

The Cincinnati Times may proclaim this, and it may suit its peculiar politics to do so; but it is very far from being correct. "Fanaticism" rather than "Opposition" was the predominant sentiment in the late Republican Convention. We were told of what TOM CORWIN was going to do, but up to 10 o'clock P. M. he did nothing; and "Old Gid" congratulated the "Prodigal" on his return, and promised to kill the fatted calf for him. We have heard that Mr. CORWIN disclaimed the fraternization which put GIDDINGS into such good humor, and made him deaf to all entreaties to quit speaking. His speech at the Capitol steps about half past 10 or 11 o'clock, is said to have been very fine, and quite national, but in the hall, he was interrupted and not permitted to proceed far enough to number the days of fanaticism! —

We regard the position of fanaticism in Ohio, stronger this day, than it has ever been. When such men as TOM CORWIN can fraternize with such men as JOSHUA R. GIDDINGS, there is danger.

The chagrin and mortification which must have been experienced by those friends of Judge SWAN, who have reason and nationality left, were but as a few drops compared to the welling fount of fanaticism which overwhelmed the Convention. That Judge SWAN should be set aside was natural enough—for the unconstitutionality of the Fugitive Slave law and the right to have the writ of habeas corpus to involve the whole matter decided and open anew the merits of the controversy, were the sole thunder they possessed—their whole stock in trade, and notwithstanding he had given the highest evidence of possessing every element that could ornament the bench, Judge SWAN's decision was too fresh in their memories, and if re-elected, the question would be at an end during his term. This would look like ignoring their creed. We say therefore it was natural to set aside Judge SWAN, and we shall be surprised if that portion of the Republican party which felt momentary dissatisfaction, do not quietly dismiss their exhibition of temper, and find themselves supporting the whole ticket with their customary vigor and enthusiasm.

BETTING ON THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.—The New York Sun of yesterday says that bets have been made in that city upon the issue of the next Presidential election. One gentleman has made the following bets: $1,000 that DOUGLAS will be the Democratic candidate; $1,000 that SEWARD will be the Republican candidate; $1,000 that the Americans and Whigs will nominate a third candidate; $1,000 that if DOUGLAS be nominated he will be elected, $1000 that if nominated he will carry the following States: New Hampshire, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Iowa, Indiana, and Illinois. We are also informed (says the Sun) that a man is willing to bet $10,000 that if DOUGLAS is nominated at Charleston, he will carry every Southern State except Maryland.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER CASE.—The body of a man was found the other day under the high bank on the Canada side of the river at Niagara Falls, where it had probably fallen one hundred feet or more from the top of the precipice.—It proved to be the body of OGLEN OLSON, clerk in the Grand Trunk Railway Office, at Toronto, who came to the Falls on the 24th to celebrate the Queen's birth day. GEORGE READ, a porter at the Table Rock House with whom he was last seen has been arrested. He had the clothing worn by the dead man, and the corpse was dressed in READ's clothing.

Judge Swan's Opinion.

[illegible]

Our readers will find on the first page in full of the week's variety, the Decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio, pronounced by Judge J. R. SWAN, which has given rise to so much comment, and was the vital cause of his defeat before the Republican Convention for a nomination for re-election. It is a chapter in Ohio history, that will stand out in bold relief when all the persons on the stage of action shall have passed away. It is calm, dignified, and conclusive. If our government is to last, it must stand upon such pillars as this opinion. There is no reason can resist its earnest and logical argument—no prejudice that can run counter to its conclusions.—It is a proud monument of the retiring Jurist, and will live imperishable in the annals of his country. It crowns the sustained ermine of Justice with a wreath of perennial glory. Massive, piled up each above each, it is impregnable in its strength and towering in its simple, unadorned symmetry. It is the law of the land, and when it is not,

"Chaos is come again."

It is so plain, so transparent, that no one can doubt or be mistaken. It addresses itself to the strongest and the weakest. It deals in no metaphysical mystery, but is a practical illustration of the operation of our government, that cannot be too deeply pondered, and whenever the mind is in doubt let it recur to the unmistakable principles and reasoning set forth by Judge SWAN, and everything will be as direct as a straight-edge.

The Republican party had a perfect right to ignore a man who had the patriotism, learning and character to give such an opinion. That fact neither diminishes the power of the opinion, or weakens confidence in Judge SWAN. He rose superior to all personal and party considerations in pronouncing the opinion; and we desire to express our admiration of his conduct on the occasion, not as a partisan, anxious to make the adverse party, appear ignominious in its puny revenge, but as a fellow-citizen, proud that there are men, even in the Republican party, who regard their country and its peace and happiness, far above elevation to office and the popularity of the hour, one of whom is Judge SWAN. A more grand and touching illustration of the pain it inspired, in the performance of his duty, to go clearly point out the wrong-doing of his party, could not have been presented than the closing sentence.

It should be written in letters of light on every heart, and hand the name of SWAN down to immortality.

American Movement.

The American Association, a very small remnant of the once powerful party in Cincinnati, had a meeting last night to take into consideration the action of the Republican Convention, when a preamble and resolution were submitted excepting to the repudiation of Judge SWAN, and to the Republican platform which is "regarded as a direct thrust made at the American party." PEABODY POOR said that the Americans were 5,000 strong in the State, and could elect or defeat whom they pleased.

Mr. MARTIN was very near the truth when he said he thought that the remarks of the members placed the Association in an unpleasant position—that of selling itself to the party which should bid the highest." It looks very much that way. The preamble and resolution were adopted, and the Americans will meet on the 9th, "to consider and adopt the proper course of action in this matter."

There is some trouble brewing in the camp. We shall soon learn what it is. The Cincinnati Times pulls back! According to the Commercial the Times had stated that it will not support the ticket and platform.

The Territorial question and the power of Congress over the territories, and popular sovereignty, or the right of the people to mould their own institutions, is in both aspects entirely ignored, and in lieu thereof a war is made on the Supreme Court of the United States as at present organized, and the repeal of the Fugitive slave law is substituted.—Statesman.

That singular verb "is" has a mighty load to bear considering the diminutive proportions of the monosyllable. Besides, the transparency of the meaning of the sentence is astonishing. It is quite as clear as mud. "In lieu thereof a war is made on the Supreme court of the United States, as at present organized, and the repeal of the Fugitive slave law is substituted." "Substituted" for what? For the war made on the Supreme court, or the Supreme court itself, or the territorial question, the power of Congress over the territories, popular sovereignty, or what? If the first of the Republican decalogue is obscure to the Commercial, what must be the leader in the Statesman of which the extract is a "brick?" Heaven forfend that we should follow such a leader! He may suit those who do not know any better, but are they safe? Had not brother Allen better send them all to school?

THE SLAVE-TRADE MOVEMENT.—We perceive by our Southern exchanges that an association has been formed at Vicksburgh, the real object of which is to promote the revival of the African Slave Trade. The following is a copy of the Constitution:—

1. The object of the African shall be to promote the supply of African slave labor.
2. The officers of the Association shall be a President, seven Vice-Presidents one or more Secretaries, and a Treasurer to serve three years.
3. The Association shall meet at least once annually, and at such place as the Association may order.
4. The members of the Association shall be the undersigned, and all citizens delegated by any public meeting, governor, town council or Mayor, and in favor of the African labor supply.

The Hon. J. B. De Bow has been elected President, and Mr. L. W. Spratt has been appointed to deliver an oration.

But we are assured by those who know Dr. Kirk well, that he is a gentleman of good personal appearance, but without any brains, whatever.—Statesman.

"The times have been
That when the brains were out the man would die,
And there an end."

The Cincinnati Gazette had admonished the Convention that Mr. Smyth was not a suitable man, and charged that there was some of his official acts, to which we will have occasion hereafter to refer, which were not consistent with honesty and fairness.—Statesman.

"There was some of his official acts, to which we will have occasion hereafter to refer." Mr. SMYTH will doubtless be better pleased if such reference be in grammatical language; for it must grate upon a practised ear, this butchery of our vernacular.

☞ Speaking of Mr. DENNISON the Statesman says:

"He is an agreeable gentleman, with very moderate talents and destitute of the necessary force of character requisite for the Chief Executive Officer of the State. It is rare, we think, that any man's name has been connected with the office of Governor who presents so few proper traits of character for the station."

Does not this come with excellent grace from GEO. W. MANYPENNY, who flattered himself that he was just the thing two years since, for Governor, and would not have been averse to a similar distinction at this time, which he might have attained but for the officious intermeddling of the Cincinnati Commercial.

Mr. Dennison is one of those who has been salaried by Railroads for a number of years.—Statesman.

"Those" "has" been salaried! Where is the Schoolmaster?

Prima facie this would be evidence of qualification.—Statesman.

Prima facie, the schoolmaster is somewhere else.

☞ The Mercer County, Pa., Whig is out in an article favoring the nomination of Hon. JOHN M'LEAN of this State for the Presidency in 1860.

Mr. Douglas's Speech and Appendix.

The extracts in the appendix to Mr. DOUGLAS's great speech on Popular Sovereignty, and non-intervention by Congress in the domestic affairs of the Territories, are concluded to-day. The speech and appendix have been published complete, in the five numbers of this paper. Persons subscribing for the PEOPLE'S PRESS can be supplied with the back numbers.

To those who desire a full knowledge of what constitutes Popular Sovereignty as it was understood in 1856 by leading Democrats from all sections of the Union, we unhesitatingly say that they will find here a mass of opinion, furnishing incontrovertible testimony which cannot be obtained elsewhere without ransacking the voluminous pages of the Congressional Globe and Public Documents that are not accessible to all.

This last instalment, which we give in this week's PRESS, comprises the views of Hons. Moses Norris, Jr., of New Hampshire; J. B. Weller, of California; Wm. H. English, of Indiana; M. Macdonald, of Maine; J. R. Thomson, of New Jersey; R. Brodhead and Wm. Bigler, of Pennsylvania; L. O'B. Branch, of North Carolina; and Harry Hibbard, of New Hampshire, as well as Mr. Douglas's Report of the Senate Committee on Territories, March 12, 1856, the Cincinnati Democratic Platform, and Mr. Buchanan himself, in his letter of acceptance, June 16, 1856.

Nobody can rise from a perusal of these extracts, with a remaining doubt as to the true meaning, in its length, breadth and depth, of what constitutes Popular Sovereignty,—that in the language of Mr. Buchanan, "the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."

This is precisely the ground occupied by Mr. Douglas, from which he cannot be persuaded, and never can be driven. It is a principle ratified by the people in the election of Mr. Buchanan in 1856. It is a principle that any man can bring home to his own heart, and which he will guard and cherish as the true basis of American freedom. No man who ignores it—who does not fully endorse it, and whose record does not sustain it, can be President in 1860.

EPIGRAM.

[illegible]

Although the two "extremes" rejoice,
Here indignation has a voice,
To build a hope upon;
That such mistake should be incurr'd,
Decapitating the wrong bird—
An Eagle, not a SWAN.

DEATH OF CHARLES ROBERT LESLIE.—This eminent artist, brother of Miss Leslie, the novelist, died in London on the 5th ult. He was born in that city, of American parents, October 19, 1794. He learned the rudiments of his art from Sully, was at one time Professor of Drawing at West Point, but spent most of his time abroad. His first oil painting was "William of Deloraine," from Scott's Lay of the Last Minstrel. Among his best pictures are "Ann Page and Slender," "Visit of Lady Blarney and Miss Skeggs," "May Day in the reign of Elizabeth," "Touchstone and Audrey," and "Reading the Will." His parents were from Maryland, but afterwards resided in Philadelphia.

☞ The Urbana "Citizen and Gazette" speaks out boldly and squarely in favor of the Massachusetts amendment requiring foreigners to pass a noviciate of two years, after naturalization, before entitled to the right of suffrage; and hopes that the Republican party will follow the example, which it thinks that party certainly will do if they have the power. We like the candor of the "Citizen and Gazette," but hardly think it will be palatable with the Ohio Republicans generally, who do not wish to squarely endorse the Massachusetts movement.

The dropping of Judge Swan, by the Republicans, ought to, and probably will cost the party and the ticket thousands of votes. "Better be right than be President," is probably Judge Swan's motto. It is a good one at any rate.—Toledo Times.

So speaks a paper that is entirely independent of partisan influence. If the result shall show that this effort to punish a Judge for performing his duty, will cost the party and the ticket thousands of votes, it is very easy to calculate where that party will be in October. If the election two years ago be a fair criterion, the Republican party cannot afford to count its losses by "thousands." The majority of Gov. CHASE was so meagre that anything like union in Hamilton county would have left him in the rear; and the prospect now is, that the chances are not more flattering to the Republican ticket than the candidates themselves and their advisers like to contemplate.

AFTER A PRESIDENT.—The trip of Horace Greely is accounted for, that he is in search of a candidate for the Presidency who has no antecedents. The act of Fremont in 1856, a man so little known, and whose political history was next to nothing, has inspired him with the idea that if he can find a man whom nobody knows and for whom nobody cares, that he can unite all the heterogeneous elements of opposition to the Democratic party, and win for them the political battle to be fought in 1860. This appears the more plausible, when the TRIBUNE is not particular as to what shall comprise the "Opposition," or who shall be the man.

THE FROST.—The ravages of the frost on Sunday morning last have been extremely disastrous. From every section of the country, the most serious apprehensions seem to have been realized. The wheat crop has suffered everywhere, and in some localities has been almost destroyed. The fruit, especially grapes, which is an important crop, has been sadly injured. The frost was very general, and the extent of the loss incurred cannot be estimated. They will be fortunate who are left the melancholy contemplation of half a crop, or even one third. The 5th of June will be memorable as a disastrous day.

☞ Senator Douglas arrived at Chicago on Monday.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.—We hear of many parties forming to be present at the great fete of "the opening" of this magnificent resort. If the weather prove propitious the assemblage will be brilliant, as the portals are thrown open to the whole country. As the appearances are fair this morning, with a "Promise of a goodly day," it is probable that the trains will be full from points "all along the road." The Cleveland trains will convey the excursionists to the "Station" where conveyances will await them to take any number to the Springs.

☞ The latest advices from San Antonio, Texas, represent the veteran Gen. D. E. Twiggs as being on his death-bed. San Antonio is noted for the fatality attending the Commanding Generals of that Department, and yet no local cause exists therefor. Gen. Worth died of cholera, Gen. Brooke of an old disease, and now Gen. Twiggs is likely to follow, of a disease which has troubled him at times for years past.

CITY FINANCES.—We are indebted to Jos. DOWDALL, Esq., City Clerk, for the following table of receipts and expenditures for the month ending June 6, 1859:

RECEIPTS.
Balance in Treasury, May 1	$1,[illegible]
B. Butler, Rent	75 [illegible]
do., Sales	12 [illegible]
G. McDonald, Paving on Locust Alley	[illegible]
A. Backus, " High street	[illegible]
J. V. McIlvain " "	[illegible]
J. D. Commins, [illegible] out-lot No. 23	[illegible]
Railroad—Settlement for Sewer	[illegible]
J. Rinnard, Paving on Locust Alley	11 [illegible]
M. Halm " Friend st.	[illegible]
T. S. Baldwin " Public Alley	[illegible]
Trustees Montgomery Township, Election Rent	10 00
S. Porter, Paving on Locust Alley	11 [illegible]
L. English, Fines and Licenses for May	17 [illegible]
H. Moody, Market Collections	[illegible] 71
Total	$[illegible]
DISBURSEMENTS.
First Ward improvements	$[illegible]
Second Ward improvements	[illegible]
Third Ward improvements	[illegible]
Fourth Ward improvements	176 77
Fire Department	[illegible]
City Police	[illegible]
Printing, Stationery, &c.	[illegible]
Sewers and Drainage	[illegible]
Market House, &c.	[illegible]
Cleaning Streets	[illegible]
Gas Repairs, &c.	[illegible]
Incidental Expenses	[illegible]
	$[illegible]
Amount in Treasury, June 6, 1859	$1,[illegible]

☞ President BUCHANAN had a boisterous reception at Raleigh last week. An address of welcome was delivered by the Hon. D. M. Barringer, to which the President responded briefly. He discoursed of the value of the Union, and held that the spectacle of war now visible in Europe should teach us the value of American institutions. In conclusion, he mentioned the fact that the sun of his political life was growing dim. The Secretary of the Interior, who accompanies the President, was then called out and made a speech.

Ohio Correspondence.

Extract from a private letter to the editor, from a friend in Southern Ohio:

"I think our ticket generally is well received. Especially in this part of the State, the nomination of Tomlinson is very popular. He is a first-class man, without a bit of the political Micawber about him—he is not waiting for nomination "to turn up" in his favor, but attends to his own business in a manner which gives good earnest to the public that he is honest, faithful and capable, and will not neglect the trusts which they may repose in him. Besides his high business capacity to recommend him, he is an unerring Democrat of true blood and bottom. His was a nomination fit to be made."

St. Louis Correspondence.

ST. LOUIS, May 30, 1859.

DEAR MARSHALL:—Perceiving from "the public prints" that you have entered upon a crusade in the line of an "editor errant," I have thought it not improbable that you may be glad to hear from an old friend, and professional brother, albeit our political affiliations may be slightly different.

The ordinary matters of public interest you, of course, receive by telegraph, an institution which has dealt destruction to our ancient trade of newspaper correspondence, relative to markets, murders, and execution events in general. But there remain a few sub-divisional topics which are considered either above or below the ken of the wire-pullers; and if your present correspondent can convey some extra telegraphic notions of such, the communication may not prove unwelcome.

Our little State, containing something over a million of whites, and about a hundred and ten thousand negroes, seems to be regarded as an important PAWN in the approaching conflict. The facts of our position appear to an unprejudiced observer somewhat thus: This city, in interest and association, is increasingly inclined towards the Free-Soil or Republican side. The cause is found in the fact that our merchants are connected by numerous and daily-multiplying ties with the Eastern and Northern States. Also, our German population, which casts about one-third of our aggregate vote, are advocates of "universal liberty" and equality, inclusive of Abolitionism. They are, however, much and perilously exercised in mind about the Massachusetts amendment. Our State at large, however, outside of this, our only city deserving the name, is generally southern in feeling, and attached to the sentiments of ancient, hard, Jackson Democracy. In attending, officially, the last three or four sessions of the General Assembly, I have had frequent occasion to remark the jealousy exhibited on the part of country members towards St. Louis. As a commercial city, the State is proud of us; but as a political element, we are more than suspected. Although myself a National Democrat of the Buchanan stripe, I disguise not my fears that our success of last August was a mere transient flash, while that of our opponents this spring affords a true indication of popular sympathy. But as to the Presidential election, in which, from your programme, I judge you to be chiefly interested, I venture the prediction that the electoral vote of Missouri will be cast for the Charleston nominee, "be the same more or less."

Your desire to nominate or elect Mr. Douglas may be laudable, or politic, or both; I cannot see much probability of his nomination; It is far more important to us, as a party, that we should succeed in electing our nominee, than in nominating this or that individual. Moreover, I do not write with a view to argumentative discussion.

To change the subject: Among the national events of this year will be the Fourth Agricultural and Mechanical Fair, early in September. Last year every editor was here except yourself, and I have filled a volume with their glowing accounts of the occasion. Come this time, and we will take care of you. The grounds are unsurpassed in extent, beauty, variety and artificial embellishment, not merely in this valley, but in the world. The premium list has met no competition in point of liberality in former years, and, this time, is progressive in that respect. It is seldom that political rancour conducts to such an excess of meanness as exhibited by a few persons and an obscure journal here, in the vilification of the Society, merely on account of its indefatigable President, Hon. J. Richard Barrett, having been elected to Congress by his party. The Association, and the results of its exertion, are justly regarded as a monument of energy and public spirit, of a national character, and a source of universal gratulation. In the three years of its existence its exhibitions have surpassed, according to qualified testimony, the most celebrated European efforts of similar intent, sustained as they are by imperial and regal patronage.

"Spiritism" is undergoing, for the first time within my knowledge, a thorough sifting of its claims as a system of philosophy and a new revelation of truth, at the hands of Rev. Father Smarius, S. J., formerly of Cincinnati, who is engaged in delivering a series of lectures thereon, of which the second [illegible] will be given on June 14th.

Farewell. W. C.

Fourth of July.

In our columns will be found the proceedings of a meeting held at the City Hall, to adopt measures for a good, old-fashioned, general celebration of the National Anniversary. The people of Columbus desire to unite in this demonstration of regard for a day that must be memorable in all time. A committee of ten of our prominent citizens has been appointed to make all the necessary arrangements, with full power to appoint all sub-committees and adopt such plan as will fulfill the wish to have a grand, joyous, patriotic jubilee. They want to hear the good old story repeated of their fathers' bravery and devotion to their country—a story that living they should hug to their hearts and dying they should impart to their children. They wish on that day to meet on common ground, dismissing the cares and animosities of political differences, and unite in one cordial thankfulness for the past and hope for the future.

The gentlemen comprising the Committee will call upon our citizens for such contributions as they may be inclined to bestow in furtherance of the object. We trust that they may meet with the lavish liberality the people of Columbus are wont to exhibit, and that the celebration under their guidance may be worthy of the Capital of the great State of Ohio. Let us all join in making the 4th of July, 1859, a day of general rejoicing—a day memorable in our annals as the event it commemorates is the brightest on the page of our country's history. The celebration will be on a grand scale, and the voice of "welcome" will be sounded to all the surrounding country. It will be a glad sight that, of our citizens mingling with unreserved freedom, and blending their happy voices in gratitude to the immortal heroes and statesmen who gave to the world a nation unrivalled in ancient and modern story, and solved the problem of man's capacity for self-government.

At a meeting of the citizens of Columbus, held at the City Hall on Monday evening, June 6th, Luther Donaldson, Esq., called the meeting to order, and on his motion, Theodore Comstock, Esq., was called to the Chair, and on motion of C. P. L. Butler, Esq., J. Birney Marshall was appointed Secretary.

The Chair having stated the object of the meeting to be to make preparations for a general celebration of the national anniversary,

Mr. Ewing moved the appointment of a committee of ten to make the necessary arrangements.

Mr. Donaldson moved to amend by authorizing said committee to appoint all sub-committees necessary to carry out the design of the celebration, to which no objection being raised, the motion as amended prevailed.

The Chair stated that he should require some assistance in the formation of the committee. After some delay, the following gentlemen were announced by the Chair as a General Committee of Arrangements: Messrs. Wm. Ewing, C. P. L. Butler, J. H. Riley, L. Donaldson, S. B. Ogden, H. B. Besson, Wm. Kelsey, J. R. St. Clair, Geo. Gibson and W. G. Deshler.

On motion of Mr. Marshall, the committee was instructed to appoint an orator for the occasion.

On motion of Mr. Donaldson, the Secretary was instructed to furnish the papers of the city, each, with a copy of these proceedings for publication.

On motion of Col. Geary, the meeting adjourned, to re-assemble at the City Hall, on Monday evening, June 20th, 1859, when a report from the Committee of Arrangements may be expected.

THEODORE COMSTOCK, Ch'n.
J. BIRNEY MARSHALL, Sec'y.

CITY ITEMS.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our genial friend J. M. DENIG on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "make a dash" on their visits to the Gwynne Block!

☞ Dr. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

☞ Nothing is more refreshing in warm weather than soda. If you wish the very best call at NEIL & PIER's, where they keep every thing good.

SODA FOUNTAIN.—The most beautiful fountain we have seen any where is at [illegible]'s and the Soda and Syrups are delicious.

☞ Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at RUDISILL's if you want a superior article.

☞ FARMERS' Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets is the place to procure genteel boots and shoes. They have made ours for the last two or three years.

"If music be the food of love, play on,
Give me excess of it."

The charms of MUSIC have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever wanted a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Agreeable, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

C. A. WAGNER, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be secured by constant attention. The Saloon is in "good condition," No. 21 East State Street.
may 6

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. CHITTENDEN on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

☞ ROBERTS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "JOHN" says that he don't care if putty is three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world as long as his bread.

☞ SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co's. celebrated pianos, which are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, if equaled.

GRAND PICNICS.—John Lake, Director of the Dance, has put out a programme of a series of Picnics for the month. He will erect a portable stage for dancing, which will be conveyed from place to place. The Picnics will commence next week at Goodale Park, May 26 and 27: Four Mile House 29: Shadeville 31; Dublin, June 1st; Circleville 2d, Tarlton 3d and Lancaster 4th. These will be agreeable reunions for which the expenses will be defrayed by collections.

LUNCHEON.—There is nothing that is more appetizing than luncheon at about 10 A. M., these long mornings. Schlesinger sets a fine lunch about that hour every day on State street opposite the American. He will have GREEN SEA TURTLE SOUP to-morrow, the [illegible] just received from Baltimore.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ J. E. LASHER, of the American Saloon had a beautiful silver cup presented him at Cleveland the other day; but we don't know whether for beauty, or the want of it, for keeping the best of drinks or being the best of drinkers we don't know. But he's got the cup, which may be seen at the American Saloon.

☞ FRED. BIRK is very anxious to see his friends and have a talk about European affairs. He may be found in the saloon of the United States Hotel, where for the present he regales himself with the news.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, where [illegible] MORGAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

☞ [illegible] Monthly Magazine is for sale [illegible] It is beautifully illustrated by superior wood cuts, and contains a large amount of the most interesting reading matter.

☞ E. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

☞ CHARLEY [illegible] one of the handsomest suits we have seen. [illegible] of the Spring style for summer wear [illegible]

☞ FRANK HERRICK, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ KENNEDY has the latest periodicals.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE PEOPLE'S PRESS

Received for six months at ONE DOLLAR in advance.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS

Will be sent for the campaign, to [illegible], at FIFTY CENTS for the single copy.

CAMPAIGN CLUBS

May be formed for the PRESS at the following rates:

Five Copies	$2 00
Ten "	3 50
Twenty "	6 00
Fifty "	14 00
One hundred copies	25 00

OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.

Announcement of the Proprietor for the Season of 1859.

THE OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS are situated in Delaware County, [illegible] miles north from Columbus (the capital of Ohio) on the Scioto river, 10 miles from Delaware, 6 miles from the [illegible] Station, on the Springfield, Mt. Vernon & Pittsburgh R. R., and 10 miles from Pleasant Valley or [illegible] Station, on the Columbus, Piqua & Indiana Railroad. These Springs will open for the reception of visitors

ON THE 1st DAY OF JUNE.

The improvements of 1859 have been large, enabling the proprietor to accommodate from [illegible] to six hundred guests. Among these improvements may be mentioned a large and elegant hotel, new cottage rows, additional [illegible] for amusement and recreation, extensive bath-houses, a steam laundry, &c., &c.

Upon the estate there are five Springs, four of which, the WHITE SULPHUR, the CHALYBEATE, the MAGNESIAN and the [illegible] are decidedly medicinal, whilst the fifth is remarkable for the purity of its water.

THE WHITE SULPHUR

is a bored Artesian fountain, situated near the rocky banks of the Scioto river. At the depth of [illegible] feet below the level of the Scioto, flows the remarkable stream of sulphur water which supplies this Spring. This stream was discovered some 10 years ago, by a gentleman who was boring for salt. The water, when reached, at once arose to the surface, and has ever since continued to flow, at all seasons, without change or abatement, either in quantity or volume.

MEDICINAL PROPERTIES.

For years these Springs have been highly esteemed for their medicinal properties. During the past season their reputation in this respect has been singularly confirmed. They were administered by a physician, judiciously as to quantity, time of drinking, [illegible] &c., and under this systematic plan the cures were numerous and gratifying.

THE WHITE SULPHUR WATER

is peculiarly serviceable in those disorders of the Liver and Stomach which so often afflict gentlemen who have been too closely confined to business, and persons of sedentary habits.

THE CHALYBEATE SPRINGS

are permanent tonics. Their effects upon broken-down and debilitated constitutions have been put beyond question, giving to the blood a new vitality, and to the person new life and vigor.

THE MAGNESIAN WATER

is a gentle aperient.

Invalids may rely upon every facility being furnished them which can contribute to health and comfort.

As a delightful resort during the summer months, the Ohio White Sulphur Springs have no rival in the West, and but few in the United States. The location is peculiarly healthy, [illegible] the "Cliff Limestone," a formation hundreds of feet in thickness, through which the river cuts its way, is everywhere [illegible] near the surface; the grounds of the estate are beautifully undulated, and interspersed with ravines which carry off all the superfluous water [illegible] these circumstances in connection with the altitude of the place about [illegible] feet above the level of the ocean, make the location free from malarious influences [illegible].

The Spring property consists of 200 acres of land, one hundred of which is covered by one of the most beautiful groves in Ohio. This woodland is handsomely laid off into walks and drives, one of the latter being two miles in extent.

BATHS.

Bathing here by the plan adopted, is brought into full competition with that of naturally Warm and Hot Springs. The water is heated in the bath tub by steam pipes. The heat not being raised high enough to precipitate its salts, it is by this system applied to the surface of the bather without the loss of its saline ingredients.

TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

A Telegraph Office, communicating with all parts of the country, has been established at the Springs. To be thus in connection with distant points, will be a great convenience to gentlemen who can hear from and direct their business affairs daily.

All the accessories necessary to health, pleasure and amusement, visitors can expect to find at the Ohio White Sulphur Springs, as the proprietor is determined to make it, in every particular, a first class watering place. Gratified with the liberal patronage extended last year, no effort will be spared to merit its continuance.

A livery, well stocked with horses and carriages, is attached to the Springs.

For further information, correspondence by mail, &c., address ANDREW WILSON, Jr., White Sulphur P. O., Delaware Co., O.

[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1859.

Large Meeting and Great Enthusiasm on Saturday Night—A Loss to the Republicans.

Two years ago, Judge R. B. WARDEN shook hands and said "good bye" to the Democratic party on the Dred Scott decision, from the face of which, as ignoring the legislative and popular construction of the Constitution, he dissented. Through the canvass he was an ardent and eloquent advocate of the principles and theories which his own judgment dictated. He believed them to assimilate with those of the Republican party, but two years' fellowship with that party shows him mistaken and he leaves them as a matter of course.

There are a sort of men, so loose of soul, that they cling to party no matter what it may do, whither it may go, to what it may be tending. Judge WARDEN is not one of these. He is a conscientious man, who thinks for himself and has the courage to change when convinced of error. It is no evidence of a vacillating nature and instable temperament, that a man should leave one party and join another; and finding by actual association the latter by no means unexceptionable, returns to the former. It is quite as strong an evidence in a man of intelligence, like Judge WARDEN, that he has been mistaken, and its capable of rising superior to the littleness which would shrink from the acknowledgement of error.

The meeting at City Hall on Saturday evening was large, and very enthusiastic. It was one of the very best meetings we have seen in Columbus, and for intelligence would compare well with either of the conventions held here [illegible] the week before. We shall not attempt to sketch the manly, vigorous and eloquent speech of Judge WARDEN. It was one of the very best speeches we have heard in Columbus, distinguished by vigor of thought, elegance of diction, and a glowing and heartful energy in its delivery that was echoed by the crowd, on whose hearts, every master-thought vibrated.

Judge WARDEN maintains the same opinions he did two years ago, relative to the construction given to the Constitution by the Dred Scott decision. He holds that it is in antagonism to the received construction of the Constitution, both legislative and popular. But, although this should be accepted by the Democratic party, and it be heresy, yet is that party infinitely preferable to the so-called Republican party, which, as shown by the action of the late Convention, by the mass meeting of fanatics and anarchists at Cleveland, by the course of its leaders, CHASE and GIDDINGS, is destructive of the fundamental principles of government.

Judge WARDEN's definition of liberty as distinguished from lawlessness was eminently graphic and forcible. He demonstrated that liberty was the offspring of law—that without law there can be no liberty. He animadverted with severity upon the effort to control the action of the Supreme Court by the mass Convention at Cleveland, which was countenanced by Gov. CHASE himself, who attended the Convention; addressed the Convention, co-operated with the Convention, and sought to soothe the fierceness of its apparent action, while he was fanning the flames. It was a part of his programme. GIDDINGS was only one of the instruments. The motive power, the master-influence, the directing hand sits in the Executive chair of Ohio. He not only countenanced the Western Reserve movement, but he directed the Attorney General, who was an officer of the law, who had sworn obedience to the Constitution, and was expected to protect and guard it, to argue against the Constitution by endeavoring to strike down a law enacted in conformity to one of its solemn compacts. As well might the Attorney General be directed to argue before the Supreme Court any other application for the writ of habeas corpus. He occupied a position before that Court entirely outside of his duty, and in contradistinction to the purpose of the people who invested him with office.

To follow Judge WARDEN through his able and eloquent speech, would exceed the limits of this article. He was constantly cheered. Whenever he had occasion to allude to Judge SWAN, and the sympathies of the large audience were with him, and broke out in loud applause. He showed that Judge SWAN had no alternative but to decide as he did. To have decided otherwise, would have been a dereliction of duty, a mean cowardice, a disregard of all antecedents, of which none who knew him could suspect Judge SWAN. He referred to the eminence of Judge SWAN as a jurist, and the confidence of the people of the State in his legal attainments and his character as a man. His name now more than ever was connected with the jurisprudence of Ohio. It was made a household word—it had become illustrious. It was immortalized.

"the deep damnation of his taking off,"

It will not do to disparage the effort of Judge WARDEN on Saturday evening, or pass it in contemptuous silence, as the State Journal affected to do in this morning's issue. The speech was a manly, determined, dignified review of the position of the Republican party, and its leaders, who under the guise of devotion to liberty would precipitate the country into anarchy and chaos, to subserve the purposes of individual ambition. The feeling of apprehension at the manifest tendency of the party action, as foreshadowed by the late Convention, is widespread. It is not confined to Judge WARDEN, or a few individuals. It seems that the ruthless manner in which so able and courageous Judge, possessing the largest confidence of the people, was set aside, for the simple discharge of his duty, has alarmed many of those who required some such illustration of the want of patriotism in the party, and that its vaunted attachment to freedom, was "All sound and fury, signifying nothing."

When Judge WARDEN concluded his remarks, with an allusion, personal to his own conversion, and the reason of his addressing the meeting, quoting from SHAKESPEARE,

"We must be brief, when traitors brave the field," the hall resounded with applause.

Hon. S. S. COX was called out and made a short speech, welcoming Judge WARDEN back to the Democratic party, and endorsing his sentiments. The meeting then adjourned, it being the first Democratic gun. The second will be fired at Groveport on Saturday evening next, by Gen. Jos. H. GEIGER, who will address the people on that occasion.

The Buffalo Republic states that M. BLONDIN, of the Martinetti troupe, is about crossing Niagara Falls on a tight rope. The rope on which he is to cross is sixteen hundred feet in length, and six inches in circumference, has been purchased for this feat, and is now being inspected. The feat will take place in about two weeks. The crossing is to be effected from lower end of Goat Island to a point in Canada opposite.

Blondin has been invited by subscription to perform the same feat at Rochester, over the falls of Genessee. "Some things can be done as well as others" thought SAM PATCH, and the Rochester folks had an illustration of it in poor SAM's unfortunate jump. BLONDIN too, may make a misstep, and share SAM's misfortune. The curiosity that delights in such spectacles is like that of the man who visited the zoological gardens every night to witness the man put his head in the lion's mouth. He never missed a night because his luck would cause the lion to close down on the head, the very night of his absence! However, to draw a crowd is to "the card" of hotels and business people, who find the return of their subscriptions in the profits of their custom.

President Buchanan Unwilling to be a Candidate for Re-Election.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—President Buchanan, recently, in alluding to the charge that his visit to North Carolina was with a view to a nomination for a second term, said that nothing was farther from his intention than this, and he would avail himself of the first opportunity publicly to disabuse the minds of those who suspected him of a design again to become a candidate for the Presidency.

The President may spare himself any trouble on that score. There is not the slightest intention to press him to be a candidate. If any of the fawning flatterers, who flit about him, tickle his ear with such nonsense, they laugh in their sleeves at the innocent tom-foolery to put him in a good humor. The silence bought from such papers as the Statesman, is no indication that the people are expecting the President to stand for a second term. "Rotation in office" is a Democratic principle, and it may as well be applied to the Presidency as any station of a lower grade. It is not the President who safely carries the country through the period of an Administration, but the Constitution. The Constitution is the government, and when its provisions are upheld and its principles inculcated, all moves on harmoniously and happily, and our country progresses in its high destiny no matter who is or may be President.

ROBERT C. KIRK.—It is charged that Robert C. Kirk, the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor, has been in Minnesota, speculating in real estate, for some years, and it is doubtful whether he is now a citizen of the State.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

All a mistake! Mr. Kirk has been for many years a citizen of Knox county, and for "some years" past has been one of the most thorough and whole-souled Republicans in the State.—O. S. Journal.

Why not tell the whole truth? Equivocation is beneath the dignity of a gentleman.—We heard Mr. KIRK distinctly say that he was going to Minnesota to reside. He went there for that purpose as much as did DAVID HEATON, who was elected to the Minnesota legislature, but probably did not like the hang of things, and came back to Ohio. How far he lost his citizenship, remains with him as a man of honor. If when he left Ohio it was with a view to taking up a permanent abode elsewhere, he lost his citizenship, and if he lost it by leaving the State for the purpose of residing elsewhere, he has regained it if he has conformed to the Constitutional provision for new-comers. We presume Dr. KIRK would not accept the nomination if he did not know there is no doubt as to his citizenship.

THE FIRE AT EATON.—The telegraph reports a fire at Eaton, Preble county, in this State, on Sunday morning. We copy the following list of sufferers from the Cincinnati Commercial of this morning:

Whitridge & Quinn's drug store and stock of goods destroyed. They had also received $1,000 cash per express for other parties Saturday night, and their safe was broken open and robbed of that money, and their own receipts from sales of Saturday. They were insured for $3,000.

Jacob Chambers, jeweler, dwelling and business room destroyed; household goods and jewelry saved. Insurance on building $1,000.

J. L. & C. W. Lockwood's building, occupied by Levi Gould, grocer; loss of latter in stock $700; building insured for $1,100.

Stephens & Co, dry goods merchants, saved most of their goods, but their building was burned. Their stock was insured for $4,000.

Four business houses, owned by Dr. Minor, one occupied by J. M. Hinman, two others by Dr. Minor as warehouse and clothing store, and another by B. Mikisell—loss $5,000. Dr. Minor insured for $3,000 on stock and buildings, and saved about half his goods.

J. P. Brookins & Son, druggists, lost their house and stock, valued at $3,500—insured for $1,500.

Abram V. Anter's building, occupied by C. P. Thumb—loss $1,500; no insurance.

A. A. Seibert, saddler, lost house and stock, valued at $4,000; no insurance.

Wm. Cleveland lost his dwelling and business house, valued at $2,500.

Gould lost $600 or $700 worth of stock. No insurance.

Augy's building burned, but stock mostly saved.

Day & Brother's house lost—goods saved.

Collins & Water's house destroyed, and goods saved in a damaged condition.

Chas. Becker, burned out, but saved his stock.

Mr. Ingle's store destroyed but goods saved. Preble Woolen Co. lost about $3,000. No insurance.

A number of other citizens, whose names are not mentioned, suffered trifling losses. The heat scorched the Court House so that it is well browned. The fire is attributed to incendiaries. Whitridge & Quinn received two packages of money containing $500 each Saturday night—one of Glander & Son, the other for Hall & Son, which they deposited with their own receipts in the safe. When it was taken out of the ruins it was unlocked, and all the cash, excepting $5 or $10 in change, was gone. It is supposed that the safe was robbed and the house fired for concealment of the crime.

A Paris correspondent of the Boston Post says that the Empress EUGENIE, as Regent, is said to have given great cause of uneasiness by her behaviour at the Council. She broke forth into an opinion of her own which astonished them all.—She declared the war to be unjust and wicked, expressed her conviction that it would never come to a prosperous end, and, in the midst of sobs and exclamations, betraying, by sundry appeals and passionate entreaties, immediately to cause the strife to cease, that all these ideas had been lodged in her beautiful head by no less a personage than the Archbishop of Paris, went off into a fit of mild, moist hysterics, and, sinking back in her chair, covered her face with her handkerchief and spoke no more.

Gen. SHIELDS, Senator from Minnesota, had a public reception on his arrival home at Faribault, and said in his speech:

"I made my pre-emption, as you all know, on the Faribault prairie. I paid for it with my own warrant—the warrant which I received for my services in Mexico—the only bounty which I ever received from the government of the United States for those services. And I will venture to say that I am the first General of the United States Army who ever made his own pre-emption with his own warrant. Now this, I think, is a home to be proud of—a home which I hold sacred because I purchased it with my blood."

THE TURF.—A week's racing on the Fashion Course, Long Island, commenced on Friday. The Jamaica stakes for three years old was won by Pauline. Time, 1:53-1:50. The Jockey Club handicap was won by Bill Cheatham, one mile and a half, in 2:45. The two mile race was won by Bill Dearing in 3:45½. In the last race only one heat. R. I. Walker, the contending horse, broke down and was withdrawn.

The advices by the steamship America were received at New York before ten o'clock yesterday morning. Having traversed 1,700 miles in advance of time. The messages were not placed in the New York office until after ten o'clock.

COUNTERFEITS.—Amongst the many counterfeits now in circulation we notice one in the Forest City Bank, Cleveland, Ohio—10's. Vignette, six females and four males on left end; imitation of genuine. Better refuse all bills having this vignette; they being made to represent several Ohio Banks.

The attendance at the funeral of JOSEPH CHARLESS at St. Louis yesterday was larger than at any other in that city since that of Col. BENTON. Nearly all of the vast concourse followed his remains to the Cemetery.

Hon. JOSHUA R. GIDDINGS will deliver the annual address before the Literary Societies of Otterbein, Westerville, on the afternoon on Tuesday, the 21st inst.

The election in Lexington, Ky., yesterday, resulted in the success of the People's candidate for Mayor.

State Items.

— An inebriate Irishman, named Cassiday, was found dead near Springfield on Monday.

Rev. Mr. Barr, a Presbyterian clergyman, died after a short illness at Springfield on Sunday.

— In a row at Springfield, on Saturday night, one of the participants, named Rankin, had his nose blown off by a pistol shot.

— A man named Ephraim Thayer, a marble-cutter was mortally stabbed at Massillon on Saturday night. He died on Monday.

— The Springfield News and Journal, speaking of the frost of Saturday night, says: We are inclined to think that the wheat, which is doing nobly in all other respects, has escaped injury from the frost, and as corn, potatoes and garden vegetables can be re-planted no great damage will result.

— The Sandusky Register, June 7, says: The frost of Saturday night was not very severe in the immediate vicinity of this place, but in the country some nine miles east and south of this it was quite destructive to fruit and the growing corn. It is feared the wheat crop is materially injured.

— A boy named Henry Westrop was drowned in the Canal at Toledo on Thursday.

— A young man aged 21 years, son of Moses Recker, of Carroll township, Ottawa county, was killed on Saturday of last week, while passing through the woods, by the falling of a decayed limb from a tree, which crushed him instantly to death.

— A fire occurred in Port Clinton, Ottawa county, on Friday night last, which consumed a large steam saw mill belonging to Scott & Reynolds. A son of the former, aged about 14 years, was so badly burned that his recovery is considered doubtful. The loss is estimated at about $8,000.

— The stabling attached to the Clinton House at Portsmouth was set on fire on Friday night by a lunatic named Mary Booker. For some time a number of business houses in the vicinity were in imminent danger of being destroyed, but the flames were fortunately subdued before any valuable property was consumed.

HARVEST PROSPECTS IN CANADA.—From all part of the Province the accounts agree that the prospect of a good harvest is as good as possible. Perhaps, leaving aside any question about the fly, it was never so good before, in the first week in June. The wheat received no injury from frost or winter-killing, and there could not possibly have been a more favorable Spring than which that followed. The cool, dry weather, with however just enough of moisture, was precisely the thing for the fall wheat. Whether it will escape the fly is a question on which a great deal depends. And it is a question which nobody is able to answer at present, for the crop is not far enough advanced to render it possible to detect the presence of the fly.—Toronto Leader.

The cruel imposition of reckless speculators upon the credulous, and the suffering that resulted to thousands of Pike's Peak gold hunters, induces the New York Herald to suggest that the Government shall hereafter take some measures calculated to prevent the public being cheated by false stories of gold discoveries. It suggests that the Government direct some of its engineers or army officers to proceed to any place where gold discoveries are alleged to have been made, make a geological survey of the vicinity, and furnish a plain, intelligible report of its mineral and agricultural resources. That report should be immediately made public, so that our citizens might have reliable information on which to act. The expense would be insignificant, while the benefits to the public would be inestimable. We hope that this plan will be adopted, and believe that if it be, such a swindle as that of Pike's Peak can never be successfully repeated.

THE MYSTERIOUS CHESS PLAYER.—The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Mercury, in a notice of Morphy, the great chess player, says a queer incident occurred to him soon after his arrival in New York. A carriage drove to the St. Nicholas, in which was seated a splendidly dressed lady. She sent up a card, and requested an interview with the chess champion. The interview was granted, when the fair visitor demanded the privilege of playing a game with Mr. Morphy. Mr. M. looked at the magnificent eyes of the stranger, and said, "Yes; certainly." The chess table was brought to the window, and Mr. Morphy placed the men. The lady, of course, was permitted the first move. Half a dozen moves were made on either side, and Morphy found himself interested—his visitor promised to prove the most formidable antagonist he had had for a long time. Being absorbed in the game, Morphy directed the servant to admit no one else until it was completed. The game lasted two hours, and was drawn. The lady was then satisfied, and blushingly took her leave, Morphy himself accompanying her to her carriage. The moment she had gone, Morphy and his friends set to work to ascertain the identity of the beautiful visitor, not doubting that the name upon her card could be found in the directory. This, however, proved to be a mistake, and though every endeavor was made to ascertain precisely who was the visitor, the gentlemen are as much in the dark as ever. Whoever she may be, she played the best game in which Morphy was ever a contestant, and she probably adopted these means of matching herself with Morphy in order to assure herself of her own skill.

Fourth of July.

The proceedings of the General Committee of Arrangements will be found in our paper. They are acting with energy, and are determined to have a magnificent celebration—a State celebration—and will have the Park fitted up conveniently for the accommodation of thousands and tens of thousands. The right spirit is displayed. We shall have a real, old-fashioned, patriotic celebration.

At a meeting of the General Committee held at the American Hotel, on Tuesday evening, June 7th, pursuant to adjournment, the proceedings were as follow:

Maj. Wm. Ewing in the chair.

On motion of C. P. L. Butler, H. B. Beeson was appointed Secretary.

On motion of Wm. G. Deshler, the names of Peter Ambos, Theodore Comstock and Jacob Reinhard were added to the Committee.

On motion the committee was subdivided as follows:

On Invitations—Capt. Jos. Riley, Peter Ambos, George Gibson and Major Wm. Ewing.

Music—J. E. St. Clair, Wm. Ewing and H. B. Beeson.

Finance—1st Ward, S. E. Ogden; 2nd Ward, Luther Donaldson; 3d Ward, C. P. L. Butler; 4th Ward, J. E. St. Clair; 5th Ward, Jacob Reinhard.

To Procure an Orator—Luther Donaldson, Wm. Kelsey, W. G. Deshler and J. E. St. Clair.

On Park—Theo. Comstock and Geo. Gibson.

On motion of L. Donaldson, C. P. L. Butler was elected Treasurer.

On motion of Mr. Deshler, the committee adjourned to re-assemble upon the call of the President.

WM. EWING, Pres't.

H. B. BEESON, Sec'y.

THE RECALL OF SANTA ANNA—Will He Go?—A correspondent of the New York Times writes from the City of Mexico as follows:

Don Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, the acknowledged greatest rogue of Mexican birth, has by decree been restored to his grade in the army, and to his titles and the booty he invested (in a silly moment) in real estate in his native country. The question is now: Will he come? Some say, no—many say, yes. Certain it is, a strong invitation has been sent to him, and the greater part of Miramon's army—officers, soldiers and drummers—are prepared to shout for the tenth time, "Que viva el General Santa Anna!" notwithstanding they have ten times shouted, "Que muera el General Santa Anna!" But this is one of the things that Mexican men and women are addicted to—fickleness—it might be called by a harder word.

At the Louisiana Democratic State Convention, held at Baton Rouge; Thos. O. Moore, of Rapides, received the nomination for Governor, and P. Hardy, of St. Landry, Lieut. Governor.

Mrs. Rosa Vertner Johnson, Vice Regent of Kentucky for the "Mount Vernon Fund," has forwarded to the Treasurer the sum of $4,200, as the contribution of Kentucky, up to the present time, to the purposes of the Association.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

SACKVILLE, June 4.—The America left Liverpool at 11:30 A. M. of the 21st. Among her passengers is Gen. Williams, of Kars, Commander-in-Chief in Canada.

A dispatch dated Pavia, 19th, says the headquarters of the Austrians has been removed to Garlasco. Great movements have taken place, and a collision is expected to-day or to-morrow. Rumors in another quarter state that a battle is considered imminent, but the London Times considers it almost certain that June will have begun before any great blow will be struck.

ALESSANDRIA, 17.—The Emperor went to Valenza yesterday to view a portion of the van-guard and the course of the Po. He visited the King of Sardinia.

ALESSANDRIA, 18.—The organization of the army is going on actively. Repairs to damages by the Austrians to roads, bridges and railroads are approaching completion. It was expected that the Austrians would remain inactive until the Emperor reached head-quarters to assume the command.

The Liverpool Post publishes, on what it calls reliable information, that the passage of the Ticino by the French troops will be the signal for an European alliance against France, and for the Austrian troops to march on Paris.

The bulletins from the seat of war are unimportant, as all the channels to the Venetian capital are blocked up, and all the ports on the Adriatic are blockaded by French squadrons.

The elections in England for members of the House of Commons were concluded, and the ministerial papers claim that the Derby party has gained an addition of 28 members.

The Overland mail from India supplies Bombay dates to the 26th of April.

CHINA.—The death of the former Chinese Commissioner, Yeh, is announced.

THE WAR.

Prior to the retreat from Vercelli, the Austrians continued their exactions on the inhabitants, filling them with consternation, as they were not in a condition to satisfy the demands. During the night of the 17th, a party of one hundred Austrians escaladed the bridge at Valenza through a breach, and made a fruitless attempt to take it.

The official Sardinian Bulletin says that the Austrians occupy the right bank of the Po, as far as the castle of San Giovane, with 12,000 troops. The fortifications on the bridge at Stella for the purpose of protecting the retreat of the Austrians are continued. An order of the day published by the King of Sardinia gives the names of those who signalized themselves in the first military operations.

TURIN, May 19.—Yesterday several detachments of Austrians advanced to Caprices, near Songermoned, driving off the cattle and firing at the peasants. Our troops awaited the enemy at San Germano, but they withdrew to Vercelli, which they this morning evacuated after blowing up two arches of the bridge on the Sesia.

THE LATEST BY TELEGRAPH TO LIVERPOOL.

LONDON, Saturday.—The Times' article, under date of last evening, says that complete stagnation continues in the stock exchange—the scarcity of stock having been somewhat relieved, prices closed about one-eighth lower. The discount market is dull, good bills of two or three months being discounted at 3½ to 4 per cent. Gold continues to be taken from the bank for export. The bills of Sebastopol & Sons, a Greek firm in London, were yesterday returned. They were engaged in the foreign cork trade. Their liabilities are not large. A fair business has been done at the bank, chiefly with regular customers.

The banking house of Troemell & Co., at Augsburg, has failed. The Bank of Thuringia has also suspended, owing it is said, to the flight of its manager.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET.—Richardson & Co. report that the breadstuffs market opened on the week with an advancing tendency, and all qualities were better, but subsequently flour fell 3d@4d, the market closing dull at 11@14s 6d. Wheat also fell 4d. Western red 8s@10s 9d; western white 10s 6d. Corn steady; mixed 6s 8d@6s 11d; yellow 6s 10d; yellow 6s 10d@7s 3d; white 8s@8s 9d.

The weather has been favorable for the crops. Bigland & Athias' circular says flour has declined 6d since Tuesday.

LONDON MARKET.—Wheat buoyant, and prices advanced 2@4d, but the market closed dull. Sugar heavy and 6d lower.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, May 20.—The money market is slightly easier. The bullion in the Bank of England has increased £154,800 during the week.

Further by the America.

SACKVILLE, N. B., June 3.—It is reported that Gen'l. Gulay had sent word to the Austrian government that the supply of provisions were beginning to fail in Piedmont and that he would be unable to retain the position he occupied more than fifteen days.

The French government it is said has received information that four Russian corps d' armee had moved towards the Austrian frontier.

A Norwegian barque bound to Venice had been stopped by a French frigate and informed that all the Austrian ports except Trieste and Ancona were blockaded. The commander of the fortress at Venice had received no notice of the blockade. A French fleet was before Venice and had already captured twenty vessels.

Fifteen French men of war had been sold near Cattaro on the coast of Dalmatia.

The London Times' correspondent in the Austrian camp says that a naval attack on Venice would have no chance of success, every channel to the port being quite blockaded by sunken vessels, ships laden with stones lying close by ready to be sunk at a few minutes notice, and thus close up the small remaining passages. Guns of large caliber are placed in positions to command the channels thus obstructed.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says, that the French squadron is not to attack Venice, but merely to blockade the port for the present.

The Liverpool Post, in its article declaring that the passage of the Ticino by the French and Sardinian armies would be the signal for an European alliance and the march of the Austrian troops on Paris, says, also, that Russia is to join Austria, and her reward for what looks like treachery is to be the cession of Moldavia and Wallachia.

The shipping interest of Great Britain is greatly agitated as to the conveyance of articles contraband of war.

Lord Malmesbury, in his reply to a special inquiry, says, that the neutrality proclamation was not intended to prohibit the exportation of coal or other articles, but he warned the subjects of Great Britain that they do not carry for the use of either one, belligerent articles which are contraband, as the government will not interfere in their favor in case of capture.

An imperial decree of Austria increases the direct and indirect taxation.

In the Federal Diet Prussia declared that though adhering to her protest against the posting of the Federal corps on the Rhine, she did not object to its being established as a matter of form. The proposal was referred to a commission.

There were meditations on the part of the Italian Refugees located on the Swiss frontiers to stir up a revolution in Lombardy. Their efforts were put down by the Swiss troops who seized a quantity of guns and powder.

GREAT BRITAIN.—The Queen's speech to the new Parliament is not expected to be delivered before the 10th of June.

The London News says, that the Liberals will insist on taking up the reform question where it stopped at the dissolution.

The eight large steamers of the European and American Company have been bought on speculation by Messrs. Lever & Howard, of Manchester.

It is said that the English Government will shortly invite tenders for a monthly mail to Australia via Panama.

Twenty thousand lands men have been enrolled in the British navy.

The chartering of vessels to France as troops or storeships was regarded as illegal.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., June 4.—The steamship City of Washington has arrived, with Liverpool dates to the 25th ult. The news is important, as announcing the first important blow in Italy. The allied and Austrian forces have met, and the latter have been defeated.

The battle took place at Montebello, a town of Austrian-Italy. The Austrians were 15,000 strong. They made the attack, and after a severe engagement they were obliged to retreat.

The battle took place on the 21st of May. The Austrians, who were commanded by General Stadion, attacked the posts of Marshal Barraguay D'Hilliers. They were driven back by General Forey's division. After a furious combat, which lasted four hours, the allies carried Montebello, but did not pursue the Austrians. Five hundred Austrians, including a Colonel, were captured and taken to Marseilles. The Austrians were 15,000 strong. They lost 2,000 men; the allies lost 700 men, among whom were many officers.

The Austrian account of the battle differs widely from the above. The actual force of the French is not stated. It is reported, however, that it numbered 6,000 men, besides a regiment of Sardinian cavalry. A bulletin, issued by the Sardinian Government, announces that the extreme left of the Sardinian army under Gen. Baldini had forced a passage over the river Sesia, putting the Austrians to flight. Gen. Garibaldi had entered Gavre Pavia, with 6,000 men, for a revolutionary purpose.

It is rumored that six English men-of-war had entered the Adriatic sea.

Revolutionary movements are reported in Lombardy.

The King of Naples is dead, and Francis II. has assumed the government of Naples.

The British admiralty have formally invited tenders for the carrying the monthly mail to and from Australia via Panama.

A general meeting of the Stockholders of the Atlantic Telegraph Company has been called to sanction the agreement with the Government, and to issue £600,000 new capital.

The Paris Moniteur announces that France adheres to the abolition of privateering and on the principle that the neutral flag covers the enemy's goods.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Manchester advices are unfavorable. Business was generally dull.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET.—Messrs. Richardson, Spence & Co.'s Circular reports that the weather continues favorable for crops. Breadstuffs continued dull. Flour dull. American is quoted at 11s@14s per cental. Wheat steady; the average business has been done without quotable change; western red 8s@10s 9d; white 10s 6d@11s 3d. Corn dull, but prices are unaltered; mixed 6s 2d@6s 10d; yellow 6s 10d; white 8s@8s 9d.

LIVERPOOL.—Provision market steady; beef steady; pork firm at 85s@90s; bacon quiet at [illegible]; lard dull but firm.

Produce—Sugar dull; coffee quiet; rice quiet; potashes quiet at 31s 6d.

LONDON MARKETS.—Barring & Bro.'s report that wheat has a declining tendency; prices are 2s@4s lower. Consols 91⅞@92 for money and account.

Further by the City of Washington.

NEW YORK, June 7, 2 o'clock, A. M.—The steamship City of Washington, from Liverpool, has just arrived. She brings the latest news telegraphed to Queenstown, by the agents of the Associated Press on the 26th, and is in that one day later from the seat of war than received via Cape Race.

BERNE, May 25.—It is reported that General Garibaldi, at the head of 50,000 men, has succeeded in entering Lombardy, and has barricaded himself in the town of Varese. He is without cannon, and the Austrians are in the neighborhood provided with artillery. The fight between them is said to have commenced.

GENOA, May 25.—The Bey of Tunis has offered two auxiliary regiments to Piedmont.

TRIESTE, May 25.—The commander of the port of Venice has received no notice of the town being blockaded.

ALESSANDRIA, May 25.—The Emperor Napoleon passed several hours to-day at Voghera. Nothing has yet been decided respecting the departure of the troops.

MARSEILLES, May 25.—Advices from Constantinople to the 18th, states that the Porte promises to recognize Prince Couzey.

The Sclave population on the coast of the Adriatic, are beginning to show a hostile feeling towards Austria.

THE WAR.

The Paris letters show a great want of confidence, and seem to hint at some increased disturbance in the foreign relations.

The London Times disparages the battle of Montebello, calling it a tenth rate victory, and accuses Napoleon of having sold himself to the demon of military conquest.

The London Times alludes to a deign on the part of the viceroy of Egypt to take advantage of the present condition of affairs, to secure, if not independence, at least a large measure of authority, and adds, France's influence at the moment is supreme, but England will allow no trifling. The slightest disposition to evade the treaty of 1840 will bring upon the viceroy the whole weight of England's power.

The details received of the battle of Montebello state that the General of Brigade, Beuret, and Commandant Duchet are among the French officers killed. The Vienna correspondent of the London Times says that the Austrian strength consisted of three brigades. Their loss was about the same as the French.

The Times remarks that the Austrians must have fought well, for they must have carried the town of Casteggio, which had been barricaded by the French before they reached Montebello. The Austrians seem in the first instance to have been successful, and only were driven back when the French supports came up.

In General Forey's account, he thinks the Austrian force was not below 15,000 to 18,000. The prisoners captured place it far above these figures.

Great praise is awarded to the Sardinians for their conduct in the battle. The combat was a hand to hand fight in the streets of the village.

Gen. Cialdini's combat was at Villata. The loss is insignificant, though the conflict is said to have been a fierce one. The Austrians had shot an entire family, consisting of eight persons, in whose house the Austrian guns were found.

A dispatch from Vienna says that at noon on the 21st, 15,000 of the enemy attacked our troops, numbering 3,000 at Vercelli. Our men retreated fighting to Orfengo, when two Austrian brigades advanced to the rescue, and threatened the enemy's flanks. The latter then retired across the Sesia.

The bulletin issued by the Austrian Government says that at Vercelli a Piedmontese squadron of dragoons were put to flight by an Austrian reconnoitering party.

It is reported in Switzerland that all the Austrian detachments on Lago Maggiore had been withdrawn.

An Austrian dispatch says precautions had been taken against Garibaldi, whose object is to revolt and revolutionize Lombardy.

Austria has issued instructions to prepare for the defense of Tirol.

A dispatch from Berne says that the Austrians had left Como and Milan, and are concentrating on the river Adda, about 15 miles to the east of Milan. The French and Sardinians are also described as advancing.

GREAT BRITAIN.—Kossuth in a speech in favor of the neutrality of England intimated that he would probably soon be in Hungary. He is reported to be President of the Hungarian Committee at Genoa to encourage desertions from the Austrian army.

SPAIN.—The Spanish government has bought four of the Cunard screw steamers, which are to be replaced by vessels of greater power and size.

HUNGARY.—The accounts from Hungary are seriously alarming, there must sooner or later be disturbances if concessions are not made. The country is full of Russian agents who act almost openly.

PRUSSIA.—It is reported at Vienna that Prussia will soon place 6 corps d'armee on the lower Rhine and two on the eastern frontier.

TURKEY.—It is asserted positively that a general insurrectionary movement was organizing throughout all the sclave population in Turkey, and it was supposed to be favored by foreign influence.

The Montenegrins were destroying the Austrian telegraph in Sutorina cutting off communication between Cattaro and Ragusa.

A terrific thunder storm accompanied by heavy rains occurred at Oden on the 30th of April. 20 or 30 persons were drowned by an inundation and a hundred and eighty seven houses were laid in ruins.

LONDON, Thursday May 26.—10 o'clock P. M.—Consols are quoted at 92½@92¾.

LIVERPOOL, May 26.—Richardson, Spence & Co., reported the breadstuff market steady but quiet, produce is slow of sale but the prices are unaltered.

Cassius M. Clay, in a recent letter, says: "When I read, 'Slavery is higher than all laws and all Constitutions,' I want a scribe to write under it, and on it, in letters like those of John Hancock, That is a lie!"

Mr. Hill, who mysteriously disappeared from Bridgeport, Conn., a few weeks since, has written to his wife, who had offered $100 for his recovery, that she had better keep her money, as she may want it.

The unfortunate mother of Ira Stout is in a state of utter destitution in Rochester, and, owing to the odium which attaches to her name and association with the murderers, no one is disposed to give her any aid or countenance.

The Comptroller of Alabama has received $2,500 from Rev. J. M. Mitchell, of Montgomery, with the simple statement that it belonged to the State of Alabama. Some conscience-stricken individual has probably taken this method of making restitution.

On May 6th, ult., Dr. Irwin, United States Army, of Fort Buchanan, killed two antelopes, at a single shot, with a Colt's carbine, the distance being over 300 yards. The ball passed through the heart of one animal and the liver of the other.

In the three mile race at Lexington, Ky., spring meeting, the second and last heat was won by Red Oak, the Tennessee horse, in the extraordinary time of 5:32½, which is said to be 3½ seconds the fastest time ever made on a Kentucky course.

The total population of Lexington, Ky., is 9,559, divided as follows: Whites, 5,916; slaves, 1,580; free blacks, 481. The total number remains about the same as last year, and has been pretty much the same for thirty or forty years past, although in that time the population have changed some.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The President has issued a proclamation for the sale of public lands in Iowa, commencing at Ft. Dodge on the 26th of September, and at Sioux City on the 3d of October. They are in the north western part of Iowa at the head of the Des Moines river and its tributaries.

Past Assistant-Surgeon Howitz has been ordered to the bureau of medicine and surgery, as Assistant-Chief of the bureau. Surgeon Delany and Assistant-Surgeon Kindleberger have been ordered to the San Jacinto.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The Indian Superintendent, Mr. Collins, of New Mexico, announces to the Indian Bureau the perfect safety of the Southern overland mail route. No fear of an attack need be entertained in that quarter. Agent Steck, who proposes to meet some 1,500 Indians upon the Gila River, to distribute the usual quota of agricultural implements, writes that his guard on the occasion will consist of ten Mexicans, armed only with hoes and ox whips.

The receipts into the Treasury during the last week were over two million dollars. Drafts amounting to above three millions were paid, leaving only four millions subject to draft.

RICHMOND, June 3.—Official returns from 107 counties are reported. Letcher's majority is 4,696. There are 44 counties yet to be officially heard from. It is now believed the Democratic majority will be 6,000 or more.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—The Utah mail brings the proclamation of Gov. Cumming, commanding to immediately disperse the various parties of Mormons associated together in a military capacity in the mountains surrounding Salt Lake Valley.

The Valley Tan complains that this proclamation is not put into the hands of the federal officer to execute instead of the territorial Marshal, and asserts that treason is as rife in the territory now as before the advent of the army.

The Overland mail last night brings tidings that eight white men while prospecting for silver near Honey Lake had been killed by the Indians.

The house of Col. Stevenson at Red Bluff was burned on the 11th. Col. Stevenson's wife, another woman and five children perished in the flames.

The Arizonian of the 19th is filled with accounts of the proceedings of a band of regulators who had driven all the Mexicans from Sonorita Valley, and committed several murders.

The Americans at Tubac publicly denounced the outrages and a company of troops had been detailed from Fort Buchanan to suppress any further proceedings.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The treasury has ample means at its command; a million and a half of the late loan has not yet been called in, but can be obtained at any time, besides from four to five millions of treasury notes can now be re-issued under a recent act of Congress and as many as may be redeemed can be re-issued; therefore, with the four million dollars, subject to draft nine or ten millions at this time, is available for treasury purposes.

Within the last ten days, a million and a half in treasury notes have been re-issued at 5 per cent.

A private letter from Hon. J. Glancy Jones, our minister to Austria, says that ex-President Pierce, who had been sojourning in Vienna, left there on the 13th of May.

The municipal election to-day passed off quietly, without any of those scenes which have heretofore disgraced this city. There was no serious opposition to the anti-Know-Nothing ticket.

Frost.

CLEVELAND, June 6.—A heavy frost on Saturday night. The wheat crop throughout the northern part of the State is badly injured or destroyed; corn damaged, potatoes frosted.

ZANESVILLE, June 6.—A heavy frost in this neighborhood on Saturday night. Corn entirely destroyed. Great many farmers are preparing to replant. Wheat much damaged.

DANVILLE, N. Y., June 6.—There was a heavy frost in this vicinity on Saturday night, killing all the garden vegetables, corn and potatoes. It is also feared that fruit of all kinds has been cut off.

BUFFALO, June 6.—The severe frost of Saturday in this vicinity destroyed the fruit and potatoes, and it is feared doing heavy damage to other crops.

CINCINNATI, June 6.—The frost of Saturday has been severe in its effects, and created general apprehension and alarm.

PITTSBURGH, June 6.—Severe frost on Saturday night, which greatly damaged the wheat, corn and potatoe crops, also some fruits.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 6.—In some places near the city, frost very heavy Saturday night.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 6.—No frost here Saturday night.

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—There were heavy frosts in the vicinity of Springfield, Ill., Friday and Saturday nights, but the damage to crops is considered slight.

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Bank statement for the week ending on Saturday shows a decrease in loans of $2,131,000; decrease in specie, $661,500; decrease of nett deposits, $2,260,000; an increase of circulation of $196,000.

ST. LOUIS, June 7.—The Overland Mail of the 16th has reached Jefferson City, and will arrive here to-night. News unimportant. The Indians had burned another house at Red Cliffs.

OREGON.—Advices state that politicians were stirring, prior to the meeting of the legislature. The crops were promising. The mining news from Fraser River continues discouraging.—Most of the California miners are returning from there.

The markets were depressed and no prospect of an advance in prices. Trade was brisk.

PORT JARVIS, June 7.—A man named Cole has been arrested at Montague, Sussex county, N. J., on a charge of having poisoned his wife to death, during her confinement in child-bed. The facts as they transpired show that Cole and the family physician, Dr. Mickham, had conspired together to commit this horrible crime, an insurance of $3,000 having been first obtained on the life of Mrs. Cole. Cole is in custody. Dr. Mickham managed to escape.

LEAVENWORTH, June 7.—There was a heated contest to-day in the election for members of the Constitutional Convention, having ignored all past issues, and placed themselves upon the free State basis. No definite returns from the territory can be had for two or three days.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The mere declaration of intention to become citizens of the United States does not entitle the person making it to a passport, and of this fact a number of applicants have recently been informed.

It appears by the records of the Land Office that Arkansas has received 1,115,000 acres of public land to aid in the construction of the Cairo and Fulton Railroad in that State, besides another heavy instalment of swamp lands.

The President and Secretary Thom returned from their visit to North Carolina this evening.

A gentleman who has just arrived here from Utah, represents the people in an excited and turbulent condition, bordering on rebellion, and hence the proclamation of Gov. Cumming with a view to dispersing the various parties of Mormons assembled in a military capacity in the mountains surrounding Salt Lake. The parties, he says, are a portion of the militia called out by the Governor to resist the entrance of Government troops during the session of Court at Salt Lake City.

The Mormons are monthly augmenting by the arrival of foreign converts.

The civil law having failed to answer its purpose, it is the opinion of intelligent parties in that territory that peace can be preserved only by strong military rule; or bloodshed averted by favoring the removal of the Mormons beyond the jurisdiction of the federal authorities.

CHICAGO, June 6.—From the St. Paul papers of Saturday and Sunday we learn that that city and other towns above and below have suffered seriously by the flood from the Upper Mississippi. Much damage was done to property in the warehouses on the levee at St. Paul. Brooklyn opposite was entirely submerged.—The inhabitants were compelled to abandon their dwellings on account of the general inundation.

At St. Anthony the damage to property was immense, several hundred thousand feet of logs belonging to saw mills along the river were swept away and the mills greatly damaged.

The upper bridge which cost $20,000 was swept away. The lower which was built at a cost of $65,000 was greatly damaged.

Reports from various quarters along the upper Mississippi state that nearly all the bridges across streams are gone. The river is higher than it has been for a number of years.

CHICAGO, June 7.—The Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad reduced the fare to-day to New York to twelve dollars, to Boston fourteen, to Baltimore and Philadelphia ten dollars. The other roads have done the same.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The steamship Asia sailed at noon with 150 passengers and $1,500,000 in specie.

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 8.—The Convention of the Peoples' party met at 10 o'clock and was called to order by Henry M. Fuller, chairman of the late Central Committee, who moved that Morton McMichael, Esq., of Philadelphia, act as temporary chairman, which was agreed to. The Committee on permanent officers reported David Taggart for President, and a long list of vice Presidents and Secretaries. The report was unanimously adopted.

The President made an eloquent speech on taking his seat. General nominations were then made for Auditor-General and Surveyor-General. A committee of thirty-three was selected to prepare resolutions and the Convention adjourned till 2 o'clock P. M.

ST. LOUIS, June 7.—By the Overland mail we learn that General Harney has issued orders directing the organization of an expedition under the command of Capt. Wallen, to open a wagon road from the Columbia river to Salt Lake.

The steamer Surprise, from Mazatlan, has arrived with $570,000 in specie. She brings news of the conservative party beating that city with fair prospects of wresting it from the hands of the Liberals.

An Elpaso correspondent of the Republican says that Thomas Sonloque, a brother of the ex-President of that name, recently started from Coralitas, with 1,000 men for the purpose of taking the city of Chihuahua. A party of Liberals has started from El Paso, destined for Chihuahua.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The body found in the water near Fort Hamilton was identified yesterday as that of Mrs. Fanny Dean Halsey, an actress. The deceased disappeared on Wednesday last, under circumstances which gave rise to the supposition that she had been murdered. Owing to various causes, suspicion pointed towards her husband as knowing something of the cause of her death, and he was arrested yesterday.

Dr. Geo. Cochran held a post mortem examination, but no evidence was found of violence, or anything to indicate the presence of poison.

Henry Percy Halsey, the husband of the deceased, is a son of Henry William Richard Howard Halsey, of Henly Park, Surrey, England, a man of large estates and influence.

BALTIMORE, June 8.—A Convention of Slaveholders of Maryland met in this city this morning. The attendance was very large, embracing delegates from every section of the State except Allegheny county and Baltimore City, and including the most wealthy and influential citizens.

Judge E. F. Chambers was chosen President, H. S. S. Key Vice President, and Col. Hughes Secretary.

Judge Chambers made an address counseling prudence and moderation in discussion of the delicate question involved, and expressed a hope that wisdom and harmony would prevail. A Committee on Resolutions was appointed, and on motion of Senator Pearce, it was determined that no resolution should be entertained by the Convention unless submitted to the Committee and reported for consideration.

A recess was taken till 4 o'clock this afternoon, when the Convention will meet at Temperance Temple.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The representatives of the several Southern Railroad Companies have again been in consultation with the proper officer of the Post-Office Department and left here to-day for Philadelphia, where they design to-morrow to meet the representatives of the Railroad companies whose lines extend from Washington to New York. Their business is to arrange the terms and schedules for carrying the mails between New Orleans and New York with certainty and increased speed. At the present time the failures are so frequent as to demand a new arrangement such as is now proposed.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The four mile race over the Eclipse Course this afternoon between Tar River, Slasher, Eagles and Bill Dearing, resulted in Tar River carrying off the purse of $2,000.

The quickest heat was made in 7 minutes 43 seconds.

BALTIMORE, June 7.—The President arrived here this morning in the Norfolk boat. He was escorted to the Washington depot by the City Guard.

LAFAYETTE, IND., June 8.—A Convention yesterday arranged for a grand military encampment and celebration at Lafayette on July 2d, 3d and 4th, comprising the military of Indiana and adjoining States. Fourteen companies have already accepted invitations. The celebrated Tom Corwin, of Ohio, will positively deliver the oration.

BRISTOL, TENN., June 8.—The mail train from Lynchburg, Va., on the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad, ran over a cow this morning near this town. The first and second class passenger cars were thrown from the track and almost demolished. The brakeman was killed. Saml. Tate, President of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, had his arm severely hurt, and it is supposed to be broken. Several other passengers are wounded, but not seriously.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—A dispatch from the Columbus, Ga., Sun office states that the Alabama and Fontaine Warehouse was destroyed by fire on Tuesday night, including 8,000 bales of cotton and a large amount of goods stored in it. The loss is estimated at half a million. The amount covered by insurance is not yet ascertained.

The fire is attributed to an incendiary.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 8.—The coast survey steamer Walker has arrived, having left Key West on the 4th inst. She reports that the bark J. W. Cobb had been towed into Havana by a New York schooner, which was picked up off Matanzas, scuttled and abandoned.

She, had evidently landed a cargo of negroes.

Markets.

CINCINNATI, June 8.—The flour market is firm at $6 75 for superfine, holders asking higher prices. 2,061 bbls received last 24 hours. Whisky; 500 bbls sold since yesterday's report at 26¼@26½c. Provisions dull and prices nominal. There is no demand. Wheat firm and prices higher, sales 300 bu prime white at $1 55. 300 bu good mixed at $1 45. 1,000 prime red at $1 45. 1,000 good white at $1 53. Corn firm at 80c, holders generally asking higher rates. Rye steady at 90c. Oats firmer sales; 500 bu at 55c.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Flour has declined 10c; sales of 4,090 bbls at $6 30@6 60 for State; $6 90@7 25 for Ohio. Wheat heavy; sales of 6,000 bu at a decline of 3c. Red Winter Western is quoted at $1 60. Corn heavy; sales of 10,000 bu mixed at 87@88c; yellow at 94c. Pork buoyant at $17 25 for mess and $15 25 prime. Lard heavy. Whisky dull at 28c.

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—Flour, superfine firm at $7,00; 500 bbls sold at $7,50 for mixed extras and $8,00 for extra family; fancy lots command $8,25@$8,75; some flour made from new wheat has made its appearance. Rye flour, sold at $4,50. Corn meal at $3,87½@4,00. Wheat steady, sales 2,000 bush red at $1,62@$1,65 and white at $1,75 in store.—Rye has declined, sales of Pennsylvania at 80c. Corn active, 10,000 bush yellow sold at 90c; 1,000 bush poor white at 86c. Oats dull at 50@51c. Whisky firm at 27½@28½c.

BALTIMORE, June 8.—Flour dull, sales at a decline of 12½c. Pennsylvania and Ohio are held at $7. Wheat rather more active, there is a fair demand for red at $1 50 and for white at $1 65@1 80. Corn active and prices buoyant, white sells at 83@85, yellow is lower being quoted at 87@91. Provisions dull. Whisky dull and nominally quoted at 28@29.

We learn from the Lawrenceburgh (Tenn.) Journal that the dwelling house of Mr. A. W. Parker, on Dry Creek, Giles county, was destroyed by fire on the night of the 19th ult., and that three of his daughters, aged between 15 and 18, 12 and 13, and 7 years, were burned to death in it. The fire was first discovered about midnight. Nine other persons were sleeping in the house at the time. The girls were sleeping in a closed entry between the kitchen—where the fire originated—and the dwelling. One person made his escape through the smoke and flames, and the remainder by jumping from a second story window. It is not known how the fire occurred.

A New York dispatch, June 6th, says: "The body of the lady found near Fort Hamilton is supposed to be the remains of the wife of Henry Halsey, of West Twelfth street. She has been missing since Wednesday last, on which day she was detected by her husband in the act of writing a letter to a certain gentleman of Brooklyn. The husband has been arrested to-day, and taken to Fort Hamilton."

A dispatch from Bangor, Me., of June 5th, says: "During the severe thunder storm of Friday last, the house of Mr. L. P. Goss, at North Carmel, was struck by lightning and a child of eight years killed. The house of Mr. Wm. Sutherland, of Clifton, was also struck and almost torn in pieces. The family, seven in number, were assembled in the kitchen, when the lightning carried the cooking stove through into the cellar from the midst of the circle. No person was seriously injured."

The Hagerstown Mail of Friday estimates the loss in that vicinity by the hail storm on Monday at $75,000.

General News.

A Boston dispatch, June 6th says:—"Madame Gazzaniga has contributed 2,000 francs towards aiding the cause of Italy."

The savings bank of Connecticut have deposits to the amount of $14,062,181 56, which is an increase of $1,439,000 over last year.

Col. W. H. Robertson, formerly United States Consul at Havana, and for many years a prominent merchant at the South, died at Havana on the 28th ult., aged 63 years.

A grocery in Bridgeport, Ind., was blown up on Tuesday week by some parties, who placed a keg of powder under the building. Another establishment of the same kind was threatened with a similar fate, if not immediately closed.

On Thursday, two men, Geo. O. Strecks and Wm. Offutt, fell from a scaffold at Willard's Hotel, Washington, a distance of 37 feet. Strecks received injuries from which he died that night. Offutt fell on Strecks and had his jaw bone fractured, and his breast bone, with one of his ribs and legs, broken.

A man calling himself William Coppins, of Mendon, Mercer Co., Ohio, recently attempted to commit suicide by poisoning at Detroit, Michigan. He said, he had gone to enlist, in consequence of domestic difficulties with his wife. Having taken an overdose, the poison did not have the desired effect. Coppins was arrested and lodged in jail.

Chicago has just effected of the Marine Bank of that city a temporary loan of $50,000 for constructing sewers.

DR. RORACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.—Are you sick, no matter what organ is affected, depend upon it the blood, which is the food and sustenance of every organ, is full of corruption! My Scandinavian Blood Pills and Blood Purifier, break up the source of disease in the fluids of the body. They purge and purify the elements of the blood. Hence their quick and complete cures in dyspepsia, scrofula, eruptions, fits, tumors, nervousness, kidney complaints, piles, low fevers, debility, rheumatism, headache, want of sexual vigor, &c., &c. These remedies are astonishing the whole medical world.—See advertisement.

OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.

THE OPENING AT THE OHIO WHITE Sulphur Springs [illegible]

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY

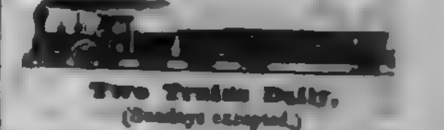
Cash Capital [illegible], Assets [illegible].

Offices 287 Broadway, 20 Wall Street N. Y.

[illegible]

Superior Court of Franklin County.

Regular Terms for the Year 1859 and 1860.



THE FOLLOWING ORDER WAS ENTERED upon the Journal of the Superior Court of Franklin county [illegible]

JNO. H. SMITH, Clerk.

1859. 1859.

NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST.

Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line.

Two Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted.)

Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 25th, Trains will leave Columbus as follows:

FIRST TRAIN [illegible]

SECOND TRAIN [illegible]

KANSAS, NEBRASKA AND PIKE'S PEAK

[illegible]

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. RORACK'S

SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. RORACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, [illegible]

Original Letters,

Eye Witnesses.

Facts:

Contain no Mineral;

Dyspepsia,

Liver Complaint,

Sick Females,

Shattered Constitutions,

Lengthen Life,

Cause soon to Heal,

Recruit the Debilitated,

[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1859.

Opinion of Chief Justice Swan on the Habeas Corpus Cases.

J. R. Swan, Ch. J.:

It is proper to say that a Judge of this Court or the supreme Court of the State in regular session, has no more jurisdiction, or judicial power, or discretion, in determining questions which arise upon habeas corpus than a Probate Judge of the county. Each must be governed by the same rules, and each are invested with the same powers—no more and no less.

The relators being brought before us on habeas corpus, our inquiry must be confined to such questions as are properly cognizable under that writ.

The return shows that the sheriff of Cuyahoga county holds the relators in custody under a sentence and judgment of the District Court of the United States for the offense of rescuing fugitives from service. The judgment of the District Court is conclusive, and precludes all inquiry on habeas corpus, unless it is a nullity.

Waiving all questions made by counsel as to the power of a State Judge on habeas corpus to declare the sentence of a court of general jurisdiction invalid, it is very clear that we cannot, on habeas corpus, go behind the sentence, and revise and review the previous proceedings of the court. For instance, if these relators had been tried by a packed jury; found guilty without sufficient proof, and upon an erroneous and illegal charge of the court, we could not set aside the verdict, arrest the sentence or revise the judgment of the Court. It would impute to the counsel of the relators the wildest and most absurd views of the law, to intimate that they claim that a Judge, on habeas corpus, can go behind a sentence, and review and revise the mode in which a trial was conducted. No such claim is made; but I refer to the subject, because those who are unacquainted with the limitations upon the power of this Court, when deciding upon habeas corpus, are not probably aware, that a judge would be guilty of high-handed usurpation, and would deserve impeachment, if he undertook to discharge the relators on any assumed ground that they were not, in fact, guilty of rescuing fugitive slaves from labor; or had not had a fair and impartial trial.

Neither the verdict of the jury nor the judgment of the District Court can be collaterally impeached, if that Court had jurisdiction of the party and offense. The verdicts and sentences of Courts in every case would be subject to arbitrary intermeddling, and might be set aside and criminals discharged by any judge who is authorised by statute to issue this writ, if a case could be re-examined and the justice of the verdict and sentence considered on habeas corpus.

And further, if a court, having jurisdiction over an offense created by a valid and constitutional law, pronounces sentence, and the commitment under that sentence is returned on habeas corpus, the form of the indictment or the want of proper allegations therein, cannot be inquired into; for the habeas corpus cannot be converted into a writ of error. In such case the court pronounces the law of the case, and, until reversed by some competent tribunal, is conclusive on all other courts, and puts an end to all collateral inquiry on habeas corpus. Exparte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193; In the matter of Prime 1 Barb. 341; In matter Shaw, 7 Ohio, St. Rep. 81. Hence it is that the statute itself relating to this writ except from those who are entitled to the benefit of a habeas corpus all persons convicted of crime or offense, for which they stand committed, plainly and specifically expressed in the warrant of commitment. (Swan's Statutes 450, sec. 1.)

The District Court, then having by law, if constitutional, jurisdiction over the offense mentioned in the mittimus, and having pronounced sentence, it must be deemed conclusive on habeas corpus. We are bound to take the return as true; and if the relators could, under any state of facts, be liable to imprisonment for rescuing an escaped fugitive in violation of the seventh section of the act of Congress of 1850, the relators must be remanded.

It is true that the officer had procured and has returned with the mittimus a copy of the record. The mittimus itself, however, was and is his authority for holding the relators; it designates with sufficient certainty the cause of commitment; and the fact that the officer has procured a copy of the record and annexed it to the mittimus and made it a part of his return, does not alter our jurisdiction on habeas corpus. The District Court has exclusive jurisdiction if it have any; and we cannot revise as upon error or motion in arrest of judgment the sufficiency of the allegations of the indictment or of the acts contained in it. No one would claim that the criminals who have been convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to the Penitentiary for life, could be discharged on habeas corpus, because the indictment contained no allegation of a purpose to kill; an ingredient of the offense, which this Court has held material and substantive, and which they have been unable to find in the forms heretofore used. So in this case, if, under any state of facts, a citizen could be indicted and punished under the seventh section of the fugitive act for rescuing a slave; although the other sections of the act in respect to the mode in which escaped slaves may be reclaimed were unconstitutional and void, we cannot on habeas corpus look into the indictment found in a court, authorised to pronounce sentence for such an offense, and discharge, on account of the want of allegations which would have justified the Court pronouncing the sentence, to arrest the judgment, or an appellate court to reverse it. If Congress had power, to legislate at all, facts may exist in which the legal right of the owner is conceded even by the fugitive, independent of all legal proceedings, and interference might be punished.

The only ground, therefore, upon which the relators can be discharged is, to go behind the seventh section of the act, and maintain, that Congress never had any legislative power under the Constitution of the United States to prove punishment for a person who rescues an escaped slave.

This position, if sustained by the court, cuts up by the root all laws which have been passed, and all laws which may hereafter be passed by Congress, relating to the reclamation of fugitives. It not only disposes of this seventh section of the act of 1850 now under consideration, but the whole law.

Neither the case before us, nor the question thus broadly presented, requires us to consider or determine the powers of the court to appoint commissioners, or the provisions of the law which have been the subject of discussion and condemnation, and which have so deeply agitated the public mind.

The whole question before us is, whether the seventh section of the fugitive law, under which these relators were sentenced, is a nullity, for want of legislative power in Congress, to pass any law whatever relating to fugitives from labor?

It will be perceived, then, that we have no question before us connected with the facts upon which the prosecution of the relators was founded; or the mode of selecting the jury, or the proofs, or the mode in which the trial was conducted; or the errors or imperfections of the indictment; or the constitutionality of any part of the fugitive act, except the seventh section, upon which the relators were sentenced.

These subjects may have a deep meaning and an exciting interest to these relators and to the public. But they are not in issue, or the proper subject of discussion or argument in the determination of the question before us. They are, so far as these relators are personally concerned, trifling and evanescent, compared with the consequences which may result from the present action of this Court, for if these relators are discharged, it must be, I repeat, on the ground that the laws of 1793 and 1850 have always been void, and consequently that these and all other laws hereafter passed of any kind will now and from henceforth be persistently resisted by the State of Ohio. I say, henceforth persistently resisted, because it will be found, I think, that the same adjudication which determines that Congress has no power to pass any law, determines also a precedent; that the construction of the Constitution shall depend upon the shifting of private opinions of every judge in every State who is called upon to give it an interpretation, whatever may be the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

It must be conceded that the power of Congress to legislate on this subject is as deliberately and fully settled by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States as any other constitutional question that has been presented for its determination. Moore v. State of Illinois, 14 How. 13; Jones v. Van Zandt, 5 How. 215; Prigg v. Com. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539; United States v. Booth, 21 How. Rep.

The Court have held unanimously that inasmuch as the Constitution of the United States secures by express provision the right to the reclamation of escaped slaves, the obligation to protect and enforce the Constitutional right devolves upon the general government. On the other hand it has been insisted that the rights of the master to his fugitive slave must be left to such legislation of the different States as they may deem just and expedient; and and that the National Government are powerless to vindicate or protect his constitutional rights; others are of the opinion that the power to legislate is concurrent in Congress and in the States; others that the Constitution of the United States confers all the power necessary upon owners of slaves for their reclamation and that therefore neither Congress nor the State can legislate; others that the amendment to the constitution, which secures freedom of religious belief, makes provisions in relation to the reclamation of slaves subordinate to it, and by implication of no obligation upon those who believe slavery a sin.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has very fully discussed this question, and also the constitutionality of the fugitive slave law of 1850, and held that Congress had authority to pass a fugitive slave act. Thomas Sims' case, 7 Cush. Rep. 285, Com. v. Griffith, 2 Pick Rep. 11.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, (Kauffman v. Oliver 10 Barr. 514, Wright v. Deacon 5 Serg. and Rawle 62;) the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals of the State of New York, (Jack v. Martin, 12 Wend. 313; same case, 14 Wend. 507; Exparte Floyd v. The Recorder of New York 11 Wend. 180; Glenn v. Hodges 9 Johns' Rep. 67;) the Supreme Court of Indiana, (Graves v. The State, Smith's Indiana Rep. 258; 1 Carter 368; Johnson v. Vanambridge, 2 Black 312;) the Supreme Court of Illinois, (Thornton's case 11 Illinois Rep. 332; Eells v. The People, 4 Scam Rep. 498; Fanney v. Montgomery, Bre. 188;) the Supreme Court of California, (in re Perkins, 2 Cal. Rep. 424,) have all recognized the power of Congress to enforce by legislation the reclamation of escaped slaves.

The Judges of the Supreme Court of Ohio in 1845–46 were Justices Wood, Burchard, Reed and Hitchcock. Three of these Judges had this subject before them. The Supreme Court, in 1846, in regular session in Cuyahoga county, held by Judges Wood and Burchard, had brought before them on habeas corpus, one Richardson, who was in custody on a charge of kidnapping; he having knowingly aided to carry one Berry, an escaped slave, out of the State, without taking him before a judge or justice of the county, and there establishing his right of property in Berry, agreeable to the laws of the United States. This was punishable as kidnapping by the laws of the State, passed in 1831, 29 vol. Stat. 442 Swan's stat. Ed. 1840, 600. The Court, after referring to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States that all legislation on the subject of the reclamation of slaves is exclusively in Congress, held that the act in question upon which Richardson was imprisoned, was null and void under that decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. 9 Law Reporter, 316.

The power of Congress to legislate on this subject was very ably discussed, and was fully recognized by Reed, Justice of the Supreme Court of Ohio, in 1845, in the case of the State v. Hoppess, on habeas corpus. 2 West. Law Jour., 279.

The cases to which I have referred will be detailed and the rulings of the courts discussed by my brother Peck.

I have examined, with some care, the reports of the decisions of the other States, and have been unable to find a single decision of any Supreme Court of any State in the Union denying to Congress the power to legislate upon the subject.

The cases decided by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin have been cited as an exception to this uniform and unbroken current of authority sustaining the legislative power of Congress.

One of the three Judges which compose that Court, held that the fugitive slave laws were unconstitutional and void; but the majority of the Court did not participate in that opinion; but discharged the relator on the ground that the offense charged in the indictment did not contain a sufficient description of the statutory offense described in the fugitive slave law.

The General Assembly of the State of Ohio have also recognized, in statutes of the State, the fugitive slave law of 1793 as operative and in force. Swan's stat., Ed. 1840; 589, 600, secs 22, 27.

But treating this question as if no decision had ever been made by the Supreme Court of the United States or by any Court of the free States, how does the question stand?

If the constitution of the United States had not been formed, and a union of the States thus created, each as distinct States would have had the right, under the fundamental law of nations, to have decided for itself upon its own internal condition and regulations in its own territories. If any of them, while thus responsible alone to their own people, should have introduced slavery, other nations or States would have had no just right to interfere, nor would the people of foreign States be responsible, politically or morally, for it. The Constitution of the United States was framed, and the Union perfected, subordinate to, and without violating the fundamental law of nations, to which I have alluded; and it would, therefore, have been in vain for the government of a free State to insist that they would enter into no compact, because slavery is wrong and unjust. The people and the government of no one State of this Union are responsible, politically or morally, for the domestic institutions or regulations of the others.

In the compact of Union, the framers of the Constitution guaranteed to the owners of escaped slaves the right of reclamation. It is made a part of the Constitution, irrepealable, and to be changed only by the power that made it, in the form prescribed by it.

It was designed to be a practicable and peaceable mode by which a fugitive from service might be delivered up. It cannot be extended by implication; the fugitive must not only owe service or labor in another State, but must have escaped from it. This is the extent and the limit of the right of the master.

The Constitution of the United States went into operation in March, 1789.

In 1793, the second Congress, elected under the Constitution of the United States, and composed of many of the members of the Convention which framed the Constitution, an act was passed providing for the rendition of fugitives from justice, and a summary mode for the reclamation of fugitives from labor. By this act rescuers, obstructors and harborers of escaped slaves were to be visited with a penalty not exceeding five hundred dollars.

No jurist will deny that if Congress can provide a penal forfeiture for an alleged violation of law, they have the legislative power to supersede imprisonment for the same offense; and that no court can pronounce the one constitutional and the other without legislative authority.

This law was passed by Congress without any traces in history of constitutional objection; has been ever since that time by every department of the government, national and state, not only received and acquiesced in as the law of the land, but in active, practical operation throughout every State in the Union. Enacted at the commencement of our government, it has been in operation for sixty years.

It is conceded by the counsel for the relators that if Congress have no power to legislate on this subject, they never had any power to legislate upon the subject of fugitives from justice. The same reasons for holding that the one is a usurpation of legislative power, is equally fatal to the other. Both stand precisely on the same ground.

The executive departments of the States of the Union have, I believe, acted upon, and I am not aware that any have been denied, the constitutionality of the law of Congress for the rendition of fugitive criminals.

It may now be well asked if such a long period of recognition and acquiescence in the existence of a law is to be disregarded and the law itself annulled, whether there be anything in our government so settled and stable as not to be liable to attack and overthrow, to vacillation and change; and if, after this lapse of time, a new and yet untried experiment upon this and all other irritating questions of constitutional law is to be entered upon, and a precedent set by the judges of this court that no question can be put to rest by time or acquiescence, when will the construction of the constitution be settled and the landmarks of the several departments of the government and the States be permanently fixed?

We have an unbroken and uniform current of judicial decisions recognizing the legislative power of Congress upon the subject to the present time.

If its authority is now to be resisted by the State; if her government is to repel by force, now and hereafter, the authorities of the United States in the execution of any and every law upon this subject, does it become the official conservators of the public peace, to break through those judicial sanctions which guide and limit their personal discretion and are the only safeguards against arbitrary and capricious tyranny, and be the first to initiate such a civil commotion?

I am of the opinion, and I think the calm judgment of others will concur with the opinion, that in view of these decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, settling the power of Congress—in view of the adjudications of the Courts of the free States, affirming the same in power—in view of the acquiescence of all departments of the National and State governments during two generations—that the judges of a State Court have no judicial right to interpose their own individual opinions upon a question thus disposed of—change the interpretation to what they believe it should be—overrule the adjudications of the Supreme Court of the United States and the State Courts—strike down the legislative power of Congress now and from henceforth—resist, and persistently, on the authority of their private judgment and judicial discretion thus assumed over the interpretation of the Constitution of the United States, the future exercise of all authority by every department of the National government, and force upon the State of Ohio and its people the maintenance of the authority of their own individual opinions as constitutional law.

It is said by the counsel for the relators, that these are two separate cases of habeas corpus, in which the court simply discharge two persons from what it thinks unlawful imprisonment; that their decision may be reversed on error by the Supreme Court of the United States, and there end. We do not think so. If we discharge these relators upon the annunciation of the principle that Congress has no power to pass any fugitive law, that principle becomes instinct with life and action throughout the State of Ohio, gigantic in dimensions and State governmental force, imperatively demanding obedience from every citizen and officer of the State and National Government as the supreme law of the land, and practically nullifying any law hereafter enacted by Congress, however constitutional in its detailed provisions it may be.

It is not simply these relators this Court is dealing with, but also constitutional law. These prisoners can only be discharged by this Court declaring that Congress has no power to legislate. If this Court say that, do they mean it only as to these relators, and that the acts of Congress have operation and effect in Ohio as to everybody else? And if, after striking down the legislation of Congress in this case, will this Court wait until the Supreme Court of the United States have reversed their judgment, before giving force and effect to the law of this case? If this Court hold that the acts of Congress are void, they are inoperative and practically void, as if never enacted, from that moment, through every department of the State government, whenever and however the question may arise. As to the national government throughout all its departments, the power of Congress to legislate will be acknowledged, and the laws held valid and in full force and binding obligation upon the people of Ohio, notwithstanding the decision of this Court to the contrary, and whether a writ of error is sued out in this case to reverse our decision or not.

But it is said that the National Government would be content to permit the laws of Congress to remain inoperative in Ohio until their constitutionality could be examined into and decided by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Perhaps they would; for great forbearance is due from each sovereignty. But I am somewhat surprised that those who are so anxious for this Court to utterly disregard and repudiate and practically reverse the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States and the decision of the State Courts, mildly look to that Court to settle what has already been settled and determined by that Court, and declared by it to be without doubt or question.

I do not perceive how it can be seriously asserted, that there is any question in this case which the Supreme Court of the United States would deem an open one for consideration or adjudication; nor can I perceive if the decisions of the Supreme Court are now to be disregarded, why they may not continue to be disregarded; and while the United States are engaged hereafter from year to year in obtaining the barren fruits of reversals of the decisions of our State tribunals, the legislative power of Congress may not in the meantime be persistently denied and repudiated indefinitely.

When will this happy state of friendly litigation in the Supreme Court of the United States begin, if in the meantime, the power of Congress is denied and resisted as a usurpation by the State of Ohio? Is the duty of the National Government less imperative to enforce her authority and resist what she believes usurpation than the State Government?

No governmental rule can be evolved by construction from the Constitution of the United States without practically becoming a part of the Constitution itself. Thus if, in Ohio, no laws can be passed for the reclamation of slaves by Congress, but, laws on that subject may be passed by the General Assembly; and in Illinois, and the other free states which have acknowledged the decision in the Prigg case, laws enacted by Congress are exclusively operative, and the laws of their state legislatures are void; that no tariff law shall be operative in South Carolina, but shall be everywhere else valid; if in Mississippi and Alabama the law against the slave trade is held unconstitutional and void and in every other State enforced, it will be seen that the constitution, by interpretation, will become different in the different states. Now, if this can be done as to one provision of the constitution, it can be done as to all others. Each state construing it in its own way, to promote its own local interest, what would the constitution of the United States become but a hydra of more than thirty heads, uttering Babel, and conflicting commands, such as each state in its own jurisdiction deemed it expedient to obey, or party strife demanded.

That this state of things was foreseen by the framers of the constitution of the United States, no one denies. That there is some remedy provided for it, all admit. The extent of that remedy has sometimes been questioned, and I do not propose to discuss it.

The Constitution of the United States declares "that the Constitution and laws of the United States, made in pursuance thereof, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding." This was the first step. The next was providing for a judicial department in the General Government, and declaring that "the judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made," &c., Art. III. Sec. 2.

Now, with respect to the boundary of jurisdiction between the Federal and State Governments, I do not desire to say anything but this: that when Congress has undertaken to enforce, by legislation, a right guaranteed by the Constitution itself, after the power has been recognized by all the highest judicial tribunals of the Union before whom the question has been presented; acquiesced in by the country for sixty-six years; and if superadded to these circumstances; the Federal tribunal, in cases arising under the Constitution, repeatedly hold that Congress have the power, it is too late for the judges of the Courts of Ohio upon their private judgment to deny the power.

Again, without asserting myself the truth of the converse of all the following propositions, it is, I think, clear that to maintain our right to do so, we must hold: 1st. That we have the power under the Constitution to determine this question in direct conflict with the settled interpretation of the Supreme Court of the United States. 2d. That we have a right to maintain by the powers of every department of our State government, and to exact obedience as well from United States officers as from all the citizens of the State, to our interpretation of the Constitution. 3d. That this power, on our part, we have a right to exercise when it happens that a majority of our judges are intellectually satisfied beyond any reasonable doubt upon their minds, from a review of the grounds upon which the federal tribunal and others adopted an interpretation of any provision of the Constitution of the United States, that they were mistaken. 4th and lastly. As we must maintain that we have the judicial right to overrule their previous judications and enforce obedience to our own, which are in conflict with theirs; so, subsequent decisions or error, overruling ours, not being intellectually satisfactory to us, we may, in the exercise of the same judicial right and power, disregard them. For, the idea of first asserting the power to overrule their interpretation because we believe it erroneous, and afterwards submit to it, although still believing it erroneous, would be a most undignified and useless assumption of temporary power, merely creating agitation, and ending in nothing but submission.

It seems to me quite clear, that if the individual opinions of every judge is to become the exponent and construction of the Constitution of the United States whenever he feels certain that he is right, without regard to the decisions of the highest tribunals of the country, then the individual opinions of every judge is the Constitution, not only to himself, but for the time being, to the country. This, it seems to me, is simply discretion without rule, guide, precedent, or limitation—unstable, capricious despotism.

Is there any judicial incident more common than for a judge to deny himself the individual discretion of declaring what he thinks even the unwritten law of the land should be, and hold his judgment amenable to the law as it has been decided? And is the Constitution to be less stable than the unwritten law? Is a judge to treat the settled interpretation of the Constitution announced to the country in a previous generation, by Congress assuming to legislate, sanctioned by an unbroken current of judicial decisions, as of no binding judicial obligation, and to be overthrown by the authority of his individual convictions that the Constitution should have a different interpretation? And if a State Judge can thus, by his interpretation, alter the Constitution when it has received such acquiescence and sanction, what provisions of the Constitution, State or National, are safe from change and alteration, under the assumption of judicial power? They would be written upon sand.

For myself, I disclaim the existence of any such judicial power.

Two governments, state and national, over the same people, each exacting obedience, within the sphere of its own powers, could not be adjusted without occasional conflict. But such a government, of more than thirty sovereignties, each jealous of the powers of the national government, each interpreting for itself the powers of the national sovereignty and its own, and the national sovereignty interpreting theirs, and claiming powers denied to it by the states, each clashing and conflicting, and all demanding and enforcing obedience from the same people to their inconsistent and contradictory demands—such a government could have no permanence and would not deserve it. It would be the worst of all governments.—If the federal judiciary is not the arbiter, created by the constitution, to bring order and uniformity out of such confusion and anarchy, there is none.

It is true the judicial department of the National or State Government might, under pretence of an interpretation of the Constitution be guilty of a palpable violation of its provisions demanding the impeachment and condign punishment of the judges; and it might be the duty of every other constituted power of the State and of the people to resist such treasonable practices.

And even conceding that it would be the duty of a State to deny the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States to enforce upon a State an interpretation of the Constitution, which palpably and clearly violated reserved rights or State sovereignty, is there any thing in the history of the act of Congress, of 1793; the quiet and almost unanimous adoption of it by Congress; its long-continued operation without objection to the authority of Congress to legislate, no State after the lapse of sixty-six years, denying the legislative authority, and recognized by every State in which the question has been raised; do, I say, such circumstances demand of a State Court to assume the power of disregarding the settled interpretation of the Supreme Court of the United States, and resisting the authority of the National Government?

It was said by Mr. Madison: "It may be a misfortune, that in organizing any government the explication of its authority should be left to any of its co-ordinate branches. There is no example in any country where it is otherwise." 2 Elliott's Debate, 632. And, I may add, it cannot be otherwise without intestine war or civil commotion.

The sense of justice of the people of Ohio has been shocked by some of the unjust provisions of the fugitive acts. It is not the authority of Congress to legislate that they deny, but it is the abuse of the power.

That abuse is to be remedied by Congress; and if the power to legislate is denied, the question can be put to an end to by repeal. It is the only Constitutional mode left. The other alternative is intestine war and resistance of our National Government.

All must admit that the owner of escaped slaves is entitled to their reclamation. Good faith to sister States demands it; and there would be no resistance in Ohio to a fair and just law affecting that object. As to who shall legislate upon the subject, if the provisions of the law secures its execution from all abuse, and by whose instrumentality it shall be humanely carried out, is a question upon which no intense public feeling could be excited.

For myself, as a member of this Court, I disclaim the judicial power of disturbing the settled construction of the constitution of the United States as to the legislative authority of Congress upon the subject, and I must refuse the experiment of initiating disorder and governmental collision, to establish order and even-handed justice.

I do not repeat here the judicial arguments sustaining the power of Congress, which have been pronounced by some of the soundest and wisest judges that have adorned the American bench; for it is my deliberate and confident conviction, (unswayed by my feelings as a citizen of a free State, when dealing as a judge with this necessary stain upon the National Compact of Union, and however much the argument for the denial of the authority may preponderate,) that the question has by time, acquiescence and adjudication, passed beyond the reach of judicial consideration of preponderance of argument; certainly beyond the reach of question before this Court.

As a citizen I would not deliberately violate the Constitution or the law by interference with fugitives from service. But if a weary, frightened slave should appeal to me to protect him from his pursuers, it is possible, I might momentarily forget my allegiance to the law and the Constitution, and give him a covert from those who were on this track—there are no doubt many slaveholders who would thus follow the instincts of human sympathy. And if I did it, and was prosecuted, condemned and imprisoned, and brought by my counsel before this tribunal on a habeas corpus, and was then permitted to pronounce judgment in my own case, I trust I should have the moral courage to say, before GOD and the COUNTRY, as I am now compelled to say, under the solemn duties of a Judge, bound by my official oath to sustain the supremacy of the Constitution and the law: "The prisoner must be remanded."

A Mysterious Ride.

"There are more things in Heaven and Earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your Philosophy."

[Founded on a fact which occurred in the experience of a distinguished legal gentleman of Virginia.]

A fine summer day was drawing to a close as Mr. T., after dining with a brother lawyer, mounted his horse to ride home. He had been entertained with the gentle and genial hospitality of the Old Dominion, and felt that agreeable stimulus of the animal spirits which follows in the train of a moderate dinner among congenial friends. He had delayed the moment of departure as long as possible, though the ride home was a long one, because he would have a full moon to light him on his way, and the air would be cooler after night-fall; so that it was with none but the most agreeable emotions he bade adieu to his friends, loosened the bridle of his horse, and turned into the road which led through the forest.

To a native sense of the beauty and excellence of nature, Mr. T. added that refinement of taste, which is the result of careful mental culture, and a buoyancy of feeling which excess had never dulled. He enjoyed the serene silence of the evening in the forest—the varied lights and shades on rock and tree and stream, and the peculiar air of majestic repose which nature wears in the recesses of her woodland solitudes. The silence was interrupted only by the sound of his horse's feet over the even road, and the occasional note of a bird, or the croak of a frog—a prelude of the evening's concert. The scent of the evening air was delicious and refreshing, after the heat of the day. In short, so pleasurable were his emotions that Mr. T. rode along at a very easy pace, and it was only when the rapid increase of the darkness warned him of the approach of night, that he began to urge his horse to a greater swiftness. Absorbed in pleasant thought, and shut out by the loftiness of the trees from any but a very partial view of the sky, he had not observed a heavy battalion of clouds, which, after lying lazily along the horizon for some hours, now began to lift themselves towards the zenith, and to emit an occasional angry flash—sure token of a coming storm. It was indeed approaching with a rapidity which mocked every effort he could make to reach a place of shelter before its outburst. He rode rapidly, but each flash of lightning was followed by a nearer and nearer peal of thunder, and soon the darkness became intense, the wind began to rise and the rain descended so heavily that our traveler was glad to remember he must now nearly have reached a large church which stood on his homeward way, in the large, old-fashioned entrance of which he hoped to find a temporary shelter. With this view, he urged his horse to the utmost speed, and so violent did the tempest become, so close and incessant were the flashes of lightning, so heavy the rain, and so numerous the branches torn from the trees by the wind, that he began to feel no small anxiety to reach a place of safety.

At length the lightning showed the old church at hand. He rode up to it, dismounted, and placing his horse so as to protect him as much as possible from the storm, entered the deep and spacious doorway. As he leaned for support against the heavy folding door, to his surprise it yielded to the pressure; he opened it and entered the church, glad to find himself in so secure a situation. He walked up the central aisle and sat down in one of the pews near the middle of the church.

It was not possible for a man of the sensibility and unaffected piety of Mr. T. to find himself alone, in such a situation, and amid such a manifestation of Almighty power as this furious tempest afforded, not to feel some degree of solemnity and awe. He sat down and gave way to the many solemn reflections called up by the scene and the hour. He thought of the many who had once worshipped there who were now lying in their last, long sleep in the church-yard without. Once, upon their beds of down, how slight an obstacle, how small a vexation had been sufficient to banish slumber. Now—all the artillery of heaven, all the pelting of the pitiless storm, moved them not a jot. Imagination called up many a form once as familiar as the pews and pillars of the old church known from infancy. In thought he strove to follow some of these into that strange realm. At this moment a slight noise, in a momentary lull of the tempest, made itself heard, apparently behind and above him. It was not strange, that at such a moment it sent a thrill of inexplicable emotion through his frame. In a moment the feeling passed away, and he turned, resolved to see, if possible, by the illumination of the next flash of lightning, what had caused the sound which had startled him. It came—broad, red, fierce—and revealed to him in the choir a form, so undefined, so hideous, that with involuntary terror, he covered his eyes with his hands.

The place, the hour, the darkness, interrupted only by the glare of the lightning—the sounds of the tempest raging without—the solitude and this vague consciousness of unsuspected companionship, had, it must be confessed, a powerful effect on the mind of the man, naturally of the firmest courage, and nurtured in a society where cowardice is a disgrace. A thousand wild conjectures rushed through his mind in that first momentary but irresistible onset of terror. Then his well-tutored reason and his resolute will contrived to make themselves heard over the tumult of undefined fears and crowding fancies. And, at length, that most powerful of all ideas to soothe the mind entered with its elevating and consoling train. The thought of the great Being to whom that place was dedicated—of His serene supremacy above all the woe and tumult of earth, above all the forces of nature, and the spirit of man himself, gave him a degree of composure in his present situation, which, he owned, he should, without this aid, have wanted.

With restored calmness, he removed his hands from his eyes and looked up once more, hoping he had been the subject of some strange delusion of the senses. No—there, another flash showed it nearer, plainer than before—during those brief moments, it had descended the gallery-stairs with unheard lightness and swiftness, and was soon on the same floor with himself. By this time the violence of the storm was somewhat abated. The flashes of lightning came at longer intervals. He had to wait some seconds straining his eyes upon the darkness. The lightning came at last—dazzling and white—it showed nearer yet. Still undistinguishable, vague—a tangled mass of dark draperies and elf-like locks and white gleams of face and hands—human and not yet—what was this? thus wild in form, thus stealthy in its approach? Could it be indeed a being from another world? He listened, with ear strained to its utmost capacity, but there was no sound, except that of the storm without.

To leave the church and encounter all the fury of the elements without, now appeared to him a blessed relief. But to do so, he must pass this unearthly figure.—Another flash of lightning, which showed his fearful companion so near as to be almost within reach, quickened his lingering resolution. With a sudden summons of all his remaining courage, he rushed from the spot on which he had hitherto stood rooted, ran with his utmost speed down the long aisle, and gave a long gasp of relief as he felt the damp night air, and heard the door shut behind him. To untie he bridle of his horse was the work of a moment; he sprang into his saddle—at the very moment he heard the church door [illegible] violently—the horse gave a wild leap—but a wilder one had landed the fearful form safe behind the rider, and his arm was clutched by arms which held it like a vice.

The horse, seeming to share the terror of his rider, reared and plunged and then started forward at his greatest speed. He instinctively took the right road towards home, and went at such a rate as promised soon to terminate this terrible journey. With the strength of desperation Mr. T. tried to undo the rigid clasp about his waist, but the feeling of hands cold as ice, and bony as those of a skeleton, was such an additional touch of horror he dared not repeat the attempt. He spoke and adjured his companion to tell its name and nature, but there was no answer, no movement, not even, as it seemed to him, the drawing of the breath; and thus they sped with wild swiftness through the forest path, illuminated only by the fitful lightning. He could never afterwards give any clear account of his sensations during a ride which naturally seemed to him interminable.—That he retained his reason and his life under the long continued stress of such mortal terror, was a matter of surprise to himself and his friends. It was over at last. Home was at hand. He saw its friendly lights, and with a sense of relief and thankfulness never before experienced, he stopped at his own gate. It was opened by a faithful servant, who had sat up with the anxious wife of Mr. T., to await his return. But the frightened horse did not give Peter time even for an exclamation of surprise at seeing his master return thus accompanied—he shot past the gate, flew across the lawn, and only stopped finally, at the hall door, with a shock so sudden as almost unseated both riders.

The next day it was discovered that the companion of Mr. T.'s night ride was an insane woman, who had escaped from her keepers, and after hiding in the woods, had taken refuge from the storm in the church just before he entered it. When Mr. T. discovered the real nature of the being who had caused him so much suffering, he was surprised at his own panic; and was willing to attribute it to an unaccountable depression in the nervous energy, such as is sometimes experienced by those who boast the most robust physical and moral health.

SHERIDAN'S WIT.—The following is an authentic anecdote in connection with the Drury Lane theater, rebuilt by Holland, the architect, in 1794, and by him leased to Sheridan, who became largely in his debt.

Holland could never obtain a settlement or an interview on the subject with Sheridan. He hunted him for weeks and months at his own house, at the theater, at his usual resorts; but he was no where to be seen. At last he tracked him to the stage door, rushed in, in spite of the opposition of the burly porter, and found his manager on the stage, conversing with a party of gentlemen, whom he had invited to show them the theater. Sheridan saw Holland approaching, and knowing that escape was this time impossible, put a bold face on the matter.

"Ah! my dear fellow," exclaimed he, "you are the very man I wanted to see—you have come most apropos. I am truly sorry you have had the trouble of calling on me so often, but now we are met, in a few minutes I shall be at liberty; we will then go into my room together and settle our affairs. But first you must decide an important question here. Some of these gentlemen tell me there are complaints, and loud ones, that the transmission of sound is defective in your beautiful theater. That, in fact, the galleries cannot hear at all, and that is the reason why they are noisy of late."

"Sound defective! not hear!" repeated the astonished architect, and almost staggering back; "why, it is the most perfect building for sound that was ever erected; I'll stake my reputation on it, the complaint is most groundless."

"So I say," retorted Sheridan; "but now we'll bring the question to issue definitely, and then have a paragraph or two in the papers. Do you, Holland, go and place yourself at the back of the upper gallery, while I stand here and talk to you."

"Certainly," said Holland, "with the greatest pleasure."

A lantern was provided, with a trusty guide, and away went the architect through a labyrinth of dark and winding passages, almost a day's journey, until he reached his distant elevated post.

"Now, Mr. Holland," cried Sheridan, "are you there, and ready?"

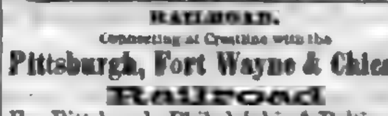
"Yes," was the immediate answer.

"Can you hear me?"

"Perfectly, perfectly, Mr. Sheridan!"

"Then I wish you a very good morning."

So saying, Sheridan disappeared, and was two or three miles off before Holland could descend. Another long interval occurred, ere he was able to chase the fugitive to his lair again.



INTERESTING TO THE BEARDED.—A writer in the Boston Post has the following pithy communication.

"I have seen it stated somewhere that there is an intimate connection between the nerves and muscles of the face and eyes, and allowing the beard to grow strengthens the eye. It is said that surgeons in the French army have proved by experiment in Africa that soldiers wearing the beard are much less liable to disease of the eye, and it is generally conceded that it is a protection from diseases of the throat and lungs. It is asserted that in countries where it is the custom to wear the beard, the eye retains the luster and brilliancy much longer. It may be argued that females do not suffer more than the males from diseases of the eyes, &c., but it must be admitted they are less exposed to the elements. What did the Creator give the lords of creation a beard for? Certainly not to support barbers. There is just as much sense in shaving the head as the chin."

Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.

Great Northern & Eastern Route,

Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD.

Connecting at Crestline with the

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad

For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia & Baltimore, Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.

Connecting at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad.

For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) From Columbus, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.

FIRST TRAIN.

NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 4:30 a. m. Will leave passengers at all stations, south of Galion, stop for passengers at Delaware, Ashley, Cardington, Gilead and all stations North of Galion, connecting at Crestline with the 7:40 a. m. mail train for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 5:40 p. m. Also with same road at Crestline, with the 6:36 a. m. Express for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at 6:37 p. m. Also at Grafton with Toledo road for Toledo. Arrives at Cleveland at 10:30 a. m.

SECOND TRAIN.

NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 10:30 a. m., stopping only at Delaware, North Switch, Cardington, Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London, and Grafton, connecting at Crestline with the 1:32 p. m. Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 0:10 p. m.; arriving at Cleveland 2:10 p. m., connecting at 3:30 p. m. with the fast Express on Lake Shore road for the East arriving at Erie at 6:43 p. m., Dunkirk 8:30 p. m., Buffalo 10:30 p. m., New York 1:30 p. m. next day, two hours ahead of any other line, Boston 6:30 p. m., eight hours quicker than any other line.

THIRD TRAIN.

EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at 1:00 p. m. stopping at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at 7:30 p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad at Crestline, for Chicago arriving at Chicago at 6:17 a. m., at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad for New York and Boston; arriving at Erie 1:30 a. m., Dunkirk 3:15 a. m., Buffalo 5:35 a. m.

☞ Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.

RETURNING.

Night Express, arrives at Columbus 1:30 a. m.
Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at 6:30 a. m.
Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at 5:30 p. m.

Fare as low as by any other Route.

For further information, and Through and Local Tickets apply to E. L. Doherty, Ticket Agent, in the Passenger Depot of the C. C. & C. and L. M. C. & X. Railroads.

E. S. FLINT, Supt., Cleveland Ohio.
H. C. MARSHALL, Gen'l Ticket Agent, Cleveland, Ohio.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent, Columbus, Ohio.

Columbus, May 10, 1859.

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.

CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Cleveland Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free Lunch daily from 10½ a. m. to 12 m.
One of KNABE'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a fine performer make the Saloon one of the best in the city. may26-7m.

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS.
Embracing a Variety,
Not exceeded in this market.
Silks, Challis, Bareges, Lawns, Robes, Calicoes,
Shawls, Parasols, Hats and fancy articles,
Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.
J. C. CHITTENDEN.
may 12.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads.

To the South and West.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11, 1859, Four Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted,) from Columbus, in connection with Trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

FIRST TRAIN. (DAILY.)

NIGHT EXPRESS—At 3:15 A. M., stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati, arriving at Cincinnati at 7:50 A. M. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c., &c. At Loveland for Chillicothe, Athens and all points on M. & C. R. R. and at Cincinnati with morning trains on Ohio & Mississippi R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, and all points South and West, and mail line steamers for Louisville.

SECOND TRAIN (DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)

NO. 1 EXPRESS—5:40 A. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, [illegible] arriving at Cincinnati at 12:20 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, &c., &c.

THIRD TRAIN. (DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)

NO. 2 EXPRESS—At 2:40 P. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, Xenia, Morrow, Deerfield, Foster's, Loveland, Milford, and Plainville arriving at Cincinnati at 7:10 P. M., connecting at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c., &c.; and at Cincinnati with evening trains on the O. & M. R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c., &c.

FOURTH TRAIN.

MAIL—At 3:30 P. M., stopping at Alton, Jefferson, London, Charleston, Selma, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, or in Freeport, Morrow, Loveland, arriving at Cincinnati at 10:40 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, &c., &c.

RETURNING.

Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express 4:30 A. M.; No. 1 Express 12:20 p. m.; No. 2 Express 12:20 p. m. accommodation 5:45 p. m.

☞ For further information and Through Tickets apply to E. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot.

P. DURAND, Superintendent, Cincinnati.
P. W. STRADER, General Ticket Agent, Cincinnati.
JNO. W. DOHERTY, Agent, Columbus, O.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL.

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys,

and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption,

and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents. mar18

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a Dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year are of great value.

Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.
may13-ly.

Consumptives do not Dispare

CONSUMPTION CURED.	AN OLD INDIAN DOCTOR, UNCAS BRANT, while a Missionary among the Indians of the Rocky Mountains discovered a RARE PLANT, that proves to be a certain cure for Consumption,
CONSUMPTION CURED.	Bronchitis, Asthma, Liver Complaint, Nervous Affections, Coughs, Colds, &c. Having now made his fortune and retired from business, he will send the prescription and directions for
CONSUMPTION CURED.	preparing the medicine FREE OF CHARGE to all who desire it, and will send to his agent, enclosing two stamps (6 cents), to pay the return letter, with a description of their symptoms. The Old Doctor
CONSUMPTION CURED.	has cured more than 3000 cases of CONSUMPTION alone, and hopes all afflicted people will avail themselves of this opportunity, as the Doctor wishes to do all the good he can before he dies. Address all letters to
CONSUMPTION CURED.	DANIEL ADEE, Box 3331 P. O. New York. Who is his sole agent.

July 1-ly.

Notice to Bridge Builders.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED at the County Auditor's Office, Franklin county, Ohio, until 11 o'clock M., THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1859, for furnishing the materials and building a Bridge over the Walnut Creek, at Lockbourne, in said county. The distance between the abutments to be [illegible] feet, and the [illegible], to be a single track bridge of two spans, and to be [illegible] feet wide from out to out; and 15 feet 6 inches high in the clear, between the floor and the bands, or 19 feet [illegible] inches from top to top of lower and upper chords.

Estimated amount of work and materials:
[illegible] yards excavation for foundation of abutments.
[illegible] do grading road at end of bridge.
[illegible] perch stone work (25 cubic feet to the perch) in abutments and wings.
[illegible] perch stone work ([illegible] cubic feet to the perch) in [illegible].
[illegible] feet Bridge or Superstructure.

Separate bids will be received for the above items of work, or for the whole job, and will be let to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders, the Commissioners reserving the right to reject any and all bids.
Plans and specifications can be seen at the County Auditor's Office.
EDWARD LIVINGSTON,
ISAAC WHITE,
B. B. [illegible], Commissioners.
Columbus, May 19, 1859—dlaw4w

CHOICE SEEDS.

APPLE PIE MELON.—Seeds of this delicious substitute for pies, 6 cents per package.
MAMMOTH PROLIFIC LIMA BEANS.—These grow only 4½ feet high and are completely covered with bunches of from 15 to 20 pods to the bunch, 6 cents per package.
LARGE CHEESE SQUASH.—That for pies or as a substitute for the Sweet Potato cannot be excelled, and keeps well through the winter, 12 cents.
☞ The three Packages for 20 CENTS mailed.
Address, C. T. [illegible], Care of editor "Horticultural Monthly," New York.
N. B.—Editors of Country Newspapers inserting the above with this notice, twice, [illegible] before the 15th of May, will receive [illegible] of each kind of the goods.

☞ DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, & INDIGESTION, by which persons are more or less affected, can usually be cured by taking moderate exercise, wholesome food, and a dose of Boerhave's Holland Bitters, an hour before each meal.

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

☞ 5000 Agents Wanted—
To sell four new inventions. Agents have made over $2,500 on one,—better than all other agencies. Send four stamps and get 80 pages particulars, gratis. EPHRAIM BROWN, Lowell, Mass.
mr1y.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME 1. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1859. NUMBER 6.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.

TERMS - $1 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular sovereignty.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by, and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799; that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union—

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservation of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850,—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it; to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathise with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

William Y. Gholson is known as an able and distinguished lawyer—has been several times elected Judge in a strong Democratic county—a man who will do honor to the Supreme Bench of Ohio. His position upon the fugitive slave question is understood to be the same as that of Judges, Peck, Swan and Scott.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyances of a free black population: for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizens residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the [illegible] the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF MASSACHUSETTS.—In the early part of the coming month the people of Massachusetts will be called to vote upon a proposed amendment to the Constitution of that State, which is of the utmost importance, as it proposes a radical, violent and anti-republican change in the fundamental principles of a free Government. The change proposed is that no foreigner shall be allowed to cast a vote in Massachusetts until he shall have been naturalized two years. Look at the practical workings of the change as advocated by the Black Republican Abolition party of the Bay State. A man comes to this country to make it his permanent residence. At the end of three years he may go before the Court and declare his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and take the oath of fidelity to our Constitution. He must then remain two years more on probation, when on oath of two citizens of the United States that he has for the five years borne a good moral character, and his full oath of renunciation of all allegiance to other Governments, as well as allegiance to our own Government, he is entitled to his papers—and having paid his taxes, by the Constitution of Massachusetts, as it now stands, he may vote for State, County and Town officers. Now the proposition is, after all this preparation and five years of tax paying, the citizen of the United States shall not vote in Massachusetts unless he remain there two years longer and helps support the Government. This is a fair specimen of Black Republican Abolition love for the people. They are in favor of giving political rights to negroes, while at the same time they are endeavoring to throw all possible impediments in the way of intelligent white men exercising the same right.—Pennsylvanian.

Judge Swan, one of the Judges of the Supreme Court, elected by the Opposition, was slaughtered in their Convention on Thursday last, because he was faithful to the Constitution and Laws. The traitors and negro-equality advocates of the Reserve cannot be induced to support a man who entertains opinions antagonistic to their silly and infamous sentiments, and who, sworn to support the Constitution and Laws of the United States, will not violate his oath of office, whenever a runaway nigger demands the sacrifice! If the Republicans of this section of the State are prepared to endorse the negro-equality opinions of the fanatics of the Reserve, it would be pleasant to have them avow that willingness through their presses.—Hocking Sentinel.

Reaping the Whirlwind.

In the comments we are about to make on the most alarming tendency of our times, we disclaim any desire to cast censure on the prominent personages. The "higher law" doctrine of Senator Seward is rather a sympton than the cause of a very alarming disease in the body politic which, if not arrested, must eventually result in the dissolution of society. We allude to the growing tendency to make individual opinion paramount to the laws, which is undermining all respect for the majority of the latter. The fact that the community is so little shocked by the frequent exhibitions of this spirit, shows how feeble the sentiment has become, which is the only guarantee for the supremacy of law. The verdict of the jury in the recent criminal trial at the national capital, meets with general acquiescence if not general approbation, although it was clearly in defiance of law, for there has seldom been a more willful deliberate murder. True, the provocation was great; and the verdict, though in defiance of law, was in substantial accordance with justice. The murderer clearly ought not to have been hung, perhaps not to have been punished at all; but his exception from the penalty of the law should not have come from the hands of the jury, but of the executive. The design of the pardoning power is to render the strict administration of criminal law comformable in all cases to the demands of justice; and it is more important that the law should be respected than that a prisoner whose crime is justifiable should escape by one door rather than another.—We allude to this trial, not for the purpose of commenting on its merits, but as affording a recent illustration of the little importance attached to the observance of law, when it contravenes private notions of equity.

We are no worshippers of abstractions; we have no desire to see unmeaning formalities enthroned as things too sacred to be infringed; and if no practical mischief resulted from elevating individual notions of what is fair and right above the requirements of law, we should have no protest to make. Institutions were made for man, not man for institutions, and we do not believe in the pedantry of following out legal forms when the end they were intended to subserve can be better attained by dispensing with them. It is only because evasions of the law return to plague society, only because the evils of setting up private notions of right against the enforcement of unpopular laws far overbalance any temporary advantages, that we deprecate the "higher law" notions which are so widely disseminated.

We have no argument to offer in favor of the fugitive slave law; we merely state a fact when we call it a law of the land, enacted by competent authority, and pronounced constitutional by our highest judicial tribunal. We have no wish to disguise the fact that it is unpopular, and with a large portion of the community, odious. But we do contend that while it remains law, there is no rational course but to acquiesce in its execution. There is no ground on which resistance to it can be justified, which will not equally justify any man or any portion of the community in setting up their own notions in opposition to the enforcement of any law whatever. As soon as you begin to resist laws by any other method than advocating their repeal, you are paving the way for the enthronement of general anarchy and disorder.

A striking illustration of the manner in which they who sow the wind are liable to reap the whirlwind, has lately been afforded by the action of a southern jury. Resistance to law is a game which more than one section of the country can play at. If the fugitive slave law cannot be executed at the North, neither can the law which declares the slave trade piracy be executed at the South. If northern disciples of Mr. Seward think to diminish the number of slaves by preventing the return of fugitives, the school of southern fanatics, by nullifying another law of the United States, can open the door for a larger influx of slaves than are likely to run away. The great conservator of liberty is law, and the cause of human freedom has nothing to gain, but everything to lose, by undermining the feeling which yields implicit obedience to all the laws duly enacted, while they remain in force in the statute book. The fugitive slave law, whether it be right or wrong, affects the liberty of only a few runaway negroes, but the law which declares the slave trade piracy, is a great and beneficent barrier against one of the worst scourges of humanity. The opposition to the enforcement of the power of these laws has taught the South that it is no more bound to obey a distasteful law than is the North. Thus the opposition to law which was commenced in the name of liberty, is likely to end in extending the reign of human bondage. We of course refer to the acquittal of the crew of the brig Echo by a southern jury. The jury were told by the counsel for the prisoners, that a verdict of guilty would be declaring that their own fathers were thieves and pirates, for the offense of the crew of the Echo was precisely what their fathers had been accustomed to do with impunity and without any loss of reputation. It is as easy, by the artful appeals to the passions, to prevail upon southern as upon northern minds to take distorted views of their obligation to obey a distasteful law; and the manifestations of feeling in regard to the Echo and the Wanderer show that the law against the slave trade is likely to become a nullity so far as its enforcement depends on the action of southern jurors. This is one of the natural and legitimate fruits of the "higher law" doctrine which sets up the private views of individuals against the enactments of the national legislature.—Buffalo Commercial Advertiser.

The State Ticket nominated by the Black Republicans at Columbus on Thursday last, does not give general satisfaction. A large number of persons in this region, who heretofore acted with that party, declare they will not support the ticket.—The slaughter of Judge Swan, thereby yielding to the demands of the negro-equality advocates of the Reserve, has opened the eyes of many honest voters, and they are beginning to see whither they are tending!

We suppose our neighbor will throw up his hat and shout for joy over the triumph of niggerism, and the defeat of Judge Swan before the Convention! Well, let him and all others who have a special regard for the kinky-haired gentleman from Africa! To deny them the right to shout over such a triumph for fanaticism and treason, would be "cruelty to dumb animals;" and, as it is none of our funeral, we care not whether they rejoice or howl! It is a source of profound gratification to Democrats, however, to know that the Supreme Court of Ohio, or a majority of the judges thereof, would not at the command of niggerology, nullify the Constitution, and set at defiance the laws of the land. It is also a source of rejoicing to know that a large number of the Republican party applaud the firmness and integrity of Judges Swan, Scott and Peck.—Hocking Sentinel.

The Impending Crisis.

At no previous period of our national experience has the burthen of upholding the Union of the States rested more unbrokenly upon the shoulders of the Democratic party than it does now; heretofore, our peace and safety as a nation were principally assailed but from one quarter; but not only has the danger in this direction assumed huger proportions, but in the opposite point of our political horizon an ominous cloud, erewhile, but the size of a hand, already threatens by its speedy growth to eventually rain upon us, if not dissipated, the dire calamities of disunion. While in the North the Black Republicans are furiously assailing the fugitive-slave clause of the Constitution, the fire-eaters of the South are no less earnest in their traitorous attempts upon the Constitutional provision regarding the slave trade, and both sides are seeking the attainment of their ends through a dissolution of the Union. In equal opposition to the machinations of either set of fanatics, the Democratic party exists as the only safe oracle to which the common country can reliantly resort in the hour of her distress. We know there is in the South a formidable class of politicians who claim to be Democrats, not thinking it yet safe to ignore the National shibboleth, but who are disunionists in everything but the name, and we agree with President Buchanan, in his late North Carolina speech, that this fatal leprosy should be at once shaken off. From the beginning of the government to the present hour the Democracy has been the party of the Constitution and Union, conserving and defending the guarantees and compromises of the former, as necessary to the integrity of the latter. Its history is a consistent record of steadfast devotion to the great covenant made by our revolutionary fathers. In this spirit it has maintained the equality of all the States and of all the citizens of each. In the same spirit it has asserted and defended the rights of owners to their slave property, and upheld under a load of obloquy the Fugitive Slave Law, and sought to carry out its terms in good faith. In the same catholic and liberal spirit it has refused to be hemmed in by petty sectional bigotry, but has labored on all proper occasions for the acquisition of territory, willing to let its inhabitants determine for themselves the character of their institutions. It has done these things in deference to the letter and spirit of the compromises that underlie the great charter of our liberties.

In thus vindicating the spirit and intention of those who acquired for us the inestimable political blessings we enjoy, the Democratic party has at every step of its progress towards our higher destiny as a nation confronted the seemingly impregnable obstacles, set up by sectional fanaticism; with a resolute indication of a just appreciation of the momentous issues at stake. Never having hesitated it is not now likely to falter, but will, as ever, prove the persistent defender of the public safety wherever danger may assail.

What we earnestly desire, at this time, is that all who are impressed with the imminent dangers that beset our institutions, (and who cannot be?) and who deprecate the inevitable horrors consequent upon disunion, may at once rally with us, and do battle for the common cause; and we as earnestly urge all to leave our ranks who are not prepared to "mark time and keep step to the music of the Union."—Delaware Standard.

JUDGE SWAN REPUDIATED.—At the Republican Convention last week, Judge Swan was decapitated, and another nominated in his stead. In doing this they confirmed the doctrine that when a Judge dares to uphold and enforce the laws of the country, he breaks friendship with the Republican party, by his action. They repudiated a fearless Judge, elected by them and who is acknowledged to be the most learned and upright member of the Supreme Court of Ohio. His only offense was that he refused to trample upon the laws of the United States, violate his oath of office, and set at liberty a parcel of miscreants, who were undergoing a just punishment. When he rendered that decision his fate was sealed. Previous to that there had not been heard a word of objection to his renomination, but the moment he refused to yield to the behests of Gov. Chase and the fanatics of the Reserve, the fiery legions of fanaticism, led on by Giddings, pounced upon him and demanded that his head should be brought to the block. At once the powers that be succumbed, the convention was wheedled into the plan, and the deed was accomplished at the first blow.

This affords ample evidence that the Republican party have no regard for law and authority. They already have two Judges on the Bench who are willing to set the laws of the country at naught, and if they can only get another of the same stamp, they can then promulgate whatever decrees they choose, and if the Republicans continue in power in this State, with full possession of the judiciary and executive, we may hear of nullification in the course of time.—Georgetown O. Dem. Standard.

The coming campaign in Ohio will be one of deep interest. All the power of the political parties will be brought into the field. The conflict for the State ticket will be fierce and strong, while upon the Legislature depends the United States Senator. The Democracy had a good majority in the last Legislature; but in the coming election, a majority of the "floating" members will belong to the Republican counties. The Democracy can easily carry the State and have a majority in the next Legislature; but they must not sleep by the way; they must be active—ever on the lookout. The next Legislature will elect a successor to Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, in the United States Senate. If the Democracy have a majority, they will elect a Democrat. If the Republicans succeed in carrying the Legislature, they will elect some ranting Abolitionist to succeed Mr. Pugh, and disgrace Ohio upon the floor of the U. S. Senate.

There will be every inducement for the Democracy to rally at the polls at the coming election. Much depends upon the October election. We have an excellent State ticket, and the various questions of the day will be discussed before the people, by the most talented Democratic orators in the State. Let every Democrat do his part and all will be well.—Logan Sentinel.

DOMESTIC PARALLELS.—Mothers-in-law, like cats, show a great attachment to the houses they inhabit, without caring much for the persons who inhabit them.

Budge Not an Inch.

There is a marked change of late in the tone of Lecompton men and Lecompton papers towards "Douglas and his Popular Sovereignty Platform." There is no longer any denunciation of the man, or derision of his principles. Presidential aspirants and unprincipled office-seekers have found that the people are with the "Little Giant," and as the Presidential election is close at hand, an election in which the people take the principal part, there is now a wonderful effort to crawfish, explain away records, and pettifog positions, so that they can be on the winning side.

The Administration organ, the late "Washington Union," which had ceaselessly assailed Douglas and openly espoused the cause of the bolters and Black Republicans in the late contest in Illinois, has found it necessary not only to change editors, but to change its name, in order to meet with favor among the people. It no longer denounces Douglas, and has gone so far towards endorsing his platform as to oppose a slave code for the Territories and contend that Congress has no right to legislate for or against slavery in said Territories. That is coming down handsomely. Lesser lights are following in the wake of this government luminary, and the Lecompton press generally have come to the conclusion that if Senator Douglas should be nominated for the next Presidency they will support him. The Chicago Herald, a paper planted and supported by Government patronage, and conducted by Government pets, with indecent bitterness towards the Senator, has lately avowed this determination.

All this is very well, if properly understood. It is done through no love for Douglas or his principles, but through fear of the people and the loss of pap, if they be found among the interventionists at the great Presidential battle. They are willing to lay aside Lecompton now; nay, they scout at the idea of resurrecting that question. How so? It is the great feature of this Administration; the proudest act of his life, the President says.—Then why not glory in it? When "Old Hickory" vetoed the United States Bank, the proudest act of his life, the Democrats did not propose to "drop the subject," and they have not dropped it to this day.

Not so with the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty as expounded by Douglas.—It is not to be "dropped" like Lecompton, but is to live as long as this Republic shall live, or liberty shall dwell upon the earth. It is not a principle either to be trifled with or shorn of its full proportions. Its principles are plain, common sense, and are founded upon rights which pervade the masses of the people, and will be defended to a "bloody issue" if need be.

Now, we say to Douglas Democrats everywhere, budge not an inch from the stand taken by Douglas and his associates on this subject in Congress on the Kansas Nebraska bill, by the Cincinnati Convention, and latterly in the great Lecompton struggle. That is the doctrine that must prevail. The people are with you in it, and they will stand by you to the last.—And when you select your standard bearer in the next Presidential campaign take the man who has the boldness to fight, the talent to encounter, and the patriotism to peril life, honor and fortune in defence of this principle.—Cleveland Plaindealer.

The Mountain Meadows Massacre by the Mormons—A Tale of Horror.

The San Francisco Bulletin of April 23d has the following:

One of the dread mysteries of Mormondom which the United States judges in Utah are endeavoring to unravel, greatly to the consternation of the "Saints," is the horrible massacre, at Mountain Meadows, of one hundred emigrants, on their way from Arkansas to California. At the time, we were told that the unfortunate victims fell under the weapons of the Cacosh band of Paravant Indians; but various subsequent developments have established the conviction that these were merely tools in the hands of the Mormons themselves. An eye witness of the transaction has been found at last, and we have received, from an official source at Salt Lake, a statement of his account of the affair.

The whole fearful truth stands revealed, presenting one of the most shocking cases of cruelty and crime that has ever stained the records of a civilized community. The writer says:

"While I was residing at Cedar City, I was called upon by Messrs. Isaac Hight, John D. Lee and John Higbee—all three Mormon military officers—to go a few miles out of the city, which I did. There I found thirty or forty others, selected from different settlements. We were addressed by the above officers, who told us that they had sent Ganosh, the Paravant Chief, with his warriors, to destroy the Arkansas company, and that if he had not done it we must, and that if any of us refused, or betrayed them to the Americans, they would take good care of him hereafter. Here we were all ordered on the quick march to the Mountain Meadows, where we found the emigrants with their families in the midst, trying to defend themselves against the merciless and blood-thirsty savages, who lay around in ambush, killing them as opportunity presented.

"Hight and Lee formed their men into two companies, and made a precipitate rush at the poor defenceless victims.—The men inside of the circle rose up, but instantly fell dead or mortally wounded under the fire of the wretches who so cruelly sought their lives. Nothing remained to be done, except to kill the frightened females and their innocent children clasped in their arms. Others clung with desperation to their bleeding, dying husbands, pleading in vain for mercy at the hands of the 'Christians' who controlled the no more savage Indian assailants.

"John D. Lee now sent to the Indian chief and his men in ambush to come out and finish the survivors, directing him to spare only the little children who could not talk. The savages came instantly, with knives drawn, and speedily finished the bloody work. The scene beggars description. The demoniac yells of the savage monsters, mingled with the shrieks and prayers of helpless mothers and daughters, whilst the death-blows were dealing with unflinching hands, and scalps were torn from heads which bloomed with beauty and innocence but a few hours before. Now the work of butchering ended. The murderers threw the dead into two heaps, covered them slightly with earth, and left them to feed the wolves and birds of prey, and returned home with their booty of cattle, wagons, and a great quantity of goods, &c.

TURKISH FINANCE.—The poor Sultan must say to himself, "My Porte-monnaie is in a desperate bad order [illegible]

The Dignity of Law.

It is perhaps a misfortune that governments cannot be maintained without the support of law, and that society cannot exist without guards; but if so, it is a misfortune of very long standing—it is coeval with human governments—and cannot be banished so long as such governments, as long as society itself, shall endure.—Laws are necessary for the defense of government and for the protection of society,—always have been and always will be. The prime object of political wisdom is to secure at once the most liberal and the strongest government, with as little of legislation as possible. But the number and the character of the laws must not ever be lessened or weakened in obedience to any absurd demand of false humanitarians, or fanatics. Whilst it is always desirable that legislative enactments be mild, it is never right that they be tolerant to the extent of allowing injuries to the government, and not visit the perpetrators of them with punishment. In the United States we have reached the highest level in politics—a representative government, and laws enacted by a legislature. Search the entire world over, and nothing like or equal to our confederate system can be found. History gives no example which it at all resembles. It was established in wisdom and prudence, by the best men the world ever saw. It was formed just as it remains to us. From it is derived all the authority for legal enactments—and all such enactments are made for the security of the government, which is also the security of the people. The question is,—shall law be supported? for such is the true form of the question, as law, in our system, is the only tangible part of government.

Now, we are old fashioned enough to have some respect for law. We even have respect for bad laws. But a law which is the natural outgrowth of the constitution of the Union, which is just in morals and right in reason—as is the law for the rendition of fugitive slaves to their owners—has our unqualified approbation. This class of laws we are bound by virtue of everything that we prize as citizens, to heed and support. We are just as much obligated to respect the fugitive slave law, as any other law. We have no more right to violate it, than we have to violate the law against larceny or arson. These are our views, and how they can be disputed, by any intelligent and honest man, we cannot understand.

But yet there are men, and they are numerous, too, who hold radically different opinions. The "great party of human freedom" profess to entertain ideas on this head that are diametrically opposed to any that we have avowed, or conceive to be honorable. These men would have the country believe that governments are not instituted for governing, at all—but rather to execute the desires of individual citizens. And on the same hypothesis they must deny that there is anything rightfully conventional in society,—that every member of it ought to and can do just as he pleases. He is not—they should say, to be consistent—obligated to surrender anything in the future to society for the good of the whole, and he can even take from society whatever right he has formerly, or his fathers before him, yielded in the belief that he was thereby serving his fellow men. It is hardly necessary to add, that if ever these latter ideas prevail in this country, there is at once an end to our government and to regulated liberty. The dignity of law is in the virtuous support given to it by the people.—Chicago Times.

FLOATING PARAGRAPHS.

THE ZOUAVE.—Capt. A. M. de Riviere is at Aiken, S. C., where he was said to be soothing his lacerated affections with the companionship of two ladies from Boston, who recognize him under the endearing names of "Cousin Henry" and "Dear Harry"—one the wife of a Boston broker, and the other single. The "gallant Zouave" has, however, published a card in which he denies the "Aikin Hotel Scandal," and asserts his readiness to "punish the calumniators either by law or personal chastisement, at their option."

THE GREAT MYSTERY ACCOUNTED FOR.—Mayor Tieman of New York has ascertained to a certainty, that the seven dead bodies found in a box that had floated ashore at Westchester, were lost overboard from the steamboat used for the removal of the pauper remains from the old Potter's Field to Ward's Island. The box slipped overboard, and the parties in charge saw it float up the river toward Westchester without attempting to recover it.

A CHILD WITH A COLLOSSAL HEAD.—We saw on Friday, a child of Edgar and Marinda Ball, of the town of Mentz, in this county, whose head is a perfect monstrosity. The child is two and a half years of age, and apparently in good health. Its body and limbs are of the ordinary size of children at that age, and well formed; but the head is a wonder, being enormously enlarged, measuring 30 inches directly around it, and 32 inches over it from the front of the chin, and 28½ inches, measuring from the occiput around the forehead. The head is still growing, and its parents informed us that it had increased 5 inches in circumference in one year. The "general health," as we have before stated, is good; the child is bright and intelligent, but by no means philosophic, which the head would seem to indicate. It is free from those stupid drowsy attacks experienced by those suffering from disease of the brain. The child is the most perfect lusus naturæ that we have ever seen.—Auburn Advertiser.

FIRE AT PORTSMOUTH.—The stables of the Clinton House in Portsmouth, were set on fire last week by a crazy woman named Mary Booker, who has been staying at the Clinton House since Thursday of last week, and whom the authorities would not provide for. About 12 o'clock on Friday night, she got up, and climbing thro' the window of her room, escaped into the yard, when going to the stable she fired it, and then sat down to "watch it burn."—When the flames began to shoot up, it tickled the fancy of the poor lunatic, and she laughed long and loud. Her laughter aroused Mr. Stewart, the landlord, who went out and discovered the stable on fire, and the woman sitting looking at it, clapping her hands, and showing every manifestation of joy. After the excitement incident to the fire had somewhat subsided, the woman was questioned about the matter, when she readily acknowledged that she had fired the building, that she had kept three matches all day for that identical purpose. She appeared to be very well satisfied with her night's work, and evidently thought she had done the State some service. After she had done the mischief, the authorities decided to make some provision for the poor lunatic. [illegible]

Authors and their Writings.

[From "Mosaics."]

Burton, the author of the "Anatomy of Melancholy," was extremely facetious in conversation; and the most ascetic poet of our own day, Lord Byron was one of the most brilliant and humorous of associates when he mingled with the world.

That singular writer, Robert Burton, is said, by Anthony Wood, to have composed his "Anatomy" in order to divert his own "melancholy." So great was the demand for this book, when first published, that the bookseller is said to have acquired an estate by it. In the intervals of his vapors, he was the most facetious companion in the university. When he felt a depression coming upon him, he used to relieve his melancholy by going to the foot of the bridge, and listening to the coarse ribaldry of the bargemen, which seldom failed to throw him into a fit of laughter.

"The Comforts of Human Life," by R. Heron, were written in a prison, under the most distressing circumstances. "The Miseries of Human Life," by Beresford, were, on the contrary, composed in a drawing-room, where the author was surrounded by all the good things of the world.—A striking contrast will often be found to exist between authors and their works, melancholy writers being usually the most jocular and lively in society, and humorists in theory the most lugubrious of animals in practice.

A man of letters is often a man with two natures: one a book nature, the other a human nature. These two often clash sadly.

Homer had such instinctive aversion to music, that it is reported he could not be prevailed upon even to walk along the banks of a murmuring brook; yet tradition also asserts that he sung his own ballads.

Seneca wrote in praise of poverty, on a table formed of solid gold, with millions let out at usury.

Sterne was a very selfish man; yet, as a writer, excelled in pathos and charity. At one time beating his wife, at another, wasting his sympathy over a dead donkey.

Sallust, who so eloquently declaims against the licentiousness of the age, was repeatedly accused in the Senate of public and habitual debaucheries.

Steele wrote excellently on temperance, when he was sober.

Johnson's essays on politeness were admirable; yet his "You lie, sir!" and "You don't understand the question, sir!" were the common characteristics of his colloquies.

Young, whose gloomy fancy cast such sombre tinges on life, was in society a brisk, lively man, continually pelting his hearers with peurile puns. Mrs. Carter, fresh from the stern, dark grandeur of the "Night Thoughts," expressed her amazement at his flippancy. "Madame," said he, "there is much difference between writing and talking."

The same poet's favorive theme was the nothingness of worldly things; his favorite pursuit was rank and riches. Had Mrs. Carter noticed this incongruity, he might have added: "Madame, there is much difference between writing didactic poems and living didactic poems."

Bacon, the most comprehensive and forward-looking of modern intellects, and in feeling one of the most benevolent, was meanly and contemptibly ambitious of place; and while teaching morals, we find him taking bribes.

More, in his "Utopia," declares that no man ought to be punished for his religious belief, yet is he found to be among the active persecutors of the opponents of his own.

Rousseau with the same pen we find giving versions of the Psalms, and the most infamous of epigrams.

And our melancholy Cowper, who passed so many dark days of religious depression, we find devoting the hours of night to the production of the mirth-moving story of "John Gilpin." "Truly," has it been observed, "that chapter which shall have to deal with all the oddities and anomalies of literary life must be long and curious, infinitely various in its illustration, and deep in its insight and its philosophy."

How a Musician Conquered the Austrians.

The Paris correspondent of the National Intelligencer repeats the following story at second hand, from the lips of its narrator and subject:

The Austrians, soon after the fatal attempt of Murat, in 1815, occupied Bologna. Rossini had emigrated thither from his native village of Pesaro, in the adjoining legation, and had been at work, in his new abode, upon the "Barber of Seville." Some time before the arrival the Austrians, he had won the people's hearts by a superb national song, which, until a few weeks ago, perhaps, may have been styled a revolutionary song. The author was wise enough in his generation to know that, agreeable as he was to his fellow countrymen, in consequence of this performance, it was the circumstance of all others to render him obnoxious to their 'protectors' from the other side of the Po. He was convinced, therefore, of a necessity to leave the country. But to do this was now impossible, without an Austrian passport, which at the moment, in Rossini's predicament, could only be hoped for through some lucky stratagem. The author of "Largo al factotum" can have felt no great want of self-reliance in such proceedings

He presented himself, therefore, at the head-quarters of the Austrian commander and made his request. The officer looked at him askant. "Your name and calling?" he asked. "My name," replied Rossini, "is Loacchino, and I am composer of music; not, however," he added, "like that mad fellow Rossini, who writes revolutionary songs. My forte is military music, and by the way, your excellency, I have taken the liberty to compose a march in honor of the new garrison, which I humbly solicit may be honored by your excellency's band." So saying, he took a manuscript from his pocket, and opening it at a piano which stood by, played an inspiriting martial air, not, however, from the manuscript. The commander was enchanted. eH summoned the band-master, and handing him the music, ordered the march for next day's review. The composer had been dismissed meanwhile with passport and remuneration. The supposed new march was to be performed the following evening upon the public square. Certain well-known and spirit-stirring notes appeared to electrify the people. A mighty chorus resounded, as with one accord, throughout the city, and to the inexpressible confusion of the commandant, his own garrison band was upholding a thousand revolutionary voices in the Bolognese of Rossini. "Luckily for my shoulders," added the veteran composer, with a sly grimace, "I was by that time half way to Genoa."

Miss T., known on the turf at Paris as a fair Amazon of Washington, was so brilliant at the races on her horse, jet black, save a white star on the forehead, that her appearance was hailed everywhere with admiration and applause. A more lovely person cannot be imagined; she guides playfully the most redoubtable courser. Beelzebub, the name of Miss T.'s horse, is so untameable and ferocious, that no rider can mount him, no groom guide or stall him. He has already killed an Englishman, named Thomas Dixon, who undertook to groom him in the stable.—Rarey was powerless to tame this terrible animal. Three persons only can approach Beelzebub; the first is Miss T. herself.—To her Beelzebub is as pliant, gentle and affectionate as a King Charles spaniel.—He follows her, he fawns on her, and kneels that she may mount him. He neighs when she approaches. He is proud and happy to carry her. He paws, he caracoles, he curvets, he never tries to unseat her. He obeys her word without ever exhibiting the least impatience.—Miss T. reciprocates all the affection which her beautiful horse exhibits, and loves him as a friend. The two other persons who can approach Beelzebub, are two young ladies of sixteen and eighteen years, Jenny and Kitty Wilkinson. But Beelzebub only suffers them, and shows them no attachment. Jenny and Kitty act as grooms to Beelzebub; they feed and curry him, and walk him in the morning. Jenny, the youngest of the sisters, a slight-looking child, whose womanly figure is not yet developed, is dressed as a groom, and follows Miss T. everytime Miss T. pays visits on horse back, for no other person can hold Beelzebub by the bridle when his mistress dismounts. For the rest, Miss T. is a charming young person, and has no need to ride Beelzebub to be admired. She is a handsome girl of the happy age, of fresh, brilliant and healthful looks.—Her figure is beautiful, without being slight; she has dark, luxuriant hair, large, flashing black eyes, beautiful arms, pure complexion, clear and fair; her chest well rounded, her hand small and delicate as that of a princess painted by Velasquez, her foot is neat and very firm, her voice clear and sonorous. She breathes all the life and fire of twenty-one summers. Add to this that her soul is worthy of this outside—a soul noble and devoted—a heart passionate with generous ideas. She has much cleverness and great courage.

This young lady, this American, who brings to her husband a dower of six hundred thousand francs, will soon marry one of the most intelligent of the French generals. She will follow her husband to Italy. She will make what may be facetiously termed her nuptial campaign.—Beelzebub will go along. The soldiers admire the fine woman and the fine horse.

There is a capital story told of Judge John A. Corwin, of Urbana, Champaign county, Ohio.

Corwin transacted considerable business at one time for an individual somewhat noted in that county, named Col. Deavers. Deavers, by the way, served in the war of 1812, where he won immortal honors, and the brevet title of Colonel, by the fearless manner in which he drove an ox team in the Quarter Master's department. The Colonel to this day tells the most surprising stories of his exploits in that war. It must be known, too, that all the stories he tells are equally surprising, and, in fact, his imagination is at all times so surpassing, and so serviceable, he can dispense with truth without the slightest inconvenience. Besides this, he was never known to pay a debt. Judge Corwin having done business for Deavers several years, signified one day his desire to receive some equivalent for it.

"Well," returned Deavers, "you'd ought to be paid, Judge, that's a fact. The account has been running for some time, and I intended to have paid it long ago. I haven't any money but anything I've got on my farm you can have and welcome.—Got lots of apples."

"How many apples have you got?" asked the Judge, ready to catch at anything, no matter what.

"I've got eight hundred bushels, Judge," he replied.

"All right" said the Judge, "I'll take them all."

After promising to employ all his teams, and bring them on the following day—they were all piled up in his orchard, he said—Deavers took his leave. The Judge saw nothing more of him for several weeks, and then meeting him by accident, he exclaimed, impatiently:

"I thought, Deavers, you were going to bring me those apples?"

"So I was," said Deavers, conciliatingly, "so I was, but the fact is, that stale pennyrial bull of mine broke into the orchard that night, and ate every one of them up!"

The idea of a bull eating eight hundred bushels of apples in one night "took" the Judge, and he forgave the debt.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.—Pork-raising is now one of the leading agricultural employments among our country friends, to all of whom it must be important to ascertain what weight of pork may be calculated upon in good feeding to a bushel of corn. Here is a solution of the problem. Mr. J. B. Bress, of East Highgate, Vt., paid $1.50 for a pig, one fourth Suffolk to three-fourths native, of 7 pounds weight, April 10, '858; fed on milk and slop and 18½ bushels of corn meal, made into pudding, until December 6, and then killed, and weighed 326 pounds of pork. He says:

"The question is not answered, from the fact that I fed some milk, but I came to the conclusion that I got about 22 lbs of pork for every bushel of corn fed.—This, I think, is as much pork as a bushel of corn will make, unless there should be a difference in the breed of hogs. Some think there is, but I have been inclined to think the difference is more in feeding."

ITALIAN PRIESTS ON THE WAR.—Several members of the clergy of Lecco have published the following address:

"Italian brethren, we also are Italians; your glories, as our griefs, are also ours; we have in common the same friends and enemies. We all form one people only, one sole nation. May a merciful God grant that the victory of the Italian arms may cause the divine kingdom to triumph, in which only the sanctity of the laws and universal good shall be seen to reign!—May the God of mercy grant that after the extinction of wrath, the hearts and minds of men may calm down to peace and equity, and that the love of religion and Christian knowledge may again flourish, in order that Christian civilization may reign for ever on the earth!"

THE CARSTOW DICTIONARY.—The Derbyites have a pretty way of describing a bribe. They call it "a votive offering."

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - - Editor.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.

JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.

AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.

TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.

COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES W. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

The Next Presidency.

The Buffalo "Commercial Advertiser," an able and leading paper, of what date we do not exactly remember, has the following article:

"As the period of a new Presidential election approaches, an active discussion of the merits and availibility of different candidates, for the honor of the opposition nomination, has arisen. Except in instances few and mostly unimportant, the tone of the anti-Democratic press, north and south, looks to a united opposition, one which shall blend within itself the different elements which are anxious to defeat the present disreputable Democratic Administration. Here and there, it is true, we find representatives of faction or personal interest setting up a sounding claim of invincibility for the existing Republican organization, on its present platform and under its present control. But these bold assertions of power are confined to a wing of the party, which daily grows more diminutive, and which finds itself hedged in on every side by more patriotic sections, striving for an assured victory and its consequent reformation in our Government. In the van of these latter we find many of the more important and influential presses of the country.—The New York 'Tribune,' the Philadelphia 'North American,' the Baltimore 'Patriot,' the Cincinnati 'Gazette,' the St. Louis 'Intelligencer,' the Chicago 'Democrat,' the Nashville 'Whig,' and the Louisville 'Journal,' are in a good degree laboring for a common purpose and with a common desire to concentrate the scattered opposition forces into a solid phalanx. All of these prominent organs of public sentiment seem to concede that such a union is essential to victory and desirable to the country. Many of them do not hesitate to declare the belief that all entertain, that without union defeat is an assured certainty. That such is the opinion of intelligent Democrats, is shown by the remark authentically attributed to Speaker Orr, of South Carolina, who was requested by a friend to give him his views on the political future. Mr. Orr replied without hesitation—'In my opinion the opposition will organize the next House of Representatives, and if they select a conservative, national candidate, will also elect the next President.'

And to this the Louisville 'Journal' adds:

'Mr. Orr is a man of sense, and has hit the nail on the head. A conservative, national candidate can be elected by the opposition next year, if the ultra leaders of the party choose it. The rank and file—the voters—the honest, sensible, quiet, common people—would prefer such a man, if the leaders would give them such an one to vote for.'

There does not seem to be any special desire on the part of these advocates of union to fix any other terms than those named by Speaker Orr, or to insist strenuously on any special candidate. Thus the Chicago 'Democrat,' an able and acute party in this friendly controversy, has one by one given in its conditional adherence to all conservative men whose names have been by accident presented. In its issue of the 30th instant it said:

'Out of some such men as the Hon. Edward Bates we have got to make the next opposition candidate for President, or be beaten.'

Not that Edward Bates is especially its candidate, but that it would accept him, as it would many others than him in their elements of strength.

We have been a deeply interested, yet silent spectator of the progress and growth of that public sentiment to which we have alluded. It is now entertained by so large a majority of the Republican press and party that we can feel a good degree of assurance that the generous overtures made by the disbanded or broken yet powerful opposition of the South, will be met by the North in that spirit of union and fraternity which should always have obtained between the two sections. Should this assurance fail of realization, then the Chicago 'Democrat' is eminently right in saying that the opposition 'will be beaten,' beaten not by a hair's breadth as in 1856, but overwhelmingly, disgracefully and deservedly. There will be but two candidates in 1860 who can hope to carry a single State.—Others, if they are put up, will be practically, if not confessedly in the Democratic interest; they will be run, not in the hope of success, but to afford conscientious men an opportunity to vote for principles they love, without soiling themselves in the dirt of Democracy, or joining in a reckless, hopeless and ruinous attack upon the bonds of national union. There is a large class of free thinking voters, resolved that, let the consequences fall where they may, they will neither vote for nor sanction in any manner the rule of sectionalism, north or south.—But on the other hand these men recognize fully the fact that the Democratic is in spirit and in act, a grossly sectional, as well as grossly corrupt and demoralizing party. Give them the chance and they will deal it a blow which will be fatal. Withhold this opportunity, attempt to force them into a sectional attitude, and they will stand aloof, unwilling to choose between such appalling evils and resolute to support neither.

What is wanted is a candidate with clean hands, untinged with those damaging controversies which have ruined so many statesmen within a few years past, a candidate whose name and history shall be synonymous with patriotism. There are such men, north and south, and we have confidence to believe that the time now is when the united opposition can be rallied to their support. To all the vexed questions involved in the slavery and franchise issues, there is a just and practicable solution which can, now readily be reached. Give us the doctrines of the Republican Congress of 1856 upon the one and the conservative men are satisfied. Give us the solution of the naturalization question now advocated by thoughtful and considerate Germans, and the Americans will strike hands in its support. Cast aside the ultraisms which have been so deplorably useless and yet so disgraceful, and the old guard will rally around the standard of opposition to a man.—There is a stake to play for, large enough for any reasonable ambition—an honest government, a prudent foreign policy, protection to commerce and manufactures, the rule of material progress and the downfall of the dynasty of Democratic corruption."

It is very evident that the "Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, although hostile to the Democratic party, is quite as adverse to Chase and Seward and Banks and men of that stamp. It would prefer Crittenden, but would support Bates, or any other "conservative, national candidates," and really fancies that it perceives a disposition to form a grand united "opposition"—a dream of Utopia from which it will probably awake too late.

We have not the slightest idea that the conservatives of the North have any other wish than to secure votes without compromising their extreme notions, and unless they yield a particle of the latest, although they may seem to do so, would forego the advantage of the conservative vote. It will be seen that to Chase and Seward the contest will be confined, and we cannot perceive how such national, conservative presses as the "Commercial Advertiser" could be found in the ranks of either, "joining a reckless, hopeless and ruinous attack upon the bonds of national union."

The opposition of the Commercial Advertiser to the Democratic party, displays itself in its extreme anxiety to procure the defeat of that party. It points out the only way in which that defeat could possibly be obtained. But what would be the result? Is mere "Opposition" a principle? Is the confederation of antagonistic elements for the prosecution of a party united and cemented by principles, a sure way to secure lasting advantages, peace, quiet and happiness to the country? Say that "Opposition" should be successful, what would it then inaugurate? Would there not be a universal scramble for office? Would there not be a Kilkenny strife to put forward the dogmas of the extremes as the principles of administration? The ultra men of the North will not forego or consent to hold in reserve their favorite anti-slavery notions or coalesce with the ultra pro slavery leaders of the South, and vice versa. Suppose, in the battle they could come together under the one banner of "Opposition," would they not tear each other to pieces and shock the Union, in case of victory, in deciding their respective share of the spoils, and determining the administration of the government?

The Advertiser modestly intimates that the franchise question may be settled, as well as the slavery issue. What, with the Massachusetts Amendment fresh in the public mind, and the consequences of the Ohio decision not yet faded from memory?

There is no necessity of more than merely mentioning the unsettled condition of the "Opposition" mind upon these two cardinal points. This state of difference augurs well to the success of the Democratic party, if it shall adhere to the experience of the past and cultivate the prestige and security that experience affords. In the adoption of the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska act, they erected a basis for future action which is impregnable and enduring; for the hearts of the people support it. It is a wise and patriotic solution of the slavery issue, which once acknowledged can no more be disturbed.—Let them stand by it steadfastly, as their great champion STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS has stood by it, and not permit its symmetry to be curtailed nor its beauty defaced.

Politicians may take the question as a hobby, and abstract divisions may be improvised demanding "Congressional intervention for protection," or insisting upon Congressional intervention to preclude, but the true Democratic interpretation is the DOUGLAS interpretation, that to the people themselves belongs the right of determining their own institutions without Congressional intervention. That was the interpretation of Mr. BUCHANAN in 1856, and that is the interpretation of Mr. DOUGLAS now.

With regard to the franchise issue, it is the Democratic doctrine everywhere, that after the native of a foreign land shall have fulfilled the requirements of the naturalization law of the United States, he shall be entitled to all of the privileges of citizenship save one, which is provided for in the Constitution. They ask no further probation of two years, as has been done in Massachusetts, nor a residence of twenty-one years as is still contended for by some of the "Opposition" of the South. They deem a bona fide residence of five years altogether sufficient; and a longer term undesirable.

But there is another "franchise" which our Buffalo cotemporary entirely overlooks. We allude to the negro franchise, which, in Massachusetts, does not require the extended term of probation demanded for the naturalized citizen. A fugitive slave, who may have run away from his master, and owes service and labor in another State, and is liable to be reclaimed under the broad seal of the United States, and sent back to bondage, may, by the laws of Massachusetts, be entitled to the right of suffrage in one year. This taken in connection with the extended term of naturalization, may have a decided influence of directing the votes of those who are not so illiberal as to shackle their countrymen with disabilities to which they themselves were not exposed; but who enjoying the fruits of freedom desire to see their friends and relatives and countrymen in the enjoyment of the same.

We appeal to no class—there is no sort of political demagoguery that we more despise and condemn than appeals to laborers as laborers, to foreign-born citizens as foreigners, to mechanics as mechanics—to array one class against another, on account of their different occupations, and to stimulate prejudices which should never have been born. We address all classes of citizens alike—they are all interested—it is a mutual end they aim at, the preservation of their liberties, the faithful administration of the government and laws and the happiness of the people.

The next Presidential election will have an important bearing upon the future of America. We do not say it is more important than any that has been or will be; but the elements of discord have been cultivated to an extent that has become dangerous; and disobedience to the laws has been so stimulated both North and South, that the worst consequences, without a reaction, and the success of the Democratic party under a consummate statesman as a leader, who will see that the laws are reverenced and obeyed, may be justly apprehended.—The heresies at the North have quickened like heresies at the South, and though antagonistic to each other, both labor to the same end,—opposition to the wise and beneficent counsels of the true Democracy, who are the party of union and order, and obedience to the obligations and morals of law, and the Constitution.

In another article we publish to-day from the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, on our first page, that paper judiciously and capably discusses this disobedience to and disregard of law; and very pointedly alludes to the recent action of the southern people in the African Slave cases, as being an offshoot to the northern sentiment regarding the Fugitive slave law.

While the sentiment is cultivated and tended to practice the worst of consequences must ensue. There is no use in attempting to blink the issue—it must come. It behooves therefore, instead of forming an opposition to Democracy, which must result in anarchy and chaos and ruin, good men, prudent men, men who have their country's welfare at heart, to unite with the true Democracy and close in upon the anarchists, who are even now in a state of Constitutional revolt.

"THE PEOPLE'S PRESS," by J. Birney Marshall, Esq., Columbus, Ohio, is a new Democratic paper, edited with decided and characteristic ability, and especially devoted to the sustainment of S. A. Douglas. What good a divided press at the center of the State can do Ohio, we are at a loss to determine. That it will ultimately serve Douglas's interests we doubt. Still the paper is ably conducted, may render essential service in the coming campaign. But we refuse to know Buchanan Democrats or Douglas Democrats at all. Democracy does not belong to any man. It is a creation of and from the people alone—Allen County Democrat.

There seems to be a misapprehension, among some, of the intentions of the editor of this paper, and the object of the paper itself, notwithstanding we have endeavored to be explicit, so as to prevent any misunderstanding. It is annoying to be misrepresented or have doubts thrown upon motives that are pure and honest, by intimations of suspicion and inuendoes that there may be something wrong. Yet we are not disturbed; and would take it as a gratifying omen, if the same particularity and the same hesitation were exhibited in proving the expediency of measures and the integrity of men, who, in similar or other capacities, desire to sway an influence over the destinies of the Democratic party. We desire to be judged by works and not promises; but "doubting Thomases" should remember that their insinuations are rather calculated to foment if not create divisions than establish and cement harmony. We take no exceptions to McK's demur, because we believe he is solely governed by a desire for the ascendency and welfare of the party, and did not intend to convey the idea that the PRESS designs to cause dissension or to disturb the harmony of the Party. We believe, too, that he is too much of a man to wish us to forego the publication of our paper, because the "Statesman" WILL render itself offensive and seek to retard our efforts to make the PRESS acceptable to the Democracy.

What is meant by a "divided press at the centre of the State," we "are at a loss to determine" unless it means that there shall be but one Democratic paper here, or that we should follow in the wake of the "Statesman"—the logic of which we cannot very readily perceive. We take "truth and the right" for our motto, and disclaim any intention or wish to sow the seeds of discord, or attempt to array one portion of the Democratic party against the other. There is no rational ground upon which any such division or separation should take place. The friends of Mr. DOUGLAS gave Mr. BUCHANAN the most cordial support at the Presidential election in 1856, and it is not ungenerous to expect a fair reciprocity in 1860. At this important point, there was no paper that gave Mr. DOUGLAS the slightest countenance. The "Opposition" press might publish the various rumors to his disparagement, which it was natural it should do, and there was no defender on the ground to join issue or controvert the severest animadversion. The telegraph, which is accustomed to spread the floating schemes and prejudicial speculations of interested politicians and letter-writers, passed its reports through the column of the "Statesman," without a word of comment or contradiction; and they produced their effect on the public mind, which generally takes silence for consent. Is it to cause a "divided press," that we should enter upon the task to disabuse the public mind of any false impressions that might be so produced? Do we disturb the harmony of the party in contradicting intimations prejudicial to Mr. DOUGLAS, and protecting his name and fame from reproach and calumny?—In the contest before us, we, too, "know no Buchanan Democrats or DOUGLAS Democrats at all." Mr. DOUGLAS stands where Mr. BUCHANAN stood in 1856, and where he should stand now,—With their personal differences we have no lot or part, and while we regret that circumstances should have arisen to estrange them from each other, we see no reason why their individual preferences or dislikes should be indulged in, or assumed by us. No man can have more at heart, the interests and honor of the Democratic party, than we have, or will labor more industriously, more sedulously, to advance it to countless triumphs. If we are assailed personally, and our motives are impugned by an arrogant and unscrupulous press, shall we timely and pusillanimously submit in silence, for fear of disturbing the harmony of the party? We are patient and enduring, but even the apprehension of a "divided press at the centre of the State," will not subdue us into acquiescence in the determined and flagitious attacks of the "Statesman," which is in the hands of men who would sell their souls, who are now in government pay, and to use the term in its broadest and most comprehensive sense, are not gentlemen.

Hon. Stephen A. Douglas.

The Chicago "Times" of Wednesday of last week, thus announces the return home of this eminent statesman. His friends everywhere, and they are everywhere, will be gratified to learn of his "condition;" and will be glad, too, that "the opposition he has encountered, is now pretty much broken." He has steadily and unfalteringly maintained "his own position and the principles of the Democratic party," and this day is entitled to stand higher, and does stand higher in the affections and esteem than when all eyes were turned to him as their champion of the American Senate, and his eloquence and statesmanship, like a flashing sword and flowing banner, pointed the way to triumph. The "Times" says:

This eminent Senator and distinguished citizen arrived in this city from the South, late on Monday evening. He took his old quarters at the Tremont House.

Yesterday morning, bright and early, he was up and out, and was called upon by many personal and political friends. He never looked better, being in excellent health and spirits. He is full of life and of hope. His arduous labors during the winter, at Washington, have not worn him in the least; nor has the opposition he has encountered—which, however, is now pretty much broken—worried him to any great extent or weakened his confidence in his own position and in the principles of the Democratic party. At the South—through which section of the country he has just passed—he was met uniformly with the same warm kindness and friendly cordiality that have ever been accorded to him by her true sons. There are not many men in any southern State, who ever pretended to be Democrats, who are willing to hazard the integrity and ascendency of the Democratic party and the peace of the Union, by violating the pledges made to the country in the Cincinnati platform.

It is Senator Douglas's intention to spend two or three weeks in Chicago, at the present time, and then he will be absent for a short period;—after which, for the most part, he will be in Chicago and other parts of the State until about December.

Kansas Resolutions.

We publish the patriotic resolutions adopted by the Kansas Democratic Convention, held on the 19th ult. at Tecumseh. There were one hundred and fifty delegates present, who represented some twenty counties. Unanimity and good feeling prevailed, and the preamble and resolutions, which breathe the true sentiments of Democracy, were adopted with one dissenting voice; such sentiments as are echoed by the Democracy, and inculcate the only basis for harmonious and united action.

Whereas, The members of this Convention have met, in pursuance of a call of the Central Committee of the Democratic party of Kansas, and being animated by a sincere devotion to the Constitution and the Union, the rights of the States, and the sovereignty and reserved rights of the people; and, whereas, the slavery question is practically settled in favor of a free State beyond the possibility of further controversy; and, whereas, we recognize no difference between pro-slavery and free State men, as such:

Resolved, That we affirm our abiding faith and confidence in the principles of the Democratic party, as enunciated by Jefferson, Madison, Jackson, and founders of our Government, and re-enunciated in the Cincinnati platform.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the people of the Territories, according to the true intent and meaning of the act of Congress known as the "Kansas and Nebraska Act," have the sole exclusive right in the organization of a State government to form and regulate their own domestic institutions in their own way, by the will of the majority, fairly and fully expressed at the ballot box, subject only to the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved, That non-intervention by Congress with the domestic institutions of the States or Territories, is the vital and distinctive feature of the Democratic party, and any deviation from that principle, either for or against these institutions, is impolitic, illiberal and unjust.

Resolved, That we assert the original and essential inferiority of the negro race, and hereby call upon the Constitutional Convention to prohibit negro and mulatto suffrage, and exclude all free negroes from the future State of Kansas.

Resolved, That said Convention should submit said Constitution to a direct vote of the people for ratification or rejection.

Resolved, That the Democratic party condemns all efforts to array the people of the Union against one another, either on account of locality, birth-place or religion; but on the contrary practices what in theory it professes, that true patriotic spirit which united the people of every clime in the great struggle for American Independence.

Resolved, That the Registry Law passed by a majority of the late Legislature is anti-Democratic, infamous, and contrary to justice.

Resolved, That the unequal and oppressive tax law passed by a majority of the late Legislature meets with the unqualified disapprobation of the Democratic party.

Resolved, That the object of the pre-emption law would be better effected by giving a homestead to every bona fide settler and cultivator of the public lands, without a limit as to time, and that we respectfully urge upon the President of the United States the propriety of postponing the sale of the government lands in Kansas for at least twelve months.

☞ Mr. Campbell said at the American meeting at Cincinnati last night, among other things, that "the South ought to have a fair fugitive slave law;" that "upon the whole, he thought Slavery had not made so many serious aggressions after all! Not so many negroes had been returned to servitude under the fugitive law as would have been returned if the present law had not been passed!" Mr. C. said this "as a Republican." If the South has not been so bad after all, and the present fugitive law is working favorably to the negroes and their especial friends, why does the Honorable gentleman join in the crazy crusade against the law, and his "Southern friends," who, by his showing, are really the losers?—Dayton Empire.

That would not suit their purpose, don't you know? It isn't really to serve the negroes that they make so much fuss. What becomes of them they don't care a fig. It is only to have something to talk about. If the fugitive slave law did not succeed in returning a single negro to his master, and were to be the means of rescuing every one that takes legs, they would only dislike it the more. It would injure their business, and destroy the U. G. R. R. monopoly. That would never do. Like the Scotch parson, who asked his congregation "what swallowed Jonah?" and being answered "a whale," irascibly said, "Hoot awa, woman; ye'd as weel take the bread out of my mouth, as the word o' God;" and the Republicans want no competition with their peculiar way of liberating slaves.

WM. H. SAFFORD.—In speaking of the Democratic State Ticket, the Scioto "Gazette," a strong Republican paper, says:

Mr. Safford is one of the best exponents of the democracy of 1859 in the State. He not only endorses the Dred Scott decision, but upholds slavery as an institution authorized and sanctioned by the Bible. He is thoroughly pro-slavery, and will never falter in the support of any measure for the extension and nationalization of the 'peculiar institution of the South. He has the independence to avow his principles openly and freely, and don't require the aid of the artful, juggling platform adopted by the Convention, to hide them in. He is ambitious and industrious, and although we do not believe he has much hope of being elected, he, nevertheless, regards the nomination as a high compliment, and will do as much work in the campaign as any man on the ticket.

The "Gazette" would create an impression that our candidate for Lieut. Governor is extreme in his opinions of slavery, with a view to injure him, and therefore misrepresents him.—We have heard Mr. SAFFORD, in the Senate of Ohio, freely express himself, and, his opinions on the subject are such as every northern gentleman entertains who is not a slave to the dogmas of northern fanaticism. He is ardent and fixed in his attachment to the constitution, and regards the slave as the property of his owner, subject to the laws of the States where slavery exists. There, he may and probably does believe that the Bible presents no bar to the institution of slavery; and it would be a difficult task for the "Gazette" to show that it does. What is said of Mr. SAFFORD's industry and ambition augurs well for the good work he will do in the canvass, for the ticket.

BADLY CRUSHED.—As they were taking down the walls of the old building on Sixth street, Louisville, formerly occupied by R. T. Curd & Co., a portion fell down, burying several workmen beneath the ruins, and crippling Thos. Malone for life, and sadly cutting and bruising Jas. Conners. There were seven others, four of whom were more or less injured.

☞ Speaking of Judge Gholson, the Cincinnati Commercial says:

It is our impression that if the same case were before him that was decided by Judge Swan, he would decide it in the same way.

This must be highly satisfactory to the Reserve.

Judge Swan and Gholson.

AS WE EXPECTED.—Judge Joseph R. Swan of the Supreme Court of Ohio, who is so strenuous for precedents, has, in the Republican State Convention, been voted against him. We predicted he would be [illegible], and he has been. A good "precedent" has been set in his case.—Detroit Tribune, June 8.

The "Tribune" is the leading Republican paper in Michigan, and was prepared for the nominations of the Ohio Republican Convention—especially the overslaughing of Judge Swan. It was not only prepared for such an event, but justifies it and glories in it. It was "as we expected."

"Philistius, then, is President at last.
And Drusilus hath o'erreached it:
It is what I expected."

It was a foregone conclusion to get rid of Judge Swan, who proved himself too pure and honest and 'clear in his great office' to succumb to the dictation of his party, however earnestly, authoritatively and vociferously made. But what did the fanatics gain? The McArthur "Journal," a warm and out-and-out Republican paper, in speaking of the nominees remarks:

William Y. Gholson is known as an able and distinguished lawyer—has been several times elected Judge in a strong Democratic county—a man who will do honor to the Supreme bench of Ohio. His position upon the fugitive slave question is understood to be the same as that of Judges Peck, Swan and Scott.

That is precisely what we said. Is it expected that he will waver and falter and sink under the pressure, should a repetition of the habeas corpus case come up? But it is no matter—the people will indignantly spurn the attempt to make the Judiciary a mere political instrument in the hands of fanatics, and save him the trouble of determining.—They will not consummate and ratify what the Columbus "Gazette," which has always acted with the Republican party, very appropriately and properly terms "that most shameful bargain between the friends of the South, and management, which smells so like corruption from the South."

Mr. Douglas Leaving Memphis.

The editor of the Memphis Ledger, in his paper of the 5th inst., furnishes his readers with the following very poetical and eloquent description of a pleasure trip one hundred and fifty miles, with Hon. STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, on his leaving Memphis for Chicago. His allusion to the simple grandeur, free from all ostentation, and unassuming affability of the manners of Mr. DOUGLAS will strike every one familiar with the character of the distinguished Senator, with being eminently just. Mr. DOUGLAS is truly one of the people—unaffected, unobtrusive, devoid of airs, careful of the respect due to others, rather than asserting an undue position for himself, he moves quietly, happily in whatever society he may be cast, inspiring good feeling and making every one admire him for his truly estimable and social qualities. He wears his greatness as an inherent right, and it sits on him so gracefully, one is not constantly reminded by reserved and ostentatious demeanor, "this is a great man," but it breaks out in the brilliancy and freedom of his unstudied conversation, and no one leaves him without the pleasing impression that he has been conversing with a great man.

The Memphis editor was not only pleased with his trip but more than pleased with Mr. DOUGLAS, to whom he does no more than justice, when he pays him the following manly compliment:

OUR TRIP.—We, together with a number of our citizens, left here at half past five o'clock on Saturday evening, on the John H. Dickey, to accompany our distinguished statesman, Stephen A. Douglas, up the river. Our trip was of the most convivial and interesting character. Judge Douglas, like all truly great men, (for such we consider him) is as plain, simple and easy in his manners, as a pure youth of ten summers, and yet, with all this, he never failed to exhibit profound breadth, depth, and extent of thought, even upon all the less important topics of conversation in which he became casually engaged. True greatness is never ostentatious, nor do the humblest ever associate with it without being benefitted by the impress it leaves upon them.—We may be carried away with Bulwer's beautiful idealizations of the lake of Como, or we may linger in imaginative fondness beside the insular mansions of Paul Jovius, reared Phoenix like upon the ruined villa of Pliny, where the surrounding lake, in the magic calm of quiet eventide, reflects in its limpid bosom the sculptured trunks of marble statuary, obelisks and columns of orient ages. We may muse thoughtfully over the pathetic whispers of those beautiful gardens of the Trajan island, amid whose leagued shades and winding walks the fleeting sprites of eventide are ever wont to roam in frolicsome gladness, or we may contemplate the gradual blending of their green mounds and plains, sparkling fountains and cerulean sheens in the deep silence of spiritual solitude, and feel that we are but sensational, reflecting out the ever varied lights and shades thus mirrored on the surface of our magnetic being. Yet, when the magic touch of those voluminous embodiments of intellectual might falls with all its force upon our open and expanding powers, we more truly feel the inherent altitude of our sentient greatness, and are the more impressed to profit by the reception of those treasures of intellectual sense thus dealt out by the more unsparing hands of the truly great of earth. We are not ready enough to drop loose and yield our own self-respect at the mere sight of a great man, nor do we adjudge every big name to be what it passes for on the current tide of life; but when we come to experience the benefits of those great powers of mind so tempered with simplicity, we feel free to point to it in all station whatsoever, as we do now to Stephen A. Douglas—there is A MAN!! Many of our citizens enjoyed in common the pleasures of this brief trip—the evening and night were spent on the John H. Dickey, where there was a continual flow of life and spirit. On arriving at a point, about one hundred and fifty miles above Memphis, we reshipped on the steamer Philadelphia and returned home.

"Naturalized Citizens."

A note from Gen. Cass, Secretary of State, to Mr. Le Clare, of Tennessee, in reply to an inquiry of the latter as to the virtue and effect of naturalization in this country, in the event of the party visiting France, the country of his nativity, and the present time. * * * *

Gen. Cass simply states the fact that the French government sets up this claim, but by no means admits that the American government recognizes it. We append the note of our Secretary of State:—Statesman.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 17, 1859.

"To Mr. Felix Le Clare, Memphis, Tenn.

"SIR: Your letter of the 13th inst. has been received. In reply, I have to state that it is understood that the French Government claims military service from all natives of France who may be found within its jurisdiction. Your naturalization in this country will not exempt you from that claim should you voluntarily repair thither.

"I am, sir, your obedient servant,
"LEWIS CASS."

We confess we do not understand or maybe do not appreciate the concise and very unsatisfactory reply of the Secretary of State, and as we have not seen and do not know the exact nature of Le Clare's application, we should rather infer from the answer that it had been merely to ascertain if any such service would be insisted on in France from a naturalized American citizen.

The "Statesman" is unfortunate in its attempt to explain the unwritten part of the reply, because if the application were as the "Statesman" represents it, the reply is an evasion and does not meet the point; or leaves the positive inference that a native of France, although a naturalized citizen of the United States, will visit France at this time at his own peril. Nor do we perceive anything in the reply of Gen. Cass, to bear the "Statesman" out in its assertion that he "by no means admits the American Government recognizes" the claim of the French Government. If such had been his intention he would have said so.

We apprehend that the blundering has been on the part of the "Statesman," which misconceives the tenor of Le Clare's letter, and assists the Republican papers in the construction they choose to put upon the matter.

In an event of the kind, we should look upon our country as disgraced, if the rights of a naturalized citizen were not recognized and protected; and France, and no other power should assert a claim which would have the effect of intimidating an American citizen from visiting France to see his friends, in the prosecution of business, or for any other laudable purpose whatever, or else the existing treaties should be cancelled, and the Representatives of the people be summoned to "let slip the dogs of war."

☞ The "Statesman" has found one paper mean enough to echo its false charges and reiterate its misrepresentations. The Mt. Vernon "Banner" does the thing our AMOUR. The echo of meanness is meaner than the original. Lucky Harper has shown himself too contemptible a dog to be even kicked out of the way.

A GALA DAY.

OPENING OF THE OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS,

ON THURSDAY, JUNE 9TH, 1859.

The wide-spread invitations of the genial and generous host, ANDREW WILSON, JUN., had been accepted by a large concourse of guests, and the beautiful morning of the 9th had not disclosed the brilliant hues of the auspicious day, before every avenue to "the Springs" seemed literally alive with carriages, buggies, teams, horsemen and pedestrians. The Hotel, a new and elegant structure erected since last season, over whose cupola proudly waved the flag of Stripes and Stars, was soon a scene of bustle, if not confusion, from the pressing throng eager to be accommodated with rooms, for the adjustment of their respective toilets. Numerous servants were stationed ready to wait upon impatient visitors. Lads, with brooms in hand, were soon busily engaged in "dusting the jackets" of those who had obtained their full share of TERRA FIRMA during the morning's drive or ride. In the office were Messrs. JAS. Swayne, Superintendent, J. H. McOmber, Clerk, and Mr. Alexander, Book-keeper, assisted by frequent visits from Mr. Wilson himself, most industriously engaged in registering the names, and distributing the guests through suitable apartments in the Hotel itself, the Mansion House, and Cottage Row. A most wise and gallant discrimination was made in favor of the ladies, who were instantly attended to; and those of the sterner sex were taken as they came. No great while elapsed before the beautiful grounds, laid off with convenient and agreeable walks, were gay with ladies and gentlemen, paired off or in clusters and groups, reclining beneath some friendly umbrage, or wending their way to the pavilion, down the grassy slope, where in its huge urn of marble welled up the noble fountain which gives the name to the "Springs."

Far to the south they wandered to the grateful shade of the forest, beneath whose glossy leaves and pendant boughs they took shelter from the sun. But as the hours rolled by, the stream of visitors was almost as constant as the current of the bright river that laves the base of the eminence on which the buildings of "the Springs" are tastefully arranged. A beam of gladness, as bright as the sunshine, spread over the face of every one, and told that the heart was gay, and ready for the enjoyment of the fete. The voices of laughing girls, and of resolute men, commingled in a tone of happiness that made the very air vocal with gladness. A delicious breeze swept through the long avenues, playing with clustering curls that hung on the brow of beauty, and kissing lips that wreathed in nests of dimples. The absence of reserve, the entire freedom from restraint, the cunning determination to enjoy and impart pleasure, were the distinguishing features of the scene. The piano was touched by fairy fingers, and a voice of melody was heard above the din and bustle of the arrivals, but not above the sounds for dinner. From the well of white sulphur, from the chalybeate spring, from the magnesia fount, from far down in the aisles of the old primeval woods, where a stream of crystal lime-stone purls from its source, the listeners converged to the reception room and its neighboring effects.

Dinner was announced; the portals were thrown open, and speedily about three hundred guests were seated, quite a moiety of them ladies. A more inviting table never delighted the eye of a connoisseur. Mr. Kimball, the Steward, although newly installed, had arranged every thing in exquisite order, and the utmost profusion which reigned was admirably regulated by good taste. One who has seen something, and has a free pencil, thus groups the feast: "Solids and fluids from all countries and climes, every delicacy capable of being procured was spread upon the tables, wines that sparkled in rivalry to the bright eyes of the fair that adorned the ladened board; fruits from the Tropics; varieties snatched from the briny ocean—all and everything that could be imagined, to the entire satisfaction of epicurean taste, was provided."

How every one disposed of him or herself after dinner, it would require a folio to describe. The grounds were again variegated by locomoting pairs and down on the river side, where the waters were flashing in the sunshine, and singing their eternal song of gladness, we noticed a "wee gentleman" draw off his inamorata,—but as we did not "overhear" the conversation, we shall let him tell the tale, which we are sure will be enjoyed by those who know the amiable and too susceptible correspondent of the Cincinnati "Gazette:"

"I went to my room to take a siesta, and having arranged the blinds so as to admit the breeze and still shut out the sunshine, was just going into a delicious doze when the conversation of ladies under the window arrested my attention.

One of them said, "O, how delightful it would be here if one only had a sweet heart." The other replied, "Yes, it's just the place, and I mean to have one too before I go back." No sleep for me after that. I sauntered through the grounds, listening at every group for the voices I heard at the window, but in vain. Eftsoons, however, chance threw me in the way of a pleasant lady, and with her I wandered down to the river—clambering over rocks and fences and exploring the gravelly shores. At the old mill dam, we sat down and gathered the shells which are so profusely scattered there. We flung stones into the stream to count the circles they made, and talked of the long passed days of childhood. She was a believer in matrimony, too, and talked so frankly about it that I was quite delighted.

She seemed deeply interested in the shells, and as I poured some choice ones I had gathered into her hand, she exclaimed, "O, these are so nice, I'll take them home to the children." My thermometer suddenly fell about 75 degrees, and I afterwards voted shells and sentimental promenades a bore."

About half-past 3 P. M. the State Medical Society, and numerous others who accompanied them from Columbus, arrived, having levied contribution on every possible means of conveyance at Delaware Station, and packed to the best advantage. Dinner was not yet over. Remove after remove accommodated fresh guests, until over a thousand had been satisfied—the corks of the sparkling Catawba playing their parts so incessantly as a score of pistol galleries in full exercise.

It may not be amiss here to state that the learned Disciples of Galen had unknowingly passed the convenient point where they were expected, at Lewis Center, where conveyances had been provided for their especial accommodation. This point is fifteen miles from Columbus, and but six miles from White Sulphur, and will be found in future the most desirable way to "the Springs." Mr. R. B. Bailey, the efficient and courteous Traveling Agent of the C., C. and C. R. R., had made arrangements for the train to stop there, and it will be one of the regular stopping places during the watering season, which will be a great convenience to visitors from Columbus, who need never apprehend a failure of securing an agreeable conveyance.

The twilight came, and the replenished and refreshed "Medicine Men," relieved of the pressure of the past few days in attendance upon the annual meeting of their society, assembled on the lawn in front of the northern row of cottages, and passed the following resolutions unanimously:

On motion it was agreed to hold the next annual session of the Society at Ohio White Sulphur Springs, on the second Tuesday in June, 1860.

The Society then unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we hereby intimate our gratitude to A. Wilson, Esq., the urbane and gentlemanly proprietor of the "Ohio White Sulphur Springs," for his boundless hospitality and liberality, as exhibited in the princely banquet rendered this society.

Resolved, That as citizens of Ohio, and conservators of the public health, we realize the greatest satisfaction in contemplating the ample and admirable arrangements for recreation, the promotion of health, and the cure of disease, which his enterprise and liberality have placed in our midst.

Resolved, That in the rare healthfulness of the locality, its varied and delightful scenery, its four varieties of mineral and medicinal waters, provided by a beneficent Providence in such abundant and unfailing supplies, we have a combination of hygienic and medicinal facilities, challenging comparison with the best watering places of the country and of the world.

Resolved, That we most cheerfully recommend the "Ohio White Sulphur Spring" to the seekers of pleasure, recreation or health, as affording the most ample and desirable facilities for the attainment of these ends.

Resolved, That the papers of the State be requested to publish these resolutions.

On motion, the Society adjourned SINE DIE.

What to do with the night? The dancing hall was brilliantly lighted up, and thither repaired the gay and happy throng, and a fine band of music struck up, speedily the floor was filled with dancers, and every door and window packed with spectators. A little after 10 o'clock a most magnificent supper was served up, after which the tables were removed and the supper-room converted into a dancing hall, where another band discoursed quadrille, schottische, Mazurka and waltz, until the hours were growing longer as morning approached. Both rooms presented an array of beauty rarely equalled; and there was "the happiest time" we ever witnessed—no exclusiveness, no affectation of caste—none of the fastidious airs that so frequently mar the enjoyment of such an occasion. Many acquaintances were there formed that it will be agreeable to remember, that may ripen into friendships, or yet into—something else, although "E. B." after his riverside flirtation was bewildered, for says he, in writing to the Cincinnati Gazette:

Among such an array of dazzling beauty, it would not only be invidious, but very difficult, to particularize. Nowhere would the bachelor, seeking a tenant for his desolate heart, be so unlikely to get one as here, because easily bewildered with such a collection of grace and beauty he could not choose. Every belle here finds a rival, for no mortal can be so peerless as to combine all the charms that entrance the visitor in her own single person. So the bachelor, no matter how happy his choice, feels sad to think he must leave so much beauty unpossessed and consequently sinks into a general admirer of the whole sex.

The whole affair went off splendidly. It was a fete that did honor to the host whose profuse liberality and exceeding care, in providing every convenience and comfort for his numerous guests—his quiet, unobtrusive manners, his admirable arrangements, his genuine hospitality created an impression that can never be obliterated. He is a gentleman in the true sense of the word; and just such a gentleman, with enlarged views, a lavish hand, a liberal heart, as will give renown to the Ohio White Sulphur Springs as the Great Western Watering Place. The grounds are beautiful by nature, and he will contemplate their further improvement. A large pavilion is to be erected on the riverside, and on a level with the present White Sulphur Fountain, in which a jet of the sparkling water will be kept in constant play. One hundred hands were to be engaged upon the grounds this week in working out his contemplated embellishments.

We have not said half what we wished to say of the Springs, the grand festival, or the generous hosts, but the will is not lacking. We hope to meet many of our acquaintances there, and have a pleasant re-union during the summer.

Horrible Cannibalism—A Brother eats two of his own Brothers.

We do not know that we ever read anything more horrible than the following. To think of three brothers, the same blood coursing through their veins, milking the same maternal fount, growing up in fraternal affection, inspired by the same love of adventure and thirst for gold, led off in that wild chase, and driven to despair and death and worse than death! Byron's Prisoner of Chillon is more than realized:

"O, God it is a wonderful thing
To see the human soul take wing,
In any shape, in any mood."

A brother to wait until the ANIMUS had left the wasted body of his brother, and then madly satisfy the cravings of gaunt hunger, on the form that had been so loved, and when instinct with life had shared the blessings of the same mother! It is a fearful and harrowing picture; and then to see the ravenous victim of hunger dashing out the brains of his skeleton brother, from whose bones he had already stripped the flesh,—what should be the fate of those wretches who instigated this Pike's Peak fever, and lured the throng in the devil's path, made roseate and golden with the hues of hope, to terminate in the endless abyss of bitterness and woe?

The Fremont (Ohio) Democratic Messenger furnishes the details, which are almost too horrible for belief, but are corroborated by narratives almost as heart-rending and of similar suffering.

In a recent letter to his mother, in Fremont, Isaac B. Sharp, Esq., of Wyandotte City, Kansas, says in regard to the Pike's Peak humbuggery, that the most horrible sufferings and starvations are exhibited among the returning gold seekers. One instance he relates of the two there, which he says is direct from the mouth of the only one now surviving, that on their return home, in crossing the plains, they ran out of provisions, when one of the brothers died of sheer starvation and exhaustion. The surviving brothers then commenced to devour the lifeless remains of their brother, thus keeping themselves from direct and actual starvation, carrying the lifeless body with them for provisions, as long as it lasted! Then came another trial of suffering from the gnawing monster—hunger—and at last another of the brothers died. No sooner dead, then the only remaining one commenced savagely, to feast upon his lifeless remains! He also carried the body with him, husbanding his only hope of provisions as long as he could, with the hope of falling in with some emigrants on their way to the mines. But day after day he traveled without seeing a sign of a living thing, until the flesh of his dead brother was literally devoured, and the griping, grasping gnawings of the consumer within him, drove him to such a degree of frantic madness, that he beat open the skull of the skeleton before him, and feasted upon the brains within! At last exhausted and famished he laid down to die, where sometime after he was found by a band of friendly, scouting Indians, and placed in the fort, where his wants were supplied. This is so fiendish, so horrible, that we should under no circumstances give it publicity did it not come from one who we know would scorn to write such unmitigated suffering to his mother, if there was no foundation of truth in it. Let those who have a longing to go to Pike's Peak beware, and let these horrid details be a warning to them.

CUCUMBERS.—We find the following in the Claremont Press of Friday:

The following method of preparing green cucumbers, so as to render them a healthful diet, was related to us yesterday by a gentleman who says he speaks from experience: Soak the cucumbers in cold water over night; then pare and cut in thin slices; place them in a deep plate or dish; sprinkle a little salt and pepper over them; then slice a few onions over the top, after which pour on half a pint of good cider vinegar. After this is done throw plate, cucumbers, onions and all out of the window. A good idea, and no mistake.

If the gentleman intended to convey the idea that such disposition of a favorite esculent, was original with him, he must have taken it for granted that Vivian Grey was an obsolete book. The mode of preparing cucumbers for the table is there set forth with the greatest particularity, and one can almost see Beckendorf raise the window to cast them out of doors, so vivid is the description, and the surprise wrought by the denouement is quite startling.

We should not hazard an opinion against that of the "faculty," and the "long line of safe precedents" handed down from time immemorial, but it does appear to us that moderately used cucumbers are quite as harmless as radishes or almost any other vegetable used in a crude or raw state. We have heard of their being cooked like squashes, and rendered palatable; but never partook of them, save in the old familiar way, and have never suffered the slightest inconvenience from them. Nor do we believe that, used in moderation, they possess any deleterious quality.—They contain a great many seeds which are doubtless indigestable, and are of a cold, clammy, watery nature, and the stomach surcharged with an undue portion must labor under its load. Nature has so instituted her laws as to provide for the physical relief of man in oppressive weather; and when the sun shines down tropically, cucumbers must have been given to be eaten, and like the fruits, that are so delicious in "Columbia's fairest isle," and seem designed to relieve the thirst of a torrid clime, from their very flavor, they were intended for summer use. We disclaim Beckendorf's theory, but let them be used judiciously, and not be ABUSED?

CAUSE AND EFFECT.—When the severe frost, for which the night of the 4th and morning of the 5th are responsible, had visited its keen and biting irony upon agriculture, singing the beards of the wheat and blacking the blades of the corn, we thought it was a dispensation which was bestowed unsolicited and unprovoked by the happy farmers who had such a bright prospect before them. The Democratic Messenger thinks otherwise and thus accounts for the milk in the cocoa-nut:

CAN THIS BE SO?—We are informed by a gentleman who has just returned from a tour over the eastern counties composing the Western Reserve, that nearly all the fruit, grain, and vegetables have been destroyed by the late severe frosts. Here we have a divine evidence in history—the blight on the fruit and grain has only occurred in the black-republican nigger-worshiping counties, while in every democratic county, on the reserve, we only hear of the very slightest manifestation of damages. God is punishing these abolitionites—or how else can we account for this singling out of counties that have had this curse put upon them? Let candid men ponder this!

AN IMPORTANT TAX DECISION.—In making their returns for taxation, the Life Insurance Companies have claimed the right to deduct from their aggregate the amount of outstanding policies as so much of a debt against the Company. Auditor Matthews, of Hamilton County, took a different view, and notified them to list the full amount of cash on hand. One of the Companies appealed to the State Auditor, who sustains the view taken by the County Auditor. He claims that it is not a debt against the Company, except upon a certain contingency—that of the death of the person whose life is insured—and can then be deducted from the aggregate return.

STRANGE INFATUATION.—Mr. E Kent, a very respectable citizen of Bath township, Summit Co., Ohio, a man of good habits, and in very comfortable circumstances, surrounded by a very interesting family, wife and five children, just in the prime of manhood, aged 34, and in the enjoyment of good health, committed suicide on the evening of the 7th inst., about sunset, by hanging himself in his own barn. The act has excited great wonder, as there was no apparent cause for it.

European Correspondence.

A very particular and esteemed friend, from Southern Ohio, is about to visit Europe, on an excursion of pleasure and observation, and has promised us a series of letters which cannot fail to be interesting to our readers. He is a gentleman of enlarged views, cultivated taste and extensive reading, and his descriptions of scenery, and reflections on government, men and manners, will be not only interesting, but instructive. At this time, when "wild war's deadly blast" calls the serried cohorts to arms, and generals are marching and countermarching their disciplined battalia in prospect of bloody fields, these letters will possess more than ordinary attraction, as embodying the observations of one of our own citizens qualified to discriminate and writing with a free pen. We shall look for the commencement of the series with a lively interest, which doubtless will be shared by our readers.

Books—Standard Works.

The well-known book-store of Messrs. J. H. RILEY & CO. has been recently replenished by large additions of standard works, selected by Mr. RILEY himself during his visit to the east. It is a very complete establishment, and comprises an assortment so various and so extensive, that it is a rare thing indeed if any work of utility or taste can be asked for without finding it. The more recent publications which address themselves to the judicious and refined reader, are generally to be met with, as great care is observed to keep up with the current of "living literature."

The advertisements of this establishment, to be found in our columns to-day, will afford some indication of the vastness of the variety, and the judgment displayed in the selection of the assortment. In fine, every taste or requirement can be accommodated, from the heavy tomes of law to the light and more ephemeral fancies of the weaver of fiction.

FIRE WORKS FOR THE FOURTH OF JULY.—The advertisement of the great pyrotechnist of our city C. A WAGNER, shows that he is making great preparations for the coming National Anniversary. As a gentleman of taste and experience, he provides an assortment of the rarest and most brilliant varieties. Those who desire to have private exhibitions for their own families and those of their neighbors can be supplied, with all necessary instructions. Contiguous towns and villages will be furnished from Charley's Grand Arsenal, by timely application.—Remember to send on your orders in time.

Hoe and Scissors.

If the person that stole our hoe from the garden will bring it back again, we will be very much obliged; and besides it may save somebody from merited exposure. Anybody that would steal an editor's hoe must certainly be a hard case.—[McArthur Journal.

This is not an usual source of annoyance and complaining by an editor, who generally RAKES down with a pen, or runs his scissors into other people's brains. It indicates a degree of agricultural industry that is not very common to the craft. Now, here is a complaint much more frequent, although it may have originated like THAT HOE, in placing the implement in the wrong place, or, as is sometimes the case, having no place for it. The Piqua "Enquirer" says:

Our scissors are lost, and we can't afford to buy a new pair. Who will lay us under obligations by presenting us a nice, little, sharp-pointed pair?—Who?

We trust our cotemporaries may be mutually delighted in the receipt of brand new presents, but would it not be unfortunate if some cross purpose should arise, and the hoe go to Piqua and the scissors take the way to Vinton county?

HENRY CLAY ON THE NEW-FANGLED DOCTRINE.—On the 8th of May, 1850, Henry Clay, from the Committee of Thirteen in the Senate of the United States, made a report on the slavery question, in which are to be found the following words:

"The true principle which ought to regulate the action of Congress in forming Territorial Governments for each newly-acquired domain is to refrain from all legislation on the subject of slavery in the Territory acquired, so long as it retains the Territorial form of government, leaving it to the people of such Territory, when they have attained to such a condition which entitles them to admission as a state, to decide for themselves the question of the allowance or prohibition of domestic slavery."

It will be seen that, if Mr. Clay was alive, he would sustain the position of the Democracy on the slavery question.

☞ The Democrats of New Haven, Conn., elected their Mayor, at the late municipal election, by about three hundred and sixty majority.—The election was warmly contested. Connecticut is evidently preparing to go Democratic next year.—[Dayton Empire.

Yes, and the Connecticut Democracy are Douglas Democracy, and are true to the Popular Sovereignty and non-intervention doctrine in its strictest sense.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.—Mr. Standish Calvin had his finger twisted off at the first joint while fastening a halter on a horse's neck at Marysville on the 8th inst. The horse gave a sudden start and the cord had kinked around the finger.

☞ We have no time nor space to answer the stupidity and malevolence of the pensioned Statesman, and its pretended correspondent, the preponderance of the falsehood or malignity, of which it is difficult to determine.

OHIO STATE STOCKS.—The transfer books of the Ohio State Stocks will be closed from the 15th of June until the 15th of July, and the interest will be paid at the State agency in New York, from the 1st to the 15th of July, and after that in Columbus, Ohio.

The Crop Prospects.

We have taken great pains in the examination of the newspapers received at this office from every section of the country to arrive at a fair conclusion as to the extent of injury inflicted by the severe frost which occurred at the close of last week. We are happy to say that the calamity promises to be less severe than was apprehended. In recurring to the past, when a similar visitation occurred at a later period of the season, we are reminded that the crops were uncommonly prolific, and more than realized expectation—the corn crop especially was remarkably abundant.

Information from the wheat growing counties inspires us with hope that this great staple will yet be found comparatively safe, and that the damage will be found partial rather than general. There is no doubt of its having been considerable, but we should be thankful that it was not greater, and be content with the fair yield yet promised. If prices remain undiminished, or but slightly modified, the agriculturist, although he may not have an overflowing granery, will yet be well remunerated for his labor, and find the earth a bounteous and fruitful mother.

The corn is not materially injured. The genial rain on Wednesday morning followed by warm sunshine will bring out its bright green blades again, and the fields will soon look as gay and promising as ever. The fruit has suffered greatly, especially in some localities, and grape culture this season will doubtless be far less profitable than had been anticipated. The berries too will be short in their productiveness, and although palatable luxuries, and forming a general portion of the store of prudent housewifery, yet their loss may be a source of less regret when it is remembered that the more important products of industry, forming the staples of agricultural wealth, are yet comparatively safe and of sufficient abundance to prevent either suffering or even inconvenience.—It is bad enough to have so fair a prospect of a bountiful harvest of everything suddenly blighted; but it is a source of gratitude that so much has been permitted to remain for our comforts and indulgences.

Some fields of barley in the neighborhood of Dayton (says the Journal) have been entirely cut off by the frost. One man, who had a field of corn two feet high nipped, cut the stalks as far down as they were frozen on Monday. Those that were not cut sufficiently low made half an inch of a sickly looking sprout the same day, while those that were cut below the frozen parts threw out green and healthy shoots two inches in length the same afternoon. The owner of the field Mr. (Edgar) started he said to get 120 bushels to the acre, and he doesn't despair of it yet. Late wheat in the same locality is said to be much injured.

The Newark Advocate of June 8, speaking of the frost, says: "For a day or two, the fear was general that the wheat crop was very heavily damaged, but on yesterday much hope was felt that the injury to the earlier wheat will prove far less than had been anticipated." Corn and garden products were generally cut down.

The Cleveland Leader, June 8, says: Some wheat from one of the fields that was given up as "dead and gone" was brought to our office yesterday, and on examination appeared as sound and good as ever. We anticipate that the fears of the wheat were premature.

The Cincinnati Price Current, June 8, says—There is not much alarm in the country around this city as regards the wheat. We have it from good authority, that rye is injured badly, in some cases, at least. A rumor prevails that wheat was injured, but many farmers who have examined their crops, within a circle of 100 miles of this city, report to us that they have not been able to ascertain any evidences of it.

In Belmont county, corn, potatoes, tobacco and garden stuff generally, was cut down. The Barnesville Intelligencer says:

Great apprehensions were felt in regard to the wheat crop, and many opinions have been expressed as to its condition. Most farmers who have examined the grain assure us that it is not affected in the least. Divers experts represent the grain as being good, but the stalk so injured that it easily breaks off at the first joint. From all we can learn, however, we incline to the opinion that the wheat crop in this vicinity is comparatively safe. Below Glencoe, on McMahon's Creek, in the same county, and the river country, vegetation was not injured. This was owing to the fog which prevailed there. Even in this vicinity, says the Intelligencer, the crops in the neighborhood of streams were saved.

The Toledo Blade says there was very little, if any, frost in that city; but in the country, east and west, it was severe. In Ottawa county the damage was very serious to corn, wheat, fruit, grapes and other crops.

The Sandusky Register represents that the frost was not very severe in that vicinity, but in the country some nine miles east and south it was quite destructive to fruit and corn.

In Portage county the Democrat, after speaking of the ravages by the frost, says: By later and more thorough examinations in this vicinity, we are pleased to learn that the wheat crop is not injured to the extent which was at first feared. The prospect is that there will be a fair crop of wheat.

ANOTHER BREACH OF PROMISE CASE.—SLANDER.—The Boston Traveller says a suit is now pending in the Supreme Judicial Court for Cumberland County, Maine, of which, says a correspondent, the evidence will disclose the following facts: A gentleman by the name of Paran Jones, formerly of Bellinsford, N. H., while a resident of that place, paid his respects to a Miss Herbert, of Portland, Me., and she, in consideration of his regard and promises (she being quite wealthy) furnished him with money, horses, carriages, &c., and, as she alleges, he agreed to marry her. At the end of three years' "courtship" he left her and went to Wiscasset, Me. Meeting with very good success there he concluded to stick to single-blessedness. About a year passed on and she married a Mr. Parmenter. Some six months after they were married Jones made serious charges against her, which, she says, were false, and were the cause of the separation between her and her husband, which took place about eight months after their marriage. She has, therefore, sued Jones for $10,000 the amount which she alleges he received from her during their three years' "courtship," and has also commenced another action against him, in which she claims $20,000 for injury to her character, which was the cause of her husband's leaving her. The action will be tried at Portland in October.

FROM HAYTI.—A late arrival at New York brings advices from Hayti to the 21st ult.

The news, though peaceable, is important, as it confirms the stability of the republican government.

The law of banishment against Soulouque and his followers, voted unanimously by the Chamber of Representatives, has been at last accepted by the Senate. The Senate had, however, refused to decree the confiscation to the State of the property of Soulouque and [illegible], maintaining that this was a matter to be decided only by a civil tribunal.

The annual salary of the President of Hayti is fixed at twenty thousand piasters.

ABOUT MISSIONS.—SOUTHEY, in his Omniana, relates the following:

"When I was last in Lisbon a nun made her escape from the nunnery. The first thing for which she inquired when she reached the house in which she was to be secreted, was a looking glass. She had entered the convent when only five years old, and from that time had never seen her own face. There was some excuse for her."

An exchange paper begins a forcible appeal to its delinquents with this touching sentence: We must dun or be dun.

CITY NOTICES.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our genteel friend J. M. DENIG on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in superior style, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Neil Block!

☞ DR. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

☞ Nothing is more refreshing in warm weather than soda. If you wish the very best call at RAM & PIERCE'S, where they keep every thing good.

SODA FOUNTAINS.—The most beautiful fountain we have seen any where is at Strong & Armstrong's and the Soda and Syrups are delicious.

☞ Hats are of various patterns and styles—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at RUBSIELL'S if you want a superior article.

☞ FARBUS' Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made ones for the last two or three years.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by our bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakespeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repainted here. ADVANCE. Mr. Edward Cornellison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

C. A. WAGNER, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines Liquors and Cigars. Also announced over the above, in Wagner's Restaurant, which although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be procured by constant attention. The Saloon is in "good condition," No. 31 East State Street.

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. CRITTENDEN on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

☞ ROBERTS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "Josey" says that he don't care if going to three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

☞ SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co's., celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, if equaled.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ FRED. RIPS is very anxious to see his friends and have a talk about European affairs. He may be found in the saloon of the United States Hotel, where for the present he regales himself with the news.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the corks fly.—MORGAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

☞ B. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

☞ CHARLEY BRETTOGLE is sending out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the Spring style for summer wear should look in.

☞ FRANK HERRMANN, at Whitehouse's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ KENNEDY has the latest periodicals.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1859.

American Meeting at Cincinnati.

The Americans of Cincinnati met last evening at Smith and Nixon's Hall. The attendance was not large. Among those present were Hon. L. D. Campbell and Hon. John Scott Harrison.

Hon. L. D. Campbell addressed the meeting. He stated that he attended the late Republican Convention in this city, he considered the fourth resolution passed by that body an insult to the Americans who had been invited to fraternize with them.

The following, reported by the Committee on Resolutions, was unanimously adopted:

The Republican party of Ohio in its recent Convention, as well by its resolves as by its nominations, has shown itself subservient to insolent dictations of foreignism on the one hand, and the arrogant demands of fanaticism on the other; thus assuming ground both anti-American and sectional, alike distasteful and offensive to Americans and national men of all parties.

The Democratic party has proved itself utterly false to the great doctrine of "Non Intervention," by the unwarrantable interference of its present administration in the local affairs of our Territories, for the purpose of suppressing or preventing the popular will of the people.

It has for many years fostered and still encourages an undue foreign influence in the politics of the country for mere party purposes, and it sustains its present administration in a reckless and profligate extravagance which exceeds anything in the history of our country, which is great cause of alarm.

We therefore believe it to be the duty of the American party (disavowing all sympathy, or co-operation with either of the parties) to assume its proper and legitimate position of independence, therefore

Resolved, That we recommend a Mass Convention of all the conservative citizens of Ohio to be held at Cincinnati, to nominate a State ticket, which shall reflect the opinion of all who are in favor of sustaining honest and independent judiciary; who are in favor of an honest and faithful application of the doctrine of "Non Intervention" by Congress in the local affairs of our territories; who oppose an unwarrantable foreign influence in our politics and who are devoted to, and under all circumstances will, maintain the integrity of our Federal Union.

The Slaveholders' Convention.

BALTIMORE, June 9.—The Maryland Convention, to consider the question as to the best means of regulating the free negro population, met again this morning. The hall was crowded, and much interest was manifested in the proceedings. Hon. Jas. Alfred Pearce, Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, submitted the report and resolutions of the majority.

Mr. F. W. Jacobs, of Worcester county, presented the views of a portion of the minority, being a written address, going over the whole ground and detailing the grievances of the slave owners of Maryland, and the pernicious influence of free negroism on the population generally. He advocated the prohibition of emancipation and the passage of laws for the gradual extinction of free negroes. He alluded to the tendency in Northern and Western States to legislate against free negroes. He alluded to the interference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the North in the matter; was very severe on the New York Christian Advocate, touching its strictures on the Convention held at Cambridge, and its attempts to threaten with Ecclesiastical cowhide the Methodists of Maryland if they countenance the present movement. He avowed himself a Methodist, but repudiated in strong language any attempt at Ecclesiastical interference with the domestic institutions of the State.

BALTIMORE, June 9.—The slaveholder's convention adopted the following resolutions, reported by the majority of the committee and adjourned sine die.

Resolved, That the convention considers any measures for the general removal of the free blacks from the State of Maryland impolitic, inexpedient and uncalled for, by any public exigency which could justify it.

Resolved, That the free negro population should be well and thoroughly controlled by efficient laws, to the end that it may be orderly, industrious and productive.

Resolved, That, for the purpose of diminishing as far as possible the evils which proceed from an excessive and increasing free class of negroes, the policy of the State declared in 1831 should be reaffirmed, and such amendments be made to the act of that year as will give to it active force. Such as will either prohibit emancipation altogether, or compel the prompt removal from the State of those emancipated; and that the legislature should be asked to review and amend the laws relating to free negroes and to emancipation, so as to remedy all the defects of a system which time and experience have disclosed.

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to submit the views of this Convention, and to ask appropriate legislation by the General Assembly.

A LIFE OF CRIME.—HENRY WOOD, alias Bascom, a noted English cracksman, died in the Rhode Island State Prison on Monday, of consumption.

He was born at Warwick, England, and was 45 years of age. On the day before his death he gave to the Warden of the Prison a brief narrative of his life. He was arrested in England, when sixteen years of age, for theft, and sentenced to three months' imprisonment, being flogged both at the commencement and termination of his term. On his discharge, he was again arrested at the door of the jail for robbery, was tried, convicted and transported to Australia for seven years, during twelve months of which time he was in irons. On his discharge, at the end of the term of sentence, he robbed a man, in Sydney, N. South Wales, and was, in consequence, sentenced to seven years' sentence. Having served out this sentence, he came to America, and on the last day of May, 1847, in eighteen months after his arrival, was arrested in Boston for burglary, for which he was sent to [illegible] State Prison for ten years. On his discharge, in November, 1857, he came to Providence, and in twenty-four days time was arrested for attempting to break in a store, and was sent to the State Prison for three years, as above stated. He had a cough for twelve years. He died thoroughly penitent, expressing the belief that his life would be a different one had he the privilege of living it over again.

"THE STRONGEST MAN IN THE WORLD" PROSTRATED.—At Boston the other evening, Dr. Geo. B. Winship, who is said to be the strongest man in the world, was announced to deliver a lecture. The hall was filled, and the Dr. after having commenced his lecture was seen to tremble and fall to the floor. He appeared again and again swooned, when by the advice of physicians he was dissuaded from attempting to go on with his lecture. It is said that on being taken from the hall, his heart had nearly ceased to beat. Dr. W. accounts for the unfortunate affair on the ground that the atmosphere of the hall was close and impure. His friends, however, regard it as caused by the peculiarity of appearing before a public audience for the first time. Dr. W. has for several years given much attention to the subject of physical education. He is twenty-five years of age, five feet seven inches in height, and weighs one hundred and forty-three pounds. He graduated at Cambridge five years ago. He can raise a barrel of flour from the floor to his shoulder; can raise himself with either little finger till his chin is half a foot above it; can raise 809 pounds with either little finger; can put up a dumb bell of 141 pounds; exercises daily with two dumb bells weighing 100 pounds each, which he can raise alternately above his head; can lift with the hand 916 pounds dead weight, without the aid of straps or belts of any kind. Topham, the strongest man in England, could raise only 800 pounds in the same way; and the celebrated Belgian giant could lift only 800. Dr. W. was prepared to exhibit all these facts, but the unexpected turn which events took prevented it. The strong man proved to be an infant.

WHEAT REPORTS COMING UP—FLOUR GOING DOWN.—We have been visited by a number of farmers throughout the county this forenoon, many of whom a few days ago had given their wheat crops up as entirely destroyed by the frost. Now some of these same men say they were deceived, that their crops are not injured; others, in different localities, that it is only slightly damaged, and one, the loudest "croaker" of all, says that had the frost not come that he should have had thirty bushels to the acre, but as it is he thinks he will have only fifteen. This is just as we anticipated, farmers became excited without cause, and many of them have purchased flour here this week at prices ranging from $7,50 to $7,75. Yesterday, so great was the demand, that holders placed their figures at $8, which was paid. To-day, we are informed by retailers, the demand has fallen off, and that buyers are few at $7,75.

The Crops and the Frost.

Knowing that the subject of the growing crops is so rousing the attention of people generally, we again lay before our readers extracts from our Ohio exchanges, which are selected principally in reference to the wheat crop. The growing corn, although in some localities severely nipped, has received no injury.

We ascertain from the Xenia Torchlight that "In Greene County, the opinion prevails very generally that the wheat remains uninjured from the frost in that county."

The Lorain Eagle of the 8th says: "As far as we can learn wheat is not badly injured, and that there is a fair prospect of a good yield."

The Mansfield Shield remarks, "that some farmers say the wheat is not so much injured while others fear the frost. A few days will determine its extent."

The editor of the Ohio Press, published at Springfield, has inquired of a number of farmers, and they all report "the wheat crops uninjured."

The editor of the Harrison Co. Sentinel says: "We have conversed with a number of our farmers, and they tell us that they think the wheat is not seriously injured."

The Summit Beacon has information "that at least one-fourth of the wheat crop in that vicinity has been destroyed, the Mediterranean, being about ten days in advance of most other varieties has so far matured as to escape freezing. The blue stem on high ground, unless very backward, is generally saved."

VIRGINIA.—The Wheeling Argus, June 9th, closes an article on the subject of the frost and the crops thus: "From all we have heard we do not think there is cause for anything like alarm. There cannot be a failure that will affect the general crop of the country."

IOWA.—The Davenport Gazette, June 7th, says: "Yesterday the weather was delightful, and we have the satisfaction of stating, upon the authority of farmers, that the corn is not at all injured by the frosts of Saturday and Sunday mornings. Some fields were turned slightly yellow, but a few days sun will restore the corn to its wonted color. The wheat is benefitted by cool weather this season."

An Ashland county correspondent of the Cleveland Review, writing on the 6th, says:—"I had a ride to-day of fifteen miles through a good wheat growing section in Ashland county. The crop looks fine and will be ready for harvest about the first of July. The frost did not injure it much, if at all. This village has been filled to-day with excited farmers, and large stories were told of the injury that such and such a one had heard of, but subsequent inquiry, and a careful sifting of all the testimony, shows that a little wheat on the low bottom lands has been injured, and that is all."

The Lancaster Gazette, speaking of the late frost, says: "Old King Frost cut a similar freak on the same day in the year 1485, and the farmers of that day will recollect, that the corn thus cut down grew up rapidly, yielding abundantly. It is also a remarkable fact, that one of the greatest crops of corn ever gathered was in the year 1845. Should the remainder of the season prove favorable, we think no fears need be entertained as to this crop. Don't plow up and replant but 'let well enough alone!' It is pretty generally conceded, that the greater portion of the wheat was advanced beyond injury from frost, though late fields will, perhaps, be found somewhat injured."

NEW YORK.—An old farmer of Caledonia informs the Rochester Union that the recent frost has not injured the wheat, and he does not believe that a May or June frost can injure that plant. He states that in 1816 there was a late spring frost in his section, by which the stalks of wheat were actually frozen, and the yield from the same field was forty bushels to the acre of prime Genesee.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

— A butcher named Beedecker, at London, was arrested on Monday last for stealing five head of cattle from the farm of B. W. Gwynne, in Madison county. The thief sold the cattle at Springfield, whither they were traced, and taken back. Beedecker and his brother, who resides at Dayton, who it is supposed was an accomplice in the theft, have both been arrested.

— We learn from the Urbana Citizen that on Thursday morning of last week, the family of Rev. A. N. Cowan, of that place, had a narrow escape from death by poison. It appears that on the evening previous, one of the girls had mixed some arsenic with butter for the purpose of killing rats. Not knowing the circumstance, another of the girls in making the breakfast arrangements next morning, took the plate of poisoned butter, and placed it on the table. The whole family partook freely of it before the mistake was discovered. Physicians were sent for who administered the proper remedies. after which they recovered, except Mr. Cowan, who is still suffering from the effects.

— A barn belonging to Mr. Scoville, at Cleveland, was burned down last night. Two horses perished in the flames.

— Esau Harris, who resided near McConnelsville, O., cut his throat on the 1st inst., and died in fifteen minutes. He had the delirium tremens.

— Twelve hundred and six sheep have been killed by dogs in Muskingum county, according to the return of the Assessors, during the year 1858, and seven hundred and eighty-six wounded.

— We learn from the Toledo Herald that a brakesman named Wilcox, on the Wabash Valley Railroad, fell from a train at Washington Station on Tuesday, killing him instantly. The body of the unfortunate man was cut in two. His remains were taken to Fort Wayne by the Masonic Fraternity for interment.

— A drunken man named William McAlexander, of Adams township, Montgomery county, on Thursday night of last week, while abusing his wife, was interrupted by his son. The inhuman brute drew a butcher knife on his child, inflicting three wounds on his body, which it is feared may prove fatal.

— Sandusky Coler, of Fayette county, said to be a man of good property, but of doubtful character, on Sunday last struck David Upthegrove, colored man, a blow with his fist in the neck, killing him instantly. Coler has fled.

— Henry Frecker, the German, who in March last, at Cleveland, killed an infant, his own illegitimate child, by cutting its throat, and then throwing its body into a hog-pen, has been sentenced to the Penitentiary for life.

— A burglar, who calls himself Wallace Jenkins, broke into the jewelry store of Mr. Benner, at New Lisbon, on Saturday night. Mr. B., hearing the fellow at work, fired, inflicting a wound on the thief, from which it is supposed he will not recover.

—The garden of Dr. J. Strong, in Elyria, was entered on Sunday night, and eighteen fruit and ornamental trees sawed down. The Democrat supposes malice growing out of the efforts of Dr. S. in the liquor prosecutions in Elyria instigated the act.

— We learn by the Elyria Democrat, that Peter Pollch, who escaped from the Lorain jail some weeks ago, after conviction for burglary, stole a horse in Amherst on the 7th, rode into Elyria, was seen by the owner, who recovered his horse, and the thief was secured.

— The damage to the wheat crop in Fayette county by the frost is thought not to be very [illegible].

— The barn of Joseph Harris, Perry township, Ashland county, with its contents, in all valued at $1,000, was destroyed by fire on Thursday week.

— Dr. L. D. Tolman, President of the Cleveland, Medina and Tuscarawas Railroad Company, and a prominent and estimable citizen, died at Medina on the 4th inst.

— There is considerable sensation in Mansfield, owing to the discovery that two infant children (twins) recently born were deprived of life on birth by their mother, a Mrs. Morrow, a woman of not over good repute.

EDITORIAL CONVENTION.—The Editorial and Typographical Association of New York met in Convention at Syracuse yesterday. About forty editors and publishers were present.

S. L. TRUAIR, of the Syracuse Journal, President, made an opening speech, when the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, and after the appointment of committees and the transaction of unimportant business, the meeting adjourned until the afternoon.

ANOTHER WIFE MURDERER HUNG.—Dr. KING, the wife poisoner, was hung at Coburg, C. W., yesterday morning. He made a speech on the gallows declaring his guilt and willingness to die; that he had made his peace with God, and desired the people to pray for him. A vast number of people were present.

WHEAT HARVEST IN ILLINOIS.—The wheat harvest in Union county, Southern Illinois, was commenced June 26, and a letter to the Chicago Press says the grain is perfect, and the yield will be most satisfactory. Shipments of new wheat will be made by the 15th. The corn crop is very promising.

General News.

☞ G. W. Kendall has been named for the post of Governor of Texas.

☞ James Williams, an African, died in Augusta, Ga., recently, at the remarkable age of one hundred and fifteen years.

☞ During the last five months no less than sixty murders have been committed in four cities, New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago.

☞ Governor Morgan, of New York, has accepted an invitation from the Common Council of Buffalo to visit that city. The event is to take place on the 22nd inst.

☞ Rev. Henry Wood, now in China, writes to the N. H. Patriot, that a laboring man in the interior of China can live comfortably on food costing one cent per day.

☞ The Northwestern Christian Advocate denies the paragraph going the rounds, stating that Bishop Janes gave a Masonic sign, and thus dispersed the Texas mob. He did no such thing, for the best of reasons—he didn't know how.

☞ The jewelry store of Joseph Watt, at Ann Arbor, Mich., was entered by burglars on Saturday night, the safe forced open and $4,000 worth of jewelry taken therefrom. A reward of $500 is offered for the apprehension of the thief and the recovery of the property.

☞ The household of Mr. Robert Stuart, at Newberry, S. C., consisting of four whites and six negroes, were poisoned a few days ago with arsenic put in the food by the slave cook. Mr. S. and wife, and two other members of the family, it was thought could not survive. The slave had been threatened by Mr. S. with a whipping, and when arrested confessed the deed.

☞ There are serious troubles among the settlers in Renville county, Minnesota. About 300 families entered the land of an Indian reservation and settled there, the government officers telling them they could do so, as they say. Now the government is warning them off, and there are complaints that the soldiers have burnt cabins and committed other outrages.

☞ Notwithstanding the rumors of the frost having killed the growing wheat crops, the efforts of holders to obtain an advance in prices at Chicago on Tuesday were abortive. At the close of the market flour declined ten cents, and wheat four cents. There are now 1,507,-870 bushels of corn in store, being more than double the quantity in that city this time last year.

☞ Four young men, belonging to highly respectable families in Newark, New Jersey, and one or more of them engaged in professional studies, have been detected in a series of daring burglaries.

☞ There is a living calf on exhibition at Wheeling with a hand and arm. The arm is attached to a perfect shoulder, growing about eight inches back of the natural shoulder of the animal.

☞ They are to try again to elect a Member of Congress in the Eastern District of Rhode Island, on the 23d of this month.

☞ The masons and bricklayers of Chicago are on a strike for an advance in wages to $2 a day.

☞ Steamers are advertising in the Cleveland papers to carry passengers to Buffalo for fifty cents.

☞ Mr. Flynn, late Postmaster at Detroit, has refused the drafts of the Department for the balance in his hands amounting to nearly $8,000.

☞ Gov. Morgan, of New York, offers a reward of one thousand dollars for the apprehension of the murderer of Deputy Sheriff Morrison.

☞ The cabinet warehouse of John Faulkner, No. 125-7, Rivington Street, New York, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday night. Loss $50,000.

☞ The death of Mr. William H. Burroughs, a prominent member of the eminent dry goods firm of A. T. Stewart, of New York, was announced on Saturday.

☞ G. Mercer, an old and respected resident of Bethlehem, Pa., committed suicide on Friday, by shooting and hanging himself. He was deranged by sickness.

☞ One of the London papers says: "Here in England we used to have an established church, and we have it still, in name; but every year's legislation is tending to Americanize the English religion."

☞ Grant Thornburn, who resides in New Haven, is in the eighty-seventh year of his age. It will be sixty-five years, on the 13th of June, since he landed in America, on the wharf at the foot of Gouverneur's lane, New York.

☞ William Wallace Roberts, who was recently arrested for the murder of his father, near Brantford, C. W., in November, 1854, has been fully committed for trial. His mother is also in jail on a charge of having been concerned in the forgery of the will.

☞ A German named "Stephe," at Hudson, N. Y., last week cut his arm while dressing a cow which had died from disease. His arm shortly after became inflamed, and, growing gradually worse, finally resulted in his death on Thursday.

☞ The Empress Eugenie is much admired for the bravery with which she fulfills the dry task of presiding over the Council of Ministers. The Emperor is said to be suffering severely from rheumatism, which has settled in his left leg.

☞ The New Hampshire Legislature on Friday elected the following State officers: Treasurer, Peter Lambdin, of Concord; Printer, Asa McFarland, senior editor of the Statesman, of Concord; Warden of the State Prison, John Pise, of Concord.

☞ A celebration was to come off in Newburyport, Mass., on Wednesday, to welcome home a man who has been serving a sentence of four months in the House of Correction for liquor selling. Music, processions, and a grand supper were provided.

☞ A private letter from Rome says:—The Prince of Wales, before leaving Rome, called on the Pope and bid him farewell in the most cordial manner. On his Holiness expressing his regret at the unsettled state of Italy, the Prince said he should be most happy to take him to Malta if he liked to come with him.

☞ The Charivari of Vienna publishes a caricature representing Louis Napoleon as the Barber Figaro shaving Austria. Prussia on one side holds the towel, and England the soap. Russia, who has just been shaved clean, stands behind, and pointing to England and Prussia, says, "Help him, gentlemen! Your turn will come."

☞ The Boston Journal has the following: "The Webster Statue Committee met at the Parker House, June 8, and voted, 14 to 8, not to place the statue of Webster at the State House, when the Hon. Edward Everett, who defended the statue as a work of art, resigned as Chairman of the Executive Committee, as did also Wm. Amory, a member of the same Committee."

☞ A live alligator recently emerged from the muddy depths of the Mississippi river and crawled upon a wharf in New Orleans. Having taken a leisurely survey of the civilized world he began slowly to drag himself up the wharf toward the levee. He was seen and killed by blows from behind, no one daring to face the monster. He was ten feet long.

☞ Late San Francisco papers state that the Evening Bulletin, published in that city, had been prosecuted for an obscene publication, the offence being a reprint of the confession of Mrs. Sickles. It is asserted that the prosecution was malicious, having been instigated by certain parties, against whom the Bulletin had leveled its censure. The magistrate before whom the case was heard had reserved his decision.

☞ A Portland correspondent writes that during a late visit to Corvallis, Oregon, he witnessed three marriages where white men were the grooms and Indian squaws were the brides. The whites had enticed the squaws away from the Indian Reservation, and the Indian Agent sent some soldiers to bring the runaways back. The white lovers protested against being deprived of their sweethearts (?) but were told the squaws must go back to the reservation, unless they should be married. The whites thereupon submitted themselves to the matrimonial noose, and the squaws were raised to the dignity of white men's wives.

As the President of the United States was en route for North Carolina, on the train between Norfolk and Weldon, a gentleman asked him if he rested well on the Chesapeake boat coming down. Mr. BUCHANAN replied:

"Well, sir, either I was too long, or the berths were too short, and I did not sleep as comfortable as I might."

This remark was overheard by the Captain of the Bay Line, who instantly replied:

"No, no, Mr. President, the reason you could not sleep was because you were in the 'Bridal Chamber,' and as this is the first time in your life that you occupied such a couch, it is no wonder that you could not sleep."

☞ The Pennsylvanians have had a haul in the matter of bishop electing. Dr. Bowman, of the Church of the Ascension, who is chosen for this State, is "another Philadelphian."

AFFAIRS IN ARIZONA.—The Arizonian of the 19th ult. is nearly filled with statements in reference to the outrages committed on the Mexicans inhabiting the Sonorita Valley. It gives an account of the murder of Mr. Byrd, by some Mexican peons, who have escaped from the country. This murder, together with the fact that Americans have lately been ordered out of Hermosillo in Sonora, was the cause of cruel attack upon some Mexicans, made on Sunday, the 9th inst., by a gang of self-constituted regulators, who had proceeded up the Sonorita Valley, and with force and arms compelled every Mexican employed upon the different ranches to leave, under the penalty of extermination for disobedience. The party, numbering six or seven men, proceeded from rancho, driving away the Mexican laborers with their families, until they reached a mescal distillery, just below Ake's range, near the head of the valley. Here a number of Mexicans and some Yaqui Indians were employed. On the approach of these "regulators," the Mexicans and Indians fled, when they were fired upon, and a fight took place. Three Mexicans and one Yaqui Indian were killed, and one Mexican mortally wounded, while of the attacking party one man was slightly injured by a lance thrust.

Thirty Mexicans left Tubac the day following the receipt of the news, and every farm on the Sonorita is deserted by its laborers. The intelligence, no doubt highly exaggerated, has gone to Sonora, and it will be a wonder if any Americans escape from the country alive.—Consternation and distrust is spread among the Mexican people. Some families have sacrificed much to escape from the country; have abandoned their little property, and fled for their lives.

The effects of this raid upon the Mexicans has been very bad upon the mining companies, which are the chief resources of the country. One hundred men left the Cerro Colorado mines. The Patagonia is deserted by its laborers, and at the Santa Rita concern it has required the most earnest efforts to keep the men contented. The farmers will suffer greatly for want of hands, now in the season of corn planting. It is a disastrous event to the country.

The indignation at these villainous attacks on the Mexicans was very great among the American settlers in Arizona. Three of the gang have been apprehended, and were in irons at Fort Buchanan. Their names are Page, Bolt, Scott. Wm. Ake, J. Pennington, Sam. Anderson, and a man named Brown, are yet at large.

PENNSYLVANIA POLITICS.—The People's Convention at Harrisburgh previous to adjournment on Wednesday adopted resolutions disapproving of Executive intervention to prostrate the will of the people as a dangerous element; protesting against the sectional Pro-Slavery policy of the Administration; denouncing the attempts to enact a Congressional Slave Code for the Territories; affirming hostility to the extension of Slavery, condemning the attempts to revive the Slave-Trade, and censuring the Administration for conniving at its practical reopening; favoring a protective tariff, and condemning the reckless and profligate extravagance of the National Administration; deploring the defeat of the Homestead Bill; advising legislation to prevent frauds upon the Naturalization laws, so as to preserve the purity of the ballot-box; approving of the enactment to prevent the introduction of foreign criminals; inviting all parties to join in the restoration of the Government to its original purity, approving of the course of Senator CAMERON and other members of Congress who supported the Homestead bill, and denouncing the course of the Administration in reference to Kansas.

PROPOSITION TO LEASE THE ERIE RAILROAD.—A proposition has been made by certain parties in New York to lease the Erie Railroad for ten years on the following terms: To pay the bondholders $1,000,000 for the present year; $1,500,000 for the next year; $2,000,000 for the third year, and $2,500,000 per annum for the remainder of the time. The latter sum would be sufficient to pay the interest on the entire debt, and a dividend on the stock. The parties offer to give security to keep the road in repair, and to be subject once a year to the investigation of a committee under the instructions of the creditors of the Company.

THE RAILROAD WAR—[illegible].—The representatives of the four Railroad lines met in New York yesterday. It is said that prospects are considered good for a settlement. The point contended for by the Pennsylvania Central and Baltimore and Ohio, viz., discrimination in favor of Philadelphia and Baltimore —has been conceded by the New York Central. It remains to be seen whether minor complications can be arranged, one of which is caused by the desire of New York lines to reduce speed, while the Pennsylvania Central, being the shortest line, desires present fast schedules to remain in force, as that line can make the time with ease.

SPAIN PREPARING FOR DEFENSE.—The naval agents of Spain are going through the great seaports of Britain, with ready cash, in search of obtainable vessels for that government. It is said that others will be dispatched to this country for a like purpose. This is, at least, an expeditious way of augmenting, or rather restoring, a decayed navy, and may also prove not the least efficient plan, especially in times like these.

CINCINNATI LOCALS.—Quite a stir has been created amongst this "happy family" within a few days. W. G. GRIFFIN, known as Invisible Green, Esq., has retired from the Times, whether upon a well-preserved fortune, the laurels of his book of Invisibilities, or to engage elsewhere, has not yet been made public.

On Sunday afternoon our most highly-esteemed friend, FRED. HURT, had his thigh fractured, and was otherwise seriously injured, by being thrown from a barouche in returning with his family from Ross Hill, the general German festive ground. We thought "Fred" stood better on his pins, and that his heart was the only weak place about him. He has the consolation of knowing, (though we don't believe it,) he the old woman said of her mended crockery, it will be stronger than ever. He has all the sympathy we can tender, and our sincere wishes for his speedy recovery.

The local reporter of the Cincinnati Press, Mr. LOUIS A. ALLEN, met with a more serious contretemps on the same day. He had taken a seat in an express wagon, returning from witnessing the German festivities at Ross Hill, with four others, when he was slung-shotted, tumbled out of the wagon, and left to the mercy of passers by. The Times says:

"Mr. Allen was finally picked up by some of the firemen from Mohawk Engine-house, who, acting the part of the Good Samaritan, took him to their house, and, calling a physician, had his wounds washed and dressed. There were no less than ten severe cuts on Mr. Allen's head—four or five of which had to be sewed up. He bled profusely, and during the greater portion of the night remained insensible."

Mr. ALLEN, it is supposed, was mistaken for somebody else, as he had not given the slightest provocation by word or deed.

Mr. BELLMAN, who localizes for the Cincinnati Gazette, will make a balloon ascension on the 4th of July, a favorite amusement with him since his memorable voyage with Mons. Godard. He will be fortunate if he does not go up in earnest, and come down like the afterpiece of a rocket. We wish him a successful adventure, and that it may realize his expectations.

DEATH OF EMINENT MEN.—Three prominent men—JOSEPH FOWLER, SAMUEL MOTT and BARNET GROOMS—died in New York on Tuesday. Mr. FOWLER was for many years a merchant and acting British Consul after the absence of Mr. BARCLAY, until Mr. ARCHIBALD was appointed. Mr. MOTT was a well known business man, and public spirited citizen. BARNET GROOMS, an old merchant, he was formerly connected with JOHN JACOB ASTOR in the fur trade in the North-west, and was the first white man who passed over the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific, by the passage now known as "Fremont's Route."

☞ Connecticut is preparing to follow the example of Massachusetts in relation to the qualification of voters. An amendment has been proposed to the State Constitution to require a residence of three years after naturalization before a foreigner shall be entitled to vote.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

QUEBEC, June 11.—The steamship North Briton, from Liverpool on the 1st inst., has arrived. She brings dates two days later than the advices received by the steamer Arago.

GREAT BRITAIN.—The English parliament met on the 31st ult. Speaker Denison was unanimously re-elected.

The funds were buoyant at the quoted advance.

FRANCE.—It is rumored that Napoleon will return to Paris in August, after the first series of military operations are carried into effect. Heavy shipments continue to be made of artillery and siege material.

The Paris Bourse was buoyant at an advance of over 1 per cent, three per cents closed at 62f 75c.

GERMANY.—The Military Committee of the German Diet have approved a motion to place an army on the Rhine.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, May 31.—Consols are quoted at 92½@93½.

The steamship's Niagara and Bavaria had arrived out.

There had been no decisive battle between the main armies.

Rumors have been received from Lombardy to the effect that Gen. Garibaldi had met with a repulse.

The Manchester advices continue favorable; the markets are generally active.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET.—Richardson & Spence's circular reports that the weather continues favorable for the crops, and the market for breadstuffs has a declining tendency. The flour market is very dull and all qualities are 2d@3d lower. American is quoted at 11s @13s 9d. Wheat is very dull, but quotations are nominally unchanged. Corn is also very dull; mixed is quoted at 6s 8d@6s 9d; yellow at 6s 9d@7s 1d, and white at 8s@8s 9d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET.—The circular reports provisions steady, pork firm, bacon quiet, lard dull at 60s@61s.

PRODUCE.—Sugar steady; coffee quiet; rice firm.

LONDON MARKETS.—Baring & Sons' circular reports that wheat has again declined 2s@4s. Sugar quiet; rice firm.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.—The market is unchanged. Consols are quoted at 93¼ to 93⅜.

Baring & Bros. quote American securities dull. Illinois Central is quoted at 45@47 per cent. discount; Erie 6½; N. Y. Central 66@68.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

The Sardinians forced a passage over the river Sesia at Pallestro, in the face of the Austrians, who were protected by the fortifications erected since their occupation of the city. After a severe conflict, they also succeeded in the capture of the city, taking many prisoners. The Sardinians were under the immediate command of King Victor Emmanuel.

Gen. Garibaldi was still creating a sensation in northern Lombardy. A rumor prevails that he has been defeated by a superior force and retreated to Tesin, but the rumor lacks confirmation, as the Turin dispatches intimate that he was making still further progress.

The Emperor Napoleon was about removing the head-quarters of the allies to Casale.

It is reported at Paris that as soon as the French enter Milan, England and Prussia will jointly make strenuous efforts to terminate the war by negotiation.

A fight had occurred at Florence between some English and American sailors on account of the latter wearing tri-colored rosettes.

The Emperor of Austria, the Arch Duke Charles and Gen. Hess, all reached Verona on the 31st ult., on their way to head-quarters.

LONDON, June 1.—The Queen held a court yesterday. The Earl of Elgin had an audience on his return from China, and Viscount Stratford De Redcliffe on his return from Constantinople.

Miss Florence Nightingale is in a precarious state of health, but the Advertiser contradicts the report of her having entered a convent.

The Banker's Magazine, in reference to the prospects of the money market, says that the expectation seems to be that the value of accommodations for the present will be comparatively easy, but subsequently an increased demand will arise, which may even carry the rate towards the close of the year four and a half per cent.

The Daily News' city article of Tuesday evening says, the fresh rise established in the funds to-day amounted to ⅛ per cent, making one per cent. in two days, and a total rebound of nearly 5 per cent. from the lowest point touched during the panic. Most of the other classes of securities also participated to-day in the upward movement. Among the considerations which assisted the rise to-day was an impression that the Austrians are getting the worst of the struggle, and that an early and general advance of the allied forces is probable.

The improvement established in the foreign exchanges at a moment when gold is flowing in so freely from Russia, Turkey and the United States, independently of the remittances again becoming due from Australia, likewise operated on the favorable side.

Gold arrived from St. Petersburgh to-day to the amount of eighty-nine thousand pounds sterling; nearly the whole of which is expected to be taken to the bank. The foreign exchanges this afternoon were more favorable.

The Times' city article says the funds opened this morning with undiminished firmness. There was no news to excite attention, and speculation is dormant. The Savings Bank purchases appear to have ceased. Of the £208,000 by the Niagara £140,000 have arrived in London, and been taken for the continent, the remainder being on French account, will go to France direct.

In the foreign exchanges this afternoon the rate on Hamburg was slightly higher than during the month just ended. The movement in consols has been entirely upward, and an advance has been established of three and three quarters per cent. although scarcely a single fact has transpired to alter the complexion of political affairs.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The steamer Fulton arrived last night; her advices are mainly anticipated by the North Briton. Her dates are to the 1st of June.

The following are the latest dispatches from the seat of war:

BERNE, May 30, via France.—An insurrection has broken out in the Valtelline. The population are repairing in masses to Sondrio, the centre of the revolutionary movement.

The Austrian gendarmes who have retired into Switzerland have been disarmed by the Swiss authorities, and sent into the interior of the country.

The Federal council has dispatched troops to the frontiers of the Grisons.

Gen. Garibaldi's vanguard is at Cantu.

The telegraph to Como is worked by Sardinian employees.

It is stated that 3,000 Sardinians are at Varese, and that a French corps d' armee is expected there.

BERNE, May 30, via Germany.—Gen Garibaldi yesterday suffered a defeat by a superior force of Austrians, and has withdrawn into the Canton of Tessin.

TURIN, May 31.—The first details of the fight at Palestro have arrived here. The enemy were intercepted at Palestro, Casalino and Vinzaglio, but after an obstinate defence, our troops carried the entrenchment at the point of the bayonet with admirable bravery, and took two pieces of cannon and many small arms and prisoners. The loss of the enemy was very great, but the extent of our loss is as yet unknown.

Vercelli was yesterday evening illuminated. The Emperor traversed the streets on foot, and the town was en fete. The King passed the night at Torrione, among the encamped troops.

The London News says it will be observed that our telegraphic intelligence contains two reports respecting the [illegible] of Garibaldi, the same in origin of date, but in all other respects perfectly contradictory. It would be easy to avoid this incongruity by publishing only the dispatch which we believe contained the truth, but we give both as they have reached us. It will be observed that that via France containing the most favorable news relates to the state of things on Monday, whereas the defeat is alleged to have taken place on Sunday. If Garibaldi had taken refuge in the Swiss Canton of Tessin he would have been disarmed with his entire force and could not have a vanguard at Cantu which is on the road to Milan.

The news of the insurrection at Sondrio and the disarming of the Austrian gendarmes given in another telegraph report is also dated Berne, Monday, and a dispatch from Turin which is in telegraphic communication with Como announces that Garibaldi has received reinforcements there. On the whole we are satisfied that the General is not only in the field but successful.

PARIS, May 31.—The semi-official Pays of this evening, contains the following telegraphic dispatch:

"The Austrians, fifty thousand strong, quitted Piacenza yesterday and re-entered Lombardy." The same journal also states that England is willing to renew diplomatic relations with Naples, but only on condition that France will simultaneously do the same.

The announcement of Sir James Hudson's departure for Naples was premature.

SACKVILLE, June 14.—The steamer Europa has arrived at Halifax, with Liverpool dates to the 4th inst.

The advices from Italy confirm the capture of Palestro by the Sardinians. King Victor Emanuel commanded in person, and exhibited the greatest gallantry. The Austrians twice endeavored to retake Palestro, but were repulsed after a sanguinary encounter. The Sardinian reports say that they captured 1,000 prisoners and eight guns.

The latest dispatch from Turin reports the Austrians in full retreat across the Ticino into Lombardy. The report received by previous arrivals, that Gen. Garabaldi had met with a repulse by a superior Austrian force, is confirmed, but it now appears that he was successful in re-entering Como.

STATE OF TRADE.

The advices from Manchester continue favorable and the prices for all kinds of goods had slightly advanced.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS.—The market continues with a declining tendency.—Circulars quote flour dull at Tuesday's decline; sales of American at 11s@11s 9d; wheat also dull at 2d@3d lower than on Tuesday. Western red 8s@10s 2d; western white 10s 3d@11s. There is also an excessive dullness in the corn market, with a decline of 2d@3d; mixed is quoted at 6s 6d@6s 8d; yellow 6s 8d@6s 11d; and white 8s@8s 6d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET.—Beef quiet, but steady; pork quiet but steady; bacon heavy; lard dull at 60s@60s 6d; tallow slightly lower, sales at 55s 6d@56s.

LONDON MARKET.—Baring & Bros. report breadstuffs dull. Wheat 2s@3s lower; white at 50s@54s, and red at 46s@50s. Iron—Welsh rails dull, and offered at £15 10s@£16. Sugar buoyant. Spices higher. Coffee firm. Rice firm, but in some cases at a decline of 3d@3d. Tea firm at 1s 3d for Congo.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, June 3.—The bank rates have been reduced to 3½ per cent. The bullion in the bank has increased during the week £357,000. Consols closed at 93@93½. Bell & Co.'s report transactions in American stocks as small, but prices are held firm. Baring Bros. report business in American stocks limited, but without change.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

The Austrian efforts to retake Palestro are described to have been very sanguinary. At one time the Sardinian troops were outflanked on the right, when the Zouaves came to the rescue and repulsed the Austrians.

The Austrian version of the battle has not been received. The Austrians had retreated from Robbia, and a telegraph to the London Daily News, dated Turin, June 3d, says the Austrians were in full retreat across the Ticino. The French head-quarters were at Vercelli.

Garibaldi had been driven into the mountains by the Austrian troops under Gen. Urban, who retook Varez, but a dispatch received via Turin, states that Gen. Garibaldi gathered reinforcements, returned, and surprised the Austrians, recaptured Varez, and subsequently re-entered Como in triumph. Gen. Neil, who had been sent to the assistance of Gen. Garibaldi, had occupied Navaro.

The insurrection in Lombardy was spreading.

TURIN, May 31.—A fresh victory has been gained by our troops. At 7 o'clock this morning a force of 25,000 Austrians endeavored to retake Palestro. The King of Sardinia commanding the fourth division in person, and Gen. Cialdini at the head of the third regiment of Zouaves resisted the attack for a considerable time, and then having successfully assumed the offensive, pursued the enemy, taking a thousand prisoners and capturing eight guns, five of which were obtained by the Zouaves; 500 Austrians were drowned in the canal during the fight.

Another fight took place at Confienza, in the province of Sardinia, in which the enemy were repulsed by the division under Gen. Forey, of the first corps of the French army after two hours' conflict. Last night, a picket of the enemy endeavored to pass the Po at Cornesseria, but they were repulsed by the inhabitants of that vicinity. The Austrians had evacuated Varo, in the province of Sabbia [illegible].

TURIN, June 1st.—A second victorious conflict occurred at 6 o'clock last evening, at Palestro. The enemy endeavored to re-enter, but were repulsed by a division under Gen. Cialdini, composed of the Zouaves, and Piedmontese cavalry. The King pressed forward where the fight was most furious—the Zouaves vainly trying to restrain him. On Tuesday the Austrians attacked the Sardinian vanguard at Sleste, and after a fight of two hours, our troops pursued the enemy across the Ticino.

The details of the battle of Palestro say that the Sardinians were at one time out-flanked by the Austrians, who threatened the bridge of boats across the Sesia, over which General Canrobert was to effect a junction with the King. At this juncture the Zouaves lost two hundred killed, including ten officers.

The accounts from Gen. Garibaldi state that a numerous Austrian corps having arrived before Varez, he ordered the National Guard not to resist, and fall back on Lago Maggiore. An attack was attempted by our troops against Savena on the Lake but without result.

TURIN, June 2.—Gen. Garibaldi has surprised and defeated the Austrians at Varez, and that town is again free of the enemy. Gen. Garibaldi re-entered Somi on the night of the 2d. Gen. Neil entered Novara on the 1st, after a slight encounter with the Austrian outposts, who shortly fled. The Emperor arrived the same evening amidst the acclamations of the people. The Austrians endeavored to cross the Po at Bessignora, but the inhabitants opposed them, firing upon and destroying an Austrian bark. Valtelini is in a state of insurrection. The town of Sondrio has proclaimed for King Victor Emanuel. The Duke of Parma has arrived in Switzerland.

The French engineers had arrived at Sstra, and were collecting vessels to cross Lake Maggiore with 5,000 men. The French squadron in the Adriatic have captured thirty-five Austrian vessels valued at £4,000,000.

LONDON, Saturday, June 4.—A special dispatch to the Daily News, dated Turin, on Friday night, says, that the Austrians were in full retreat crossing the Ticino. Garibaldi has gained a new victory, and the insurrection in Lombardy is spreading. The Austrian Bulletin's official correspondence dated Verona, June 1st, says, the enemy attacked the vanguard of the seventh Austrian corps, but their further advance was stopped by the corps under Gen. Zobel. A very large number are reported to have been wounded during the encounter.

MILAN, June 2.—On the 1st inst. Varez was cannonaded and taken by Gen. Urban, who reinstated the legal authorities and levied war contribution on the city.

GREAT BRITAIN.—No business will be done in Parliament until after the delivery of the Queen's speech, which will be on the 7th inst.

In the Derby races the stakes were won by Sir Joseph Hawley's horse Musjid. The value of the stakes was nearly £7,000, and it is rumored that Sir J. Hawley won £100,000 more in bets.

It is stated that a prospectus of a new company will be issued in a few days for laying a telegraphic cable from Cornwall to Canada. The proposed capital is £500,000.

A great explosion of saltpetre occurred on board the troop ship Eastern Monarch, from Kurrachee, while she was anchored off Spithead, with 500 return soldiers and their families on board. The ship was speedily enveloped in flames, but through the prompt action of her officers and crew all but seven persons were saved. Five out of the seven were children, of parents who were killed by the explosion.

The London Times' city article of Saturday announces the heavy failure at Augsburg of Paul Von Stettin.

The city article in the London News says, that the rates of discount are still falling.

The London Herald mentions a rumor that Mr. Bright, and the Radicals in Parliament, have been gained by the Government by the offer of three seats in the Cabinet.

FRANCE.—The recall of the French soldiers on leave has added 130,000 persons to the army.

The Paris Bourse was advancing, and the quotations are higher; three per cent rentes closed on the 3d at 63f. for money.

Flat-bottomed gunboats are in process of construction in France to navigate the Po, Ticino and other rivers of Italy.

Twenty-two additional battalions of foot Chasseurs are to be organized.

ITALY.—The U. S. frigate Wabash with British men-of-war fired guns in tribute to the memory of the late King of Naples.

It is stated that Piedmont has recognized the neutrality of the Papal States with certain conditions.

GERMANY.—An extensive French manufacturer, whose establishment at Hesse Cassel employed seven hundred hands, has been compelled to quit in consequence of the excitement against the French.

PRUSSIA.—The terms of the new loan by the Prussian Government have been published. The loan is to bear five per cent. interest, and be issued by public subscriptions. The redemption of the loan is to commence in 1863, by the payment of one per cent. annually thereafter until it is called in.

TURKEY.—The garrison at Belgrade has been reinforced, and its numbers are reported to be trebled.

The Porte is about to send a strong naval force to the Adriatic.

Herzegovia was in open revolt; the latest intelligence was to the effect that a revolt in the whole of European Turkey was imminent.

NEW YORK, June 15.—The steamship City of Manchester is signalled below. She was advertised to sail from Cork on the 3d inst., and her advices will therefore not be so late as the intelligence received by the Europa at Halifax.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

ST. LOUIS, June 14.—Mr. Swinburn, agent of Smoot, Russell & Co., arrived from Leavenworth this morning, with $600 in Pike's Peak gold.—Swinburn proceeds immediately to New York; to test the quality of this gold. He says a much larger amount of dust might have been brought in, but miners demand $20 an ounce, which is regarded exorbitant.

An extra of the Leavenworth Times furnishes glowing accounts of the mines. Claims which were considered worthless four weeks ago, are now commanding five to twenty thousand dollars. Gregory sold a claim for $21,000; several other claims had changed hands at $500 to 7,000. Snow has disappeared from the mountains, and prospecting is being vigorously conducted. New rich leads are constantly being discovered at Gregory diggings. The miners are making twenty-five hundred dollars each, per day (?)

Arrivals from the States continue large. All push immediately for the mountains. The health of the district is excellent. The spirits of the miners are jubilant.

Horace Greeley was expected at Denver city the day after express left.

PITTSBURGH, June 15.—About two o'clock this morning a fire broke out on the steamer Endeavor, which soon communicated to the Gazelle, and both were burned to the water's edge. The Endeavor is still afloat. There was no freight on board either boats. The Endeavor is insured in the Pennsylvania Company of Harrisburgh for $1,400, in the Quaker City for $2,000, and the Great Western of Philadelphia for $1,500. The Gazelle was insured in the Eureka of Pittsburgh for $5000.

Markets.

CINCINNATI, June 15—M.—Flour unchanged; sales since our report of yesterday of 500 bbls superfine to arrive at $7 50; 80 do. extra at $7 25; 450 do. superfine at $7 00; 150 do. white wheat at $7 30, and 150 do. extra do. at $7 30. Whisky steady, with good demand, at 26c. Wheat firm, and prime red has advanced 2@3c; sales of 400 bu prime red at $1 60; 1000 do. at $1 62, and 600 do. at $1 63. Corn steady and prices unchanged, sales of 500 bu at 85c. Barley firm at 60@63c; sales of 200 bu. Rye steady at 94@95c. Oats firm at 58c, Provisions dull and unchanged; sales of 250 bbls Rump Pork, City cut, at $12 50. Groceries quiet and unchanged; sales of 60 hhds sugar at $7@7⅝c, and 40 bbls Molasses at 37c River risen 5 inches. Weather clear and hot.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Flour 10c lower this morning; 5,000 bbls have been sold at $6 25@6 50 for State, and $7 15@7 30 for Ohio. Wheat heavy; sales 2,500 bu at $1 75@1 80 for white and $1 65 for western. Corn is lower; sales of 12,000 bu at 85c for mixed and 80c for yellow. Pork dull and nominal at $17 22½ for mess and $15 12½ for prime. Lard heavy. Whisky steady at 27c. Oats lower at 53@54c. Stocks dull but steady.

BALTIMORE, June 15.—Sales of Howard street and Ohio flour at $7. Wheat inactive at $1 65@1 85. Corn dull; yellow at 88c, white 79@81c. Provisions dull; sides 9¼c. Whisky nominal at 28c. Rio coffee 11⅞@11⅛c.

DR. ROBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.—Are you sick, no matter what organ is affected, depend upon it the blood, which is the food and sustenance of every organ, is full of corruption! My Scandinavian Blood Pills and Blood Purifier, break up the source of disease in the fluids of the body. They purge and purify the elements of the blood. Hence their quick and complete cures in dyspepsia, scrofula, eruptions, fits, tumors, nervousness, kidney complaints, piles, low fevers, debility, rheumatism, headache, want of sexual vigor, &c., &c. These remedies are astonishing the whole medical world.—See advertisement.

1859.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs

Open to visitors seeking health or pleasure, from June 1st to October 1st.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR OVER 500 VISITORS.

The Ohio White Sulphur Springs are situated in Delaware County, 18 miles North of Columbus, (the Capitol of Ohio) on the Scioto River, 10 miles from Delaware, 3 miles from the White Sulphur Station on the Springfield, Mount Vernon and Pittsburgh Railroad, and 10 miles from Prospect Valley or Springs Station, on the Columbus, Piqua and Indiana Railroad.

The medical qualities of these Springs are unsurpassed by those of any other Mineral Waters in the United States. For Rooms or other information, address

ANDREW WILSON, Jr.,
White Sulphur Springs, Ohio.

june15

E. CORNELISON,

TUNER AND REPAIRER OF

PIANO FORTES AND MELODEONS,

Columbus, Ohio.

[illegible]

☞ Orders left at Seltzer & Webster's Music Store, will receive prompt attention. je16

C. A. WAGNER,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN ALL KINDS OF FIRE WORKS, FIRE BALLOONS, FLAGS, MUSKETS, &c.

☞ Exhibition Fire Works for Cities, Towns and Villages, prepared at any prices from $50 to $500, and the necessary directions given for burning the same.

[illegible] Street, Columbus, Ohio.

je16-1yd

THE NEW BOOKSTORE!

J. H. Riley & Co.,

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

DEALERS IN LAW, MEDICAL AND SCHOOL BOOKS.

BLANK BOOKS,

of any size, style and pattern of ruling, on hand, and made to order.

RAILROAD AND INSURANCE OFFICES

Banks, Brokers, and County Offices, supplied with any article, in the line of Stationery, on the best terms, and all Works warranted.

BLANK NOTES AND DRAFTS

[illegible]

A full supply, at all times, of Valuable Standard Works Foreign and American Editions.

A good stock of valuable Mechanical and Scientific Works at all Times. All the new Books received direct.

French, English and American Stationery

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

Also, Paper Hangings and Borders, the most extensive Stock West of Philadelphia.

Window Shades and Fixtures, Window Cornices, Fine Mirrors, from 2 to 8 ft.; French Plate; Oil Paintings and Engravings, Portrait and Picture Frames always on hand and made to order. Cutlery and Gold Pens; Work Boxes and Dressing Cases; Card Cases and Porte Monnaies; Hair, Hat, Nail and Tooth Brushes; Pocket Books, Wallets, Bill Holders, &c., &c. june15

New Books.

FRUITS, FLOWERS AND FARMING: By Henry Ward Beecher.
VIEWS and Experiences of Religious Subjects. By Henry Ward Beecher.
ACADIA or a Month with the Blue Noses. By Frederic S. Cozzens.
HEADLEY, or the Mystery of the Weatherville. By J. W. De Forest.
To Cuba and Back, a Vacation Voyage. By R. H. Dana, Jr.
Thoughts on Educational Topics and Institutions. By George S. Boutwell.
The Romance of a Poor Young Man. By Henry J. Macdonald.
The empire of Austria. By John S. C. Abbott.
Wall Street to Cashmere, a Journal of Five Years in Africa, Asia and Europe. By John B. Ireland.
Lives of the Queens of England. By Agnes Strickland, (7 vols., cloth $ vs.)
The Life of William von Steuben. By Friedrich Kapp.
Two Ways to Wedlock, a Novellette. Reprinted from the New York Home Journal.
The New and the Old. By J. W. Palmer, M. D.
Southwold (a Novel.) By Mrs. Lillie Devereux Umsted.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Works of Michael De Montaigne. By W. Hazlitt, 4 vols.
Memoirs of Theophilus Parsons. By his Son.
Life of General H. Havelock, K. C. B. By J. T. Headley.
The Good News of God Sermons. By Charles Kingsley.

June 16, 1859.—tf J. H. RILEY & CO.

New and Good Books.

DIGEST OF OHIO STATE REPORTS JUST ready.
Burlamaqui's Natural and Public Law, from 5th London Edition.
Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England, New Ed. with additions.
Rosin: By Wm. [illegible].
Diary of Lady Morgan.
Home Memories.
Onward.
Sixty Years' Gleanings.
The Foster Brothers.
The Pillar of Fire.
Plan of Creation.
Mothers and Infants.
Prussian and Friends.
Douglas Jerrold.
Aaron's Memoirs.
Life and Travels of Herodotus.
For sale at the New Book Store.
june16 J. H. RILEY & Co.

Attention, Republicans!

THE EXPLOITS AND TRIUMPHS OF PAUL Morphy in Europe.
Amber's Chess for Winter Evenings.
Kenney's Manual of Chess.
Science and Art of Chess. By J. Monroe.
Staunton's Chess Tournament.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & Co.

GIBSON HOUSE,
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

Farmers, Horsemen and Beekeepers.

FARM DRAINAGE.—The Principles, Processes and Effects of Draining Land [illegible]. By Henry F. French.
A Practical Treatise on the Honey Bee. By L. Langstroth.
Hints to Horse-keepers. By Henry Wm. Herbert (Frank Forrester.)
For sale at the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & Co.

LATEST BOOKS.
Musings. By the author of Salad for the Solitary.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Hours with my Pupils. By Mrs. Phelps.
The Convalescent. By N. P. Willis.
Life of Rev. a Stewart.
Napoleonic Ideas.
Caird's Prairie Farming in America.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual Sessions of the General Assembly.

Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, Three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the State to vote at the next annual October election upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first clause of section twenty-five of the second article of the Constitution of said State, to wit: "All regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in January annually."

WM. B. WOODS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER,
President of the Senate.

April 5, 1859.

SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE,
COLUMBUS, O., April 7, 1859.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution, "Relative to an amendment to the Constitution, providing for Annual Sessions of the General Assembly," is a true copy from the original roll on file in this office.
A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE, FRANKLIN COUNTY,
COLUMBUS, April 12, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correct as returned to this office.
JOHN [illegible],
Auditor of Franklin County.

june16-4d

Cheap Dry Goods.

(High and Broad Streets.)

NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!

SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS

Embracing a Variety,

Not exceeded in this Market.

[illegible]

Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.

may 12. J. C. [illegible]

M. SCHLESSINGER,

SALOON AND RESTAURANT,

No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.

CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Cincinnati Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free Lunch daily from 10 a. m. to 12 m. One of K. W. E. B'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a fine performer secured for one of the best in the city. may12-tf

Superior Court of Franklin County.

Regular Terms for the Year 1859 and 1860.

THE FOLLOWING ORDER WAS ENTERED upon the Journal of the Superior Court of Franklin county, Ohio, at the opening of the [illegible] Term, 1859:
"Ordered that the Regular Terms of this Court for the ensuing year, be and the same are hereby fixed by the Court, as follows:
"September 26, 1859,
"December 26, 1859,
"March 5, 1860,
"May 7, 1860."
JAS. H. SMITH, Clerk
of said Court.

june15

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory — the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed. We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.

PRICE ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.

FOR COSTIVENESS;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSPEPSIA;
FOR JAUNDICE;
FOR THE CURE OF INDIGESTION;
FOR HEADACHE;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSENTERY;
FOR A FOUL STOMACH;
FOR THE CURE OF ERYSIPELAS;
FOR THE PILES;
FOR THE CURE OF SCROFULA;
FOR ALL SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS;
FOR THE CURE OF RHEUMATISM;
FOR DISEASES OF THE SKIN;
FOR THE CURE OF LIVER COMPLAINTS;
FOR DROPSY;
FOR THE CURE OF TETTER, TUMORS, AND SALT RHEUM; FOR WORMS;
FOR THE CURE OF GOUT;
FOR A DINNER PILL;
FOR THE CURE OF NEURALGIA;
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per Box; Five Boxes for $1.00.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand AYER'S, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

All our Remedies are for sale by

Roberts & Samuel, [illegible], High St. [illegible] O. [illegible] Cleveland O. [illegible], and by all druggists and dealers in medicines.

☞ DYSPEPSIA, HEADACHE, & INDIGESTION, by which persons are more or less affected, can usually be cured by taking moderate exercise, wholesome food, and a dose of Boerhave's Holland Bitters, an hour before each meal.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 15, 1859.

Brother Jonathan to John Bull.

I wonder, John, if you forget, some sixty years ago,
When we were very young, John, your head was white as snow,
You didn't count us much, John, and thought to make us run,
But found out your mistake, John, one day at Lexington.

But when we asked you in, John, to take a cup of tea,
Made in Boston Harbor, John, the teapot of the free,
You didn't like the party, John, it was not quite select,
There were some aborigines you didn't quite expect.

You didn't like their manners, John, you couldn't stand [illegible];
You thought it got into their heads, and made them quite too free;
But you got very tipsy, John, (you drink a little still,)
The way you marched across the Neck, and ran down Bunker Hill.

You acted just like mad, John, and tumbled o'er and o'er,
By your stalwart Yankee son, who handled half a gouge;
But now I hope you're sober, John, you're far too fat to run,
You haven't got the legs, John, you had at Bennington.

You had some corns upon your toes, Cornwallis that was [illegible]
And at the fight at Yorktown, why then you couldn't run,
You tried quite hard, I will admit, and threw away your gun,
And gave your sword, O, John, for shame, to one George [illegible].

I do not think you'll e'er forget the time you went to York,
And am so like a beast, John, you raised the price of pork;
Then we had some to spare, John, our hooks with pork we baited,
And hung them out on Jersey shore, and you evacuated.

Another much loved spot, John, such sweet associations,
When you were going down to York to see your rich relations,
The Dutchmen of the Mohawk, John, anxious to entertain,
Put up some "Gates" that stopped you, John, on Saratoga's plain.

That hill you much remember, John, "Old Bunker" and very [illegible]
We mean to have it lithographed, and send it to your queen.
I know you love that hill, John, you dream of it o'nights,
The one of it burst in '76, was simply Bemis Heights.

Your old friend Ethan Allen, John, of continental fame,
Who called you to surrender in "Great Jehovah's" name,
You recognized the "Congress" then, authority most high,
The morn he called so early, John, and took from you [illegible]

I know you'll grieve to hear it, John, and feel quite sore [illegible]
To learn that Ethan's dead, John, and yet there's many a [illegible]
Growing in his highland home, John, (that's land of guns and boots,)
And gets up just as early, as those brave "Green Mountain Boys."

Oh no, "we never mention it," we never thought it lucky,
The day you charged the cotton bags, and got into Kentucky [illegible]
I thought you knew geography, but mistakes in their terms
Will tell you that Kentucky lay, just then, below Orleans.

The "beauty" it was there, John, behind the cotton bags,
And did you get the "booty," John, somehow my memory flags?
I think you made a "swop" John,—I've got it in my head,
Instead of gold and silver, John, you took it in cold lead.

The mistress of the ocean, John, she couldn't rule the [illegible]
You had some ganders in your fleet, but, John, you had no [illegible]
Your choicest spirits, too, were there, you took your back [illegible]
But, John, you couldn't stand our fare, you couldn't take our Perry.

We make them all jump, John, on land or on the seas,
We took this little continent on purpose to be free;
Our eagle's free, he loves to soar, he cannot bear a cage,
But, John, he loves to scratch the hare, and make the lion [illegible]

Our glorious stars are sparkling bright, increasing year by year, [illegible]
Supported by a million hearts that never knew a fear,
Our children lisp it in their prayers, 'tis carried o'er the sea,
Dost hear it, John? it thunders there, "We're children of the free."

Free as our sires of '76, as bold and brave and true,
To worship God, and keep the land, dear John, we took from you;
To keep our flag free as the land, unsullied on the wave,
Until the last bright star shall set on the last freeman's grave!

The Discoverers of 1858 and 1859.

The world has been pretty well discovered. Portions only of Africa, Australia, Indo-China, the Indian Archipelago and the Polar Regions, remain for the enterprise of governments, learned societies, and men who are brave as well as curious.

Mlle. Ida Pfeiffer, after traveling through Palestine, Northern Europe, and twice around the world, in a fifth journey attempted Madagascar. Queen Ranavolo received her kindly, then became suspicious, and finally ordered her to leave the island immediately. She was taken with other Europeans, it is supposed intentionally, to a low, swampy coast, where foreigners never escape the fever. She took the fever, was made worse by her homeward voyage, and died on the 7th of October last, at the age of 61, in one of the suburbs of Vienna.

On the 27th of February last, the Sardinian traveler, Brun-Rollet, died at Khartoum, on the boundary between Nubia and Abyssinia. He had penetrated the country bordering on the Nile, and discovered Lake No, in lat. 12 deg., and the Bahr Keilak, or Misselad, which belongs to the western basin of the Nile. In 1855, he published in Paris Le Nil Blanc and Soudan.

The Englishman, Coulthard, died a terrible death, by thirst, in the inner desert of Australia. A traveler, Babbage, found his body in a thicket, and a tin cup near by on which he had scratched a few lines with a nail, which made known the frightful sufferings that preceded his death.—Coulthard set out with two other Englishmen, Scott and Brooks, who probably have perished.

Adolph Schlagintweit has been murdered by a troop of rebels against the Chinese authorities, in a village of Thibet, not far from Yarkand.

The death of Dr. Edward Vogel, who had traveled over Lake Tsad, Bornu, Baguirmi and the country Wadai, west of Darfur, is almost a certainty. The rumor that he was murdered by the command of the Sultan of Wadai, may have arisen from the probable fact that he was kept as a prisoner; a cause for either may be found in his imprudence in climbing to the peak of one of their sacred mountains.

The wife of Sir John Franklin is not yet resigned to bear the sorrowful name of widow. Last year she sent out the yacht Fox, in command of Capt. McClintock, to search for her husband. By the latest accounts, the Fox, taking the Beechy Island route, meant to sail into Fish River, passing to the east of King William's Land.

For some months past, a new Arctic expedition has been in preparation in the United States. The worthlessness of the North-West Passage, discovered by Capt. McClure, five or six years ago, cools no Arctic ardor: the Open Polar Sea is now the great problem.

The Geographical Society of St. Petersburg has sent a number of naturalists to Siberia, and a learned Finn, Dr. Nordenskiold of Helsingfors, has pursued his observation as far as Spitsbergen. He there discovered anthracite coal and such a multitude of seals and walruses as promises rich returns to fishermen for years to come. He has also ascended the Swechattan Mountain.

On the American continent an officer of the English Navy, Capt. Palliser, has been so fortunate as to find a passage through the Rocky Mountains in British America. It may be of great political value in binding together the English Atlantic and Pacific possessions.

In South America, the Frenchman, Dr. Plassard, who is settled in Ciudad Bolivar, has undertaken an excursion into the interior of Venezuelan Guyana, and found gold to the South of the lower Orinoco, toward the Yuruari.

At Rio Janeiro, Messrs. Capanema, Lagos and Gonsalvo Dias are preparing for a second expedition into the interior of Brasil, which is almost entirely unknown, and in the possession of wild Indian tribes.—They will have a military escort.

Dr. Schmarda, the Austrian naturalist, is on his return from his voyage to Cape Sydney and New Zealand. So also have Dr. Tschudi and Dr. Friesach returned from their expeditions into the interior of South America.

The Austrian corvette Carolina, on a visit to the harbors of South America, and the frigate Novora, on a voyage round the world, at the Phillipines when last heard from, seem to have been quite forgotten by the Austrian journals, now full of war.

In the Southern Atlantic the English Capt. Cubins believes that he had, within the year, found a new group of Islands on the track of Austrian-bound vessels.

But the great magnetic center to which most discoverers instinctively turn, is still the interior of Africa. Those vast countries, which are represented in blank on our maps, have been attacked from all sides—east, west, north and south.

The renowned Dr. Robert Livingstone is now making an excursion in those countries which he discovered during his long journey from St. Paul de Loanda to Quilimane. He embarked last year, equipped with instruments for making scientific observations. He will first attempt to go up the Zambese River in a canoe, which he named "Ma Robert," or Robert's wife or mother, as the natives along the Zambese have great respect for the wife and mother of a man whom they admire.

The English steamer, the Rainbow, sailed on the 6th of Sanuary out of Bonny into the Gulf of Benin, to explore the country along the Niger. Ladislaus Magyar of Theresiopol, in Hungary, who, after the Hungarian insurrection, became a citizen of Brazil, has hit upon a rather singular but very prudent way to penetrate into the mysteries of inner Africa with the greatest possible safety and advantage.—He has just married the daughter of the black King of Bihe in Upper Guinea. He has become Commander-in-Chief of the armies of his father-in-law, and uses the authority and his soldiers to become acquainted with the country lying in that neighborhood.

Jules Bracuaree, commander of the corvette Oise, is now exploring the wholly unknown country through which the Gaboon River runs.

The Swedish discoverer, Anderson, has traveled Ovampo, on the West Coast of Africa, south of Benguela, in the direction of the Cunene River.

On the east and south coast of Africa, two English officers, Capt. Burton and Lieut. Speke, found and measured last summer the great Lake Uyiyi, between 3 deg. 30 min. and 8 deg. 49 min. South latitude—not to be confounded with Lakes Nyassa and Ukerewe, so much talked of in late years. Until this discovery, there was ground for belief in a great central sea in Africa, stretching from 12 deg. South latitude to the Equator; but this discovery is conclusive that the great bodies of widely distant points are separate lakes.

The French missionary, Leo des Avanchers, is traveling through the country, which lies to the eastward of this great sea. The German traveler, Albert Roscher, has gone in the same direction, having left Zanzibar, with the hope of penetrating far into the interior.

Pedro de Gamitto, Governor of the Portuguese forts Tete and Sena on the Zambese, is making preparations for new explorations in Central Africa, of which he has already given such interesting descriptions in his book "Munta Casembe."

Massaga, the Sardinian missionary, is now exploring the interior of Abyssinia; so also is Bayssiere.

The Upper Nile is the object of untiring exploration. It would be strange if, before the end of this century, its whole course were not as well known as now that of the Thames, the Seine or the Rhine.—While Egyptologists and archaeologists like Mariette, Deveria, Pommereuil, de Schly, Brugsch, Eckhold and others are searching out the mysteries of Ancient Egypt far up into Nubia, scientific men have undertaken, singly or in small numbers, to follow the Nile upward, in spite of all the difficulties which for three thousand years have baffled the bravest explorers. Messrs. Frith and Windham are this month starting to go up the White Nile in an iron boat thirty-six feet long, drawing but one foot of water. They will be accompanied or followed by Messrs. Thomassy, Miani and others.

Mr. McCarthy, the son of the geographer, has it in contemplation to travel on a new track to Tombuctoo from Algiers where he has lived these eight years. According to his plan he will pass through Laghouat and Golesh, then make a circuit to the east to get out of the way of a tribe of Arabs who have been bejuggled by a new prophet, and then continue his journey by Ghadames, Ghat and Lake Tsad.

Other travelers, also, such as Captain Magnan, Baron Kratt, and Yussuf ben Callani, are bent on discovery, starting from Algiers or other northern points. Asia, too, is being explored by many travelers; but as yet we have few details of their discoveries. Kriel has been sent by the Vienna Academy into Asiatic Turkey.—Rey is exploring some hitherto neglected portions of Syria and Palestine. The brothers Schlaginweit are still continuing their researches in Central Asia. A Russian scientific expedition is engaged in the exploration of Chorasan, while a detachment of the French troops in Indo-China is escorting a scientific corps through that country. Many other savants have received missions from the Ministry of Public Instruction, or from the Paris Museum. Beside this, the Catholic and Protestant Missionaries are coming more and more to consider it a part of their duty to send home precise and comprehensive ethnographic and geographic intelligence of the countries through which they travel.

TOUCHING ANECDOTE.—A late reverend gentleman, who was as well known for his eccentricity as his talents, one day sent his son, a lazy lad about twelve years of age, to catch a horse. The lad was sauntering along, with an ear of corn in one hand and the bridle in the other, dragging the reins along the ground.

"Thomas," said his father, calling after him in a very solemn tone of voice; "come here, Thomas, I want to say a word to you before you go."

The lad returned and the parson proceeded:

"You know, Thomas, that I gave you a great deal of counsel. You know that I taught you before closing your eyes, to say,

'Now I lay down to sleep,' etc., besides a good many other things in the way of explanation and advice. But this is the last opportunity I may ever have of speaking to you. I couldn't let it pass without giving my parting charge. Be a good boy, Thomas, and always say that pretty prayer before going to sleep. I fear I shall never see you again."

As he said this in a very sad and solemn manner, the poor boy began to be frightened, and burst into tears, with this exclamation—

"You'll never see me again, pa!"

"No; for I shall probably die before you get back with the horse."

The Last Bullet.

An Incident of Commodore Stewart's Algerine Experience.

The United States ship-of-war, Constellation, was anchored in the harbor of Algiers, whither she had proceeded under command of Commodore Preble, having on board among other officers, Charles Stewart, then acting lieutenant, and the man the old Commodore looked to for assistance in fighting the Algerines.

It was the watch of young Stewart, and he was pacing to and fro on the deck, about half an hour after sunset, when he saw a small boat, containing a single person, coming off from the Old Post, as the western part of the town is called, and heading directly for the ship.

This person was rowing with all his might, and Stewart was not long in discovering his cause. Close behind the single boatman was seen a large Sallee rover, filled with men, whose presence was announced by a continual firing at him of whom they were in such determined pursuit—holding on their way until they were under the guns of the ship.

"Now by my soul," cried Stewart; "may I be shot if I do not teach those fellows a lesson. Stand by, Mr. Rogers," he added, adressing a favorite gunner, "to throw a little grape into that fellow."

An instant later, a wreath of smoke curled up from the shore side of the vessel, and as the report went booming over the water, the iron messenger sped its way, crashing into the pursuing boat, severely wounding two or three of her crew. She instantly turned to go back at the same time that the fugitive reached his destination, and came up the side, into the presence of the officer of the deck.

He was an elderly man, with a stout frame and brownish features; but it did not require but a single glance from the lieutenant to see that he was of English or American descent. As soon as he was sufficiently recovered from his over exertion to breathe, he went on to tell his story, to which Stewart listened with much excitement and interest.

The new comer was an American citizen, named James Collins, a native of New York, who with his wife and daughter, had been taken from an American vessel at the same time as the commander and crew, two years before, by an Algerine pirate. His wife had since died, and he and his daughter had been enduring, since his capture, all the horrors of a hopeless and aggravated captivity. But the worst part of the poor man's story, and that which moved Lieut. Stewart the most, was the announcement that his daughter, a gentle and beautiful girl was on the very eve of being forced into a detestable union with the very wretch who had bought her and her father as slaves.

"My agony at these circumstances culminated not two hours ago," finished the father, "when I struck the persecutor insensible at my feet, and fled. By dint of exertion, I managed to reach the waterside, and embarked before the pursuers could prevent it. But though I have succeeded in reaching this place of safety, my poor Alice is still in the power of her tormentor, exposed to his vengeance, and I am almost crazy at thinking that she may even now be subjected to a fate worse than death! If I could guide a good boat's crew, under your orders—"

"One moment," interrupted Stewart. "Stay where you are till I have seen Commodore Preble!"

One moment the young lieutenant was engaged with his commander in the cabin, and then he came forth with a stern smile of satisfaction on his features. Ten minutes more had not passed ere a cutter, with twelve chosen men, pushed off into the darkness with the lieutenant and the stranger in the stern, and rapidly struck out for the shore.

"Our owner," said Mr. Collins, "resides in the western part of the city.—There is a coast guard established, but I do not apprehend that we shall have any especial trouble from that source. I think we can land below, go up the streets to the house, and carry off my child, and all without losing a man."

The boat landed, after twenty minutes of rapid progress, at a small wharf near the Galeta, in the western part of the town. The arrival was certainly witnessed, but not a great deal of attention was bestowed upon it by the stupid Algerines. Leaving part of his men in the cutter, with orders for them to lie low under the wharf, Lieut. Stewart and the remainder of his force followed the footsteps of Mr. Collins, who led the way readily up the intervening streets.

On arriving at his late prison, an old and dingy looking structure, extremely spacious, having all the looseness of the Moorish style, the party discovered that silence and darkness were the principal features of the scene. Not a sound was heard, nor a word uttered. The whole building seemed deserted. The agony of the father was extreme.

"Oh, my child! child!" he cried, no longer able to control the terrible emotions which had been surging in his soul during the last hour; "shall I never see thee more?"

A Moorish slave came around from the rear of the building, and assured his late fellow captive that the girl had been carried off by the master, and that no one was at home save himself. But even as the lying rascal uttered the concluding words, a wild shriek resounded through the chambers, and the next moment a young and beautiful girl of seventeen summers appeared at one of the front windows, looking like a spectre in her garments of spotless white.

"My child—my Alice!" exclaimed Mr. Collins.

"Save me, father!" was the response, and wild shouts and groans were heard proceeding from the interior of the building; the maiden threw herself from the window into the arms of her father and Lieut. Stewart.

The very moment of this reunion was destined to be that in which a company of Algerine troops came round the nearest corner, marching up the street in the direction of Lieut. Stewart and his men. It was also at the same moment that the old Moor, who so long had considered himself the proprietor of Mr. Collins and his daughter, came to the window through which the girl had just passed, and set up a startling yell.

"This way!" cried Mr. Collins, and he dashed open the front door of the building, and conducted the entire party within, "look to your weapons, and take the rascals off their pins the instant they halt!"

A sharp and determined struggle soon commenced, in the course of which half the Moorish soldiers were killed, and the remainder finally gave way. But the rescuers had expended all of their ammunition, and only a single bullet was remaining—that in a large horse pistol in the possession of Lieut. Stewart. He was just wondering what he should do with it when the old Moor came down stairs, with a huge saber in his grasp, and made a furious dash at Mr. C. and his daughter, with murder written on his features and flashing from his eyes. This sudden arrival decided the destination of the last bullet.

"Take it, you black devil," cried Stewart, just as the fearful blow was descending, and he fired his weapon, the ball passing through and through the miscreant's head, and bringing him dead to the floor.

"Now, boys," added Lieut. S., "we are going to finish with a hand to hand fight. The powder and ball are out; we must trust to the sword!"

Closely followed by his men, as well as Mr. Collins and Miss Alice, the Lieut. led the way toward the boat. It seemed as if all Algiers had turned out to witness the triumphal retreat, the streets being filled with thousands of men and women collected together by the brief contest at the Moor's house, but not an attempt was made to intercept the progress of the party, the bravest of the Algerines contenting themselves with scowls and denunciations.

Ten minutes later the rescuers were at the cutter. Twenty minutes more and the entire party were safely back to the Constellation, not having lost a man. The young Lieutenant received the hearty thanks of his superior, to say nothing of the gratitude of Mr. Collins and his daughter, whose family proved to be of considerable consequence in New York; and we are assured that Charles Stewart was never happier in his life than when Miss Alice was united to one of his "chums," a noble-hearted lieutenant, now a commodore, who fell love with the rescued maiden during the Constellation's homeward passage.

THE RESTORED.

A Thrilling tale of Wissahicon.

God is everywhere. His words are on our hearts. He is on the battlefield or in the peaceful home. Praised be His name!

It was on the wilds of Wissahicon, on the day of battle, as the noon-day sun came through the thickly clustered leaves, that two men met in deadly conflict near the reefs which rose like the rock of some primeval world, at least one thousand feet above the dark waters of the Wissahicon.

The man with the dark brown face and darker grey eye flashing with a deadly light, and a muscular form clad in a blue frock of the revolution—is a continental named Warren.

The other man with long black hair drooping along his cadaverous face, is clad in half military costume of a tory refugee. This is a murderer of Paoli, named Dabaney.

They met here by accident, and now they fought, not with sword and rifle, but with long and deadly hunting knives they struggled, twining and twisting on the green sward.

At last the tory is down—down on the turf, with the knee of the continental upon his breast—the upraised knife flashing death in his face.

"Quarters! I yield," gasped the tory, as the knee was pressed upon his breast. "Spare me I yield."

"My brother," said the patriot soldier, in that tone of deadly hate, "my brother cried for quarters on the night of Paoli, and even as he clung to your knees you struck that knife into his heart. Oh, I will give you the quarters of Paoli."

And as his hand raised for the blow and his teeth were clenched with deadly hate he paused for a moment, then pinioned the tory's arms and with a rapid stride dragged him to the verge of the rock and held him quivering over the abyss.

"Mercy!" gasped the tory, turning ashy pale by turns, as that awful gulf yawned below. "Mercy! I have a wife and child—spare me."

The continental, with his muscular strength gathered for the effort, shook the murderer once more over the abyss and then hissed his bitter sneer in his face.

"My brother had a wife and two children. The morning after the night of Paoli, that wife was a widow, those children, orphans. Wouldn't you like to go and beg your life of that widow and her orphans."

The proposal made by the continental in mockery and bitter hate, was taken in serious earnest by the terror-stricken tory. He begged to be taken to the widow and her children, and to have the privilege of begging his life. After a moment's serious thought the patriot soldier consented. He bound the tory's arms still tighter, placed him on the rock again, and led him to the woods. A quiet cottage, embossed among trees, broke on their eyes. They enterred the cottage. There beside the desolate hearth-stone, sat the widow and children.

She sat there, a matronly woman of about twenty years, with a face faded by care, a deep dark eye, and long black hair hanging in a disheveled state about her shoulders. On one side was a dark-haired boy of some six years; on the other side, a girl one year younger, with light blue eyes. The Bible—an old and venerable volume—lay open on the mother's knee. And then the pale-faced tory flung himself on his knees, and confessed he had butchered her husband on the night of Paoli and begged his life at her hands.

"Spare me for the sake of my wife—my child!"

He had expected this pitiful moan would touch the widow's heart, but not one relenting gleam softened her face.

"The Lord shall judge between us," she said in a cold icy tone that froze the murderer's heart. "Look, the Bible is in my lap; I will close the volume, and this boy shall open it, and place his finger at random upon a line and by that you shall live or die."

This was a strange proposal, made in good faith, of a wild and dark superstition of olden times. For a moment the tory, pale as ashes, was wrapped in deep thought—then in a fainting voice he signified his consent.

Raising her dark eyes to heaven, the mother prayed to the Great Father to direct the finger of her son. She closed the book—she handed it to that boy whose cheek reddened with loathing as he gazed upon his father's murderer. He took the Bible, opened its holy pages at random, and placed his finger upon a verse.

There was a silence. The continental soldier who had sworn to avenge his brother's death, stood with dilating eyes and parted lips. The culprit kneeling upon the floor, with his face like discolored clay, felt his heart leap to his throat.

Then in a clear bold voice, the widow read this line from the Old Testament.—It was short yet terrible:

"That man shall die."

Look! the brother springs forward to plunge a knife into the murderer's heart; but the tory, pinioned as he is, clings to the widow's knees. He begs that one more trial may be made by the little girl, that child of five years old, with the golden hair, and laughing eyes.

The widow consents. There is an awful pause. With a smile in her eye; without knowing what she was doing, the little girl opens the Bible as it lays on her mother's knee; she turns her face away and places her finger upon a line.

That awful silence grew deeper. The deep drawn breath of the brother, and broken gasps of the murderer alone disturbed the stillness. The widow and dark-haired boy were breathless. The little girl, as she caught a feeling of awe from those about her, stood breathless, her face turned aside, and her tiny fingers resting on the lines of life and death.

At length, gathering courage, the widow bent her eye on the page and read. It was a line from the New Testament:

"Love your enemies!"

Oh, book of terrible majesty and childlike love—of sublimity that crushes the heart with rapture, you never shone more strangely than there in that lonely cot of the Wissahicon when you saved the murderer's heart.

Now look you how wonderful are the ways of Heaven. That very night as the widow sat by her fireside—sat there with a crushed heart and hot eye-lids, thinking of her husband who now lay mouldering on the drenched soil of Paoli—there was a tap at the door. She opened it, and that husband living, though covered with wounds, was in her arms.

He had fallen at Paoli, but not in death, he was alive, and his wife lay panting on his bosom.

That night there was a prayer in the wood-embowered cot of Wissahicon.

The Two Cords of Wood.

Just at dark, one November evening, three children occupied the large kitchen connected with the establishment of farmer Grant. A bright wood fire blazed cheerfully in the wide chimney, while from the crane the suspended tea-kettle was announcing as loudly as possible the hour of supper was approaching. By the bright but fitful light, one young girl sat reading, another stood at the window watching the cows as they walked demurely from the yard to the stable, while a boy of seven summers was seated on a cradle in front of the fire, gazing steadily at the flames as they shot upwards, but with an appearance of abstraction, indicating that his mind was elsewhere.

Softly Ellen advanced from the window, and touching her sister Ruth to call her attention whispered; 'just look at Thomas he's in a brown study, as the teacher said this afternoon. I wonder what he is thinking of.'

'Ask him,' responded Ruth, glancing at her brother, and then turning to her book again.

'Thomas,' called Ellen, 'what makes you look so sober to-night? Did you miss at school?'

The boy gave a deep sigh, and turned to his sister with a smile, saying, 'O Ellen, you can help me if you will; only you must promise me not to tell any one.'

Ellen promised, and Thomas led her to the farther end of the room, where he made known to her his plan.

'Last night,' said he, 'after you and Ruth had gone to bed, I heard father and mother talking. It made me feel so bad I could not go to sleep. She had been bringing in the clothes, and kept coughing, as she always does when she works hard. Father told mother that she must go to taking the doctor's stuff that did her so much good last fall. At first she did not answer; but pretty soon I saw her put up her hand and brush away a tear.—'There are so many things to be bought for the children,' said she, 'that I don't like to spend money for medicine; I don't often cough so much.'

'I know that too,' replied father,' but you must attend to your health. What could we do without you?'

'I sometimes think,' said mother, 'that my work is almost done; and if it is God's will to call me away he will provide for you and our dear children.'

'I couldn't stay to hear any more, for I had to go into the entry to keep from sobbing aloud. O, Ellen, what could we all do without mother?'

The young girl turned around and gave her a piercing look, as if to satisfy herself that her brother had cause for his disquietude, and then asked:

'But what can you, or both of us, do to help her?'

'I mean somehow to buy her a bottle of that medicine,' exclaimed Thomas, impressively, 'but how to do it is the question.—Dr. Jones has a load of wood carted to-day, and he wants a man to saw it. I would go to-morrow and ask him to give me the job, and the medicine for pay, only father wants the wood piled up to-morrow before the snow comes.'

Ellen stood for a moment returning her brother's gaze, and then exclaimed, 'Ruth and I will pile the wood for you. We'll get up very early; and do our stint before breakfast, and then we'll have the whole forenoon.'

Thomas joyfully accepted this offer, and readily obtained the job from the kind physician. Before night he had piled the two cords in the shed and sawed nearly a quarter of it.

'Well, my little workman,' said the doctor, driving into the yard as Thomas was hanging up his saw, preparatory to leaving, 'how much have you earned this afternoon?'

A bright thought flashed across the boy's mind, and in true Yankee style he answered the question by asking, 'Doctor, how much a bottle was the cough medicine you gave mother last winter?'

'Half a dollar, I think. Is she sick again?'

The boy then communicated his wishes, and with a flushed face inquired of the doctor if he would be willing to let him have one bottle to carry home with him.

The good man was evidently moved by this unexpected proposal. He made no reply; except to invite the boy to his office. When there he talked more freely, and ended by giving him a small powder for his mother, with directions for taking it, in addition to the desired cough medicine, and promised to call himself the next day.

At an hour later, Thomas sat with his sister by the fire, and communicated to them the joyful results of his afternoon's labor.

Then they proposed to give the medicine to their mother, as a token of affection from her three children; 'for,' urged Thomas, 'I could not have done it if you had not helped me.'

To say that Mrs. Grant was gratified would be but faintly expressing her emotion, when the love-token was placed in her hands.

With moistened eyes she gave each of them a kiss, and added in a subdued voice, 'God will reward you, my dear ones. The blessing affixed to the fifth commandment will be yours, for you have, indeed, honored your mother!'

God did bless them in rendering the medicine effectual in restoring the health of their mother, whose life he prolonged for many years. She saw her children growing up useful, happy and respected by all who knew them.

IPECACUANHA AND DELIRIUM TREMENS.—The jail physician at Chicago has had 100 cases of delirium tremens the past year, of which only four proved fatal. Of his manner of treatment, the doctor says:

"Ipecacuanha, which I have tried in thirty-six cases, I have found most remarkably successful, quieting the nervous system, exciting the appetite, acting on secretions, and uniformly producing sleep. When a case is not of too long standing, I give it as an emetic the first dose, and afterwards I give from 15 to 18 grains every other hour. Connected with this remedy, I use shower baths, and let the patient frequently drink strong beef tea, without any alcoholic stimulant."

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

THE FROST.

"The Frost spirit reigns."

We collect from our numerous Ohio exchanges, what they say of the frost and its damage to crops, as particularly interesting to the Farmer at this time:

We had a white frost on Saturday night, killing the Cucumbers, Beans, Sweet Potatoes and other vegetables. Great fears are entertained for the safety of the wheat.—On Saturday overcoats and big fires were quite comfortable. What the object of the weather clerk was in sending us that cold snap, is a matter of conjecture. The strawberries in this region were all frozen. A great deal of the growing corn was also severely nipped.—Hocking Sent. 9th.

DAMAGING FROST—GREAT DESTRUCTION OF VEGETABLES—CORN AND WHEAT DAMAGED—On the morning of June 5th, we had a heavy frost in Clermont, that destroyed almost entirely the tender garden vegetables. Beans, cucumbers, tomatoes and such like are nearly all killed. The corn in this county is damaged to a vast amount. It is thought by some that most of it will recover. Melons, sweet potatoes and pumpkins are damaged, and in some places entirely destroyed.—Some melon patches are being plowed up and corn planted on the same ground.—Rye and barley escaped, but the wheat crop is thought to be heavily damaged.—One person we have heard of, has plowed up his field of wheat and is now planting corn in it. How serious the damage is to the wheat, we are unable to tell at this time. The frost was unprecedented in its severity, at this season of the year. The cornfields in this region present a very sickly appearance, and garden vegetables are flattened out.

We learn that in the extreme south part of the county, there was no frost, and no damage was done. The frost was more severe and damaging in the bottom lands than on the hill lands.—Clermont Courier 9th.

THE FROST.—During a short trip in the country yesterday morning, we were surprised to find the extent of the damage done by Saturday night's frost. The crop of grapes, in the vineyard of Dr. Egry, and in that vicinity, is probably entirely spoiled, the only exception, being a lot belonging to Mr. P. Ohmer. The frost has also killed the corn to a serious extent; potatoes, and early vegetables, and it is feared, wheat has sustained much injury. The farmers had hardly decided whether to replant or not, and seemed to be much dispirited. Our telegraph columns show great damage to the New York crops, from the same frost, which seems to have been as wide extended as destructive.—Dayton Gazette 10th.

A severe frost fell on Saturday night last, and left its marks upon the cornfields and gardens of this section of country, damaging them greatly. In other parts of the country, the injury is still worse.—Georgetown (Brown Co.) Standard 9th.

THE FROST.—Last Saturday night this part of the State was visited with a heavy frost in certain localities, not doing however, as far as we can learn any great injury, except to the gardens. We learn that the fruit on the high lands has suffered very much.—Steubenville Union 8th.

THE FROST OF SATURDAY NIGHT—HOW MUCH IS THE WHEAT CROP INJURED?—From all the information we can obtain, we are of the opinion that at least one-fourth of the wheat crop in this vicinity has been destroyed by the frost of June 4. The Mediterranean wheat being about ten days in advance of most other varieties has so far matured the stock as to escape freezing at the first joint where the most of the injury is done.—The blue stem on high ground, unless very backward, is generally saved.—Peaches, apples, and all fruit on low ground is a failure unless well protected with foliage. On uplands peaches and apples are not so much injured but that the community may feel assured, without [illegible] other mischief, that they may yet luxuriate upon delicious peaches, and cultivate the social virtues over a dish of apples.

Since the foregoing was in type, we have conversed with many intelligent observers from different parts of this county. Their opinions are widely various, but taking the aggregate and average, we are inclined to think the estimate above given is approximately as reliable as can be stated at this time.

The small fruits are almost annihilated. So are all tender garden vegetables. Apples are probably greatly damaged, but we may perhaps have a moderate portion left. Peaches, we apprehend, are gone almost entirely.

The GREAT FROST of Saturday, June 4, 1859, will be remembered for its disastrous consequences, with that of June 8, 1845, though we have reason to hope the calamity is not so universal.

The frost was very severe at all points heard from along the Lake Shore, and throughout that part of this State north of the National road, extending westward also through Indiana and Illinois, and eastward through the State of New York. Reports as to the extent of the damage are various, but for the most part gloomy. Fruit of all kinds is to a great extent destroyed; corn and potatoes cut down to the ground, and wheat, at least, greatly injured, the extent of the injury to wheat not accurately known.

The disaster is a terrible one to a vast range of agricultural country, where a week since there was every promise of abundant crops of all kinds.

Flakes of snow were seen in the air at mid-day on Saturday, June 4,—a phenomenon which almost leads one to guess that some serious climatic or sonic change was imperceptibly operating upon our planet. Snow within three weeks of the summer solstice!!—Akron Beacon, June 10.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION, PHILADELPHIA,

A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhœa, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

By order of the Directors.

EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.

GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

may24:ly

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY

Cash Capital $200,000, Assets $204,000.

Offices 237 Broadway, 50 Wall Street N.Y.

This Company Insures Buildings, Merchandise, Ships and Cargoes, in Port, Household Furniture, and Personal Property generally against Loss or Damage by Fire.

JOSIAH W. BAKER, President.

JOHN BODINE, Vice President.

WM. JAFFRAY, Secretary.

DWIGHT BANNISTER, Agent,

may20tf Columbus Ohio.

OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.

Announcement of the Proprietor for the Season of 1859.

THE OHIO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS are situated in Delaware County, 18 miles north from Columbus, (the capital of Ohio,) on the Scioto river, 10 miles from Delaware, 5 miles from the White Sulphur Station on the Springfield, Mt. Vernon & Pittsburgh R. R., and 10 miles from Pleasant Valley or Springs Station, on the Columbus, Piqua & Indiana Railroad. These Springs will open for the reception of visitors

ON THE 1st DAY OF JUNE.

The improvements of 1859 have been large, enabling the proprietor to accommodate from five to six hundred guests. Among these improvements may be mentioned a large and elegant hotel, new cottage rows, additional buildings for [illegible], extensive bath-houses, a steam laundry, &c., &c.

[illegible] the MAGNESIAN and the SALINE CHALYBEATE are decidedly medicinal, whilst the 5th is remarkable for the purity of its water.

THE WHITE SULPHUR

is a beautiful Artesian fountain, situated near the rocky bank of the Scioto river. At the depth of 160 feet below the level of the Scioto, flows the remarkable stream of sulphur water which supplies this Spring. This stream was discovered some 20 years ago by a gentleman who was boring for salt. The water, when reached, at once arose to the surface, and has ever since continued to flow, during all seasons, without change of temperature, either in quality or volume.

MEDICINAL PROPERTIES.

For years these Springs have been highly esteemed for their medicinal properties. During the past season their reputation in this respect has been singularly confirmed. They were administered by a physician, judiciously as to quantity, time of drinking, continuance, &c., and under this systematic plan the cures were numerous and gratifying.

THE WHITE SULPHUR WATER

is peculiarly serviceable in those disorders of the Liver and Stomach which so often afflict gentlemen who have been too closely confined to business, and persons of sedentary habits.

THE CHALYBEATE SPRINGS

are permanent tonics. Their effects upon broken down and debilitated constitutions have been not transient but lasting, giving to the blood a new vitality, and to the person new life and vigor.

THE MAGNESIAN WATER

is a gentle aperient.

[illegible]

As a delightful resort during the summer months, the Ohio White Sulphur Springs have no rival in the West, and but few in the United States. The location is peculiarly healthy: the Scioto here is a rapid, rocky stream; the "Cliff Limestone" a formation hundreds of feet in thickness, through which the river cuts its way, is everywhere either at or near the surface; the grounds of the estate are beautifully undulating, and interspersed with numerous ravines which carry off all the superfluous water, thus rendering the soil dry and the atmosphere free from that humidity so prejudicial to health. These circumstances, taken in connection with the altitude of the place, about 1,000 feet above the level of the ocean, make the locality as free from malarious influences as a mountain region.

The Spring property consists of 320 acres of land, one hundred of which is covered by one of the most beautiful groves in Ohio. This woodland is handsomely laid off into walks and drives, one of the latter being two miles in extent.

BATHS.

Bathing here by the plan adopted, is brought into fair competition with that at naturally Warm and Hot Springs. The water is heated in the bath tub by steam pipes, the heat not being raised high enough to precipitate its salts, it is by this system applied to the surface of the bather without the loss of its saline ingredients.

TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

A Telegraph Office, communicating with all parts of the country, has been established at the Springs. To be thus in connection with distant points, will be a great convenience to gentlemen who can hear from and direct their business affairs daily.

All the accessories necessary to health, pleasure and amusement, visitors may expect to find at the Ohio White Sulphur Springs as the proprietor is determined to make it, in every particular, a first class watering place. Gratified with the liberal patronage extended last year, no effort will be spared to merit its continuance.

A livery, well stocked with horses and carriages, is attached to the Springs.

For further information, arrangements for rooms, &c., address ANDREW WILSON, Jun.

White Sulphur P. O., Delaware Co., O.

m18-dtf

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills,

DR. ROBACK'S

SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts;

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they relieve

Liver Complaint,

and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. That

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in helpless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual Disabilities are removed by their cordial and really stimulating properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been tried with and abused. That their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly upon the poison of disease in the blood, they

Cause soon to Heal,

and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels, the liver, the nervous system, the skin, the glands or muscles, in which they do not give prompt relief and, (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of any kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They banish disease from every aecntic and organ of the system, and [illegible] thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notice, and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

Principal Office and Sales Rooms, No. 6 East Fourth St. 3d Building from Main street, Cincinnati, O. Laboratory in Hammond street.

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, BY

Roberts & Samuel, Columbus,
Aug. J. Schueller, Columbus,
J. Denig & Son, Columbus,
A. Alpire, Canal Winchester,
Isaac Thompson, Worthington,
R. R. Johnson, Reynoldsburg,
B. N. Beckley, Clintonville,
D. Gulter, Westerville,
Henry Miller, Harrisburg,
John Mason, Grove City,
Geo. W. Evans, Dublin.

And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union.

ja 1-dawly &p-b-ly.

DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,

AND

DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys,

and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption,

and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhœa proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

may3

Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.

Great Northern & Eastern Route,

Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD.

Connecting at Crestline with the

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad

For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia & Baltimore, Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.

Connecting at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad.

For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) from Columbus, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.

FIRST TRAIN.

NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at [illegible] a. m. Will leave passengers at all stations, south of [illegible]; for passengers at Delaware, Ashley, Cardington, Gilead and all stations North of Galion, connecting at Crestline with the 7:20 a. m. mail train for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 2:30 p. m. Also with same road at Crestline, with the 6:35 a. m. Express for Chicago, arriving at [illegible] p. m. Also at Grafton with Toledo road for Toledo. Arrives at Cleveland at [illegible] a. m.

SECOND TRAIN.

NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 10:[illegible] a. m., stopping only at Delaware, North Sydney, Cardington, Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London, and Grafton; connection at Crestline with the 12:[illegible] p. m. Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at [illegible] p. m., arriving at Cleveland 2:10 p. m., connecting at 2:30 p. m. with the Express on Lake Shore road for the East, arriving at Erie at 6:45 p. m., Dunkirk 9:30 p. m., Buffalo [illegible], New York 1:30 p. m. next day, two hours ahead of other line, Boston [illegible] p. m., eight hours ahead of the other line.

THIRD TRAIN.

EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at [illegible] p. m., stopping at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at 7:30 p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad at Crestline, for Chicago arriving at Chicago at [illegible] a. m., at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Road for New York and Boston; arriving at Erie 1:35 a. m., Dunkirk [illegible] a. m., Buffalo 6:45 a. m.

Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.

RETURNING.

Night Express, arrives at Columbus 1:30 a. m.

Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at 9:[illegible] a. m.

Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at 4:20 p. m.

Fare as low as by any other Route.

For further information, and Through and Local Tickets apply to M. L. Doherty Ticket Agent in the [illegible] of the C. C. & C. and L. M. C. & X. Railroad.

[illegible], Sup't. [illegible]

E. C. [illegible], Gen'l Ticket Agent, [illegible]

JAMES PATTERSON, Agent, Columbus, Ohio.

Columbus, May 12, 1859.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads.

To the South and West.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 18, 1859. Four Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted) from Columbus, in connection with Trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

FIRST TRAIN. (DAILY.)

NIGHT EXPRESS—At [illegible] A. M., stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati; arriving at Cincinnati at 7:30 A. M. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c., &c. At Loveland for Chillicothe, &c., and all points on M. & C. R. R. and at Cincinnati with the trains on Ohio & Mississippi R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, and all points South and West, and mail line steamers for Louisville.

SECOND TRAIN. (DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)

NO. 1 EXPRESS—5:40 A. M. stopping at West Jefferson, London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Fort Ancient, Morrow, Deerfield, and at Loveland, Milford, and Plainville, and arriving at Cincinnati at 12:30 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, &c.

THIRD TRAIN. (DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)

NO. 2 EXPRESS—At [illegible] P. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, Xenia, Morrow, Deerfield, Foster's, Milford, and Plainville arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible] P. M. connecting at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c., &c., and at Cincinnati with evening trains for St. Louis, &c., for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c., &c.

FOURTH TRAIN. (DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)

MAIL—At 2:40 P. M. stopping at Alton, Jefferson, London, Charleston, Selma, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Morrow, Loveland, arriving at Cincinnati at 10:45 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, &c., &c.

RETURNING.

Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express 4:20 A. M.; No. 1 Express [illegible] a. m.; No. 2 Express [illegible]

For further information and Through Tickets apply to M. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot.

[illegible] Superintendent, Cincinnati.

[illegible] General Ticket Agent.

[illegible] Agent, Columbus, O.

Columbus, May 12, 1859.

1859. 1859.

NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST.

Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line.

Two Trains Daily. (Sundays excepted.)

Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 25th, Trains will leave Columbus as follows:

FIRST TRAIN.

Leaves at 5:30 a. m., on the arrival of trains from Wheeling, Pittsburgh and Cleveland. Arrives at Indianapolis at 4:30 p. m.

This train connects at Milford with trains for Mechanicsburg, Springfield, Dayton and Cincinnati, direct without change of cars.

Also, connects at Urbana with trains on the S. D. & C. R. R. for Bellefontaine, Bryan, Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. Connects at Union for Greenville, Anderson town, for Kokomo and Peru.

At Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette & Chicago, also, with trains for Terre Haute, Cairo and St. Louis, connecting at St. Louis with Trains and Steamboats for the KANSAS AND NEBRASKA.

Also, connects at Indianapolis for Jeffersonville, Louisville, Madison and Peru.

SECOND TRAIN.

Leaves Columbus at 2:40 p. m., on the arrival of trains from Pittsburgh and Wheeling. Arrives at Indianapolis at 11:30 p. m.

This Train connects at Milford for Mechanicsburg and Springfield; at Urbana with trains north on S. D. & C. R. R. for Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. At Piqua with trains north on D. & M. R. R. for Sidney, Lima, Delphos, Fort Wayne and Chicago; and at Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette, Chicago, Terre Haute, Cairo and St. Louis.

THE WAY FREIGHT.

Leaving Columbus at 4:30 a. m., will carry a Passenger Train for the Accommodation of Way Travel.

Be sure to see that your Tickets read, VIA THE COLUMBUS & INDIANAPOLIS R. R. LINE, and see that you do not have Tickets sold you by other and Circuitous Routes.

Tickets for all Western Routes for sale at all the Principal Rail Road Stations in the East.

S. WALKUP, General Ticket Agent.

W. F. BLAYER, Superintendent.

Columbus, Ohio, May 12, 1859.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!

A Democratic Newspaper,

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O.

By J. Birney Marshall,

At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that in the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have established in the city of Columbus, O., THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic truths and its course shall be characterized by firmness and honesty; its statements relied on for their unfaltering veracity. Nor shall it be used for cliques or factions, but consistently pursue the object for which it is established: that of preventing the misdirection of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the perpetuation of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the union of the Democratic Party, and resist everything like schism, or disorganization—while it will support every Democratic measure, and all the ability it can bring to the duty, (it must know that it is Democratic and not a false light held up to illude, perhaps to betray)—while it will support the present Administration, in all that is deemed consistent with true Democracy, and the best interests of the party, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS presents the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as its first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and uses every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to procure his nomination and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on a remunerative patronage, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year............................$2 00

A discount of ten per cent on clubs of ten; fifteen per cent on clubs of twenty; 15 per cent on clubs of thirty, and 20 per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards sent to a single address.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

Columbus, March 23, 1859.

N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation, which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, by giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE PEOPLE'S PRESS

Received for six months at One Dollar in advance.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS

Will be sent for the campaign, in subscriptions, at FIFTY CENTS for the single copy.

CAMPAIGN CLUBS

May be formed for the Press at the following rates:

Five Copies..........	$2 00
Ten "	4 00
Twenty "	6 00
Fifty "	10 00
One hundred copies..........	20 00

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME I. | COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1859. | NUMBER 7.

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising, to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 4 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion	$ 1,00
Each additional insertion	30
One square 3 months	5,00
" " 6 "	8,00
" " 12 "	15,00
One fourth of a column per year	40,00
" half " " "	60,00
" column " "	100,00

Displayed advertisements will be charged one half more than the above rates.

Advertisements leaded and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year ... $10,00.

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements MUST BE PAID FOR IN ADVANCE.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rates.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850,—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominion it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathise with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1858.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyances of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, [illegible] for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have, in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful [illegible] of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the paramount interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

REPUBLICAN CONSISTENCY.—The Manchester Union Democrat says that "in 1852 the Republican Convention met at Pittsburgh, and nominated John P. Hale for the Presidency. It was then and there declared that 'emigrants and exiles from the Old World should find a cordial welcome to homes of comfort and fields of enterprise in the new; and every attempt to abridge their privilege of becoming citizens, and owners of soil among us, ought to be resisted with inflexible determination!' Most of the men for whom that convention assumed to speak, in three years after were groping in the culverts of Know Nothingism, and are now the supporters or apologists of the thirty days law in New Hampshire and the two years amendment in Massachusetts!"—New Hamp. Gaz.

A FEROCIOUS OLD MISCREANT.—"These pirates," says Mr. Giddings, speaking of the officers of the government who reclaimed a fugitive slave in Ohio, "should have been delivered over to the colored men and consigned to the doom of pirates, which should have been speedily executed. Had the prisoners executed the slave-catchers promptly, it would have taught 'the administration' a lesson not soon to be forgotten." The idea of hanging the United States Marshals, by negro executioners, in order to rebuke the administration, is worthy of a demagogue whose partisanship has brutalized his intellect and his morals.—New Hamp. Gaz.

☞ Keep in mind that the extremists in the South are opposed to the Democratic party because it will not lend its aid to propagate slavery. Also keep in mind that the Republicans of the North are petting these same Southern ultraists with a view to unite with them in opposition to the Democracy in 1860. Let no honest man forget these facts when asked to support the Republican party on the score of its superior honesty and devotion to the interests of free labor.—Boston Post.

Ohio Republican Platform—How it is received in Indiana.

The New Albany Tribune, as well as the Evansville Journal, two leading Republican papers in the State of Indiana, both edited with ability and possessing influence, repudiate the Ohio Republican Platform. We do not know how much further the defection has extended in the "Hoosier State," but the dissent of these two papers is very significant. The Indianapolis Sentinel says that these papers represent the political views of a large body of voters in that State who have voted with the Republicans in the elections of the past two years. "We misapprehend the conservative sentiment of this class in Indiana, and in the Northwest generally, if they are prepared to sustain the ultra views announced as the basis and ends of the Republican organization. Such a party can only succeed by arraying the sectional prejudices, animosities and interests of the nation against each other, against which the Father of his Country uttered his prophetic warnings."

The following are the comments of the New Albany Tribune upon the action of the Convention:

First, we have a preamble wherein the favor of the Supreme Ruler is "earnestly invoked." We regard this use of the name of the Supreme Ruler as idle if not sacrilegious. Such invocations come not reverentially from the heart of politicians in convention assembled, be they Republicans, Americans or Democrats.

The first resolution consists of generalities,—expresses an abiding confidence in the doctrines heretofore enunciated, and commends them anew to the people. The second resolution demands a re-organization of the Judicial Circuits of the United States, constituting them so as to give each section of the country an equal voice in the Supreme Court, etc., etc. These resolutions are doubtless unobjectionable. The third resolution reads as follows:

"3. That proclaiming our determination rigidly to respect the constitutional obligations imposed upon the States by the federal compact, we maintain the union of the States, the rights of the States and the liberties of the people—and in order to attain these important ends, we demand the repeal of the fugitive slave act of 1850, as it is subversive of both the rights of the States and the liberties of the people, and as contrary to the plainest duties of humanity and justice, and abhorrent to the moral sense of the civilized world."

Here we have presented and advocated nullification—nullification as deep, as dark and as damning as was ever proclaimed by the fanatics of South Carolina. It may be true, and doubtless is, that the fugitive slave law contains some odious features, and requires amendment, but the Ohio Republicans do not ask for its amendment. They demand its unconditional repeal.—No half-way measures, no compromises, will suit them. They propose to practically nullify that provision of the Constitution of the United States which declares that "no person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall in consequence of any law or regulation therein be discharged from such service or labor; but shall be delivered up, on claim of the party to whom such labor or service may be due." This, then, is the entertainment to which the Opposition of Ohio have been invited, but it is an entertainment to which tens of thousands will refuse to sit down. The indications are that the dissatisfaction will be very general. The Gazette, the principal Republican organ, does not appear to like the programme. It attempts to look at the matter philosophically, remarking that the crude notions of a resolution-monger are not worthy of serious consideration. The Gazette seems to think that "men not principles" should be the motto of the party. The Times, the organ of the Americans, talks as follows:

"We submit that the platform does not represent the majority of the Opposition party of Ohio; that the masses of the people are not prepared to rush into the embraces of anti-slavery agitation. Our own course is a clear one; we have only to keep in the regular national conservative channel which we have pursued in other days, permitting the extremists of every shade to battle for the spoils. The Americans, as a body, certainly have nothing to do with a Convention, which not only delights to call itself Republican, but coolly repudiates most important principles for which a majority of the American people, have contended since the foundation of the Government."

With the Times, we cannot believe that this resolution fairly expresses the wishes of a majority of the Opposition of Ohio. In view of the recent existing trials in the Western Reserve, the "leaders" no doubt imagine that they must take extreme ground in regard to the fugitive slave law, in order to propitiate the fanatics of that section, but they will find that while nullification may suit Giddings and his followers; it will not suit the conservatives of Southern Ohio, and what they gain in one section will not counterbalance their losses in other sections. The people are not yet prepared for nullification. They detest and despise it, whether it comes from the North or the South, and we hope the day may never arrive when they will cease to loathe it, let it be presented directly or indirectly, or in what shape it may.

The other resolutions are of little importance compared with the one we have quoted and commented upon. The fourth resolution is, in effect, a repudiation of the recent Massachusetts constitutional amendment. It is a "sop" thrown out to foreigners—an uncalled for and injudicious expression of opinion upon a question not at issue, and not likely to be at issue in any part of the West. The fifth resolution refers to the corruption of the present administration—the sixth denounces the revival of the African slave trade—and the seventh favors a homestead bill—all of which will have the approval of the various shades of the Opposition. The eighth and ninth resolutions pertain to matters of local importance. The tenth and last resolution invites "men of all parties" to fall into the ranks.

We have thus set forth the position of the Republican party of Ohio, as indicated by its platform. That position may be maintained in Ohio, but let the "National" Republican party, or the Republican party of Indiana, assume a similar position, and proclaim nullification, and they would soon be crushed by the force of an enlightened and conservative public opinion.

THE RAILROAD WAR OVER.—The contending parties in the late railroad war have, at least for the present, settled their difficulties, and passenger and freight rates were put up to-day to former prices.

From the Lecompton (Kansas) National Democrat.

The Democracy of the North, the South, the East and the West in Council.

On Tuesday, the 10th day of May, 1859, we had the pleasure of seeing Democrats from every portion of our common country in council. When we beheld the enthusiastic and harmonious action of the delegates in that convention, and called to remembrance the desperate efforts of designing men for two or three years past to organize sectional parties and so embitter the patriotic portion of our settlers against each other on account of the slavery question, as to prevent them from ever uniting on any question, we confess that we were agreeably disappointed, and were fully satisfied that, however reckless and unpatriotic mere politicians may have become, the hearts of the mass of the American people are sound and, as ever, thoroughly patriotic. The Democratic portion of our people, ever since the organization of this Territory, have been without any political organization until November last. They were placed between two fires, surrounded by two sectional parties headed by ultra and unreasonable men; each intensely bitter in his animosity to the Democratic party, and each striving for power, and leaving no means untried to prevent the successful working of the Kansas-Nebraska bill and embarrass the Federal and Territorial Executives. As it was the first time in the history of our country that a deep laid and well matured plan has been gotten up and attempted to be carried out, to dissolve the Union, it naturally embarrassed those whose duty it was to watch over the welfare of our country and defeat their efforts. Under such a combination, it certainly is not surprising if some errors should have been committed in meeting and overcoming the difficulties. The first Governor grossly betrayed his trust, in his eager desire to make money, in which effort, we are sorry to say, he was successful at the expense of his integrity. The first Surveyor-General also grossly betrayed his trust by deserting his party and joining one of the sectional organizations, in the hope of becoming a Senator from the future State, and was engaged in monstrous crimes, for which he was displaced so soon as his treachery was fully made known. It is not surprising that thousands upon thousands of persons outside of Kansas were deceived as to the true state of affairs in this Territory, and totally ignorant of the real motives of the actors on both sides, as hundreds of intelligent men within its limits were and are to this day entirely ignorant of the doings and schemes of the principal persons engaged in the conspiracy. As the patriotic portion of our people have begun to investigate the facts, and inquire into the motives of the prominent actors, they see through the deception and are now organizing preparatory to placing their seal of condemnation on the men who hoped to ride into office on the ruins of the Confederacy. In this glorious work we have said we found co-operating together patriotic men from every portion of our common country, fully imbued with the devoted spirit which ever has and ever will actuate genuine National Democrats. After what we have witnessed in this Territory, we are firmly persuaded that it is not in the power of designing and sectional men to destroy the Confederacy. The Democracy of Kansas are firmly united and fully organized; they have promulgated a platform of principles which even the former negro-equality advocates have attempted to imitate in their Osawatomie Convention. They see the doom that awaits them, and are now eagerly striving to conceal their odious principles by denying them and professing to be what they are not. We care not what course they may pursue. The mass of our people are Democrats; they have united with the firm purpose of securing this beautiful country from the misrule of men who have stolen into power under false pretences, and have grossly abused the trust reposed in them. Their triumph is beyond all question of doubt. Their numbers are daily increasing. The slavery question is a dead issue, and cannot again be revived among our people. The Confederacy is stronger to-day than it was five years ago. The experience of the past five years has clearly demonstrated the capacity of the people for self-control and self-government, despite all sectional, local or exciting influences, and has impressed upon demagogues in every portion of our country the fact, that in order to succeed they must be just to all sections of our common country.

The united and harmonious action of the Tecumseh Convention fully convinced us that the reign of disorganization and sectionalism in Kansas is over, and that the only rule by which the public men of Kansas will be judged, is not whether they are Northern, Southern, Eastern or Western men, but whether they recognize the equal rights of every citizen of the Confederacy, and that without this necessary qualification, they cannot and will not receive any encouragement or support from the National Democratic party of this Territory.

Eleventh Convention of the North American Saengerbund—Tremendous Outpouring of the Germans.

CINCINNATI, O., June 15th, 1859.

At an early hour yesterday, delegates from every part of the State began to arrive in the city, and are still coming in on every train. There is not less than five thousand German strangers in the city at this time, and this number will be largely increased during the day. The delegation from Columbus was large and made a good appearance while marching up town from the depot. The entire of yesterday was devoted to the reception of Societies from abroad. As fast as these Societies arrived they were marched to National Hall, headed by a fine band of music. National Hall is head-quarters, and is beautifully decorated with evergreens, flowers, flags—as is indeed every German institution in the city. Great preparations have been made, and no doubt a great time will be the result. Last evening the magnificent opera of "Alessandro Stradella" was performed at the old Bank Street Theater, with full chorus and orchestra. The performance was splendid, and reflects great credit on those who took part in it. This morning a rehearsal is taking place preparatory to a grand vocal and instrumental concert which takes place to-night. Between four and five hundred singers will take part in the concert. On Thursday, at 3 o'clock P. M., a grand prize concert will take place at the Theater; on Friday a street parade, accompanied by the Light Dragoons, Artillery and Turners will take place. The procession will form on the Public Square and march through the principal streets, and thence to Wilson's Park, where a mammoth "Pic-Nic" will be given, after which the company will return to National Hall, when a banquet of proper dimensions will terminate the jollification of the Eleventh Annual [illegible] festival of the N. A. S. B.

I shall again address you if anything takes place worthy of note. [illegible]

☞ At the recent municipal election in New Orleans, the opposition candidate for comptroller had about 2,000 majority.

Gross Attack on Senator Douglas.

We clip the following characteristic paragraph from the Press and Tribune of yesterday, for the purpose of letting our readers know how contemptible is the war that is being made on Senator Douglas by opposition partizans, and at the same time of commenting briefly upon it. Says the Press and Tribune:

"We firmly believe, gentlemen Democrats, we can beat the best man you can bring out. But should divine wrath permit you again to succeed, we entreat you not to inflict upon the nation another "Poor Pierce," nor a slippery specimen of superannuated imbecility like James Buchanan, nor yet a false, unscrupulous demagogue like Stephen Arnold Douglas, a man whose treachery to freedom resembles that of Benedict Arnold more than that of any other marplot in American annals."

The closing sentence of the above paragraph reminds us of old times, of the year of the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, when unscrupulous demagogues in every section of the free States were heaping on the head of Senator Douglas abuse that was as violent as it was unjust. It is not after the same piece with most of the notices of this eminent statesman that have been current during the last year; it springs from malignity, that, in turn, comes from disappointment. We call the attention of the public to it, and ask, at the same time, that the Press and Tribune give attention to a few facts, and a few reflections.

In 1850, Senator Douglas supported the Compromise measures, and with such distinguished ability as to endear him to Webster and Clay, the great defenders of that measure, and the defenders of the Constitution and the Union, at that trying epoch. The principle involved in that measure, is well known even to the Press and Tribune, and is disputed by no one. Now, we would like to see pointed out any word or deed of Senator Douglas, up to the present day, inconsistent with his speeches and votes, in 1850? Let the Press and Tribune do it if it can; and if it can, then it may with some show of decency, denounce Senator Douglas as a "traitor to freedom." Non-intervention was the doctrine of Webster and Clay then—non-intervention is the doctrine of Senator Douglas now.

Again: Is there anything in Senator Douglas' position now, contradictory of, or inconsistent with, his attitude in 1852? Nobody, surely, has forgotten that the Democratic platform of that year was constructed mainly out of materials borrowed from the men who conducted the memorable struggle for national principles, two years before, to a triumphant issue. Certainly Senator Douglas was not inconsistent or "treacherous to freedom" in standing on that platform, thus erected. The Whigs, too, had a similar platform. Non-intervention was the doctrine of all parties in 1852. And Senator Douglas to-day occupies the same ground that he did in 1850, in 1852, in 1854, in 1856 and in 1858. Having, as we have seen, supported the Compromise measures, and adhered to the principle of those measures through the campaign of 1852, he would have been recreant to duty and false to himself had he not, in 1854, when it became necessary for him to act, as chairman of the Senate Territorial Committee, in the organization of new territories, brought forward a bill embodying the same principle,—the principle of non-intervention.—He brought forward such a bill; it was carried through Congress. That bill declared that the people of a territory, in like manner with the people of a State, should have the right to manage all domestic institutions — including slavery—in their own way; that they might have slavery or not have it, just as they pleased. Through the campaign of 1856 he expounded and defended this doctrine to the people all over the Union. It was expounded and endorsed by Democrats everywhere. It was adopted by Mr. Buchanan. What next?

Why, next comes the memorable contest over the Lecompton constitution. By that instrument, we need not say, the people of Kansas (the Territory in dispute,) were not given a fair chance to decide for themselves the domestic institutions they would have. There was foul play and fraud in many particulars. Senator Douglas took ground against the Lecompton contrivance—he fought and destroyed it. Was he treacherous to freedom—was he false to anything or to anybody, in that fight? On the contrary, he was manly in his positions—the whole country rung with praises of him—even the Press and Tribune was forced to applaud him.—Why, then, this gross attack on his consistency and truthfulness, that we have quoted above? It originated in pure malice and meanness. The truth is, that Senator Douglas stands at this moment just where he has stood for the last eight years on the slavery question. He is for non-intervention. Never for an instant has he deserted this principle. So far from it, the Republicans or Abolitionists of the North, find fault with him because he will not desert it; and the fire-eaters of the South denounce him for the reason that he will not deviate from it. If the Press and Tribune does not understand this matter now, it will have abundant opportunities to learn more about it hereafter.—Chicago Times.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING.—Hon. Wm. H. Safford being in town, on Tuesday, and consenting to address the people, a large number of our citizens met at the Court House, on that evening, and organized by electing E. A. Bratton, Esq., Chairman, and A. Pearce, Secretary. Mr. Safford was then introduced and delivered a highly interesting and stirring speech upon the issues, State and National, of this campaign. He spoke of the measures of State policy, the Independent Treasury Law, the law for the semi-annual collection of taxes and the law providing for the payment of the State debt, for the repeal of which Black Republican bankers, stock jobbers and others who would like to rob the State of her money, are now clamoring. Then turning to National affairs, he gave a history of the adoption of that clause in the Constitution which provides for the return of fugitives from service or labor, and the enactments of 1793 and 1850 relative thereto, the latter of which the Republicans now desire repealed.—McArthur Democrat, June 16th.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT—TWO CHILDREN KILLED.—On Thursday last as two burden trains on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad were meeting near Baltimore, two little girls, daughters of HENRY WEIGAND and MR. BRUSTON, attempted to cross the track between the engines. The daughter of Mr. WEIGAND fell; one train passing over her, tearing out her bowels. Her little companion in attempting to save her was caught beneath the wheels and the muscles of her left leg were torn away and her foot split open.

From the National Intelligencer.

The President in North Carolina.

We have mentioned the departure from this city on Monday evening of the President of the United States, accompanied by the Hon. Jacob Thompson, Secretary of the Interior, on a visit to the University of North Carolina. Upon their arrival at Weldon, in that State, on Tuesday, they were formally welcomed by Governor Ellis and ex-Governor Bragg, who, accompanied by several other distinguished citizens and two volunteer military companies from Raleigh and Wilmington, had proceeded thither to welcome their eminent guests, who were received in the presence of a large concourse of spectators.

The remarks on the occasion were brief and appropriate, and those of the President will attract the more interest from their announcement of his wish to retire to private life at the close of his present term of office. We copy a sketch of them from a letter which we find in the Richmond Dispatch: [illegible]

ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR ELLIS.

I welcome you, Mr. President, in the name of the people of North Carolina.—Fellow-citizens, I have the honor of introducing to you James Buchanan, President of the United States. It needs not that I should speak to you of his character and public service. They are a part of the history of this great country, and, as we value that country, so will we value his services in its behalf. It has been said of a distinguished Marshal of France, that he fought five hundred battles for his country, and never one against it. So may we say of the illustrious Chief Magistrate who stands before you, that he has fought one hundred political battles for his country, and never one against it. Let those forget those battles who can, but never can the bosom of a North Carolinian cease to pulsate at the remembrance of them.—His efforts for the good of the country have only been circumscribed by the constitution and the Union, limits beyond which no true patriot dare go. At the close of half a century of public life, we can sincerely congratulate him on its results; and to-day, while Europe is struggling in the smoke of war with her millions of soldiers, we assemble in peace to pour forth the grateful tribute of a people, in token of their recognition of these results. (Cheers.)

REPLY OF PRESIDENT BUCHANAN.

I reciprocate with all my heart the cordial welcome I have just received from the citizens of North Carolina. I have long contemplated a visit to your great and fruitful State, but have never been able to do so till now. I must have come now or not at all, for the age I will have attained when my term shall have ended, and when I shall go into retirement, is that at which man is warned to remain at rest and prepare for that great event which must overtake us all.

I have always admired this State. It is truly conservative, and while the fire of liberty burns as brightly in the bosoms of North Carolinians as in the hearts of any of the inhabitants of this Union, the love of law and order are equally prevalent.—Liberty, as cherished by all parties in North Carolina, becomes a great civil blessing, unmixed, as it is, with lawlessness, which would make it a curse.

The Governor has spoken of me as a supporter of the Constitution and the Union, and he has spoken truly. I ever expect to be. As long as this great charter of liberty remains unimpaired, we shall be the greatest and the happiest people in the world. But let it be bartered, and we become the scorn of the world and the hope of tyrants. Thank God, there is no danger to it from North Carolina, for while she may have had her differences in politics, she has never wavered on the great question of the Constitution. (Loud and prolonged cheers.) God bless the Old North State! (Cheers.)

At the close of the President's speech ex-Governor Bragg, in a cordial address, welcomed Mr. Secretary Thompson, a native North Carolinian, who briefly and eloquently replied. The ceremonies at Weldon were then closed with a national air from the band; and, after a few minutes rest, the party, including the military companies, took a special train of cars for Raleigh, where they safely arrived in the evening, amidst the booming of cannon and the cheers of a multitude of citizens. The address of welcome at Raleigh was delivered by the Hon. Daniel M. Barringer, and was replied to both by the President and Mr. Thompson. We have as yet no report of these ceremonies.

CRUELTY TO DUMB ANIMALS.—The Columbus CITY FACT gets up a funny department daily, after the fashion of "wit and wisdom" in the New York Ledger—the principal feature of which is the bad grammar of the Ohio Statesman. The field is a wide and rich one. If murdering the King's English were a capital offense, the lumbering editor of the Statesman would have been hung, drawn and quartered long ago. As it is not, the FACT has no legal warrant for flaying him alive, and it may yet be indicted for cruelty to dumb animals.—Zanesville Courier.

The Statesman ought to be entitled to our lasting gratitude for the exceeding meekness and submissiveness with which it yields, like the enduring and patient camel, to accept the burden. It reminds us very frequently of a certain person we once knew, who thought that grammar restricted thought, harrowed the mind, and prevented free and enlarged action, the growth of big ideas, the comprehension of vast fields of beauty, whole expanse of science, and acres of art. We made no attempt to follow "the fashion of 'wit and wisdom' in the New York Ledger," but the grammatical blunders of the Statesman are sometimes very amusing, and answer in the place of wit, as do also its lamentable efforts at "wisdom." These are two things, however, that the Statesman can do, and it does not much matter if they be done grammatically—it can scold like a fishwoman and lie like Beelzebub—accomplishments that will make up for bad grammar.—[Fact.

The Contested Election Case.

The resignation of Mr. JONES, of the contested seat in Council, does not in the slightest degree alter the status of Mr. GRANT, the contestant. There is no shifting the responsibility, and to refer the case back to the people, as we believe would have been preferred by Mr. GRANT in the first place, would be farcical now, and we can perceive no ground for doing so, unless because of the Grand Jury indictments. As the matter is before the Court of Common Pleas, for investigation, we presume the delay of action on the part of the Council will be determined by the result there, although the Council having ordered the testimony to be taken, should be governed by the facts elicited before the Mayor and award the seat to the rightful claimant. The resignation of JONES does not affect GRANT'S right, and he stands exactly where he would stand if JONES was still occupying the seat. It is the duty of the Council to determine the credentials of its members, and upon the Council then devolves the responsibility of awarding the place to the proper claimant.

War Items.

[illegible]

A correspondent writing from Voghera, May 23d, says:

I left Alessandria yesterday morning at 5 o'clock by railway, and after passing by the little town of Tortona, stopped in view of Pontecurone, where the head-quarters of Marshal Baraguay d'Hilliers are established. All the country is extremely fertile, and the only thing it has to complain of is the torrent of the Curone, which often in the rainy season and on the melting of the snow, overflows its banks and ravages the roads and plains. At this moment the Curone is tolerably low, and can be crossed without danger. Voghera, where I next arrived, is set down in all geographical dictionaries as a town, it is even said in those works that it is the last one in Piedmont, and that the country which extends to Piacenza only contains villages like Broni and Stradella. But I must affirm that Voghera is only a village like many of those on the banks of the Seine, near Paris; it has, however, just now a very numerous military population. I found the French soldiers engaged in the painful labor of providing for the wounded, and burying the dead. Many remains of the combat of the 20th have been collected—arms, heaps of uniforms, plates bearing the double-headed eagle, bayonets, sheaths, &c.

The dead whom I saw were almost all in white coats, with dark green or blue trousers bearing a red stripe. The head-dress is in the form of a mitre. Almost all these men were young and strong. Their features, however, denoted that they had undergone great fatigue, and the prisoners which have been taken affirm that for some time the corps d'armee to which they belonged had to suffer from forced marches and privations. Among the prisoners a good many are Hungarians. A domestic in the household of the Emperor, who is of that country, questioned several of them, and all seemed to bear their captivity with great philosophy, convinced, as they are, that France will treat them generously. The Austrian officers have been most kindly treated by the French officers, as wine, coffee, cigars, everything likely to be agreeable, have been offered. Most of them have accepted the offers made, but others have absolutely refused, and do not even answer the questions asked. One, a Dutchman, has thus far, it has been noticed, maintained the most obstinate silence.

FRUITLESS ATTEMPT TO CROSS THE PO.

A Paris letter writer, under date of May 26th, says:

A dispatch from the Emperor, received yesterday at the Tuilleries, announced that at five o'clock in the morning the whole French army (140,000 men,) headed by his Majesty himself, as commanding the centre, Baraguay d'Hilliers the right wing, and McMahon the left, was to make one vast, determined effort to cross the Po.

At ten o'clock last night another dispatch arrived, merely containing a few words not indicative of success—"The cannon is still roaring, and nothing yet is done; the enemy has appeared in such tremendous force on the opposite bank that every effort hitherto made to construct our bridges has been useless."—This dispatch has not been made public yet, nor will it be, most likely, until some decided success is obtained and the landing is effected. To the general opinion expressed by civilians that the enemy must cross the Po, and that if it does not succeed in doing so to-day, it surely will to-morrow, military men shake their heads and look grave, and hint that if the French be repulsed now, the attempt must be given up, for the Austrians will, of course, be re-inforced, and repair the losses they may sustain, while the French have not the same means at their disposal. The fact of a whole day, from five in the morning till ten at night, being spent in fruitless endeavors to cross a swollen and rapid river under the heavy fire of the enemy's artillery, tells its own tale, and a dreary one it is.

We have a rumor from Paris that two priests had been shot at Alessandria for conspiring to assassinate the Emperor Napoleon, as an enemy of the Pope and of the Roman Catholic church.

The Crops.

CHEERING PROSPECTS.—Mr. R. F. JENNINGS, of this city, a practical farmer, and a gentleman well qualified to judge, has recently made a trip from here to Harrisburg, from thence to Darbyville and Bloomfield, and thence home by the Chillicothe Pike. Mr. JENNINGS informs us that on the route he examined fully fifty wheat fields, and found but two which were injured by the frost. One of those fields, Mr. J. is of the opinion, will not be worth cutting; the other was about one-half killed. All the rest he pronounces good, and promise to yield abundantly. The head, he says, is unusually large and actually drooping with its weight, and the berry remarkably plump. Get out your cradles.

The Cincinnati Enquirer, of this morning says: "We were assured yesterday by an intelligent and reliable gentleman who has lately traveled through Southern and Central Indiana, that the reports of the damage done to the crops by the late frost are greatly exaggerated, and are, to a large degree, untrue. He states that the harvest, from all appearances, will be luxuriant, and in the grand result far exceeding any that has been gathered for years."

The foregoing is corroborated by a gentleman with whom we conversed to-day, who has just returned from a tour through Indiana. He reports that in the neighborhood of Logansport and Fort Wayne there was no frost on the 4th, and that crops of every description were looking remarkably fine.—[Fact.

AN UPRIGHT JUDGE.—In the concluding portion of his decision remanding the Oberlin prisoners to the custody of the U. S. Marshal, Judge SWAN, of the Supreme Court of Ohio, gave utterance to the following eloquent and manly sentiments, in which he maintains the true distinction between the opinions of the man and the duties of the Judge:

As a citizen I would not deliberately violate the constitution or the law by interference with fugitives from justice. But if a weary, frightened slave should appeal to me to protect him from his pursuers, it is possible I might momentarily forget my allegiance to the law and constitution and give him a covert from those who were on his track—there are, no doubt, many slaveholders who would thus follow the instincts of human sympathy. And if I did it, and was prosecuted, condemned and imprisoned, brought up upon a habeas corpus, and was time permitted to pronounce judgment in my own case, I trust I should have the moral courage to say, under the solemn duties of Judge, bound by my official oath to sustain the supremacy of the constitution and the law:—"The prisoners must be remanded."

It is a pitiful commentary on the beauties of an election judiciary that Judge Swan has been thrown aside by the Republican State Convention of Ohio, and another nominated in his place, because he was thus honest and firm in his course upon the bench.—Buffalo Commercial.

AN INDEPENDENT PRESS.—The Democratic press compliment the FACT by announcing it as "a neutral sheet with Republican and Know Nothing proclivities." The Republican press, on the other hand, pay their respects by calling it "Independent Democrat." Our cotemporary of the Toledo Times finds similar favor, and remarks:

"The difficulty of being fully understood by partizans, when conducting a truly independent press, was never more manifest to us, than at the present time.

"So long as we publish a sheet to suit ourselves, governed by what we conceive to be consistent views of the radical difference between what is right and what is wrong, we shall doubtless meet with but little sympathy from partizans or the partisan press, while at the same time the honest people—the sturdy yeomanry—will be with us, in feeling and sentiment."

And so say we.—[Fact.

☞ The "American" Party in Georgia, through its Central Executive Committee, decides to call no State Convention. The Americans in the State are earnestly urged to unite with the Opposition, and an Opposition Convention is talked of, to be held at Milledgeville in July, for the purpose of selecting an Anti-Administration ticket.

COLLISION BETWEEN BRITISH AND AMERICAN [illegible].—A Florence correspondent of the London Times, writing from Leghorn under date of May 28, says:

I am sorry to hear that there has been a disturbance at Leghorn between some English and American sailors. It appears that a body of the latter was walking through the town, wearing the national tri-color, when they met some of the men from the Conqueror not so adorned. On whose side the fault lay I know not, but my informant, a Frenchman, who was himself on the spot at the time, told me that the English attempted to despoil the Americans of their rosettes, and a fight was the consequence, in which the Livornesi, of course, sided with the wearers of the tri-colors. Whatever course England may eventually adopt, this is no moment for the display of any feeling that may tend to excite against us still further the angry feelings of Italy. The town orders to a man look upon our refusal to join with France and Sardinia as a case of desertion, after the conduct of the latter Power in the Crimean war. The Livornesi, too, are the most excitable and unmanageable race in Tuscany. The sight of the Conqueror, anchored four miles out at sea, is a daily cause of exasperation, and the demeanor of her men might, perhaps, partake somewhat less of the spirit of Capulet's retainer:

"Do you bite your thumb at us, Sir?"

"No, Sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, Sir; but I bite my thumb, Sir."

ROYAL DUKES IN DISGRACE.—The chief command of the British army seems to be fatal to royal dukes. Fifty years ago, in February, 1809, his Royal Highness the Duke of York was driven to perpetrate a downright falsehood in order to screen himself from the public indignation excited by a traffic in army commissions, which had been carried on with his connivance and consent by his mistress, Mrs. Mary Ann Clarke. This disgraceful act did not, however, enable the Prince to retain the command of the British forces, which he shortly afterwards resigned. It is now rumored that the Duke of Cambridge, the nephew of this unlucky commander, and present chief at the Horse-Guards, is on the point of resigning his office on account of dissatisfaction excited by his dealings in connection with the transfer of commissions in the army. Great Britain has certainly some reason to hesitate at putting "her faith in princes," but it would do her journalists and orators no great harm to mitigate the ferocity of their attacks upon foreign sovereigns by a little wholesome contemplation of their own domestic experience of reigning families.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF PENNSYLVANIA "GONE UP."—This institution, which is located at Hollidaysburg, closed its doors on Friday last. The Bank was organized about a year since, by certain reputed capitalists from Philadelphia, who afterwards sold out to parties, said to be connected with the Lock Haven Railroad. Under their management the institution was beginning to enjoy a fair share of public confidence, but a "run" on it on Thursday, by DREXEL & Co., of Philadelphia, where its issues were redeemed, exposed the rottenness of the concern, and compelled the managers to close their doors. It is not stated what its liabilities are.

EFFECT OF THE FROST.—A gentleman well qualified to judge, recently left Cleveland for Davenport, Iowa, writes under date of the 9th inst. to the Cleveland Herald:

"I am happily disappointed. The prospect of the crops was never better. All right around here. Wheat and corn are all right in Illinois and Michigan. Saw no effect of frost on the whole route to this place except in a few garden vegetables; that was confined to a section of fifty miles west of Cleveland, and there the farmers thought the wheat not much injured. Except that fifty miles, all is right and prospects never finer for great crops. Flour in this place is falling, grass never better, and farmers have commenced cutting it."

RELIGIOUS STATISTICS OF NEW YORK.—We find in MAYO's "Symbols of the Capital" the following statement: "New York contains 5,051 churches, affording seats for 1,141,160 of her 3,466,211 people, although the average attendance on public worship is estimated at only 1,134,111; and there are 701,384 members of churches. These churches, with other property connected, are valued in the assessor's table at $21,490,125, and the yearly salaries of clergymen at $2,412,000, giving an average of $400 a year to a body of men harder worked and poorer paid than any class in the Commonwealth."

☞ The Statesman is again firing away its paper pellets at the French, and applauding Austrian prowess. It scouts at NAPOLEON's tardiness, and shows a true JOHN BULL hatred of JOHNNY CRAPAUD. This may be Democratic, and in accordance with English taste, but it is not a little singular, or rather eccentric, to glorify the Austrian and decry the efforts of liberalism to throw off a despotic yoke, and maintain the independence of the Sardinian government; which has been shown to be far more liberal and consistent with republicanism than that of Austria.

☞ Private diplomatic advices received at Washington state that while the British Ministry will be in an actual minority in the House of of Commons, they will, nevertheless, have an effective plurality, owing to the division between PALMERSTON and RUSSELL, who are not reconciled, as has been stated. It is believed that the war question will absorb the question of Parliamentary reform, and will lead to the retention of Lord DERBY in office, as PALMERSTON was retained in power during the Crimean war.

☞ W. C. McDOWELL and JOHN P. SLOUGH, late of Cincinnati, are among the delegates elected to the Kansas Constitutional Convention for the county of Leavenworth. Mr. SLOUGH, it will be remembered, represented Hamilton county, in the Legislature of this State, some years since, and was expelled from his seat for an assault on Mr. CADWELL, of Ashtabula county.

☞ The imports into New York during the past week were $3,351,537, against $[illegible] in 1858, and $4,936,272 in 1857.

☞ The Democracy of Travis county, Texas, have nominated by acclamation in Convention the following independent ticket for State officers: For Governor, Gen. Sam. Houston; for Lieutenant Governor, Edward Clark. Gen. A. J. Hamilton is nominated for Congress, in opposition to Judge Reagan.

☞ Frezzolini met with a sad mishap recently at the opera in Paris. Though but partially recovered from a bronchial attack, she insisted on taking her part with Tamberlik and Borghi-Mamo in the performance of Trovatore, for the benefit of the Italian Volunteer Fund. All went on very well until, in the midst of the forcible duet between Leonora and the Count that follows the Miserere scene, Frezzolini suddenly stopped, trembled and lost her voice. With one sad shriek she fell fainting into the arms of Corsi, the baritone, who carried her behind the wings. She was immediately laid upon the couch which serves in the following prison scene for the gipsy Azucena; but, to avoid disturbing the unfortunate prima donna, the scene was not changed, and the opera closed with the tenor and contralto duet, Madame Frezzolini being unable to rise, much less resume her part.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME I. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1859. NUMBER 7.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.

TERMS $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising, to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 4 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion	$1.00
Each additional insertion	50
One square 3 months	3,00
" 6 "	5,00
" 12 "	15,00
One fourth of a column per year	20,00
" half "	40,00
" column	100,00

Displayed advertisements will be charged one-half more than the above rates.

Advertisements headed and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year ... $5,00.

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements MUST BE PAID FOR IN ADVANCE.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rates.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in, and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration, and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences, and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included, which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union—

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850,—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it; to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Government of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendency in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending to that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; declaring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of mere violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

REPUBLICAN CONSISTENCY.—The Manchester Union Democrat says that "in 1852 the Republican Convention met at Pittsburgh, and nominated John P. Hale for the Presidency. It was then and there declared that 'emigrants and exiles from the Old World should find a cordial welcome to homes of comfort and fields of enterprise in the new; and every attempt to abridge their privilege of becoming citizens, and owners of soil among us, ought to be resisted with inflexible determination!' Most of the men for whom that convention assumed to speak, in three years after were groping in the culverts of Know Nothingism, and are now the supporters or apologists of the thirty days law in New Hampshire and the two years amendment in Massachusetts!"—New Hamp. Gaz.

A FEROCIOUS OLD MISCREANT.—"These pirates," says Mr. Giddings, speaking of the officers of the government who reclaimed a fugitive slave in Ohio, "should have been delivered over to the colored men and consigned to the doom of pirates, which should have been speedily executed. Had the prisoners executed the slave-catchers promptly, it would have taught 'the administration' a lesson not soon to be forgotten." The idea of hanging the United States Marshals, by negro executioners, in order to rebuke the administration, is worthy of a demagogue whose partisanship has brutalized his intellect and his morals.—New Hamp. Gaz.

☞ Keep in mind that the extremists in the South are opposed to the Democratic party because it will not lend its aid to propagate slavery. Also keep in mind that the Republicans of the North are petting these same Southern ultraists with a view to unite with them in opposition to the Democracy in 1860. Let no honest man forget these facts when asked to support the Republican party on the score of its superior honesty and devotion to the interests of free labor.—Boston Post.

Ohio Republican Platform—How it is received in Indiana.

The New Albany Tribune as well as the Evansville Journal, two leading Republican papers in the State of Indiana, both edited with ability and possessing influence, repudiate the Ohio Republican Platform. We do not know how much further the defection has extended in the "Hoosier State," but the dissent of these two papers is very significant. The Indianapolis Sentinel says that these papers represent the political views of a large body of voters in that State who have voted with the Republicans in the elections of the past two years. "We misapprehend the conservative sentiment of this class in Indiana, and in the Northwest generally, if they are prepared to sustain the ultra views announced as the basis and ends of the Republican organization. Such a party can only succeed by arraying the sectional prejudices, animosities and interests of the nation against each other, against which the Father of his Country uttered his prophetic warnings."

The following are the comments of the New Albany Tribune upon the action of the Convention:

First, we have a preamble wherein the favor of the Supreme Ruler is "earnestly invoked." We regard this use of the name of the Supreme Ruler as idle if not sacrilegious. Such invocations come not reverentially from the heart of politicians in convention assembled, be they Republicans, Americans or Democrats.

The first resolution consists of generalities,—expresses an abiding confidence in the doctrines heretofore enunciated, and commends them anew to the people. The second resolution demands a re-organization of the Judicial Circuits of the United States, constituting them so as to give each section of the country an equal voice in the Supreme Court, etc., etc. These resolutions are doubtless unobjectionable. The third resolution reads as follows:

"3. That proclaiming our determination rigidly to respect the constitutional obligations imposed upon the States by the federal compact, we maintain the union of the States, the rights of the States and the liberties of the people—and in order to attain these important ends, we demand the repeal of the fugitive slave act of 1850, as it is subversive of both the rights of the States and the liberties of the people, and as contrary to the plainest duties of humanity and justice, and abhorrent to the moral sense of the civilized world."

Here we have presented and advocated nullification—nullification as deep, as dark and as damning as was ever proclaimed by the fanatics of South Carolina. It may be true, and doubtless is, that the fugitive slave law contains some odious features, and requires amendment, but the Ohio Republicans do not ask for its amendment. They demand its unconditional repeal.—No half-way measures, no compromises, will suit them. They propose to practically nullify that provision of the Constitution of the United States which declares that "no person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall in consequence of any law or regulation therein be discharged from such service or labor; but shall be delivered up, on claim of the party to whom such labor or service may be due." This, then, is the entertainment to which the Opposition of Ohio have been invited, but it is an entertainment to which tens of thousands will refuse to sit down. The indications are that the dissatisfaction will be very general. The Gazette, the principal Republican organ, does not appear to like the programme. It attempts to look at the matter philosophically, remarking that the crude notions of a resolution-monger are not worthy of serious consideration. The Gazette seems to think that "men not principles" should be the motto of the party. The Times, the organ of the Americans, talks as follows:

"We submit that the platform does not represent the majority of the Opposition party of Ohio; that the masses of the people are not prepared to rush into the embraces of anti-slavery agitation. Our own course is a clear one; we have only to keep in the regular national conservative channel which we have pursued in other days, permitting the extremists of every shade to battle for the spoils. The Americans, as a body, certainly have nothing to do with a Convention, which not only delights to call itself Republican, but coolly repudiates most important principles for which a majority of the American people, have contended since the foundation of the Government."

With the Times, we cannot believe that this resolution fairly expresses the wishes of a majority of the Opposition of Ohio. In view of the recent existing trials in the Western Reserve, the "leaders" no doubt imagine that they must take extreme ground in regard to the fugitive slave law, in order to propitiate the fanatics of that section, but they will find that while nullification may suit Giddings and his followers, it will not suit the conservatives of Southern Ohio, and what they gain in one section will not counterbalance their losses in other sections. The people are not yet prepared for nullification. They detest and despise it, whether it comes from the North or the South, and we hope the day may never arrive when they will cease to loathe it, let it be presented directly or indirectly, or in what shape it may.

The other resolutions are of little importance compared with the one we have quoted and commented upon. The fourth resolution is, in effect, a repudiation of the recent Massachusetts constitutional amendment. It is a "sop" thrown out to foreigners—an uncalled for and injudicious expression of opinion upon a question not at issue, and not likely to be at issue in any part of the West. The fifth resolution refers to the corruption of the present administration—the sixth denounces the revival of the African slave trade—and the seventh favors a homestead bill—all of which will have the approval of the various shades of the Opposition. The eighth and ninth resolutions pertain to matters of local importance. The tenth and last resolution invites "men of all parties" to fall into the ranks.

We have thus set forth the position of the Republican party of Ohio, as indicated by its platform. That position may be maintained in Ohio, but let the "National" Republican party, or the Republican party of Indiana, assume a similar position, and proclaim nullification, and they would soon be crushed by the force of an enlightened and conservative public opinion.

THE RAILROAD WAR OVER.—The contending parties in the late railroad war have, at least for the present, settled their difficulties, and passenger and freight rates were put up to-day to former prices.

From the Lecompton (Kansas) National Democrat.

The Democracy of the North, the South, the East and the West in Council.

On Tuesday, the 10th day of May, 1859, we had the pleasure of seeing Democrats from every portion of our common country in council. When we beheld the enthusiastic and harmonious action of the delegates in that convention, and called to remembrance the desperate efforts of designing men for two or three years past to organize sectional parties and so embitter the patriotic portion of our settlers against each other on account of the slavery question, as to prevent them from ever uniting on any question, we confess that we were agreeably disappointed, and were fully satisfied that, however reckless and unpatriotic mere politicians may have become, the hearts of the mass of the American people are sound and, as ever, thoroughly patriotic. The Democratic portion of our people, ever since the organization of this Territory, have been without any political organization until November last. They were placed between two fires, surrounded by two sectional parties headed by ultra and unreasonable men; each intensely bitter in his animosity to the Democratic party, and each striving for power, and leaving no means untried to prevent the successful working of the Kansas-Nebraska bill and embarrass the Federal and Territorial Executives. As it was the first time in the history of our country that a deep laid and well matured plan has been gotten up and attempted to be carried out, to dissolve the Union, it necessarily embarrassed those whose duty it was to watch over the welfare of our country and defeat their efforts. Under such a combination, it certainly is not surprising if some errors should have been committed in meeting and overcoming the difficulties. The first Governor grossly betrayed his trust, in his eager desire to make money, in which effort, we are sorry to say, he was successful at the expense of his integrity. The first Surveyor-General also grossly betrayed his trust by deserting his party and joining one of the sectional organizations, in the hope of becoming a Senator from the future State, and was engaged in monstrous crimes, for which he was displaced so soon as his treachery was fully made known. It is not surprising that thousands upon thousands of persons outside of Kansas were deceived as to the true state of affairs in this Territory, and totally ignorant of the real motives of the actors on both sides, as hundreds of intelligent men within its limits were and are to this day entirely ignorant of the doings and schemes of the principal persons engaged in the conspiracy. As the patriotic portion of our people have begun to investigate the facts, and inquire into the motives of the prominent actors, they see through the deception and are now organizing preparatory to placing their seal of condemnation on the men who hoped to ride into office on the ruins of the Confederacy. In this glorious work we have said we found co-operating together patriotic men from every portion of our common country, fully imbued with the devoted spirit which ever has and ever will actuate genuine National Democrats. After what we have witnessed in this Territory, we are firmly persuaded that it is not in the power of designing and sectional men to destroy the Confederacy. The Democracy of Kansas are firmly united and fully organized; they have promulgated a platform of principles which even the former negro-equality advocates have attempted to imitate in their Osawatomie Convention. They see the doom that awaits them, and are now eagerly striving to conceal their odious principles by denying them and professing to be what they are not. We care not what course they may pursue. The mass of our people are Democrats; they have united with the firm purpose of rescuing this beautiful country from the misrule of men who have stolen into power under false pretences, and have grossly abused the trust reposed in them. Their triumph is beyond all question of doubt. Their numbers are daily increasing. The slavery question is a dead issue, and cannot again be revived among our people. The Confederacy is stronger to-day than it was five years ago. The experience of the past five years has clearly demonstrated the capacity of the people for self-control and self-government, despite all sectional, local or exciting influences, and has impressed upon demagogues in every portion of our country the fact, that in order to succeed they must be just to all sections of our common country.

The united and harmonious action of the Tecumseh Convention fully convinced us that the reign of disorganization and sectionalism in Kansas is over, and that the only rule by which the public men of Kansas will be judged, is not whether they are Northern, Southern, Eastern or Western men, but whether they recognise the equal rights of every citizen of the Confederacy, and that without this necessary qualification, they cannot and will not receive any encouragement or support from the National Democratic party of this Territory.

Eleventh Convention of the North American Saengerbund—Tremendous Outpouring of the Germans.

CLEVELAND, O., June 15th, 1859.

At an early hour yesterday, delegates from every part of the State began to arrive in the city, and are still coming in on every train. There is not less than five thousand German strangers in the city at this time, and this number will be largely increased during the day. The delegation from Columbus was large and made a good appearance while marching up town from the depot. The entire of yesterday was devoted to the reception of Societies from abroad. As fast as these Societies arrived they were marched to National Hall, headed by a fine band of music. National Hall is head-quarters, and is beautifully decorated with evergreens, flowers, flags—and indeed every German institution in the city. Great preparations have been made, and no doubt a great time will be the result. Last evening the magnificent opera of "Alessandro Stradella" was performed at the old Bank Street Theater, with full chorus and orchestra. The performance was splendid, and reflects great credit on those who took part in it. This morning a rehearsal is taking place preparatory to a grand vocal and instrumental concert which takes place to-night. Between four and five hundred singers will take part in the concert. On Thursday, at 3 o'clock P. M., a grand prize concert will take place at the Theater; on Friday a street parade, accompanied by the Light Dragoons, Artillery and Turners will take place. The procession will form on the Public Square and march through the principal streets, and thence to Wilson's Park, where a mammoth "Pic-Nic" will be given, after which the company will return to National Hall, when a banquet of proper dimensions will terminate the jollification of the Eleventh Annual long festival of the N. A. B.

I shall again advise you if anything takes place worthy of note. [illegible]

☞ At the recent municipal election in New Orleans, the opposition candidate for comptroller had about 2,000 majority.

Gross Attack on Senator Douglas.

We clip the following characteristic paragraph from the Press and Tribune of yesterday, for the purpose of letting our readers know how contemptible is the war that is being made on Senator Douglas by opposition partizans, and at the same time of commenting briefly upon it. Says the Press and Tribune:

"We firmly believe, gentlemen Democrats, we can beat the best man you can bring out. But should divine wrath permit you again to succeed, we entreat you not to inflict upon the nation another 'Poor Pierce,' nor a slippery specimen of superannuated imbecility like James Buchanan, nor yet a false, unscrupulous demagogue like Stephen Arnold Douglas, a man whose treachery to freedom resembles that of Benedict Arnold more than that of any other marplot in American annals."

The closing sentence of the above paragraph reminds us of old times, of the year of the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, when unscrupulous demagogues in every section of the free States were heaping on the head of Senator Douglas abuse that was as violent as it was unjust. It is not after the same piece with most of the notices of this eminent statesman that have been current during the last year; it springs from malignity, that, in turn, comes from disappointment. We call the attention of the public to it, and ask, at the same time, that the Press and Tribune give attention to a few facts, and a few reflections.

In 1850, Senator Douglas supported the Compromise measures, and with such distinguished ability as to endear him to Webster and Clay, the great defenders of that measure, and the defenders of the Constitution and the Union, at that trying epoch. The principle involved in that measure, is well known even to the Press and Tribune, and is disputed by no one. Now, we would like to see pointed out any word or deed of Senator Douglas, up to the present day, inconsistent with his speeches and votes, in 1850. Let the Press and Tribune do it if it can, and if it can, then it may with some show of decency, denounce Senator Douglas as a "traitor to freedom." Non-intervention was the doctrine of Webster and Clay then—non-intervention is the doctrine of Senator Douglas now.

Again: Is there anything in Senator Douglas' position now, contradictory of, or inconsistent with, his attitude in 1852? Nobody, surely, has forgotten that the Democratic platform of that year was constructed mainly out of materials borrowed from the man who conducted the memorable struggle for national principles, two years before, to a triumphant issue. Certainly Senator Douglas was not inconsistent or "treacherous to freedom" in standing on that platform, thus erected. The Whigs, too, had a similar platform. Non-intervention was the doctrine of all parties in 1852. And Senator Douglas to-day occupies the same ground that he did in 1850, in 1852, in 1854, in 1856 and in 1858. Having, as we have seen, supported the Compromise measures, and adhered to the principle of those measures through the campaign of 1852, he would have been recreant to duty and false to himself, had he not, in 1854, when it became necessary for him to act, as chairman of the Senate Territorial Committee, in the organization of new territories, brought forward a bill embodying the same principle,—the principle of non-intervention.—He brought forward such a bill; it was carried through Congress. That bill declared that the people of a territory, in like manner with the people of a State, should have the right to manage all domestic institutions—including slavery—in their own way; that they might have slavery or not have it, just as they pleased. Through the campaign of 1856 he expounded and defended this doctrine to the people all over the Union. It was expounded and endorsed by Democrats everywhere. It was adopted by Mr. Buchanan. What next?

Why, next comes the memorable contest over the Lecompton constitution. By that instrument, we need not say, the people of Kansas (the Territory in dispute,) were not given a fair chance to decide for themselves the domestic institutions they would have. There was foul play and fraud in many particulars. Senator Douglas took ground against the Lecompton contrivance—he fought and destroyed it. Was he treacherous to freedom—was he false to anything or to anybody, in that fight? On the contrary, he was manly in his positions—the whole country rung with praises of him—even the Press and Tribune was forced to applaud him!—Why, then, this gross attack on his consistency and truthfulness, that we have quoted above? It originated in pure malice and meanness. The truth is, that Senator Douglas stands at this moment just where he has stood for the last eight years on the slavery question. He is for non-intervention. Never for an instant has he deserted this principle. So far from it, the Republicans or Abolitionists of the North, find fault with him because he will not desert it; and the fire-eaters of the South denounce him for the reason that he will not deviate from it. If the Press and Tribune does not understand this matter now, it will have abundant opportunities to learn more about it hereafter.—Chicago Times.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING.—Hon. Wm. H. Safford being in town, on Tuesday, and consenting to address the people, a large number of our citizens met at the Court House, on that evening, and organized by electing E. A. Bratton, Esq., Chairman, and A. Pearce, Secretary. Mr. Safford was then introduced and delivered a highly interesting and stirring speech upon the issues, State and National, of this campaign. He spoke of the measures of State policy, the Independent Treasury Law, the law for the semi-annual collection of taxes and the law providing for the payment of the State debt, for the repeal of which Black Republican bankers, stock jobbers and others who would like to rob the State of her money, are now clamoring. Then turning to National affairs, he gave a history of the adoption of that clause in the Constitution which provides for the return of fugitives from service or labor, and the enactments of 1793 and 1850 relative thereto, the latter of which the Republicans now desire repealed.—McArthur Democrat, June 16th.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT—TWO CHILDREN KILLED.—On Thursday last as two burden trains on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad were meeting near Baltimore, two little girls, daughters of Henry W[illegible] and Mr. [illegible], attempted to cross the track between the engines. The daughter of Mr. W[illegible] fell; one train passing over her, tearing out her bowels. Her little companion in attempting to save her was caught beneath the wheels and the muscles of her left leg were torn away and her foot split open.

From the National Intelligencer.

The President in North Carolina.

We have mentioned the departure from this city on Monday evening of the President of the United States, accompanied by the Hon. Jacob Thompson, Secretary of the Interior, on a visit to the University of North Carolina. Upon their arrival at Weldon, in that State, on Tuesday, they were formally welcomed by Governor Ellis and ex-Governor Bragg, who, accompanied by several other distinguished citizens and two volunteer military companies from Raleigh and Wilmington, had proceeded thither to welcome their eminent guests, who were received in the presence of a large concourse of spectators.

The remarks on the occasion were brief and appropriate, and those of the President will attract the more interest from their announcement of his wish to retire to private life at the close of his present term of office. We copy a sketch of them from a letter which we find in the Richmond Dispatch:

ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR ELLIS.

I welcome you, Mr. President, in the name of the people of North Carolina.—Fellow-citizens, I have the honor of introducing to you James Buchanan, President of the United States. It needs not that I should speak to you of his character and public service. They are a part of the history of this great country, and, as we value that country, so will we value his services in its behalf. It has been said of a distinguished Marshal of France, that he fought five hundred battles for his country, and never one against it. So may we say of the illustrious Chief Magistrate who stands before you, that he has fought one hundred political battles for his country, and never one against it. Let those forget those battles who can, but never can the bosom of a North Carolinian cease to palpitate at the remembrance of them.—His efforts for the good of the country have only been circumscribed by the constitution and the Union, limits beyond which no true patriot dare go. At the close of half a century of public life, we can sincerely congratulate him on its results; and to-day, while Europe is struggling in the smoke of war with her millions of soldiers, we assemble in peace to pour forth the grateful tribute of a people, in token of their recognition of these results. (Cheers.)

REPLY OF PRESIDENT BUCHANAN.

I reciprocate with all my heart the cordial welcome I have just received from the citizens of North Carolina. I have long contemplated a visit to your great and fruitful State, but have never been able to do so till now. I must have come now or not at all, for the age I will have attained when my term shall have ended, and when I shall go into retirement, is that at which man is warned to remain at rest and prepare for that great event which must overtake us all.

I have always admired this State. It is truly conservative, and while the fire of liberty burns as brightly in the bosoms of North Carolinians as in the hearts of any of the inhabitants of this Union, the love of law and order are equally prevalent.—Liberty, as cherished by all parties in North Carolina, becomes a great civil blessing, unmixed, as it is, with lawlessness, which would make it a curse.

The Governor has spoken of me as a supporter of the Constitution and the Union, and he has spoken truly. I ever expect to be. As long as this great charter of liberty remains unimpaired, we shall be the greatest and the happiest people in the world. But let it be battered, and we become the scorn of the world and the hope of tyrants. Thank God, there is no danger to it from North Carolina, for while she may have had her differences in politics, she has never wavered on the great question of the Constitution. (Loud and prolonged cheers.) God bless the Old North State! (Cheers.)

At the close of the President's speech ex-Governor Bragg, in a cordial address, welcomed Mr. Secretary Thompson, a native North Carolinian, who briefly and eloquently replied. The ceremonies at Weldon were then closed with a national air from the band; and, after a few minutes rest, the party, including the military companies, took a special train of cars for Raleigh, where they safely arrived in the evening, amidst the booming of cannon and the cheers of a multitude of citizens. The address of welcome at Raleigh was delivered by the Hon. Daniel M. Barringer, and was replied to both by the President and Mr. Thompson. We have as yet no report of these ceremonies.

CRUELTY TO DUMB ANIMALS.—The Columbus CITY FACT gets up a funny department daily, after the fashion of "wit and wisdom" in the New York Ledger—the principal feature of which is the bad grammar of the Ohio Statesman. The field is a wide and rich one. If murdering the King's English were a capital offense, the lumbering editor of the Statesman would have been hung, drawn and quartered long ago. As it is not, the FACT has no legal warrant for flaying him alive, and it may yet be indicted for cruelty to dumb animals.—Zanesville Courier.

The Statesman ought to be entitled to our lasting gratitude for the exceeding meekness and submissiveness with which it yields, like the enduring and patient camel, to accept the burden. It reminds us very frequently of a certain person we once knew, who thought that grammar restricted thought, harnessed the mind, and prevented free and enlarged action, the growth of big ideas, the comprehension of vast fields of beauty, whole expanses of science, and acres of art. We made no attempt to follow "the fashion of 'wit and wisdom' in the New York Ledger," but the grammatical blunders of the Statesman are sometimes very amusing, and answer in the place of wit, as do also its lamentable efforts at "wisdom." There are two things, however, that the Statesman can do, and it does not much matter if they be done grammatically—it can scold like a fishwoman and lie like Beelzebub—accomplishments that will make up for bad grammar.—[Fact.

The Contested Election Case.

The resignation of Mr. Jones, of the contested seat in Council, does not in the slightest degree alter the status of Mr. Craig, the contestant. There is no shifting the responsibility, and to refer the case back to the people, as we believe would have been preferred by Mr. Craig in the first place, would be farcical now, and we can perceive no ground for doing so, unless because of the Grand Jury indictments. As the matter is before the Court of Common Pleas, for investigation, we presume the delay of action on the part of the Council will be determined by the result there, although the Council having ordered the testimony to be taken, should be governed by the facts elicited before the Mayor and award the seat to the rightful claimant. The resignation of Jones does not affect Craig's right, and he stands exactly where he would stand if Jones was still occupying the seat. It is the duty of the Council to determine the credentials of its members; and upon the Council then devolves the responsibility of awarding the place to the proper claimant.

War Items.

A VIEW OF THE BATTLE FIELD.

A correspondent writing from Voghera, May 22d, says:

I left Alessandria yesterday morning at 5 o'clock by railway, and after passing by the little town of Tortona, stopped in view of Pontecurone, where the head-quarters of Marshal Baraguay d'Hilliers are established. All the country is extremely fertile, and the only thing it has to complain of is the torrent of the Curone, which often in the rainy season and on the melting of the snow, overflows its banks and ravages the roads and plains. At this moment the Curone is tolerably low, and can be crossed without danger. Voghera, where I next arrived, is set down in all geographical dictionaries as a town, it is even said in those works that it is the last one in Piedmont, and that the country which extends to Piacenza only contains villages like Broni and Stradella. But I must affirm that Voghera is only a village like many of those on the banks of the Seine, near Paris; it has, however, just now a very numerous military population. I found the French soldiers engaged in the painful labor of providing for the wounded, and burying the dead. Many remains of the combat of the 20th have been collected—arms, heaps of uniforms, plates bearing the double-headed eagle, bayonets, sheaths, &c.

The dead whom I saw were almost all in white coats, with dark green or blue trousers bearing a red stripe. The head-dress is in the form of a mitre. Almost all these men were young and strong. Their features, however, denoted that they had undergone great fatigue, and the prisoners which have been taken affirm that for some time the corps d'armee to which they belonged had to suffer from forced marches and privations. Among the prisoners a good many are Hungarians. A domestic in the household of the Emperor, who is of that country, questioned several of them, and all seemed to bear their captivity with great philosophy, convinced, as they are, that France will treat them generously. The Austrian officers have been most kindly treated by the French officers, as wine, coffee, cigars, everything likely to be agreeable, have been offered. Most of them have accepted the offers made, but others have absolutely refused, and do not even answer the questions asked. One, a Dutchman, has thus far, it has been noticed, maintained the most obstinate silence.

FRUITLESS ATTEMPT TO CROSS THE PO.

A Paris letter writer, under date of May 29th, says:

A dispatch from the Emperor, received yesterday at the Tuilleries, announced that at five o'clock in the morning the whole French army (140,000 men,) headed by his Majesty himself, as commanding the centre, Baraguay d'Hilliers the right wing, and McMahon the left, was to make one vast, determined effort to cross the Po.

At ten o'clock last night another dispatch arrived, merely containing a few words not indicative of success—"The cannon is still roaring, and nothing yet is done; the enemy has appeared in such tremendous force on the opposite bank that every effort hitherto made to construct our bridges has been useless."—This dispatch has not been made public yet, nor will it be, most likely, until some decided success is obtained and the landing is effected. To the general opinion expressed by civilians that the enemy must cross the Po, and that if it does not succeed in doing so to-day, it surely will to-morrow, military men shake their heads and look grave, and hint that if the French be repulsed now, the attempt must be given up, for the Austrians will, of course, be re-inforced, and repair the losses they may sustain, while the French have not the same means at their disposal. The fact of a whole day, from five in the morning till ten at night, being spent in fruitless endeavors to cross a swollen and rapid river under the heavy fire of the enemy's artillery, tells its own tale, and a dreary one it is.

We have a rumor from Paris that two priests had been shot at Alessandria for conspiring to assassinate the Emperor Napoleon, as an enemy of the Pope and of the Roman Catholic church.

The Crops.

CHEERING PROSPECTS.—Mr. E. F. Jennings, of this city, a practical farmer, and a gentleman well qualified to judge, has recently made a trip from here to Harrisburg, from thence to Darbyville and Bloomfield, and thence home by the Chillicothe Pike. Mr. Jennings informs us that on the route he examined fully fifty wheat fields, and found but two which were injured by the frost. One of those fields, Mr. J. is of the opinion, will not be worth cutting; the other was about one-half killed. All the rest he pronounces good, and promise to yield abundantly. The head, he says, is unusually large and actually drooping with its weight, and the berry remarkably plump. Get out ye croakers.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of this morning says: "We were assured yesterday by an intelligent and reliable gentleman who has lately traveled through Southern and Central Indiana, that the reports of the damage done to the crops by the late frost are greatly exaggerated, and are, in a large degree, untrue. He states that the harvest, from all appearances, will be luxuriant, and in the grand result far exceeding any that has been gathered for years."

The foregoing is corroborated by a gentleman with whom we conversed to-day, who has just returned from a tour through Indiana. He reports that in the neighborhood of Logansport and Fort Wayne there was no frost on the 4th, and that crops of every description were looking remarkably fine.—[Fact.

AN UPRIGHT JUDGE.—In the concluding portion of his decision remanding the Oberlin prisoners to the custody of the U. S. Marshal, Judge SWAN, of the Supreme Court of Ohio, gave utterance to the following eloquent and manly sentiments, in which he maintains the true distinction between the opinions of the man and the duties of the Judge:

As a citizen I would not deliberately violate the constitution or the law by interference with fugitives from justice. But if a weary, frightened slave should appeal to me to protect him from his pursuers, it is possible I might momentarily forget my allegiance to the law and constitution and give him a covert from those who were on his track—there are, no doubt, many slaveholders who would thus follow the instincts of human sympathy. And if I did it, and was prosecuted, condemned and imprisoned, brought up upon a habeas corpus, and was then permitted to pronounce judgment in my own case, I trust I should have the moral courage to say, under the solemn duties of Judge, bound by my official oath to sustain the supremacy of the constitution and the law, "The prisoners must be remanded."

It is a pitiful commentary on the beauties of an elective judiciary that Judge Swan has been thrown aside by the Republican State Convention of Ohio, and another nominated in his place, because he was thus honest and firm in his course upon the bench.—Buffalo Commercial.

AN INDEPENDENT PAPER.—The Democratic press compliment the FACT by announcing it as "a neutral sheet with Republican and Know Nothing proclivities." The Republican press, on the other hand, pay their respects by calling it "Independent Democrat." Our cotemporary of the Toledo Times finds similar favor, and remarks:

"The difficulty of being fully understood by partisans, when conducting a truly Independent press, was never more manifest, to us, than at the present time.

"So long as we publish a sheet to suit ourselves, governed by what we conceive to be competent views of the radical difference between what is right and what is wrong, we shall doubtless meet with but little sympathy from partisans of the partisan press, while at the same time the honest people—the sturdy yeomanry—will be with us, in feeling and sentiments."

And so say we.—[Fact.

☞ The [illegible] party in Georgia, through its Central Executive Committee, decides to call no State Convention. The Americans in the State are earnestly urged to unite with the Opposition; and an Opposition Convention is talked of, to be held at Milledgeville in July, for the purpose of effecting an Anti-Administration fusion.

COLLISION BETWEEN BRITISH AND AMERICAN SEAMEN AT LEGHORN.—A Florence correspondent of the London Times, writing from Leghorn under date of May 26, says:

I am sorry to hear that there has been a disturbance at Leghorn between some English and American sailors. It appears that a body of the latter was walking through the town, wearing the national tri-color, when they met some of the men from the Congreve not so adorned. On whose side the fault lay I know not, but my informant, a Frenchman, who was himself on the spot at the time, told me that the English attempted to despoil the Americans of their rosettes, and a fight was the consequence, in which the Livornesi, of course, sided with the wearers of the tri-colors. Whatever course England may eventually adopt, this is no moment for the display of any feeling that may tend to excite against us still further the angry feelings of Italy. The lower orders to a man look upon our refusal to join with France and Sardinia as a case of desertion, after the conduct of the latter Power in the Crimean war. The Livornesi, too, are the most excitable and unmanageable race in Tuscany. The sight of the Congreve, anchored four miles out at sea, is a daily cause of exasperation, and the demeanor of her men might, perhaps, partake somewhat less of the spirit of Capulet's retainer:

"Do you bite your thumb at us, Sir?"

"No, Sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, Sir; but I bite my thumb, Sir."

ROYAL DUKES IN DISGRACE.—The chief command of the British army seems to be fatal to royal dukes. Fifty years ago, in February, 1809, his Royal Highness the Duke of York was driven to perpetrate a downright falsehood in order to screen himself from the public indignation excited by a traffic in army commissions, which had been carried on with his connivance and consent by his mistress, Mrs. Mary Ann Clarke. This disgraceful act did not, however, enable the Prince to retain the command of the British forces, which he shortly afterwards resigned. It is now rumored that the Duke of Cambridge, the nephew of this unlucky commander, and present chief at the Horse-Guards, is on the point of resigning his office on account of dissatisfaction excited by his dealings in connection with the transfer of commissions in the army. Great Britain has certainly some reason to hesitate at putting "her faith in princes," but it would do her journalists and orators no great harm to mitigate the ferocity of their attacks upon foreign sovereigns by a little wholesome contemplation of their own domestic experience of reigning families.

THE CENTRAL BANK OF PENNSYLVANIA "GONE UP."—This institution, which is located at Hollidaysburg, closed its doors on Friday last. The Bank was organized about a year since, by certain reputed capitalists from Philadelphia, who afterwards sold out to parties, said to be connected with the Lock Haven Railroad. Under their management the institution was beginning to enjoy a fair share of public confidence, but a "run" on it on Thursday, by DREXEL & Co., of Philadelphia, where its issues were redeemed, exposed the rottenness of the concern, and compelled the managers to close their doors. It is not stated what its liabilities are.

EFFECT OF THE FROST.—A gentleman well qualified to judge, recently left Cleveland for Davenport, Iowa, writes under date of the 9th inst. to the Cleveland Herald:

"I am happily disappointed. The prospect of the crops was never better. All right around here. Wheat and corn are all right in Illinois and Michigan. Saw no effect of frost on the whole route to this place except to a few garden vegetables; that was confined to a section of fifty miles west of Cleveland, and there the farmers thought the wheat not much injured. Except that fifty miles, all is right and prospects never finer for great crops. Wheat in this place is falling; grass never better, and farmers have commenced cutting it."

RELIGIOUS STATISTICS OF NEW YORK.—We find in MAYO's "Symbols of the Capital" the following statement: "New York contains 5,671 churches, affording seats for 2,141,159 of her 3,466,211 people, although the average attendance on public worship is estimated at only 1,124,111; and there are 702,264 members of churches. These churches, with other property connected, are valued in the assessable at $21,480,122, and the yearly salaries of clergymen at $2,412,088, giving an average of $400 a year to a body of men better trained and poorer paid than any class in the Commonwealth."

☞ The Statesman is again firing away its paper pellets at the French, and applauding Austrian prowess. It scouts at NAPOLEON's tardiness, and shows a true JOHN BULL hatred of JOHNNY CRAPEAU. This may be Democratic, and in accordance with English taste, but it is not a little singular, or rather eccentric, to glorify the Austrian and decry the efforts of liberalism to throw off a despotic yoke, and maintain the independence of the Sardinian government; which has been shown to be far more liberal and consistent with republicanism than that of Austria.

☞ Private diplomatic advices received at Washington state that while the British Ministry will be in an actual minority in the House of Commons, they will, nevertheless, have an effective plurality, owing to the division between PALMERSTON and RUSSELL, who are not reconciled, as has been stated. It is believed that the war question will absorb the question of Parliamentary reform, and will lead to the retention of Lord DERBY in office, as PALMERSTON was retained in power during the Crimean war.

☞ W. C. McDOWELL and JOHN P. SLOUGH, late of Cincinnati, are among the delegates elected to the Kansas Constitutional Convention for the county of Leavenworth. Mr. SLOUGH, it will be remembered, represented Hamilton county, in the Legislature of this State, some years since, and was expelled from his seat for an assault on Mr. CABLE, of Ashtabula county.

☞ The imports into New York during the past week were $3,252,847, against $2,[illegible] in 1858, and $4,836,512 in 1857.

☞ The Democracy of Travis county, Texas, have nominated by acclamation in Convention the following independent ticket for State officers: For Governor, Gen. Sam. Houston; for Lieutenant Governor, Edward Clark. Gen. A. J. Hamilton is nominated for Congress, in opposition to Judge Reagan.

☞ Frezzolini met with a sad mishap recently at the opera in Paris. Though but partially recovered from a bronchial attack, she insisted on taking her part with Tamberlik and Borghi-Mamo in the performance of Trovatore, for the benefit of the Italian Volunteer Fund. All went on very well until, in the midst of the forcible duet between Leonora and the Count that follows the Miserere scene, Frezzolini suddenly stopped, trembled and lost her voice. With one sad shriek she fell fainting into the arms of Corsi, the baritone, who carried her behind the wings. She was immediately laid upon the couch which serves in the following prison scene for the gipsy Azucena; but, to avoid disturbing the unfortunate prima donna, the scene was not changed, and the opera closed with the tenor and contralto duet, Madame Frezzolini being unable to rise, much less resume her part.

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. SIDNEY MARSHALL - - - Editor.

TERMS - - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

[illegible]

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,

RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,

WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.

[illegible]

HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.

AUDITOR OF STATE,

G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.

TREASURER OF STATE,

WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.

[illegible]

JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.

[illegible]

JAMES [illegible], of [illegible] County.

COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,

CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

To the Democratic Press and the Democratic People.

We feel rather inclined to have a few words with our co-laborers of the Democratic press, and the Democratic people. Having heretofore expressed our gratefulness for the very handsome and cordial manner in which, with a few exceptions, we were welcomed to the field of labor on which we entered, it is not necessary to repeat our acknowledgments, which were sincere and [illegible].

An effort has been made, and reiterated by the "Statesman," whose location and presumption have invested it with a seeming of importance to which it is not entitled, to create an unfavorable impression of the PEOPLE'S PRESS and its editor. If the "Statesman" had confined its objections to the truth, we should not have troubled ourself, or our readers, with more than perhaps a passing remark in reply. But it has endeavored to create prejudice against us by stating that which is false and without the slightest pretext or foundation.

That we should have incurred the lasting and implacable enmity of the proprietors of the "Statesman," because it fell to our lot to expose the bargain and sale of that paper to the government, is not unnatural. And that they should attempt to injure, if not ruin our prospects, to crush us if possible, by fabrications malicious and most [illegible], is not strange, considering what sort of men they are. We expected to meet with opposition in that quarter,—perhaps as violent as we have met—but really we did not anticipate exactly the kind of opposition in which they have indulged, although that is not unnatural. Men who would sell themselves and their opinions, or else deceive those who bought them, would not scruple at falsehood to subserve their purposes.

Who knows the "Statesman?" What are its inclinings, its preferences, its intentions? A year ago, it expatiated, day after day, upon the enduring theme of popular sovereignty; and held up Mr. DOUGLAS as the exemplar of statesmen. To-day it has not yet ascertained that the Illinois Senator has returned to his home.—When the Washington "Union" was pouring out its venom on Mr. DOUGLAS, after he had accomplished his glorious Democratic victory in Illinois, and predicting that still he would not be returned to the Senate; when it charged him with "a victory won upon a platform of doctrines differing but a shade from the odious platform of Buffalo," when it placed him side by side with Mr. VAN BUREN in 1848, and declared the very platform of principles upon which the Ohio Democratic platform of 1859 has been constructed, what did the "Statesman" say? Nothing. Its power of utterance had been bought!

On the 6th of August last, when we were engaged in editing a paper professing no party ties,—but to which we could not avoid giving our own bias, while the "Union," and the Administration press that echoed it, were every where assailing Mr. DOUGLAS, and the "Statesman" had not a word to say, we wrote and published the following article that speaks for itself. We went as far as the restraints of an independent newspaper would permit us, and at least showed that we had the heart to aid the gallant champion of Democracy, all in our power:

(From the Capital City Fact of August 6, 1858.)

No Word for Stephen A. Douglas!

Why trembles thee? I am Cæsar!

The struggle which Mr. Douglas is making to maintain his high position in Illinois against beleaguering foes on every side, challenges admiration, and it is not a little remarkable that many of those who were most vociferous, so long as his star was in the ascendant, (or thought to be so,) are as mute as mice in this hour of his need, when his destiny is dark and the prospect lowering. "Quid times?" he might call to the trembling cravens, who in the time of prosperity could syllable no other name, but now stand shivering on the brink, voiceless as the hushed winds. If the question, which, for a season, severed him from his party, is settled, why not speak in his behalf, and present some friendly shield, to guard him from the assaults of those who, in times agone by, heard his slogan with rapture, and felt safe, while he proudly and gallantly led the van?

What has wrought this wondrous change? Can politicians, who, during the last session of Congress, thought there was no principle to fight for but the Anti-Lecompton proposition, and acknowledged Douglas their leader—swearing to live or fall by his side—desert him now? Could the imagination in its wildest flight have conceived aught so monstrous, only a few little months ago, as their desertion? Can man, after this, be trusted? Where are those loud peals of thunder that were heard rolling through the valleys and reverberated by the hills? Do circumstances alter cases, and has a sudden palsy seized the powers of speech and pen, which were wont of late to affright the very winds with the pæan-shouts and hosannas to Douglas?

There he stands, bracing himself against his record, and defying the assaults of those who would strip from him his fame. In what has he changed since he led the attack upon the serried ranks of those who stood in the way of his purpose, and the echo of his shrill clarion was heard through the broad west? He is the same Douglas now he was then, unchanged in all save that he is appealing to his immediate constituents, whose faithful servant he has been, and who have shared his glory, to gather again around him and shield him from impending ruin—to keep from the pedestal whence he has won his fame, and again bind his brows with the civic wreath. Is it because he thus appeals, instead of marching like a victorious general at the head of a proud army, the craven-hearted and the weak, the sordid and the mean, the avaricious, the pusillanimous and corrupt, are apprehensive that his doom is writ, his destiny fixed, his power to reward and bestow wrested from him forever?

What do ye fear? Is it that "the Little Giant" is dangerous, and once more with a new term in the Senate, the fire of his ambition may blast and wither whatever shall impede his progress? Shall he be crushed who has so often perilled all for the sake of his party, that he may be trodden on by a common foe, and his ruin be the trophy of an acknowledged enemy's triumph?

"Is there no hand on high to shield the brave?"

Were we of those who shouted "brave" when Douglas made the walls of the Senate ring with his towering eloquence, and searched all hearts for echoes to his denunciations of Lecomptonism, not all the promises of Executive favor, not all the patronage a President could wield or a Cabinet bestow, should swerve us from supporting him now. We thought him wrong then; we had no plaudits for his course, towering in individual power and greatness as it undoubtedly was; we could admire, although we took exceptions to his policy, in a party aspect, as involving results that might, nay, were well calculated to produce unforeseen and still further complicated difficulties; but we must express our sincere wish and earnest hope that he may succeed in this fearful contest—that his proud plume, like the sun of Austerlitz, may gleam in the hour of a matchless triumph.

It always brings a throe to our breast, to see greatness fade and glory depart—to witness the going out of the great lights which have illumined our country's history, and shed a lustrous halo on our Senate. Calhoun, Webster, Clay, Wright, Benton, Clayton, but a few years ago were heard there, but no echoes do the walls give to their voices now.—Mason, McDuffie, Dromgoole, Berrien and others, of names as proud, illustrated that Senate, but they have passed away. Few have been left to wear the mantles they wore; and to see Stephen A. Douglas, one worthy to tread the arena in which they were contestants, ruthlessly thrust aside, stripped of his power—a political Actæon devoured by his own pack—cast down like a thriftless tree, by his own people, is more mournful than to know that he had fallen before inevitable Fate, and his voice would be heard no more. Were he our bitterest foe, we could not withhold our admiration of his indomitable courage, his resistless energy, his almost unequalled self-reliance; nor can we withhold the pity and contempt we feel for those who so lately echoed his slightest whisper, but are silent now.

Alone and single-armed, he contends against a destiny forged for him. What! crush him?

"No! so well the [illegible]
And [illegible]"

He is not a soul to be bowed by disaster or sink in defeat. There is time yet to withhold the fratricidal blow. When Sampson knew his fate he did not perish alone. And there would be sympathies for the fallen Douglas [illegible] not be suppressed, but [illegible] into one tumultuous [illegible] [illegible] reared by party.

[illegible] asked for her jewels, [illegible] pointed to her sons. Can Illinois be less proud of him "priceless jewel" than was the Roman matron? Her sons proved the jewels of the people. And each in Stephen A. Douglas, worth all the dead Lecomptonites that could be raked from the ashes of the past, in the vain hope of a resurrection.

The "Union" was for reading Mr. DOUGLAS out of the party; so MANYPENNY, when chairman of the DOUGLAS and Popular Sovereignty meeting on the 10th of March previous, was for closing the books and reading out of the party all who would not come forward, sign and deliver themselves to the true, real, unequivocal Democratic party which was then sending up its voice from hill and valley—when TOM MILLER, now Mr. BUCHANAN'S Post Master, was decorated with the badge of Grand Marshal, and ushered the crowd through the streets of Columbus. What said the "Statesman" to the "Union?" Nothing. The piece of silver had done its work. Judas had sold himself to treachery.

The Cincinnati "Enquirer" did make a feeble motion—did lift its voice in meek and gentle protestation, amounting to almost remonstrance, but the "Statesman" said nothing, when Mr. DOUGLAS was removed from the place he honored as chairman of the Territorial Committee. The grossest indignity a freeman could bear without striking the slave to his feet, was offered to Mr. DOUGLAS, but the Statesman said nothing.

And this is the paper which some of our pliant and easily-satisfied Democratic friends would have us follow—a paper whose silence is bought and paid for—a paper that inculcates Democratic silence as to preference for men, because it is dangerous to speak—a paper that (for money) put its tongue into the trap to be cut off—or rather into the padlock to be clasped, and that is the policy for Democratic papers to pursue! And when we find the "Statesman" giving advice which Democrats ought not to follow—when we find it setting an example which other papers, claiming to be Democratic, do follow; and feel bound to explain why neither precept nor example should be followed, we are told that we are abusing Mr. DOUGLAS'S best friends!—What TOM MILLER, who said the President was a "d—d old fool, &c.," and now his Postmaster, and George W. MANYPENNY, who was President of the 10th of March DOUGLAS meeting and read Democrats out of the party who were not with him, and now editor of the administration organ here—these "the best friends of Mr. DOUGLAS!" Privately they may tell the friends of Mr. DOUGLAS that they are, but where are the evidences in the columns of the "Statesman?"

One year ago there was no Democrat, North, South, East or West, who occupied one fourth of the place held by Mr. DOUGLAS in the affections of the people of Ohio. At this day, that feeling is struggling to have vent, although it has been buttoned close under their vests.—The press has been faithless to its mission—the warder has slept upon the walls—there has been none to "hang out the banners."

We say it is the part of a Democrat to speak out. We are advised that we shall injure the cause of Mr. DOUGLAS by defending him from his enemies, and informing the people that he is still the same DOUGLAS they were wont to admire, and in whom they had such implicit confidence—that he is with them still, heart and soul, and will never desert them.

Do you think, fellow Democrats of the press of Ohio, that we did not feel restive, out of work altogether, or earning a moderate subsistence in a position where we would not use our pen against our party and friends, and it was rather embarrassed when it would do them service? Many a time it has done such service at all risks, when the "Statesman" was indifferent or an idle spectator, or was gratified at every thrust certain Democrats received. It has done such service when the "Statesman" was thrusting its own envenomed lance in the sides of Democrats, better, nobler, abler, more consistent, more intelligent Democrats than its aspiring Manypenny ever could be, were he moulded over a score of times.

Where is the "Statesman" when the Republican press throughout the State, aye, under its very nose, is making a fierce and vindictive assault upon our own gallant Senator, George E. PUGH—a Democrat whose voice speaks trumpet-tongued to the Democratic heart, leading the charge and crying "on to victory?" The "Statesman" is dumb, mute as an oyster, and lost as a Peri "beneath the dark sea." Do you know why? Manypenny stupidly fancies he can be Senator! CREDAT JUDÆUS! The man that wanted to be Congressman but couldn't, who damaged his party several hundred votes in his own county—who was contrived by the most shameful management of TOM MILLER to be made a delegate to the State Convention, and by a very similar contrivance to be made Chairman of the Democratic Central Committee—this man has vanity enough to think that he can be managed into G. E. PUGH'S place! There's why the "Statesman" is a "lame duck" when the "State Journal," and the Dayton "Gazette," and Cincinnati "Gazette" and "Commercial," and, in fine, the Republican press are firing their best artillery at our Senator. Perhaps it is silent from motives of prudence, as it is with regard to Mr. DOUGLAS!

Now, we ask our brethren of the Democratic press to look back a couple of years, and recall how joyously they took us by the hand when we were introduced to them by Col. MEDARY as his successor, while he should be absent in Minnesota; how earnestly we strove, and how well we succeeded against a great many obstacles in advising the Democratic party for its welfare, and how valiantly we fought its battles. We may be excused this little egotism, for they thought so and said so. They parted from us with reluctance, when circumstances which we could not control, placed the "Statesman" in other hands; but their reluctance was nothing like our own, for we thought we saw a brilliant victory dawning upon the party. We did not see that victory, and perhaps were mistaken in the omen, and perhaps our hopes had augured too flatteringly. Well, be that as it may, and be the manner in which the "Statesman" got into the present hands and became what it is, too tedious to repeat, (although not without interest for Democrats to know,) we are the same frank, determined, steadfast Democrat we were while editor of the "Statesman." We scorn everything mean, or low or cunning, as we did then. We meet our adversaries with bold, open front as we did then, and seek no sneaking ambush. We will not disparage them falsely, for that were cowardly. We most earnestly invoke the success of the Democratic party, on high, honorable and manly ground—on principles that with us are holy. We have our own paper, in which we have ventured all that we have, and mean to merit success if we do not win it. If they see us repelling the mean, dastardly attacks of the "Statesman," and feel mortified at the exposure of the entire want of principle and utter selfishness of their "imbecile" and fatuous, and flatulent "central organ," all we ask is that they keep their hands off and let us have fair play; and in the words of Brutus:

"Hear me for my cause; and be silent that you may hear; believe me for mine honor; and have respect for my honor, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom; and awake your senses that you may the better judge."

We have not ventured upon our task without due consideration; and it will require something more than the opposition of the "Statesman," with all its government patronage and favor to drive us from our purpose.

The Savannah Republican says it has never known so animated a scramble for Congressional honors. In some of the districts of Georgia there are from fifteen to twenty aspirants for the nomination of their party friends, and in none are there probably less than eight or ten. As all the districts except two are Democratic, the struggle is confined, for the most part, to gentlemen belonging to one faction or another of that party.—[N. Y. Tribune.

The Savannah Republican is an "opposition" paper, and would disparage the Democrats if it could. The eagerness to represent the several districts in Georgia is a good omen; for it not only displays a laudable ambition for political distinction, but shows that the State is about right. We trust, however, that in the pursuit of congressional honors, they will not allow that ambition to divide them as Democrats.

OHIO POP.—The Democracy of Ohio "disclaim fellowship" with all those who, at the South or the North, or the West or the East, demand Congressional protection to or prohibition of slavery. They will never recognize the Southern Congressional interventionist as a Democrat, any more than they will recognize a Northern Abolitionist as a Democrat.—Cin. Enquirer.

We find the above in a Republican paper, and did not see it in the "Enquirer." It is not exactly what we should have expected from that paper; which might have shown more forbearance towards that portion of the Democracy, who are momentarily carried away by sectional feeling, and are excited under a very natural resentment at what they consider an interference with their rights. If the language is the "Enquirer's" it should be modified to represent that the Ohio Democracy are unconditionally opposed to Congressional intervention with the domestic affairs of the Territories. They are rational in their feelings, and while they oppose Congressional intervention on the same grounds as Abolition, for the two will amount to pretty nearly the same thing in the end, they recognize as Democrats, engaged in the same patriotic cause, even those whose sentiments on this point, may conflict with theirs, hoping that they will not be driven into a suicidal opposition, and when momentary passion and excitement is over, they will perceive their error. They are contending for a mere abstraction, any how, which may subserve individual ambition in the South, but can never be reduced to practical purposes. The language attributed to the "Enquirer," is not calculated to awaken calm and deliberate examination; and is a little at variance with the great Democratic principle of freedom of thought, which scorns abject obedience to the opinions of any man or set of men. Those who so harmoniously sustained the Kansas-Nebraska act when it was before Congress, did not agree in every particular, and many reserved to themselves their individual opinions as to how far the doctrine of popular sovereignty and non-intervention extended. Yet they were Democrats; and their voices aided to swell the grand anthem which filled the whole country with rejoicing.—This reading out of the party is easily said, but not so easily done; and to disclaim fellowship with all who do not exactly, and in everything coincide with us, is a dangerous alternative, and sometimes proves troublesome.

We trust that there never will arise a necessity of testing the power of Congress—that the issue will not be raised in Congress—that nothing in a territory may call for other protection than can be found in the territorial laws and the Courts. When Congress shall attempt to exercise the power, and our Southern friends so far forget the pledges of 1856, it will be time enough to talk of "disclaiming fellowship," although our platform of 1859 has such language. At present they are only letting off a little gas for buncombe, and all they say about the protection of their rights, is addressed to those who will never hazard an invasion of those rights. We may and do "disclaim fellowship" with any ill-advised action on their part, in prematurely raising an issue that may practically never have an existence, but it does not follow as a matter of course that we classify them with Northern Abolitionists, whose sole capital is the interference with the rights of others.

The resolution of the Platform was intended to be emphatic on the subject of Congressional non-intervention; from which the Ohio Democracy do not intend to be driven or persuaded, but it was not meant to be offensive to those Southern Democrats who are now laboring under the excitement of prejudice, to which they have been led by the mistaken zeal of a portion of their press and ambitious aspirants.

How to Treat Opponents.

The Findlay "Courier" objects to the fair and just notice of the gentlemen who were nominated upon the Republican ticket, which appeared in this paper, and says we gave them "exalted praise." The "Courier" belongs to the "Statesman" tribe, who think the way to subserve party is to abuse personally all opponents. We war upon opinions, not men; and to call a political opponent a fool or a knave, when the people know it is not a fact, is not to make it so, or make the people believe it. We recognize the necessity of party discipline, but deny that it requires an editor to falsely disparage a political adversary, or detract from his individual merit, because he happens to be an adverse candidate. The acknowledgment of their qualifications, or of their personal merit, is not supporting them for office, or a disparagement of the qualifications of our own candidates. Our opposition to the Republican ticket is upon political, not personal, grounds. We differ from those named upon it, most materially upon radical questions of Government, but that is no reason we should call them scoundrels or idiots. We hope to see them defeated, but to accomplish their defeat we feel no obligation to detract from or asperse their character as gentlemen. To say that this one is a man of ability, or that one is a man of amiable deportment and agreeable manners, we do not consider "exalted praise." Nor do we consider it any dereliction on our part, or infidelity to the Democratic party, because a Republican paper chooses to re-produce a paragraph from our paper, speaking respectfully of the candidates of its party. The Findlay "Courier" might do us justice by showing what it is pleased to term "the brands," to be dangerous [illegible].

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW—WHO MADE IT.—The Opposition just now vehemently denounce the Fugitive Slave law as "unconstitutional, wicked and abominable." It is quite curious that they have but recently found it out. This very law was amended and passed by a Whig Administration, Millard Fillmore being President.—And the Whig National Convention which nominated General Scott for the Presidency passed a strong resolution sustaining the law and declaring that the salvation of the Union depended upon the enforcement of it. The present editor of the Cleveland Leader was a delegate to the Scott Convention, and voted for that resolution. The Leader is now an ultra abolition sheet, and pounces upon the law bitterly. Consistency is a jewel.

The Opposition generally, a few years ago sanctioned, sustained and fathered the law, and now they denounce the Administration and the officers for enforcing their law, which is still unrepealed, and which they (the officers) have sworn to enforce.—[Bucyrus Forum.

"A few years ago" might puzzle several other clamorous gentlemen who are horrified at the iniquity of the Fugitive slave law. We shall see how their record stands before the State canvass is over. One year ago a certain person was reading Democrats out of the party because they would not stand on a platform to which he had been very suddenly introduced, and don't [illegible].

The Bucyrus "Forum" is true to the needle; and its memory is better than that of some others we wot of. It strikes in the right place, at the water line. Those are the most clamorous now about the law, who took it very patiently under the administration of Mr. Fillmore.

HASTE IN WRITING.—Our craft sometimes make ludicrous mistakes. For instance, in an article we copy on our fourth page, from the Wheeling Intelligencer, we are informed of "the trail of a dead alligator which had followed the course of the pipes, &c." The impossibility of "a dead alligator" MAKING TRACKS will be obvious to every one. But it not only left a trail, but went until it could go no further and there "stuck fast and died," a wonderful achievement for a "dead alligator." We commend this illustration of fortunate diction to our very amiable cotemporary of the "Statesman" who sometimes "plays fantastic tricks" with language.

The administration has sent instructions to our Minister to demand reparation for the execution of the Enquaotor of the American Consul at Valparaiso. WILLIAM TRIVITT, Esq., formerly of this city, and a man of [illegible] has also been ordered to that port.

Naturalized Citizens.

The Allen County "Democrat" has about the best article we have seen on the subject of the recent letters of Gen. Cass, in answer to questions proposed by naturalized citizens. It says:

The European principle that denies the right of expatriation has never been practically abandoned in this country. The doctrine "once a citizen always a citizen" is only denied in time of war and from necessity. We well recollect Mr. Clay and other Senators' comments on this subject in 1839-40 in the U. S. Senate. It was not favorable to the due protection of the adopted citizen. Not in this country, with any party, has it ever been. The feeling which arose on the trial of Jonathan Robbins, in 1798, charged with mutiny on board of a British vessel, on claim of the British government, seemed to favor the idea of protection for American citizens, of foreign birth, but it died out with the party feeling which drew it forth. The case was not analogous to this, but incidentally involved the same question. It is enough to say that, on American ground, an adopted citizen will be duly protected—in case of war with the country of which he is a native, the same will be done. But in the case above there is no protection for him. Such have been the adjudications in the Secretary of State's Department since Timothy Pickering's time, and Mr. Cass has no power to change the usage, however he may disapprove of it. This can only be done possibly when some great outrage on adopted citizens' rights shall call forth the united action of all Departments of the Federal government. To deny the true condition of the matter is folly, but we esteem it as great a folly to get virtuously indignant because the Secretary of State does not assume to set aside the policy of the government since its existence, upon the mere inquiry of a citizen, without any occasion for active interference. It is time, however, that unless the American government abandon the admission of foreign persons to citizenship, they should repudiate the law of nations in this matter for a system which has not its origin in the doctrines of the "rights of kings and the duties of subjects." The doctrine of the right of expatriation should be placed on grounds which our place among the nations demands for our policy.

When the oath of naturalization requires the applicant to forswear allegiance to all foreign potentates, it involves the right to protection from this government; and throws, or should throw over the naturalized citizen the same protection which would be accorded to a native citizen. Their rights and privileges become identical. There is no reservation in the naturalization oath that the applicant shall never leave this country or return for business or pleasure to the scenes of his childhood. Nor is there any specification excluding from the general terms those who may have owed military service to the country they abandoned. It was well to remind those who owed such service, that it would be claimed by their respective governments, and would entail much inconvenience and difficulty in the adjustment; but if any of the numerous naturalized citizens, relying upon the implied pledge of protection, should have availed themselves of the frequent facilities of revisiting the scenes of their youth, to take the parting blessings of parents, to commune with friends and relatives, and show them the fruits of good fortune and a free country, or receive legacies bequeathed them; or seek to bring back with them "wife children and friends," would not this decision of the Department of State, involve a nice and delicate and difficult question, the solution of which would be attended with trouble, or else the rights of the naturalized citizen thus innocently compromised be placed in jeopardy?

A passport as an American citizen should be carte blanche, and so recognized by all nations with which we have treaties. Otherwise, the naturalization oath, should be so amended as to specify "unless military service is due, or claimed by the said foreign power, allegiance to which is especially forsworn"—a distinction that our government would scarcely be willing to admit.

The Allen County "Democrat" very justly observes that it is time a different interpretation should be given to the privileges of a naturalized American citizen. The very nature of our government is opposed to distinctions, or to any restrictions upon the liberty of citizens. A prison is a prison, though as broad as the confines of our country, and he is restricted of his liberty whom compulsion or threat confines to this country, when imperative business or the appeals of duty and affection may call him where imperial power holds despotic sway.

The letter of Gen. Cass to Le Clerc was published last week. His letter to Hofer of Cincinnati will be found in this paper. It will be seen that the native of Prussia, who had not taken his turn as a soldier, and from whom consequently such "turn" was due, is amenable to the Prussian law, although absent "in the army or actually called into it." Should a Prussian who left his home forty years ago, and now returns to it, be actually indebted to that government, in military service, although past the time of life when he would be enrolled for military duty in his adopted country?

It will be seen that instructions have been sent to the Representative of this Government at Berlin:

"That this Government opposed the doctrine of perpetual allegiance, and maintains the right of expatriation and the right to form new political ties elsewhere."

The assertion of the right of the immigrant to avail himself of the terms of the naturalization law, should never be waived by this Government, although we should consider any one in the category excepted by the Secretary of State, a great fool to place himself in the power either of France or Prussia. It will save a deal of embarrassment to stay at home, and manage to do by deputy instead of in propria persona.

KENTUCKY POLITICS.—The Frankfort "Yeoman," a paper conducted with judgment and ability, says:

"The Opposition are making their strongest effort to carry the Legislature, and putting forth their most influential men as candidates. We must not suffer ourselves to be endangered by lukewarmness or dissensions in our ranks. Let our strongest men at once be put forward, and the proper effort made, and all will be well.—But if we suffer ourselves to rely too confidently upon our party majority in the State, we may be caught napping.

"With a majority of twelve thousand in the State in our favor two years ago, the Know-Nothings had a majority of two in the Senate. This was the result of the outrageous gerrymander made by the last apportionment, under which the K. N.'s could hold the majority in the Legislature although they might be largely in the minority in the State. Let it be remembered that the State representation is to be apportioned next winter, and that if we are not to be gerrymandered again, we must strain every nerve to have a good working majority in the next Legislature. To effect this, all that is necessary is to run our best men in every county and Senatorial district; and not suffer dissentions to spring up in our ranks. The next session is highly important in other particulars. A United States Senator is to be elected."

They desire the re-election of Mr. Crittenden to the U. S. Senate, who was anti-Lecompton, is a zealous Know-Nothing, and "believes that Congress has the constitutional power to prohibit slavery in the Territories," and opposed the Kansas Nebraska bill; while they support, for Governor, Mr. Bell who takes strong pro slavery ground, never was a Know-Nothing, is a Lecompton man, and in favor of Congressional protection of slavery in the Territories. This inconsistency is nothing in the way of their aim at power.

GOV. MEDARY.—We are informed by the Lecompton National Democrat of the safe arrival and welcome of the "old wheel-horse of Democracy" to the field of his labors in Kansas, in which his strong, good sense, his generous heart, and his natural propensity to do right, have endeared him to the people, and enabled him to pursue his executive duties to their general satisfaction. Although his appointment was not desired on his part, and was made that TOM MILLER might be re-instated in the Post Office, it has resulted in good to the people of Kansas, who were immediately interested, and entitled the veteran to higher honors and warmer plaudits than any he had before won. It affords us the greatest pleasure, as it does his numerous friends here, to hear of the success of his administration and its general popularity.

PICKAWAY COUNTY.—According to the official returns of Assessors to the Auditor of Pickaway County we have the following statistics for the year 1859: Bushels of corn raised, 1,601,779; wheat, 249,146; hay, 8,462 tons. Value of chattle property, $3,357,138. Number of sheep killed and injured by dogs, 1,518; valued at $568. The average number of bushels of wheat raised to the acre was 27 and a fraction.

Senator Pugh on Popular Sovereignty.

The doctrine of the Democratic party, on the question of popular sovereignty as it affects the institution of slavery in the Territories, is clearly, forcibly and concisely stated in the following letter, of recent date, addressed by Senator Pugh to a friend in Butler County. Apart from the value which the letter possesses as a brief comprehensive exposition of the doctrine of the party upon the subject, it has a special interest derived from the fact that the prominent position held by Mr. Pugh in the Committee on Resolutions of the State Convention, enables him to interpret authoritively the State platform:

CINCINNATI, June 4, 1859.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 30th ult. caused me considerable astonishment. I did not suppose it possible for any man, friend or foe, to entertain the least doubt in regard to my views of territorial organization. But since you have been so kind as to inform me that some doubt does exist, and in the minds of our political friends, I will make one more effort to define those views in clear and distinct language, granting you full permission to publish what I shall write if you are so disposed.

I agree to so much of the second resolution adopted by the Democratic Convention of Butler County, on the 21st ult., as affirms people of an organized Territory have the same power to exclude or establish the relation of slavery as the people of a State have; but this power of exclusion, as well in the case of States as of Territories, is subject to TWO limitations expressed in the Federal Constitution:

1. That persons held to service or labor in other States or Territories, "under the laws thereof," cannot, by mere flight, secure to themselves any advantage which they had not in the place whence they fled.

2. That a right to the service or labor of a slave, once recognized by the laws of a State or a Territory, cannot be divested or otherwise impaired without compensation. The act of exclusion, therefore must be prospective.

It is my opinion, furthermore, that Congress has no constitutional authority to interfere with the laws of the States, or of the Territories, on the subject of slavery, except in the particulars I have specified. Nevertheless, it remains for the Judiciary, in all cases, to decide how far an act of legislation, by a State or a Territory, contravenes the Constitution of the United States; that results, invariably, from the nature of our government. If the Judiciary should be of my opinion, whenever a case shall arise in regard to the power of a Territorial Legislature over the subject of slavery, I shall expect those of different opinions to acquiesce, and so, if the Judiciary should decide for them, I would acquiesce in that decision, until reversed, without any individual opinion or sentiments. The man who declares that he will observe only such laws or decisions as please him and not those which he disapproves, thereby renounces all obedience and loyalty as a citizen.

If I had been consulted in regard to the resolution which you specify I should have made no other criticism than that its last sentence is open to some degree of misapprehension. We may well enough act with those in our own State and elsewhere who believe that the people of a Territory can only decide upon the question of slavery when about to form a State government, but upon the express condition that they will attempt no interference through Congress while the Territorial organization exists. That is the real point of controversy; and that was determined by the Cincinnati Platform, as well as by the Kansas-Nebraska Bill. Give us the doctrine of non-intervention as there proclaimed, and popular sovereignty becomes at once an established and indisputable fact.

This, substancially, is what I said in the Senate on the 23d of February last, and if there is anything that does not perfectly accord with this, in the platform of our State Convention, I am altogether certain that no difference was intended.

I have not made the question of a "Congressional Slave-code" prominent thus far, in any of my speeches, because we are all, in Ohio, upon the same side of that question. I have once debated it, and will debate it again, if necessary, with gentlemen of different opinions; but when I see the leaders of the Republican party (so called) at work here to-day, in our own midst, to pull down the very pillars of the Constitution, and precipitate us into the abyss of disunion and anarchy, I prefer dealing with them face to face, rather than attacking their allies in Louisiana, Mississippi or South Carolina.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. E. PUGH.

M. N. MAGINNIS, Esq., Hamilton, O.

Democratic Meeting at Groveport.

On Saturday of last week there was a Democratic meeting at Groveport, which was addressed by Gen. Jos. H. GEIGER, in a clear, unvarnished, argumentative speech, delivered by the application of keen and piquant illustrations, which made an excellent impression. The meeting, for a township, was large and of the right materials, and the speech of Gen. GEIGER made an impression that will be lasting. Madison will give a good account of herself in October.

PERRY COUNTY.—A very animated, not to say heated canvass is going on, in this county relative to the removal of the county seat. It is quite probable that party lines will be less tightly drawn in view of this domestic question, in which much personal feeling is enlisted. We hope, however, that the Democracy of old Perry, who were wont to roll up a good sound majority, will not be regardless of their great duty, but will be true to the national issues, while determining for themselves the location of their county seat—a question that should be settled fairly and squarely, without adventitious aid, and by the people of Perry County themselves.

THE MORROW COUNTY DEMOCRAT.—Mr. Rhoades makes an earnest appeal to the Democrats of Morrow county to support his paper. He cannot give them such a paper as will be creditable to himself or them, unless he is properly sustained. However patriotic he may be, (and there is no doubt of Mr. R.'s devotion to the Democratic cause) it is cold comfort to know that he is working for nothing and finds himself—a labor that must end, without an inexhaustible treasury. It will give us pleasure to hear that the Morrow county "Democrat" does not appeal in vain. The Democrats owe it to themselves to sustain their local press; which will return all their favors by increased energy and vigor, that must have the happiest results.

Even now, locofoco papers, on the Reserve, are insinuating that the nominee, Judge Gholson, holds precisely a similar opinion to that announced by Judge Swan. The whole thing is a mere clap trap, gotten up to revive the drooping fortunes of Ohio locofocoism.—[Circleville Herald.

It will be observed that it is here denied that Judge GHOLSON entertains a similar opinion to that announced by Judge SWAN, relative to the Fugitive Slave law. We think otherwise, but those who support Judge GHOLSON ought to know.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Mr. JAMES HEADON of Crawford tp., Wyandot county, desiring to have a tree fall in a certain direction placed a spring pole against it, and when he had chopped so far that the tree began to fall, the pole slipped and striking him on the head caused his death in twelve hours.

Letter from Gen. Cass, Secretary of State, to A. V. Hofer, of Cincinnati, Defining the Views of the Administration on the Rights of Naturalized Citizens upon returning to their Native Countries.

The following important letter has been communicated to A. V. Hofer, of Cincinnati, by Secretary Cass:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, June 16, 1859.

SIR—In answer to your letter of the 6th inst., I have to inform you that the brief letter from this Department to which you refer, dated the 17th of May last, and addressed to Felix Le Clerc, was in reply to an application for information, and was principally intended to recommend caution to our naturalized fellow-citizens, natives of France, in returning to that country, as the operations of the French conscription law were positively known, and might bear injuriously upon that class of American citizens.—Most of the continental European nations have a system of military organization, by which their citizens are compelled to serve in the army by conscription, and not as in France, where the duty is designated by lot or draft. In Prussia every person is required to take his turn as a soldier.

The condition of American naturalized citizens returning to their native country, where the system of compulsory service prevails, and who had left before such service, has consequently been the subject of discussion with some of the European powers. Quite recently it has risen between the United States and Prussia, and the Representative of this country, at the Court of Berlin, has brought the matter to the attention of the Prussian Government. In the instructions which were sent him, May 12, 1859, it was explicitly stated, that this Government opposed the doctrine perpetual allegiance, and maintains the right of expatriation and the right to form new political ties elsewhere. Upon this subject it is observed, that in this age of the world, the idea of controlling the citizen in the choice of a home, and binding him by a mere political theory, to inhabit for his life-time, a country which he desires to leave, can hardly be entertained by any Government.

The United States, therefore, maintains the proposition that naturalized citizens returning to the country of their birth, are not liable to any duties or penalties, except such as were in existence at the period of their emigration. If, at that time, they were in the army, or actually called into it, such emigration and naturalization do not exempt them from the legal penalty which they incurred by their desertion. But this penalty may be enforced against them whenever they shall voluntarily place themselves within the local jurisdiction of their native country, and shall be proceeded against according to law. But when no personal liabilities exist against them at the period of their emigration, the law of nations, in the opinion of this government, gives no right to any country to interfere with naturalized American citizens, and the attempt to do so would be considered an act unjust in itself, and unfriendly toward us. Jurisdiction cannot of course arise in the case of the naturalized citizen who remains in the United States. It is only when he voluntarily returns to his native country that its local laws can be enforced against him.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

Signed LEWIS CASS.

Governor Medary.

We have the pleasure of announcing the return of Governor Medary, who has been absent from the Territory on business for some weeks past. The Governor, we are happy to say, is in the enjoyment of good health, and his usual cheerful and happy disposition.

The Governor, as well as his friends, are justly proud of the present peaceful and prosperous condition of Kansas; he is buoyant with hope, and feels and talks as an aged, experienced and truly patriotic man ever will do. He is jovial in his disposition—just and firm, but tolerant in his political views, and is remarkably well versed on all the questions which have so largely occupied the attention of our people; he has long lived in the western country, and is familiar with the wants and customs of western men. We are pleased to learn that it is the purpose of the Governor to make Kansas his future home.

We perceive by the speech of Greely that the bitterness and falsity of his fœtid carcass prompted him to utter a gross and unfounded slander against Governor Medary and the Democracy of Minnesota.—Greely said in his speech at Osawatomie on the 18th of May, 1859:

"Remember that Minnesota was recently carried at its first State election, and is still ruled by means of wholesale, brazen, atrocious frauds on her ballot-boxes, and that the ready and unscrupulous tool of faction who presided over the counting of these bogus returns, these fabricated votes, is now your Territorial Governor."

We pronounce the above remarks false in every particular, and say that the record proves it to be so. We have no doubt that Greely meant to lie when he uttered the charge, and that he made it more particularly because Governor Medary was so successful last winter in defeating his pet measure of abolishing slavery in this Territory by an act of the representatives of the people, whereas that power belongs to the sovereign people themselves, acting in their sovereign capacity. The truth is the board to canvass the returns was composed of two Democrats and one Black Republican. Governor Medary was the President of that board, and voted with the Republican to throw out the returns from every Democratic precinct where the election was held without the authority of law, or where the returns did not conform to law. His course, as the record proves was remarkably fair and just; and it is universally known that he enjoys the unlimited confidence of the people of Minnesota, who knew him to be an honest man.

During the short period of his residence here, he has, by his fair and honorable course, very justly won the confidence of the people of Kansas, and it is not in the power of Greely, or any of his followers, to make the people of Kansas the enemies of Gov. Medary.—Kansas National Democrat June 2.

AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF MASSACHUSETTS.—The following amendment has been adopted to the State Constitution of Massachusetts:

"No person of foreign birth shall be entitled to vote, or shall be eligible to office, unless he shall have resided within the jurisdiction of the United States for two years subsequent to his naturalization, and shall be otherwise qualified, according to the constitution and laws of this Commonwealth; provided that this amendment shall not affect the rights which any person of foreign birth possessed at the time of adoption thereof; and provided further, that it shall not affect the rights of any child of a citizen of the United States, born during the temporary absence of the parent therefrom."

This amendment was adopted by the Republicans by a large majority. The Democracy in a body opposed it as well as a few Republicans who could not endorse its odious sentiments. The doctrine that an adopted citizen must be held on probation for the term of two years after he has received his final papers is one that will operate against any party that endorses it. The Democratic party have never faltered on this question—yet, strange as it may appear there are scores of adopted citizens who are acting with the opposition, notwithstanding the disabilities which that party has attempted to heap upon them during the last five years.

OHIO WEST POINT CADETS.—The following are the names of the recently appointed cadets. They were required to report themselves personally at the Academy between the 1st and the 20th of June: James David Robb, Peter S. Michl, Asa H. Holgate, Robert F. Sprout, John A. Nesbit, Harrison McDowell, John R. McGinnis.

From the New Hampshire Gazette.

The Ohio Democracy.

The resolution relative to the present Administration, adopted unanimously at the recent Democratic State Convention in Ohio, is almost identical with one adopted at our last State Convention. It gives it a qualified endorsement, all that the friends of Buchanan have a right to expect, and full as much as they will get from any Northern State. The other resolutions adopted by the Convention are such as could have been expected from the unflinching Democracy of Ohio. Upon the absorbing issue—the Territorial question, they come square up to the true Democratic mark, uttering the true sentiment of the Democratic people of the country. Here is the resolution. It is plain, sensible talk, and sound Democracy:

Resolved, That the organized territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention, by Congress, with slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the south, or the north, or the west, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

This, says the Illinois State Register, is the position of the Democracy of Illinois, and right heartily will they respond to the just sentiments enunciated by their Ohio brethren.

The resolutions, further, deprecate in the strongest terms, the revival of the African slave trade, as proposed by southern ultraists—approve and urge compliance with the fugitive slave law—condemn the action of the Republican party in Congress in regard to the admission of Oregon—affirm the sovereignty of the States, repudiating the Lincoln-Seward idea that the Union cannot exist composed of part slave and part free States—favor the acquisition of Cuba—disapprove lavish grants of land by Congress to railroad companies—oppose extending the right of suffrage, or any other political right, upon negroes or mulattoes—indorse the foreign policy of the Administration, its policy relative to the rebellion of Utah, the suppression of the African slave trade, and its maintenance of the fugitive slave act.

The attendance upon this Convention, the harmony and unity of purpose evinced in its proceedings, prove the Ohio Democracy to be, as they have heretofore been, sound to the core and ready to meet the enemy in the October conflict in a manner which will secure a noble triumph to the Democracy, and place Ohio in a position that will secure her vote for the Democratic electoral ticket next year. Speed the good work. The Democracy of the north-west cannot be swayed from the true line of principle and patriotism.

One way to Elect an Opposition President.

The Dayton Gazette proposes to defeat the Democracy in 1860, as follows:

"Run two electoral tickets, acceptable to each section; one in the North and one in the South. In this way, and in this way alone, can the whole Opposition strength be combined against the Administration and the Slave Democracy. For example: let a Southern Convention take up John J. Crittenden and John Bell, and a Northern Convention John McLean and N. P. Banks. Both would be morally certain of carrying a majority of the electoral vote in each section; but, perhaps, the Northern candidates might not have a sufficient vote to elect by the people. In this event, the President would be elected by the House of Representatives and the Vice President by the Senate; and, if the two houses reflected the will of the people, at the polls, we would have John McLean or John J. Crittenden for President and John Bell or N. P. Banks for Vice President."

The editor of the Gazette must think the people are all fools, (or he is lamentably wanting in something himself,) if he supposes they could be caught in such a trap. How would these electors agree, when they would have to choose the President? A part of them asking Congress to pass a slave code protecting slavery in the territories, and a part demanding the prohibition of that institution in all the territories.

Would the people of the North vote for a set of men who might elect a Southern fire-eater? or would slave code Know Nothings of the South vote for electors who might choose an Abolitionist? Giddings and John Bell would harmonize beautifully on the slavery question. So would Chase and Goggin. But the Gazette has another plan:

"Perhaps a better plan than the above would be to run Opposition electors, in all the States, uninstructed as to particular individuals. When elected, they could be brought together in Convention, and might doubtless agree on two names they would finally support in the electoral college. If this should be found impractical, the electors could cast the vote with the best lights before them."

We are inclined to think that electors thus brought together would have no lights before them.

The latter plan is undoubtedly the best, inasmuch as the opposition, even in the North, do not agree in any of the Congressional districts.—Ohio Press.

An "occasional" correspondent of the Philadelphia Press says:

"The notion entertained in some quarters that the Territorial question has passed away will bankrupt any man or any organization that commits itself to it.—While we have public domain unoccupied and unorganized, and certain to come into the Union, in the course of time, in a Territorial condition, this question will remain an open question, and will enter largely into every Presidential canvass for the next fifty years. Let any one who doubts take up the map and count the millions of acres of land in the course of time to be carved into Territories, and to be erected subsequently into States, and he will see how inevitable it is that opposing principles will contend on this vast field of operations."

IOWA DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.—The Democratic State Convention of Iowa will be holden at the Capital, Des Moines, on the 23d inst., to nominate candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and three Judges of the Supreme Court. Judging from the tone of our Democratic exchanges in that State, desperate attempts will be made to obtain from the Convention an unqualified endorsement of the administration; an attempt which will be resisted by all who would not have the Democracy of Iowa wiped out in the coming election.—New Hamp. Gaz.

Has the Supreme Court Decided that a territorial legislature cannot constitutionally abolish, or forbid the introduction of slavery within its limits?

The advocates of Negro Despotism assert that the Court has so decided. We affirm that it has not. Every man of common sense, who is familiar with the political and legislative history of the country, and the duties and powers of the Judiciary, knows that it was utterly impossible for the Supreme Court to have made any such decision. Why impossible? Because no territorial legislature has as yet finally passed any act abolishing or forbidding slavery within its limits, consequently the question of the constitutionality of such an act of a territorial legislature cannot at any time have been brought before the Supreme Court for its adjudication. Everybody knows that knows anything, that the Supreme Court cannot legitimately decide suppositious cases, cases that the Court are bound to know historically, have no existence in fact. The Court are bound to know the history of legislation in this country, and they are consequently bound to know judicially that no legislative act abolishing or forbidding slavery has ever been passed by a territory of the United States. It is true that the judicial power of the Supreme Court extends to all cases in law and equity, arising under the Constitution of the United States. But no case involving the constitutionality of an act of a territorial legislature abolishing slavery has ever arisen, as no such act has ever been passed, and consequently no decision denying the constitutional power of a territorial legislature to abolish or exclude slavery can have been made.

Yet the negro despotism gentry will have it that the Supreme Court have actually made such a decision! Hear the Belfast Journal—a print that is extremely anxious to hurry territorial self-government to a judicial grave:

"The attitude of those professed Democrats who assert that a territorial legislature may abolish slavery, is that of direct hostility to the decision of a court which the constitution itself makes its own supreme arbiter."

Please tell us where this precious decision is to be found! Is it embodied in that juridical olla podrida, the Dred Scott argumentation? And if in there, pray tell us how it got there? It did not get there naturally, legally or constitutionally. The Dred Scott case was simply a case where a Black Republican by the name of Chaffee, claimed the ownership of a negro by the name of Dred Scott, and the court decided, after any amount of drizzle that the black Republican owned the negro, and not the negro the Black Republican. And we think it decided rightly! Yet the question of a legislative power of a territory did not arise in the case at all—certainly the power of a legislature to abolish slavery, could not have arisen, for no such fact ever had any existence. If any of the Judges in their frightfully voluminous arguments, discoursed upon territorial power, they discoursed on what had no pertinency to the case, and their talk is worth no more than the talk of any other set of men of equal intelligence. If, therefore, our Belfast cotemporary desires to uphold popular sovereignty to the territories, and is only deterred from doing so, by the apprehension that the Supreme Court has pronounced that cardinal doctrine of the national Democracy unconstitutional, we can assure him that the court has done no such a thing, and that he can safely resume his position on this important plank of the Cincinnati platform, without any fear of being found in the category of the "Oberlin sisters!"—Augusta (Me.) Age.

A serious riot occurred at Newark, N. J., on Wednesday evening, in consequence of a movement made on the part of the congregation of the Episcopal church (Trinity) being about to enlarge the old edifice, built in the Military Park many years ago. The addition it was claimed by the citizens would destroy one of the walks of the Park, and thus the opposition. The church obtained the authority of the Common Council to make the enlargement; but it is claimed that the Council has no power to grant such privilege, and indeed that the church has no right on the Park at all. A temporary fence having been erected around the ground intended to be occupied by the new building, was destroyed by a number of prominent citizens, armed with axes, on Wednesday evening, and so great was the excitement that the police were called out to quell the riot, who, however, did not arrive until the fence was entirely demolished, and the people had dispersed. It is said that the citizens will resist any encroachment on the Park, their favorite resort, which was laid out in 1668. Further difficulty was anticipated.

SERIOUS RAILROAD DISASTER.—A train on the Cleveland and Pittsburgh road ran into a train of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago road while standing at Rochester, Pa., on Wednesday, P. M., taking in wood, injuring the following persons:

Phoebe Kaufman, of Lancaster, Pa., and Mrs. T. McKeen, seriously; Josiah Stewart, of Clarksville, Pa., Charles L. Warner, of Salem; Frank Glebe, of Sheboygan; W. H. Benton, of Chicago; J. H. D. Blake and Edward D. Porter, of Boston, and D. M. Cooke, of Mansfield, slightly. A number of others also received bruises, whose names are not known.

The General Assembly of the little State of Rhode Island adjourned on Friday the 3d, after a session of four days, to meet again on the second Monday of January, 1860. There were only four public acts passed; one making appropriations for the support of the Government; one authorizing the City Council of Providence to fill vacancies in the municipal offices; one authorizing the laying of water pipes in the district of Pawtucket for fire purposes, and one regulating the sale of stone lime burned.

WOOL.—There has been quite an extensive trade in wool during the past week. Woolgrowers bring their produce here from quite a distance, as this is probably one of the best markets in the State. Prices range from thirty-five to fifty-five cents per pound.—[Akron Democracy, June 16.

EDWARD BOLDEN was arrested at New York on Thursday, and held to bail in the sum of $20,000, for alleged frauds on the Union Bank.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1859.

MR. DOUGLAS RETURNED TO WASHINGTON.—We learn that Mr. DOUGLAS left Cincinnati for Washington on Sunday night at 11 o'clock.

Democratic Central Committee.

The Democratic Central Committee met yesterday and conversed about matters claiming their attention. The members were not all present, nearly one half leaving to the more punctual the carving out of business for the prosecution of the canvass.

The candidates were here, to advise with the Central Committee, and probably prepared the initiatory movements of the campaign last evening, but too late, to enable us to publish the particulars in this number of our paper. They look well, and speak confidently. The ticket presented by the Democratic Convention, is such as to command respect and we hope to see its triumph in October.

A COMPLIMENT.—While a few of the ephemera, in our own State, such as we might mention, which call themselves friends of Mr. DOUGLAS, and are supposed by his friends, are making mouths at us for starting "another Democratic paper in Columbus," we receive such cheers as this from the standard publications abroad. The New Hampshire "Gazette," probably the oldest paper in New Hampshire, which dates back as far as October 7, 1756, twenty years before the Declaration of Independence, and now in its one hundred and fifth volume, does not think the PEOPLE'S PRESS calculated to do Mr. DOUGLAS harm. Hear what it says:

PEOPLE'S PRESS.—A new paper with the above title has been started at Columbus, Ohio, J. Birney Marshall, Editor.—It is a large and handsome sheet, and goes it strong for Popular Sovereignty and Stephen A. Douglas. It is ably conducted, and will do much service in the good cause. If any of our friends want an Ohio paper with the ring of true metal about it, they can have one by sending for the People's Press.

Death of James W. Wales.

Captain James W. Wales died in Louisville on the 5th, leaving a large circle of friends. Capt. W. was purser's clerk on the brig Somers, when Capt. Mackenzie hanged young Spencer, the son of the then Secretary of War, at the yard-arm, for attempted mutiny. There was not a better, more kindly heart that beat than that of "JIM WALES." He was a high-toned, honorable gentleman, beloved by all who knew him and could appreciate his generous genial qualities. The part he was compelled to play, in bringing young Spencer to punishment, had an influence upon his after life. Spencer confided to him the plot, and believed that he had engaged him in it. True to his country's flag, Wales disclosed to Commander Mackenzie the fate that was intended for the brig. The result is known.—Burning to enter the service of his country, and being accomplished in the duties of Purser, many efforts were made to procure for him that station; but he always thought the service he had rendered was construed to his prejudice, for his hopes and expectations were never realized. We knew his many admirable qualities, and shall never cease to cherish his memory.

DR. STEWART.—Attention is called to the advertisement of DR. STEWART, whose success in cases of Incipient Consumption, and Pulmonary diseases, has been very great. So thorough is his confidence in his remedies, he publicly announces that patients who receive no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished with medicine gratis. He treats cancers successfully without the aid of the knife, and has been eminently successful in other painful diseases which are enumerated in his card.

CHARLEY DESHLER says he has received a remittance of Ponchartrain ice from DAN. HICKOCK, the great New Orleans Ice Dealer, which he is prepared to serve to those who may desire it.

SO FOR THE WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS!—The Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad Company have made excellent arrangements to convey visitors to and from the White Sulphur Springs. The advantages of which will be apparent to every one. Persons leaving Columbus at 4:30 A. M. and 1:10 P. M. will always find conveyances at Lewis Centre, a point at which the trains will stop regularly during the season. For the accomodation of those who may not be able to avail themselves of the early trains, the night freight train leaving at 6:30 will stop at Lewis Centre which being only sixteen miles out and but six miles from the Springs, will enable visitors to reach there in ample time for the Saturday nights' festivities.

The accommodating spirit of the management of the road, and the active co-operation of Mr. PATTERSON, the ever, attentive and excellent agent, will be appreciated when it is learned that the returning Express train will stop at Lewis Centre on Monday mornings at 8 o'clock, a. m. and the daily mail train at 4:36, thus enabling our citizens without the slightest inconvenience, and at a very trifling cost, (the fare to the Springs and back being but 75 cents) to enjoy the salubrious air and partake of the health-inspiring waters.

Messrs. Lewis and Wood have established a line of carriages at Lewis Center to connect with these trains, and passengers will be conveyed promptly to the Springs. We have no doubt that this arrangement will be most liberally met by the people of Columbus, and that the best way to find friends "at home" during the summer will be to seek them at the Springs.

INCIDENTS OF THE WAR.—We gather from our files of foreign papers, says the New York Evening Post, several interesting small incidents relating to the war in Italy.

One writer relates that during the combat of Montebello twenty-two Piedmontese lancers charged a square of the Austrians, and forced their way through it, but eleven of these brave men were killed, and every one of the others wounded. Col. Morelli, who was one of their number, actually charged the enemy three times after he had received a ball in the abdomen, which, a little later in the day, caused his death.

The disembarkation of the French artillery and horses at Leghorn was effected gratuitously by the population. When the officers offered payment, the people said, "What! you come to give your blood, and you will not allow us to give our services!"

On the 23d of May the Austrian steamer Ticino approached Intra, summoning that place to give up two persons arrested as spies. The alarm was beat, the bells rung, and the National Guard assembled in large numbers, even from the neighboring places; whereupon the Ticino sheered off, firing against the island of San Giovanni and against La Castagnola. Intra is on the Piedmontese side of the Lago Maggiore, north of Pallanza, and not far from the Swiss frontier.

The following is an extract from a private letter from Munich, dated the 27th inst.:

"Munich is now transformed into a vast camp; one sees nothing but soldiers, and the drums are constantly dinning in one's ears. This small kingdom has called together an army of 100,000 men, and youths of good family and education are daily joining the ranks as volunteers. 300 young men from the University have enlisted, and those who are called on by the conscription never think of getting substitutes, but go themselves."

THE CROPS.

The Galion "Democrat," of the 16th says:

It is generally considered by the farmers, throughout this section, that the late frost has not injured more than one-third of the wheat crop. Should this be the case, there will be plenty of wheat in this country yet, as there was an immense amount of wheat sown last fall.

The Circleville "Watchman" of the 17th says:

We have made a good deal of inquiry during the past week relative to the damage to the wheat crop of this county, but are about as much in the dark as we were before we made any, statements and opinions are so conflicting. That serious damage was done by the frost there is no doubt, but the extent will not be fully known until harvest is over.

The Akron (Summit county) "Democracy" of the 16th says:

So far as this county is concerned, we have nothing very encouraging to communicate.—The worst fears have been fully realized, as to the extent of the injury to the wheat crop—the same may be said of barley and rye. The result of frequent and careful examination indicates that there will not be more, probably less, than one twentieth part of the wheat which would have been produced, had it not been visited by so destructive an enemy. Some farmers are re-planting their corn, but in most portions of the county it is in a good condition. Potatoes have suffered but slight injury.

The Wilmington "Watchman" of the 17th says:

Although an enormous amount of injury has been done to the crops generally, by the late severe frosts, that to the wheat crops in this vicinity is not so great as anticipated. We have spoken to many of our farmers since our last issue, and, to a man, they inform us that the wheat crop promises an abundant yield in Clinton. It is also the fact of Highland, as we can testify from personal observation.

The Marietta "Republican" of the 17th says:

Our farmers now say the wheat is much less injured by the late frost than they at first supposed. Glad to hear it.

The Allen county "Democrat" of the 15th inst. says:

Further particulars relative to the wheat crop in this county induce the belief that it will not be much beyond half a crop. Some good judges place it as high as two-thirds, and some less than a half crop. Some persons who have sown largely, will lose the whole crop, or nearly so, especially along the streams. Corn has not suffered much, and is doing well. Rye has been in some instances considerably damaged, but in general is good. Oats are doing well. The fruit is not injured. On the whole the crops in our county will in most instances remunerate the great body of our farmers.—Some, however, will be serious losers.

The Seneca county "Tribune" of the 17th says:

The injury, in this county, is much less than was supposed, and that not more than ten per cent. of the crop is killed. Bottom lands suffered most. Whole fields on Honey Creek, it is said, will not pay for the cutting, and in some instances the farmers are plowing their wheat fields up, but these cases are rare throughout the county. A friend from Venice township states that the wheat is seriously injured there, and from what we can learn, the damage is greater in Wyandott and Crawford counties, than in this. Corn has nearly recovered from the effects of the frost. In a few instances, on bottom land, where it was far advanced, it was killed outright, and had to be replanted, but these cases are rare.

The Youngstown (Mahoning Co.) "Register" of the 15th says:

We hear of some sections of Mahoning county where the damage done to the wheat has been but trifling, while in other sections it is reported as entirely cut off. The same appears to be the experience of our cotemporaries in adjoining counties. The stories of disaster done, however, are much more numerous than the reverse. The meadows appear to have suffered more than was at first apprehended, and farmers assure us that the hay crop will be very light. The western portion of the county, it would seem, has suffered more than the eastern. Accounts from Ellsworth, Jackson, Berlin, Goshen, Milton, Canfield, &c., represent the wheat and fruit as generally killed, the grass and corn greatly injured, and gardens almost a total loss.

The frost of Friday night last, the 11th inst., seems to have been more wide spread, though not so injurious in its results as that of the Saturday night previous. Still, the corn that had sprung up in the interval, was cut down close to the ground, and garden vegetables that had escaped before, were badly nipped. We hear of some farmers replanting their corn, under the belief that the first planting has been too much injured to recover. In regard to the wheat, we think it safe to say that in this county not half a crop will be realized.

THE CELEBRATION COMMITTEE.—At a meeting of the committee at the American Hotel Friday evening, June 17th, '59, P. Ambos in the Chair. The following committees were appointed to represent the different branches of mechanics in the procession on the 4th of July:

Some fifty letters were received from different societies, organizations, &c., signifying their intention to turn out on that day. Among which were the Sabbath schools, common schools, the different municipal officers, fire companies, &c. &c.

The following gentlemen compose the committee for completing the arrangements in accordance with the foregoing statement:

Carpenters' Association—Wm. Peckham, Jas. D. Clarke, Hy. Doremus.
Tinners—Saml. Thompson, Ira Gorton, S. Fischer.
Butchers—John Ijams, D. W. Hill, Benj. Spencer, R. S. Rickley.
Draymen—Jas. Berry, Fredk. Spade, Jno. F. Zimmerman.
Machinists—Chas. Ambos, Frank Swan, Martin Crum, Townsend Shilling, Jno. L. Gill, jr.
Bricklayers—Ed. Hall, Wm. Voswinkle, Theobald Schneider.
Stone Cutters—L. L. Smith, Chas. J. Thompson, Jacob Riley.
Stonemasons—F. Beck, Thos. Cassiday, Ketzel.
Plasterers—Thos. F. Miles, P. Syler, Wm. Quick.
Marble Cutters—Jno. Strickler, J. A. Ebey, S. W. Williams.
Tailors—G. Braytegle, P. Rose, S. W. Stinson.
Saddlers—Geo. W. Cashman, Geo. W. Howell, Wm. Burdell.
Bakers—Theo. G. Butler, O. H. Latimer, Chas. Robbins.
Painters—W. H. Protzman, Thos. Stevens, Jas. Van Buren.
Shoe-Makers—Jno. W. Constans, Phillip Mangold, M. Fassig.
Cabinet Makers—M. Holm, Jacob Fisher, Ed. B. Brown.
Printers—Sam. Bradford, Asa Harris, Lucien Thrall, R. H. Geary, Chas. Glass, Fred'k Fieser.
Brewers—Louis Hoster and Chas. Bey.
Blacksmiths—Ed. Hampstead, Chas. Roberts, Wm. White.
Carriagemakers—S. R. Williams, S. V. Booth, Jno. B. Peck and Jaffrey Powell.
Coopers—A. D. Hall, Sam. Spade, John Lutz.

On motion of Mr. Riley, the following resolution was adopted:

That the Park Committee be instructed to issue permits for the sale of refreshments in the Park, and said permits be issued without charge, but under the restriction of the Committee.

On motion of Mr. Comstock, Mr. Donaldson was added to the Park Committee, and all applications for permits be made to Mr. Donaldson.

On motion, the Park Committee were instructed to have the streets watered along the route designated by the Chief Marshal.

On motion, the Committee adjourned to meet on Tuesday evening next.

P. AMBOS, Pres't.

H. E. Bensch, Sec'y.

IMPEACHMENT.—The Missouri Senate is holding an extra session for the purpose of trying Judge Albert Jackson, of the fifteenth judicial circuit, impeached by the House of Representatives for alleged official misconduct. The principal charges are that he has wrongly refused to change the venue in certain cases that he has both wrongfully granted and wrongfully refused to grant writs of habeas corpus; that he has wrongfully interfered with grand juries, by giving special directions in regard to certain offenses; that he has wrongfully refused to hear arguments in matters which he had prejudged; that in general he has been deficient in courtesy to the bar, and that he has played cards.—National Intelligencer.

—The amount of personal property returned by the Assessors at Cincinnati is $32,023,673, to which the Board of Equalization has added $1,776,336, making a total of $33,800,009.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

—On Thursday a train on the Dayton and Xenia Railroad ran over and killed two horses valued at $500.

—The Toledo Blade says the Fourth Semi-Annual Meeting of the Northwestern Ohio Teachers' Association will be held at Maumee on Friday and Saturday, June 24th and 25th.

—The Market Street Baptist Church of Zanesville, Ohio, a day or two since, expelled Deputy U. S. Marshal Ezekiel F. Cox, one of its deacons, for his complicity with the late fugitive slave case. Ezekiel is the sire of the renowned "Sun Set."

—We learn from the Hancock Courier that Mr. Noah F. Green, while hauling a heavy load of wood a short distance from his house, was thrown from the wagon, the wheels of which passed over his body, injuring him so that he died in two hours.

—The Fremont (Sandusky county) Journal says there is now full promise of good crops in that region. Probably more wheat will be raised than in any year since the weevil appeared. Corn is small, but growing weather will bring it out. Grass will also be good.

—A large panther was frequently seen in the woods near Oxford, Butler county, week before last. So great is the alarm in the neighborhood that children have been kept from school. A party of armed men went in pursuit of the varmint, came in sight, fired, but missed the mark.

—Katharine Mayerhole, a German girl, aged about 20 years, was committed at Cleveland, on Saturday, on a charge of destroying the life of her newly-born child. The body of the child was found in the vault of a privy, and an examination proved that it had lived, and was strangled to death by compression on the throat.

—The Medina Gazette says: "Last Saturday morning, about three o'clock, the beer brewery belonging to Mr. I. Nice, of River Styx, Guilford tp., was burned. The loss is very heavy on Mr. N., as there was no insurance. About 600 bushels of barley was destroyed. Total loss of property about $1,200."

—The Findlay, Hancock county Jeffersonian says: "The warm weather, of late, and the frequent showers, are bringing forward the corn, oats, and potatoes finely. The effects of the frost have in a measure disappeared. If nothing adverse takes place, there will be an abundant yield of these crops. Fruit will be scarce."

—The Tuscarawas Advocate says: For a few days after the frost, a perfect panic reigned among the farmers in this county. Some of them thought starvation stared them in the face, and they rushed into town and purchased wagon loads of flour at $9 50 to $10 per barrel. In Bolivar there was even more excitement than here. Flour sold there briskly at $11 and $12 per barrel. The panic has now partially subsided, and we can buy flour at $6, which is only about a half a dollar more than is paid in New York.

—The Chardon Democrat of the 17th informs us as follows: The Court of Common Pleas of Geauga has rendered a verdict of $720 in favor of Judge R. P. Ranney and A. H. Thrasher, Esq. and against the Commissioner of said County, for counsel fees in the case of poisoning against Cole, in which the plaintiffs were counsel for defense. The claims of Drs. Hamilton and Mixer for $302, and C. T. Blakeslee, Esq., for $100, were not allowed, the Court holding that the county was liable only for services necessarily rendered in the trial of the case.

—Miss Ellen Sweden, niece of the ticket agent on the Cleveland and Mahoning Railroad, was shot by her brother at Youngstown, on Monday of last week, fifteen or twenty shot entering her neck and tearing her cheek. He was not aware the gun was loaded, and thought to frighten her. The condition of the young lady was critical on the Wednesday following, but it was hoped she would recover and without being seriously disfigured.

—The death of John Cline, sr., on the 20th ult., is announced in the Woodsfield Spirit of Democracy. He was one of the earliest settlers in the county, and one of the men who defended the fort at Wheeling, Va., when it was besieged by the Indians, headed by the notorious Simon Girty. He was also a spy for many years on the Western frontiers. He was for years a justice of the peace, and was respected by all who knew him. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for fifty years, and lived to see descendants of the fourth generation.

—On the 13th inst., at Youngstown, Mahoning county, the canal stable was burned, and with difficulty two horses that were feeding were saved. The flames communicated to the blacksmith shop of Charles Fitch, who saved his tools.

—On Monday last, as Mrs. John Smith, of Reeseville, Sandusky county, was working in her garden she was afflicted with a paralytic stroke, and, upon going towards the house, Mr. Smith asked her what was the matter? She replied: "Nothing," and soon after expired.

—The Marietta Republican of the 17th says: Lowell lock is now passable, and the Muskingum packets will resume their regular daily trips. The Taylorsville canal is not yet repaired, but stages connect there with the boats.

—The Wilmington Watchman has the following: If a certain ex-county officer will call at office, he may hear of something to his advantage; if not he will hear of something to his disadvantage. That ex-county officer had probably better make up his mind to accept the invitation.

—The Wilmington Watchman says: On Sunday morning last, a chap, who had put up at the Galt House, in this place, decamped in the morning, taking with him three or four carpet-sacks belonging to some of the guests at the House. The carpet-sacks contained different kinds of clothing, money, and, we believe, a watch or two.

—There is a Gipsey encampment somewhere near Circleville. The Herald says several have made their appearance in that place "seeking to tell fortunes." They generally know where chickens roost, and small things are "lying around loose."

—Buckwheat is selling for seed in Summit county at $3,50 a bushel.

—The Tiffin Advocate says: A little child, daughter of Henry Croghan, fell into one of the vats of Scott's old Tannery on Tuesday evening, and was drowned.

—The Spirit of Democracy says, its announcement of the suicide of Thomas Smallwood, of Oaksie, is all a mistake, and hopes he may live a thousand years.

—The Toledo Times of the 16th inst. says: "The canal receipts at this port were $1,000 more last month than during the same month last year."

—The grain barn of Henry Burkey, in Berlin township, Mahoning county, was struck by lightning during the thunder storm of Thursday morning, June 2d, and burned to the ground.

—A little daughter of Michael Thompson, of Freedom township, Henry county, last week fell accidentally into a tub of boiling water, from which she died in twenty hours.

—A mulatto, at Cleveland, named Freeman H. Morris, has commenced suit for damages against the judges at the late election in the First Ward of that city for their having refused to let him vote.

—The Dresden Intelligencer chronicles the failure of Wm. Crane, an extensive distiller at that place. Mr. Crane's liabilities are very large, and the assets, which are said will pay but a very small per centage, are put down at from $100,000 to $150,000.

—A farmer gives it as his opinion, says the Urbana Citizen, that there will be more wheat raised in Campaign county this year than last, and of a much better quality; that the loss, in consequence of the frost, will not over balance the extra number of acres seeded in the county.

—The Napoleon Northwest, of the 16th, says: "The wheat crop of Henry county, as a general thing, is not injured in the least by the frost. It is true that in some localities—on low, wet ground, for instance—the wheat may be injured slightly, but this is the extent of the damage done."

—The Washington Herald, Fayette county, in an article on the frost and crops, closes thus: "Fields of wheat that were supposed and reported to be entirely killed, are now brought to life and promise a good yield, and from all that we can gather, there is at this writing (June 16) a prospect that there will be more bushels of wheat harvested in Fayette county this year than there was last."

—The Stark county Democrat, of the 15th, says: "In this county the fruit is nearly all killed, and judging from the reports of farmers and others, the wheat crop will be almost a total failure. We are inclined to believe that the frost was more severe in this than in any of the adjoining counties. Before the frost, the prospects for an abundant crop were never more flattering, now, everything looks worse than it ever did before."

—The Portage County Democrat learns that a farmer in an adjoining county, in the very ecstacy of despair, fearing famine and starvation, hung himself! He probably hung himself to save his life! We hear accounts from many others who were nearly bereft of reason.

General News.

It is thought that Mr. Seaman, late superintendent of printing, has gone to Australia.

Captain Travis, of pistol shooting fame, offers a prize of silver goblet to the best amateur pistol shooter in Baltimore.

The Common Council of Baltimore have made an appropriation to procure tobacco juice, to kill insects on trees in that city.

Complaint is made of a long protracted drouth in certain districts of Mississippi, Georgia, Texas and Louisiana.

Several small lots of peaches have already arrived in New York from Charleston and Savannah.

The Italians of New York are to have a benefit at the Academy on Wednesday night next, for the benefit of the Italian war fund.

The Monmouth Inquirer says, that nearly 200,000 baskets of strawberries were carried from that county by the steamer Keyport, on Friday.

The Mayor and grand jury of Bridgeport, Ct., visited the hotels and saloons in that city on Sunday, and requested them to close their bars.

The Philadelphia Press says Hon. R. J. Walker has recently had several meetings with the President, and it is now asserted that they have shaken hands and made friends.

The greatest density of population of a kingdom is exhibited in Belgium, where it is 533 to the square mile; single districts in Rhenish Prussia show as high as 780 to the square mile.

At the Oneida Circuit Court, at Rome, N. Y., Chas. H. Green brought suit against the Hudson River Railroad for causing the death of his wife. The damages claimed were $5,000, and the jury awarded him to $2,600.

The farmers of lower Virginia are now engaged in cutting their wheat. In some localities it has been injured by fly rust, joint-worm weevil, &c., but generally the crop is regarded as a good one.

Canada papers say the agitation now going on in the upper province for a dissolution of the Union, and for fundamental changes in the Constitution, will be sustained by a large and influential body of men.

In the work of excavating the embankment along the line of the Sunbury & Erie Railroad, in Erie, a large number of bodies have been exhumed. Most of them were deposited there during the war of 1812 and 1814 with Great Britain.

The Inferior Court of Madison, Georgia, is composed of gentlemen whose aggregate weight is 1,084 pounds. Judge Berney, 170 pounds; Judge Campbell, 201; Judge Noland, 215; Judge Jones, 215, Judge Brown, 193.

A dispatch from Dunkirk, June 19, says: This morning the bodies of Martin Sauter, his wife and child, were discovered in an upper chamber of their house, all with their throats cut and dead. The deed is supposed to have been committed by Sauter himself, who had not lived happily with his wife. Sauter kept an emigrant boarding house.

The Philadelphia Press says Napoleon III. and Francis Joseph of Austria are cousins.

A sale of several articles belonging to Capt. De Rivieres, left behind him when he decamped suddenly from Hoboken, N. J., will take place on Thursday, 30th inst., to meet certain unpaid bills.

It is worthy of notice that the Italian generals who have prominently distinguished themselves in the present campaign are not natives of Piedmont. Cialdini and Fanti are by birth Modenese.

The stockholders owning the new mammoth hotel, at the corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, met recently, and adopted as its name "The Continental," without any affix of house or hotel.

Hon Freeman Galusha, of Jericho, Vt., died suddenly, June 14, at the age of 73. He held various office of honor in Vermont, among them that of Assistant Judge of Chittenden county Court. He was a son of Jonas Galusha, who was for five years Governor of Vermont.

Nathaniel Ray Greene, the last surviving son of Major-General Greene, of the Revolution, died at his residence in Middletown, Conn., June 11. He was 79 years of age. The only surviving child of General Greene is Mrs. Littlefield, who now resides in Mississippi.

A young man who was hotly pursued by the husband of some woman with whom he had been too intimate, escaped on the steamer which left San Francisco May 5. The Times says that he was dressed in female attire. There were plenty of hoops, bustle, crinoline, &c, and a "love of a bonnet" crowned the pyramid of fashionable clothing.

The will of the late Wm. W. Cox, of Charles county, Md., contains the following clause: "I also devise and bequeath that my negro woman, Kitty and her children, John, Catharine, Sarah and Charles, shall work for themselves by paying the executor annually one cent per year hire." This bequest the Port Tobacco Times says, falls in the opinion of Judge Crain, and he has declared it null and void, as against the policy of the laws of the State.

Five children were accidentally poisoned at St. Louis last evening, by a servant administering stramonium.

The New London Chronicle claims that G. F. Daniels, former editor of that paper, was the author of the term "locofoco" as applied to the Democratic party.

The question of admitting colored children to attend the Second Ward School in New York has been decided by the School Board in the negative.

A bill is now before the New Hampshire Legislature to prohibit the change of text books in the public schools of that State oftener than once in five years.

The editor of a leading German paper at St. Louis has gone to Europe and the seat of war to report the campaign for his paper, which supports the side of Italy and France.

John and James McCleary, father and son, convicted at Pittsburgh for counterfeiting coin, have been sentenced, the former to five and the latter to three years' imprisonment, and each fined $2,500.

Father Butar, one of the oldest Methodist ministers in Indiana, died near Patriot, in that State, on the 18th inst. On the morning of his death he preached a sermon at Florence, and seemed to be as well as usual.

The Empress Eugenie recently visited a flower show, and being presented with a few species of rose she was solicited to give it a name. "Well," said the Empress, "call it Montebello."

At Sturgis, Mich., a young man named Wm. Gaines drank two table spoonsful of winter green oil, on a foolish strife as to who could drink the strongest oil. He died from its effects in a few hours.

The Utica Herald reports that Mrs. Daniel E. Sickles has taken rooms for the season at the Clifford Springs Hotel, and that she will resist any application of her husband for a divorce, and will furnish proof of infidelity on his part, which will prevent any decree in his favor.

Two large cases of silks were received by the State Department at Washington on Wednesday, as presents from the Emperor of Japan, accompanied by a letter from the Emperor. The cases were sent to the Patent Office. A suitable letter of acknowledgement will be sent to the Emperor.

The Boston Post says that if "the Austrians only had a General Taylor, what a patch he could place upon the seat of War!" We are disposed to think well of the idea, and would humbly suggest that a General Coffin be added for the important strategical purpose of covering the corpse de armie, or a Colonel Marcy to superintend the onslaught of the Teutons.

The life of Dr. King, who was executed at Coburg, Canada, on the 9th, for the murder of his wife by poison, has been a chequered one. When a youth he was fond of reading theological works, and his demeanor was so serious that it was imagined by many he would go into the church. Then he married and went to the Normal School, Toronto. Next he became a teacher at the Central School, Hamilton. Finally he studied Homeopathy at Philadelphia, and settled down to practice at Brighton. He confessed to having fed his wife with arsenic for a long time, but finally killed her by a dose of chloroform. Unbridled lust was his ruin.

The Boston Traveller gives particulars of a crime at Haverill, Mass. A young girl of eighteen years, who had been deserted by her husband, abandoned her child in the woods to die. Selecting a place suited to her purposes, she sat down and nursed her infant freely, and gathering some dead grass for its bed, laid it down upon the southern slope of a slight earthy elevation to die of hunger and exposure. The skeleton of the child was found, and the mother confessed, stating that the act was perpetrated because she could not endure the thought of having her child live liable to become a degraded and miserable being like herself.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FARTHER POINT, BELOW QUEBEC, June 18.—The steamship Anglo-Saxon from Liverpool on the 8th inst., passed this point this morning bound for Quebec. Her advices are four days later. In the Liverpool Breadstuffs Market all qualities had slightly declined, and the Provisions Market was dull.

LONDON, June 7th.—Consols are quoted at 93¼@93½.

The steamer Anglo-Saxon brings most important news from the seat of war. A great battle has been fought near Milan, in which the Austrians were defeated, with the loss of 25,000 killed and disabled, and 5,000 were taken prisoners.

The French loss is stated at 12,000. The Austrians have evacuated Milan.

The Queen's speech was delivered in Parliament on the 7th inst. It contains nothing very important. A motion was pending of a want of confidence in the Ministry.

A desperate battle was fought at Magenta, on the 4th of June, between the allied army under the Emperor Napoleon and the Austrian army, under General Hess, in which unlimited forces were engaged on both sides.

The Emperor Napoleon, in his dispatches to the Empress at the Tuilleries, claims a decisive victory, saying that his army took 7,000 prisoners, disabled 12,000, and captured three cannons and two standards. He estimates the loss of his army at 3,000, but it was rumored in Paris that the French loss was between 9,000 and 12,000.

It is reported that 150,000 to 180,000 Austrians and 130,000 French were engaged in the battle.

The Austrian accounts differ widely from those of the French. Their bulletins speak of several battles being fought with varying success on both sides. It was still undecided on the night of the 5th as to who gained the victory. Great losses on both sides are reported. Gen. Espinasse, of the second corps d'armee, was killed, and Marshal Canrobert, of the third corps, was mortally wounded. Gen. McMahon, commanding the corps d'armee, had been created Marshal, and Duke D'Magenta as a reward for his bravery on the battle field.

Five of the French Marshals and Generals were wounded. Marshal Count Baraguey de Hilliers had been superseded in his command of the first corps d'armee by General Forey.

Four Austrian Generals and five of the staff officers were wounded.

There had been a general revolt at Milan, and the people had declared in favor of the King of Sardinia.

The Austrians retired from Milan, and the city had not yet been occupied by the French. Later rumors detract from the French the victory at Magenta. It was believed that proposals of peace would follow the entrance of the French army into Milan.

The details of the latest news by the Europa, reporting the Austrians in retreat across the Ticino, is fully confirmed.

GREAT BRITAIN.—The Queen delivered her opening speech to Parliament on the 7th. She laments the outbreak of the war and says she did all she could to prevent it, proclaims her strict and impartial neutrality. She says, the navy has been increased beyond the authority granted by Parliament, and asks for its sanction. She recommends the re-opening of diplomatic intercourse with Naples. She expresses the hope that the reform question will be settled at this or the next session.

The Liberals had moved an amendment to the address to the throne in reply to the Royal speech, declaring that her Majesty's ministers do not possess the confidence of parliament, and debate thereupon was pending.

FRANCE.—The city of Paris had been illuminated in honor of the victory of the French arms at Magenta.

The French crossed the Ticino at Buffalora and Turbigo. There was considerable fighting at both places.

INDIA.—The Bombay mail of the 20th of May had arrived, but the news was not of much importance. A great monetary panic prevailed.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL, June 7.—Richardson and Spence's circular reports flour very dull and unsettled, and nominally quiet, American at 11s@12s 9d. Wheat is reported 2@3d lower. Western red at 8s@10s, white 10s@12s; Southern 12s @14s 6d. Corn had also a declining tendency holders pressing on the market at a reduction. Mixed is quoted at 6s 6d@6s 9d; yellow at 6s 6d@6s 10d; and white at 8s@8s 6d.

LONDON MARKETS.—Barring Bros. report Breadstuffs dull but steady. Sugar firmer and 6d@1s lower. Rice heavy and the quotations barely maintained.

QUEBEC, June 19.—The Anglo-Saxon having arrived, the papers received furnish some details of the battle of Magenta. It appears that on the 4th inst., the French troops were under orders to cross the Ticino at Turbigo.

It is said that the Austrians in the precipitation of their evacuation of Milan, left their cannon and treasure behind.

The Emperor says that the troops have captured 12,000 Austrian muskets.

The municipality of Milan presented an address to King Victor Emanuel in the presence of the Emperor.

The King was to enter Milan on the 7th.

The Austrian official bulletin says the conflict was desperate between the first and third army corps and the enemy in considerable force. The contest was undecided and continued on Sunday. Our troops threw themselves on the enemy with ardour and perseverance worthy the most glorious feats of the Imperial arms.

A Vienna dispatch, unauthenticated, in the Frankfort papers say that, through the opportune arrival of Count Clair Gallas and his corps, the Austrians were victorious after a hard fight.

The London Times says there was very hard fighting at Buffalora with varying successes. The battle lasted till late at night and was continued the next day at Magenta.

QUEBEC, June 20.—The following is the first announcement of the great battle fought on the fourth by telegram from Napoleon to the Empress:

"NOVARA, June 4, 11:30.—P. M.—A great victory has been won at the bridge of Magenta, 5,000 prisoners have been taken, and 15,000 of the enemy are killed or wounded. The details will be dispatched by telegraph."

The above was published in Paris on Sunday, the 5th, and on the evening of that day the cannon of the Hotel des Invalides announced the victory and the city was brilliantly illuminated. On the following day (Monday) the Moniteur publishes the following dispatches from the Emperor to the Empress:

"MAGENTA, June 5.—Yesterday our army was under orders to march on Milan across the bridges thrown over the Ticino. At Turbigo the operation was well executed, although the enemy, who had repassed the Ticino in great force, offered a determined resistance. The roadway was narrow, and, during two hours, the Imperial Guard sustained unaided the shock of the enemy. In the meantime Genl. McMahon made himself master of Magenta. After sanguinary conflicts, we repulsed the enemy at every point, with a loss on our side of two thousand men. The loss of the enemy is estimated at fifteen thousand killed and wounded, and five thousand Austrian prisoners remain in our hands."

"MAGENTA, June 5.—P. M.—The Austrians taken prisoners are at least 7,000, and the Austrians placed hors de combat are 20,000. Three pieces of cannon and two flags were captured from the enemy to-day. Our army rests for the purpose of reorganizing itself. Our loss is about 3,000 killed and wounded, and one cannon taken by the enemy."

The following dispatch, also from the Emperor to the Empress, was received on the 6th, and bulletined in the Bourse:

"HEAD-QUARTERS, Monday, 8 A. M.—Milan is insurgent. The Austrians have evacuated the town and Castle, leaving in their precipitation the cannon and treasure of the army behind them. We are incumbered with prisoners, and have taken 12,000 Austrian muskets."

A dispatch dated Paris, Monday night, says the municipality of Milan proclaimed King Victor Emanuel, and have presented an address to him in the presence of the Emperor. To-morrow the King will make his entry into Milan.

